During the talks satisfaction was expressed at the continuing dialogue, which has already been established for a considerable number of years. In connection with this, it was stated that comprehensive cooperation also encompasses cooperation between the LCY and the CPC. It was concluded that Yugoslav-Chinese relations are developing in the best possible way. The two countries are also cooperating very successfully in the international sphere and on a large number of questions views are identical or close. Having exchanged mutual information on the internal development of the two countries, Federal Executive Council President Branko Mikulic and Chinese Premier Zhao Ziyang expressed the view that the authentic roads in the development of Yugoslavia and the PRC also have great importance for the development of socialism in the world.

During this very cordial and frank [otvoren] dialogue, it was stressed that there are no problems in Yugoslav-Chinese relations which might have an adverse effect on the further improvement of cooperation. The experiences of the two countries in the development of the systems and economies is very valuable for yugoslavia and the PRC -- a fact which also makes this exchange of views mutually beneficial.

When discussing the general totality of bilateral relations and cooperation, it was stated that economic cooperation is not quite on part with the political cooperation of the two countries and that is will be necessary to invest fresh efforts in order to exploit to the maximum the possibilities that are being opened up. In connection with this, mention was also made of the need for higher forms of economic cooperation. In other words, stress was placed on the importance of industrial cooperation, cooperation in the field of science and technology, joint participation in third markets and so on.

The two sides' strategic orientation toward long-term cooperation was stressed. The possibility was also pointed out of expanding commodity exchange, for which is a clear need for both sides in today's world economic situation. It was agreed that a start should be made on concluding an agreement on scientific-technical cooperation and that the corresponding institutions should be linked up to work out joint plans of cooperation in this sphere.

Both sides also pointed to the importance of cooperation in agriculture, where certain opportunies are also opening up. Certain initiatives by our work organizations are also expected here.

The Chinese side proposed that the possibility be examined of involving Yugoslav work organizations in the construction of a 280-km railway line in China. This will be the subject of separate talks.

In the part of the talks dealing with certain international subjects, both sides expressed concern over the present conditon of state of affairs in international life. It was noted that peace and security are threatened and that it is necessary for talks, real disarmament and the fuller realization of universal detente to be arrived at.

The talks between the two superpowers were welcomed and it was concluded that all other countries in the world should also make their contribution to better international relations and the realization of disarmament.

Railroad Cooperation Discussed

[Text] Belgrade, 7 Jul (TANJUG) -- Zhao Ziyang, Chinese premier of the State Council, who is on a 4-day official and friendly visit to Yugoslavia, today visited the community of Yugoslav railways and [words indistinct] producers of rolling stock in the joint project for the construction of 280-km track in the PRC. In addition to the civil engineering work, the project also would encompass electrification work, automation, and the ensuring of railway safety. Talks were also conducted on the possibilities of obtaining locomotives made in Yugoslavia and freight cars with special carrying capacity.

Representatives of the Yugoslav railways offered to the Chinese railway experts a visit by Yugoslav rolling stock producers, expressing readiness for our experts to visit the section of the railway line where the joint project for the construction of that line in the PRC would be realized.

Talks With Renovica

LD071505 Belgrade TANJUG Domestic Service in Serbo-Croatian 1220 GMT 7 Jul 86

[Text] Belgrade, 7 Jul (TANJUG) -- Milanko Renovica, president of the LCY Central Committee Presidium, today received Zhao Ziyang, a member of the CPC Central Committee Political Bureau and premier of the PRC State Council, who is in an official and friendly visit to our country at the invitation of the FEC.

The talks were attended by Maro Orlandic, a member of the LCY Central Committee Presidium; Dr Stanislav Stojanovic, an executive secretary of the LCY Central Committee Presidium; Zvone Dragan, SFRY ambassador in the PRC; and other figures; and on the Chinese side by Lu Dong, minister of the State Economic Commission; Qian Quichen, vice minister of foreign affairs; Xie Li, PRC ambassador in Yugoslavia, and other figures.

Zhao Ziyang conveyed greetings and best wishes from Hu Yaobang, the general secretary of the CPC Central Committee, to Milanko Renovica and the newly elected LCY Central Committee Presidium. Milanko Renovica returned the greetings and renewed his invitation to Hu Yaobang, general secretary of the CPC Central Committee, to visit Yugoslavia.

In the talks, which passed in a cordial atmosphere and in the spirit of mutual understanding, both sides noted with satisfaction that cooperation between the LCY and the CPC and our two socialist countries is developing very successfully and that there is great scope for further enriching it. In connection with this, the importance of the regular exchange of views and the reciprocal acquaintance with the experiences of the two parties in socialist construction was noted. In this context, Zhao Ziyang spoke of the activities of the CPC in the internal sphere and on its preoccupations with the process of social and economic reforms. He spoke, in particular, on the preparations for the Sixth Plenum of the 12th CPC Congress.

Milanko Renovica acquainted his guest with the basic features and most important stances of the 13th LCY Congress and with questions which will be at the center of the LCY's attention in the framework of the implementation of the decisions of the 13th Congress.

Views also were exchanged on the international situation and on trends in the workers, communist, and other progressive movements in the world. Both sides assessed that negative trends in international relations require the greater involvement of all progressive and peaceful forces in the struggle for peace, disarmament, the construction of a new economic order, and the affirmation of the principle of active and peaceful coexistence. The readiness of the LCY and the CPC was stressed to strengthen reciprocal cooperation in the struggle to solve these and other major questions of the contemporary world. Zhao Ziyang, on behalf of Hu Yaobang, extended an invitation to Milanko Renovica to visit the PRC.

After the talks, Milanko Renovica, president of the LCY Central Committee kPresidium, hosted a luncheon in honor of Zhao Ziyang, which was also attended by the other participants in the talks.

Cooperation Talks

[Text] Belgrade, 7 Jul (TANJUG) -- Within the framework of the visit of Zhao Ziyang, premier of the PRC State Council to the SFRY, talks were held today in the Place of the Federation between Milos Milosavljevic, vice president of the Federal Executive Council, and Lu Dong, PRC minister of the State Economic Commission on the current situation and ways to promote economic cooperation between the two countries.

They established the necessity to continue cooperation already agreed upon in the area of the industrial and commodity exchange, and to create more favorable conditions for promoting, and introducing new forms of, cooperation.

Talks were also held between Budimir Loncar, deputy federal secretary for foreign affairs, and Qian Qichen, PRC vice minister of foreign affairs. They carried out a detailed exchange of views on the current international situation, as well as on cooperation between the two departments of foreign affairs.

AUSTRIAN FOREIGN MINISTER CONTINUES VISIT

Meets With Dizdarevic

LD021506 Belgrade TANJUG Domestic Service in Serbo-Croatian 1117 GMT 2 Jul 86

[Text] Belgrade, 2 Jul (TANJUG) -- Current issues of international life, and especially the development of the situation in Europe, were the main topics discussed during the meeting today between the Yugoslav and Austrian foreign ministers, Raif Dizdarevic and Peter Jankowitsch, respectively. During their exchange of views, which took place in an atmosphere of frankness and friendship, the two ministers assessed the international situation as very complex. They expressed their conviction and their hope that after all the conditions will be established for progress toward reducing the present tension.

When discussing the situation in Europe and the activity of the group of neutral and nonaligned countries on the Old Continent Dizdarevic and Janowitsch expressed concern over the progress of the meeting in Stockholm, but time they also stressed the need for additional efforts to be made by the countries participating in the Stockholm meeting so that positive results may be attained.

The Yugoslav-Austrian talks covered in particular a discussion of the preparations for the forthcoming CSCE meeting in Vienna. The importance of this meeting, which will ensure the continuity of the CSCE process, was discussed. In this connection reference was made to cooperation among European neutral and nonaligned countries during the preparatory phase of the Vienna meeting. In this context some possibilities for proposing joint initiatives were discussed.

The two sides also remarked on the importance of the forthcoming Brioni meeting in October when the group of European neutral and nonaligned countries will meet to reach a joint agreement for the CSCE meeting in Vienna. It was assessed during this wide-ranging dialogue that the Vienna meeting should adequately and on an equal footing discuss all three CSCE baskets in order to keep the necessary balance which until now has in a certain sense been neglected.

Peter Jankowitsch informed his host on the course and the results of the London meeting at which the Eureka project was discussed. Raif Dizdarevic briefed his guest on Yugoslavia's activity prior to the eighth nonaligned heads of state or government conference in Harare.

Talks With Hasani

[Text] Belgrade, 2 Jul (TANJUG) -- Sinan Hasani, president of the SFRY Presidency, received at the Palace of the Federation today Dr Peter Jankowitsch, minister of foreign affairs of Austria, who is paying an official friendly visit to Yugoslavia.

During a cordial friendly conversation, in which Raif Dizdarevic, federal secretary for foreign affairs, took part, satisfaction was expressed at the positive development of relations and cooperation between Yugoslavia and Austria. It was also noted that possibilities exist for further developing all aspects of cooperation, particularly the economic, cultural, and scientific-technical ones.

The two sides also discussed the position of national minorities in Austria, which were noted to represent a factor of closer contacts and better mutual understanding.

The talks on international issues also dealt with the further promotion of the CSCE process and a joint interest in the successful outcome of the Stockholm conference, as well as the best possible preparations for the CSCE meeting in Vienna. The Yugoslav side drew attention to the importance of the coming nonaligned summit in Harare, which is expected to make concrete contributions to resolving the key problems of the modern world. The talks were also attended by Milos Krstic, Yugoslav ambassador to Austria; and Paul Leifer, Austrian ambassador to Yugoslavia.

Holds Press Conference

LD022123 Belgrade TANJUG in English 1530 GMT 2 Jul 86

[Text] Belgrade, July 2 (TANJUG) -- Austrian Foreign Minister Peter Jankowitsch today highly assessed Yugoslav-Austrian relations and set out the readiness for their further promotion.

At a press conference in the Belgrade, Minister Jankowitsch noted that the fact he was visiting Yugoslavia as the second country, after Switzerland, after becoming foreign minister, confirmed the hight level of bilateral relations.

He pointed up the two countries' successful cooperation within the group of neutral and non-aligned countries at the Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe. A new incentive to easing of international tensions may be expected at the CSCE Vienna session in November, Minister Jankowitsch said.

In answering questions of the newsmen, Jankowitsch set out that he did not discuss with Yugoslav officials the controversy about the election of Kurt Waldheim as Austrian president. Austria believes the non-aligned countries to be an important international factor and awaits with interest their eighth summit, Jankowitsch said and added that Austria would, as it did previously, attend the summit as a guest.

He was convinced, Jankowitsch said, that he was met with understanding by the Yugoslav side concerning the Vienna Government's treatment of minorities. We are ready to work towards improving the position of the minorities within the framework of broad possibilities offered by the Austrian constitution, the Austrian foreign minister stated.

Two Yugoslav nations -- Slovenes and Croats -- live as minorities in Austria.

RELATIONS WITH ROMANIA, DIZDAREVIC VISIT VIEWED

AU071543 Belgrade Domestic Service in Serbo-Croatian 1300 GMT 7 Jul 86

[Text] Raif Dizdarevic, federal secretary for foreign affairs, will pay a working and friendly visit to Romania later today. [Words indistinct] Nebojsa Jankovic reports:

After the visit of Peter Jankowitsch, minister for foreign affairs of Austria, [words indistinct] are continued by Raif Dizdarevic's visit to Romania. Yugoslav diplomacy has assumed its natural and [word indistinct] course. While it is conducting the final consultations with the member-states of the Nonaligned Movement before the summit in Harare, in a dialogue with its neighbor it is discussing questions not only of bilateral but also of European importance. Raif Dizdarevic's visit to Bucharest is not accidently described as a working visit. Following the tradition of a fruitful political dialogue founded by President Tito and Ceausescu, the relations between Yugoslavia and Romania have reached the level of full good-neighborly maturity and therefore the working character of this visit can be seen a series of concrete agreements on bilaterial and international matters. As far as bilateral matters are concerned, the level of what has been achieved cannot be [word indistinct] satisfactory. This is even more so because there are some difficulties in the realization of some concrete programs and because the complementary nature of the Romanian and Yugoslav economies offers a wide scope to hitherto unexploited possibilities.

The dialogue on international matters will primarily involve some aspects of multilateral relations in the Balkans. The foreign ministers of Yugoslavia and Romania will also discuss disturbing situations in many regions, above all in the broader neighborhood, in the Middle East and in the Mediterranean region. They will also, as is natural, respect the fact that the (?geopolitical) position of the two countries is in many respects different. Yugoslavia is a member of the Nonaligned Movement while Romania is a member of the East European military and political alliance [savez]. But the recognition of these differences is only the starting point of illuminating even more the things that lead the two countries to cooperate. In addition to a common border this is also common need for peace, in the Balkans, in Europe, and in the world.

FEC DISCUSSES ECONOMY, FOREIGN RELATIONS

[Text] Belgrade, 7 Jul (TANJUG) -- The Federal Executive Council (presided over by Branko Mikulic), today discussed several issues concerning current economic policy and the country's foreign relations.

According to a statement issued by the Federal Secretariat for Information after the session, the Federal Executive Council also established its stance relating to the proposals for and comments on a number of draft laws which are in the process of being coordinated with the stance of the appropriate organs in the republics and provinces. This refers, among other things, to proposed changes and amendments to the law on investments by foreigners in Yugoslav organizations of associated labor; the law on the exchange of goods and services with abroad; the law on credit terms with abroad; the customs law, and others.

On the occasion of Uprising Day, which is being marked in Serbia today, members of the Federal Executive Council observed 1 minute of silence at the beginning of the session in honor of those killed in the National Liberation War.

FURTHER REPORTAGE ON LCY CONGRESS SPEECHES

Vidic Discusses Foreign Policy

AU031437 Belgrade BORBA in Serbo-Croatian 26 Jun 86 pp 4-5

[Report on opening speech by Dobrivoje Vidic at the first meeting of the Commission for Questions of LCY International Cooperation and SFRY Foreign Policy of the 13th LCY Congress on 25 June]

[Text] Of greatest importance for determining the directions for the further work of the LCY in the field of the LCY's international cooperation and the SFRY foreign policy is to assess the current development period and to see whether, and in which way, this development may influence the principles and postulates of our policy and practice, Dobrivoje Vidic [member of the LCY Central Committee Presidium] pointed out among other things in his opening speech in the Commission for Questions of LCY International Cooperation and LCY Foreign Policy. He added that the great revolutions of our time -- the anticolonial, the socialist, and the scientific-technical revolutions -- are strongly manifested and continue to exert an essential influence on all the courses of contemporary development. The overall modern international relations operate within this framework.

The accelerated pace of scientific and technological changes, which under present condition increasingly constitute the basis of an accelerated development of production forces, leads to world reproduction becoming global and in this way the common interests of the peoples regardless of where they live and under what systems they live are becoming increasingly prominent, so that prerequisites for an increasing interdependence of the world are being created. In this nuclear era, this characteristic of development puts special emphasis on and dramatizes the tasks of the struggle for peace and international cooperation in the world, which has lived through the tragic experiences of World War I and World War II.

Through the interplay of well-known circumstances, the bloc divisions of the world and the struggle for spheres of interest, primarily in the regions of the nonaligned and developing countries, have lately been essentially contributing to the maintenance and creation of new hotbeds of crises and social tensions.

Under such conditions, failing to solve the vital problems of the developing world, on the basis of possible international agreements, constitutes one of the main sources of danger for world peace, Dobrivoje Vidic pointed out.

Irreplaceable Role

"The policy of nonalignment and the Nonaligned Movement are now a strong force that cannot be ignored in the struggle for changes in the system of international political and economic relations such as will contribute to the independence and equality of the peoples and to the building of new international relations freed from all domination and hegemony. As more time passes from the first conference of the nonaligned countries in Belgrade -- and we shall soon celebrate the 25th anniversary of the movement to whose founding, political philosophy, and organizational forms Comrade Tito made a historical contribution -- the more impressive is the evidence that the movement deals with the most essential world questions from the position of general interests, in a world which in this nuclear age and with the present arms race is exposed to catastrophic dangers," Vidic said.

With its independent and non-bloc nature and approach to contemporary world problems, the Nonaligned Movement points out not only the danger of extending the bloc confrontations and of the existence of the blocs themselves, but also the practical roads for overcoming them and even dissolving them in the long run.

The draft congress resolution, "The LCY in the Struggle for Peace, Equal International Cooperation, Progress, and Socialism in the World," Vidic said, this time again points out that the nonaligned policy is a constant premise and an irreplacable basis for the overall activities of Yugoslavia in international relations. It enables us to participate in the most active way, from the position of interests of the peoples and nationalities of Yugoslavia, in the world struggle for peace, disarmament, a new international economic order, and social progress.

The Nonaligned Movement has made its greatest contribution to enhancing the realization and the conviction that there is no alternative to peace and peaceful coexistence and that the superpowers and blocs therefore have special responsibility for making their contribution in order that the world may resolutely step along the path of detente and disarmament and to making this realization and conviction prevail in the international political scene and the active progressive political and peace movements.

"Relying on military power is too deeply rooted. The process of disarmament will not start easily," Vidic said. "However, we must all the more stress the position that the axis of our activities in the Nonaligned Movement and in the UN Organization must always be formed by our constant work in contributing to the struggle for peace and security, the essential component of which is a demand for general and complete disarmament. Proposals are needed from the standpoint of possible realistic steps concerning nuclear disarmament, a ban on the use of space for military purposes, the removal of missile and other bases from other countries' territories, a halt to all nuclear tests, the reduction of conventional armament and troops, etc. The need to raise to a modern level the international cooperation and control regarding the security of nuclear power plants, nuclear waste dumps, etc. has been pointed out in a dramatic way."

The Nonaligned Movement and the international community must show a higher level of initiative and practical spirit in defusing the hotbeds of tension and conflicts as direct sources of danger to peace and security in the world, Vidic stressed. Apartheid, that shameful racist policy of the Government of the Republic of South Africa, must be finished as soon as possible. It threatens to inaugurate a new large series of international conflicts and presents a direct danger for the peace and security of nonaligned countries of the region.

Peaceful Solution

The LCY and the SFRY resolutely emphasize their support for liberation movements and the struggle for independence, as well as our solidarity with countries and peoples in this region and elsewhere which are exposed to military interventions and other forms of open pressure and blockade, and they demand the withdrawal of occupation forces in all places where they exist. The Congress resolution, Vidic recalled, sends an appeal to all progressive forces to even more resolutely engage in solving international problems and conflicts in a peaceful way. [paragraph continues]

One has to take into consideration the great human drama and the suffering of entire nations because of the politics of hegemony and domination and of denying to a people the right to free national and social development, which is the case with the Khmer people, with Afghanistan, Lebanon, with the Palestinians, with the people of Nicaragua, Namibia, with the black population of the Republic of South Africa, etc.

Vidic stressed in particular that the LCY and the SFRY condemn all forms of terrorism, and added that one cannot solve social and political problems, domestic or international, with terrorist actions, and that our country and the LCY advocate the undertaking of necessary measure on an international plane to curb and eliminate terrorism and remove its causes.

Vidic devoted special attention to the need to struggle for a new international economic order, because, as he pointed out, developing countries suffer the gravest consequences of disturbances in the world economy, primarily due to the resistance of developed countries. As a nonaligned country, Yugoslavia resolutely supports all measures leading in that direction and stresses the indispensability of a dialogue between developed and developing countries, because it cannot be postponed any longer.

Touching upon the SFRY relations with the USSR, the United States, and China, as well as the developed European countries, Vidic said that the successful development of relations with those countries has been continuing, and added that, on our part, we start here from the principles of the nonaligned policy, a respect for such a position, and full equality. The mutual advantage of a constant political dialogue and successful development of economic relations with those countries is unquestionable, irrespective of sometimes considerable differences in the approach to many problems in international relations.

Furthering Good-Neighbor Relations

Speaking about our country's relations with its neighbors, Vidic pointed out that the LCY and the SFRY have advocated and will advocate the consistent and comprehensive furthering of good-neighbor relations on the basis of the full respect of the principles of independence, sovereignty, territorial integrity, inviolability of borders, equality, and mutual benefit. One must, however, Vidic said among other things, say at this congress as well, that we are not met with a reciprocal readiness in each individual case.

We have recently been concerned about the political campaign against our country conducted in Greece on the part of most responsible political representatives, as well as in the press, by which one denies the existence of the Macedonian people and Macedonian national minorities in neighboring countries, resorts to the tactic of pitting Belgrade and Skopje against each other, and goes so far as openly interfering into our internal affairs. We see this as a crude attack against our constitutional order and the whole of our community, and it cannot help but present a serious obstacle to the development of the kind of friendly and comprehensive relations we sincerely wish to have with the Greek people and government.

Unfortunately, Bulgaria also continues to deny the existence of the Macedonian people, both in our country and in Bulgaria where they live as national minority, and it continues to express territorial pretensions. This continues to represent a very grave problem to developing and furthering good-neighbor relations between the SFRY and the People's Republic of Bulgaria.

The anti-Yugoslav campaign in Albania is on the rise, it insolently assaults all values of our society, expresses unconcealed territorial pretensions, most crudely interferes with our peoples' internal life, and offers overt support to the counterrevolutionary aims of Albanian separatists in Yugoslavia. Such policy and actual behavior gravely burden our relations and threaten to call into question even what has been achieved in the existing spheres of cooperation. This is not our wish or in our interest, neither can it be in the interest of the people of the People's Socialist Republic of Albania.

The Balkans as a Region of Peace

The resolution entitled "The LCY in the Struggle for Peace, International Cooperation on an Equal Footing, Progress, and Socialism in the World" reiterates the readiness to develop substantial relations with all our neighbors -- with full and consistent respect for the basic principles of mutual regard, noninterference, and respect for sovereignty and territorial integrity, the only basis upon which one can found a good-neighbor policy of peoples.

We do not interfere in the internal affairs of neighboring states and peoples. We expect such an attitude from our neighbors, too. Only in this way can one create the necessary conditions for the Balkans really to become a region of peaceful and constructive cooperation, a region of peace and, if you will, also a region without nuclear weapons, something which the SFRY is resolutely advocating. All Balkan countries can and should make their contribution for an ever successful development of all forms of bilateral and multilateral cooperation on the basis of the UN Charter and the Helsinki documents.

Crude Propagandist Assaults

We have recently been confronted with increased propagandist-political and other pressures on our country from reactionary communities and circles abroad, Vidic pointed out. They are aimed at minimizing all results achieved along Tito's road of internal social development, based on our system of socialist self-management and on the independent and engaged foreign policy of the SFRY on the principles of nonalignment. Those who exert such pressures are counting upon the complexity of problems we now have to solve, especially on the economic plane.

Some prophets made themselves heard every day through various messages, even with the help of radio stations from abroad, they predict or announce the breakdown of our country or its transformation into capitalist, pluralist, or some "third" Yugoslavia, etc. All this would perhaps not deserve special attention in terms of its real significance, had it not been for the question of whose interest this is in, and what aims does such activity against the SFRY serve -- the SFRY as a country in this world which carries out an independent policy and represents a constructive factor that is consistently advocating peace and international cooperation on an equal footing. We expect the SFRY's numerous friends in the world to make their contribution with a view to halting this mean activity on the part of the countries with which Yugoslavia has friendly relations, and making it impossible.

Reactionary forces are trying to fetter the world socialist process and the struggle for it by political and economic means. Problems and crisis situations caused by the unsuitable system of production relations in a number of socialist countries are presented by the opponents of socialism as the crisis of the very idea and practice of socialism. They also deny socialism as an alternative to existing capitalist class relations. The antisocialist struggle that has been waged recently on national and international plane more and more frequently takes the characteristics of an aggressive anticommunist campaign. Relations among states are being ideologized more and more frequently, which represents great danger for the world peace. It is an objective truth, however, that the world process of socialism is confirming its vitality; it is emerging from the given class, national, and multinational relations as a replacement for all that now has to be overcome in the interests of the survival and further development of humanity.

Broadly speaking, in their creative confrontation with the challenges of the present time, socialist forces have been put into a position urgently to seek and find necessary answers. The main causes of the reforms that have been carried out and announced recently and currently in the countries where the deepest social revolution had been carried out -- such as the USSR and China, and many others -- is the fact that new situations demand new answers.

Different Roads of Socialism

Everybody must seek his solutions out of the need not to lag behind in performing the tasks imposed on us by modern development, and also by the situations crisis which can only increase the danger of lagging behind if they are not overcome. We are also doing this. To what extent we are successful in doing it is another question, and to answer this is the main task of this congress, Vidic said.

We would be real dogmatists if we measured other countries' obvious resolution to carry out reforms and their efforts toward creating the necessary conditions for more resolutely taking up those reforms exclusively by our own experiences. In doing so we must start from the law on different roads in the struggle for progress and socialism, Vidic said, stressing that there is a more and more noticeable interest in introducing socialist self-management.

Lately we have been witnessing a complex and controversial period of time, rich in new experiences in the life and activity of the leftist parties in West European capitalist countries. This has been shown in the more or less pronounced state of crisis in those societies, and answers have been sought for overcoming it in the conditions of contradictions and deep changes in the social and class structure of those societies. That part of the forces of socialism as a world process is urgently taking up the adaptation of program and other tenets to the needs of social tasks and formulating its own alternatives for solving them.

It is natural that here also there are considerable programmatic and practical differences in observing the best roads toward the modernization of and a stable growth in the economy along with persevering the achievements of the working class struggle in those countries and projecting new measures to the advantage of social justice and equality. What characterizes many of those parties, whether they are in power or opposition, is the intention to try difference forms of cooperating in spreading their political influence -- cooperation with the classical parties with a socialist orientation and with new social currents and movements with a progressive orientation which are appearing in those countries.

Morina Speaks on Kosovo Situation

AU021156 Pristina RILINDJA in Albanian 28 Jun 86 p 7

[Report on speech by Rahman Morina, secretary of the Secretariat for Internal Affairs of the Socialist Autonomous Province of Kosovo, in the Commission for All-People's Defense and Social Self-Protection of the 13th LCY Congress in Belgrade on 27 June -- "Tendencies to Discount the Results in Kosovo"]

[Text] While speaking about some problems of the political and security situation which are hampering the struggle of subjective forces to stabilize the situation in Kosovo, Rahman Morina said among other things that Albanian nationalists and irredentists are trying to keep up their continuity. However, the activities of all subjectives forces are making the maintenance of this continuity impossible, and the field of their activity is constantly being narrowed. In certain circles there have been comments saying we have applied excessively harsh measures, or that we have not taken adequate measures. In a word, comments go from one extreme to the other. However, I think that adequate measures have been taken. The counterrevolutionary events have left serious consequences which we are still confronted with in almost every area of life. However, the most serious consequence has been the emigration of Serbians and Montenegrins because of the general atmosphere and climate created by these events and also because of concrete instances of duress from Albanian nationalists and irredentists, as well as other negative factors which have caused a cooling in the trust and relations between nationalities. So, the aim of our struggle is to create the conditions for trust, and the prevention of the emigration of Serbian and Montenegrims, and to encourage the return of those who have emigrated. Of course, this has been one of the primary tasks of all subjective forces within the struggle, during the whole of this period. However, results achieved are not of the necessary standard, and are unsatisfactory.

Rahman Morina went on to say that there have been and still are tendencies to underestimate achieved results in the struggle against Albanian nationalism and irredentism, and in the elimination of the consequences of the counterrevolutionary events in the general measures being taken to prevent all forms of duress and to prevent emigration. Evaluations quite different from the official evaluations of the competent authorities from the provincial to federal levels are very often encountered. Such tendencies are expressed negatively in our general activity, are hampering the effectiveness of subjective forces, and are bringing a confusion of ideas in their wake. Therefore, I consider it high time for the LC to enact concrete measures for the responsible behavior of all subjective forces and individuals, with the aim of achieving complete unity in evaluating the situation and events in Kosovo. Even when Kosovo is spoken and written about, there is little written of positive developments and more often, a tendency to exaggerate, and portray the situation, problems, and events in a false and tendentious way is present. All this contributes to the creation of an anti-Kosovar and anti-Albanian atmosphere, and the identification of the Albanian nationality with irredentism. Also, in some quarters distrust of all the measures and results in Kosovo has been expressed. I think that we Communists must trust each other completely, without to regard to which area we live in, because distrust influences our ideopolitical unity and unity of action in a very negative way. The Communists of Kosovo, particularly in this complicated struggle, require still more support from all the Communists of the whole country, who need to struggle in their own areas against those forces negatively disposed towards the efforts and achievements of Communists in Kosovo. Such support is necessary, because we in Kosovo, against the activity of Albanian nationalists and other hostile forces, who are attempting to exploit the situation in Kosovo to increase nationalist feelings over a wide area, and to further create an atmospohere of mistrust in the province and beyond, must struggle for the general stabilization of the situation.

GDR Official Conveys Greetings

AU281355 East Berlin NEUES DEUTSCHLAND in German 26 Jun 86 p 2

[Text] Belgrade -- On Wednesday [25 June] evening in Belgrade Guenter Schabowski, Politburo member and secretary of the SED Central Committee, conveyed the best wishes of the GDR Communists for successful deliberations of the 13th LCY Congress which started on the same day. The wishes were conveyed at a friendly meeting with Jure Bilic, LCY Central Committee Presidium member.

In the talk Guenter Schabowski, who is heading the SED delegation to the 13th Congress of the Yugoslav Communists, praised the LCY policy of implementing new, demanding economic, social, and societal [soziale und gesellschaftliche] tasks in the interest of the working people of the country. The partners in the talk expressed their full agreement that the most important tasks of our time is to resolutely continue the struggle to secure peace and eliminate the danger of nuclear war as well as to free the globe from all nuclear weapons. For this, a comprehensive nuclear test ban and adherence to the SALT II treaty are indispensible prerequisites. Guenter Schabowski referred in this connection to the Budapest initiative for reducing the armed forces and conventional armaments in Europe, which opens new possibilities for the disarmament process.

Guenter Schabowski and Jure Bilic emphatically reaffirmed the determination to expand the tested cooperation of their parties and states to the benefit of the peoples of the GDR and SFRY, to peace, and socialism.

The meeting was attended by members of the SED delegation Ernst Diehl, SED Central Committee member and deputy director of the Institute for Marxism-Leninism of the Central Committee, and Ralph Hartmann, GDR ambassador to the SFRY.

CPCZ Greets 13th LCY Congress

AU281923 Prague RUDE PRAVO in Czech 26 Jun 86 pp 1, 7

[Jan Hrobar/Petr Vana Belgrade dispatch: "The 13th LCY Congress Opened"]

[Excerpt] CPCZ Central Committee's Greetings Message

Numerous greetings, telegrams, and messages are arriving in Belgrade from the communist and workers parties and also from progessive movements. The present and the greetings message from the CPCA Central Committee were presented to the 13th LCY Congress by the CPCZ delegation, which is led by Comrade Miloslav Hruskovic.

On behalf of the CSSR's Communists and working people, we convey to you, and through you to your entire party, cordial comradely greetings, together with the wish for successful congress negotiations, the message states. Your congress, which will evaluate the current phase of building the socialist society and set new tasks on the road of the SFRY's further development, is convening in a period of the party's high political-organizational activity. We have followed with sincere interest the congress preparations, during which the Yugoslav public was provided with an opportunity to express its views on the most important issues of its country's life, on the LCY's work, as well as on the draft congress materials.

Since the victory of the socialist revolution, your country has achieved a number of significant results in political, economic, and cultural development under the leadership of Yugoslav Communists.

In a historically short time it changed into a developed industrial-agricultural state which has also won great authority in the international field. Together with the other socialist countries, the SFRY has every prerequsite for achieving further successes in the new and demanding phase of its further economic and social development.

The next part of the greetings message states that we consistently combine the building of socialism in our fatherland with the great struggle for peace and progress in the world. We fully support the far-reaching peace proposals of the Soviet Union and of other socialist countries, which show realistic ways out of the current international situation. We regard alliance and cooperation with the Soviet Union, with all countries of the socialist community, as the decisive and lasting guarantee of peaceful life and socialist development.

We also highly appreciate the role played by the Nonaligned Movement, in which the SFRY holds a significant place. By its anti-imperialist stands, by its active participation in the fight for removing the danger of war and for eliminating nuclear arms, as well as by a number of other initiatives, it is contributing toward resolving sharp international problems.

We consider the common struggle for the national and social liberation of our peoples as well as our common traditions to be the foundation of our mutual relations. They have also found expression in the declaration issued on the meeting between Comrades Gustav Husak and Josip Broz Tito in 1973. The CSSR is resolved to develop them further.

The CPCZ delegation which is taking part in the negotiations of the 13th LCY Congress was received on Wednesday [25 June] in Belgrade by Milanko Renovica, Presidium member in the socialist republic of Bosnia and Hercegovina and member of the LCY Central Committee.

In a friendly and comradely talk they assessed issues which concern CPCZ-LCY cooperation, as well as the economic and scientific-technical relations between the CSSR and SFRY; they expressed bilateral interest in deepening and expanding such relations further.

Havasi Presents MSZMP Message

AU272016 Budapest NEPSZABADSAG in Hungarian on 26 Jun 86 p 3

[Text] On Wednesday Ferenc Havasi, member of the MSZMP Political Committee, secretary of the Central Committee and head of the Hungarian delegation, presented to the Presidium of the highest Yugoslav party forum the message of the MSZMP Central Committee to the 13th LCY Congress.

Esteemed Congress: Dear Comrades:

On behalf of the MSZMP Central Committee, the Hungarian Communists, and our working people, were respectfully greet the 13th LCY Congress and greet the Communists, the workers, and all the nations and nationalities of Yugoslavia.

The highest forum of Yugoslav Communists can justly assess that over the past 4 years SFRY, despite all adverse international circumstances and internal difficulties, has achieved promising results in building socialism, strengthening the socialist traits of society and augmenting its material and cultural treasure. The Hungarian people building socialism highly appreciates these attainments.

It is our conviction that, on the basis of the decisions of the 13th Congress, the Yugoslavia workers will achieve new successes and the neighboring fraternal Socialist Yugoslavia will consistently advance along its chosen road, a road that is inseparably linked to the name and activity of Comrade Josif Broz Tito, the outstanding personality of the international communist and workers movements.

Amidst the rapidly changing external and internal conditions of socialist construction, the Hungarian People's Republic is facing tasks, the solution of which requires mighty efforts from our party, the leading bodies of the country, and our entire working people. The decisions of the 13th MSZMP Congress confirmed our party's tested policy. Counting on the working classes' desire to act, we are endeavoring in socialist national unity to create the conditions of a balanced economic development, to attain a well-founded increase in the standard of living, to create the conditions for a more complete unfolding of our people's creative energy, and to steadily deepen socialist democracy.

We are pleased to see the steady development of Hungarian-Yugoslav relations on lasting and tried-and-tested bases of principle, and their extension to an increasing number of political, economic, and cultural areas. Particularly important are the continuously expanding forms of cooperation by the Serbian, Croatian, Slovenian and Hungarian ethnic minorities. In compliance with our common determination, we shall do our utmost to promote the continued unbroken development of our friendship and mutually advantageous cooperation.

In addition to some favorable phenomena lately, international political and economic relations are burdened by lasting and severe contradictions. In spite of the constructive attitude and initiatives of the socialist countries, the increasing arms race, as a result of the pressure applied by the extremist circles of imperialism, is threatening the existence of mankind. Therefore, there is not, and cannot be, a more important task than to reduce the level of military confrontation, to achieve concrete disarmament agreements, to create a new system of international security which takes into account the interests of all the countries, and to create and strengthen the confidence necessary for such a system and to promote and develop mutually advantageous relations.

The Hungarian People's Republic, in cooperation with the socialist countries, its allies, and all sober-minded peace-loving forces, is working to create international relations which equally serve the cause of socialism and social progress. A good basis for this is offered by the proposals of the Soviet Union and the Warsaw Pact, which observe the interests of all interested parties.

At the same time, we welcome any other realistic initiative that is aimed at disarmament, the development of international cooperation, European cooperation in particular, as well as at the strengthening of security and peace.

We wish the 13th LCY Congress successful work. We wholeheartedly wish the Yugoslav Communists success in the implementation of the decisions of the congress, success in their activity to solve the complex tasks facing their society, for the further progress of the SFRY, the strengthening of Hungarian-Yugoslav friendship, and for social progress and peace.

LJUBICIC SPEAKS ON SERBIAN UPRISING ANNIVERSARY

[Text] Bela Crkva, 7 Jul (TANJUG) -- The situation is not improved by constantly talking about the problems, difficulties and failures, by making wholesale criticisms and offering principled advice. Social progress, like all triumphs, is achieved by the creative action of science and policy and by clear ideological stances and is realized through concrete work and individual's contribution. This is no time to describe the situation and compete in giving details about the crisis. This will not diminish the difficulties or make tasks easier.

This was stressed in a speech at the central celebration of 7 July -- the day of the uprising of the nations and nationalities of the SR of Serbia -- by Nikola Ljubicic, SFRY Presidency member. According to Ljubicic, it is time for realistic desires and plans, a time when experiences and our own strengths and achievements should not at all be underestimated. Prospects are built by valuing creative forces, potential and results and not by belittling or negating what has been achieved and by spreading doubt. This is a time that, above all, requires action and personal example.

The FEC's economic measures, Ljubicic emphasized, are aimed at stabilizing the conditions of economic activity. It is expected that they will contribute to increasing production, revitalizing exports, reducing all forms of consumption to a realistic level, establishing a balance of payments surplus in the country, relieving the economy to the tune of 1 billion dinars, reducing inflation, and realizing financial consolidation. The measures of the Yugoslav Assembly and the FEC will produce results. For this to happen, verbal support is not needed but rather support in work and behavior, as is the political atmosphere. There is to be no deviation from this course.

The 13th LCY Congress, Ljubicic continued, adopted the unambiguous stance that the burden of stabilization should be distributed over all social structures. Tax policy must operate to this end. Whoever has more is obliged to contribute more to the satisfaction of social needs. A situation in which someone acquires wealth easily but avoids paying tax, cannot be tolerated. Many municipalities and communists in these environments have neglected tax policy and the taxation service and are not bothered about social stratification and the acquisition of wealth through work and, at the time, build budget and investment consumption on republican and state pork-barreling.

Many problems occur where rights and duties are not specified and where legal controls are suppressed. In Kosovo, irredentists have been at large for years and in other places there have been psuedo liberals, nationalists, and other anticommunist forces and individuals. The settling of accounts with the counterrevolutionary forces in Kosovo and wherever they appear, must, therefore, be more rapid and effective, Ljubicic stressed and said:

"It is true that this disorderly situation in Kosovo has been going on for a long time and that international relations are dislocated. It is also true that various pressures have been and are being exerted on the Serbian and Montenegrins to emigrate. In some places this has been done in secret, in other places, publicly. True, measures are contantly being undertaken in all social and political environments to overcome this situation. Thus, irredentist activity has been curbed but not eliminated. We are not satisfied with the results achieved in Kosovo. More has not been done because the irredentists have gained a strong foothold and have outside support.

Individuals in the state administration, the political structures, the state security, the judiciary, and at the public prosecutor's office have not become involved energetically, for bureaucratic and other motives, nor have their gone into a definitive settling of account with the irredentists. Thus, the SFRY Presidency and the LCY Central Committee Presidium adopted concrete measures with specifically designed executors and completion dates. Specialist organs have beeen sent to check on the spot, every complaint made by a citizen regarding duress or the inaction of organs and public services. In the next few days, the SFRY Presidency will reassess whether or not the decisions made are being carried out. The aim of all this is to secure order, justice and full equality for all citizens in Kosovo."

Lyubicic added, however, that further emigration must not only be halted by extensive social action in Kosovo but the more rapid employment of all young people who live there must be secured by the construction of productive plants. Conditions must also be created for the return to their homeland of the increasingly large number of emigrants. In order to solve the situation more rapidly and to create a climate of mutual trust, a wide-spread opening up and integration of all institutions and organizations from Kosovo with those in the SR of Serbia and other republics must be stimulated. "More must be sought from the leading people in Kosovo in improving the situation, but they should be given more help as well. Simply saying that Kosovo is a Yugoslav problem will not get us very far. The real problems and the situation in Kosovo require practical work and the contribution of all forces and parts of the country."

We won a victory in the national liberation struggle and the socialist revolution. We knew what we were fighting for, and we were united in the struggle, Ljubicic recalled, pointing out that division into several markets and economies is sapping our strength and slowing down development. The fragmentation of production and science and the isolation in culture, education, and information are phenomena that run contrary to LC Policy. They diminished the efforts of working and are for etatist, technocratic, and natinalist forces. The newly-elected leaderships throughout the country have great responsibility, he stressed, in changing the style of work and behavior and in thwarting everything that plays into the hands of isolation.

"With changes in the economic and political system, we must arrive at solutions that speed up decision-making and agreement-seeking and will facilitate association and integration. All this will stimulate the further development of the achievements of the revolution and the strengthening of Socialist Federal Yugoslavia. There can be no rapid development without more rapid agreement-seeking or without timely decisions and greater responsibility for their implementation. The worst thing is to be without decisions, said Tito. Much can and must be changed in the practice of decision-making at all levels. Enforced agreement is only necessary for decisions of strategic importance and not in all the places where it has since been practiced. More understanding by one group for the problems of other and more responsibility for the common and united interests of the country is the road to real decisions and the more rapid solution of problems. There can be differences but common interests are more important than all differences of momentary benefit," Nikola Ljubicic, a SFRY Presidency member concluded in his speech at Belva Crkva.

KOSOVO PRESIDIUM, PRESIDENCY HOLD SESSION

LD031957 Belgrade TANJUG Domestic Service in Serbo-Croatian 1704 GMT 3 Jul 86

[Text] Pristina, 3 Jul (TANJUG) -- The Presidium of the Kosovo LC Provincial Committee and Presidency of the Socialist Autonomous Province of Kosovo held a joint session today.

They discussed some of the most important aspects of political and security situation in the province. Kolj Siroka, member of the LCY Central Committee Presidium, was also present at the session.

According to a session statement, the Presidium and the Presidium assessed that recently a series of measures and actions had been undertaken in many environments in Kosovo, as well as in the institutions and organs of the political system of socialist self-management, to solve concrete problems which burden the sociopolitical situation and are directly related to the position and interest of working people and citizens. The responsibility of all social subjects to tackle these problems more speedily has been tightened and their activity strengthened. Recently, concrete results have been achieved in this area.

Starting from the decision of the 13th LCY Congress, the Presidium and the Presidency demanded an efficient and unswerving implementation of the tasks established by the LCY Central Committee Presidium and the SFRY Presidency on the current political situation in Kosovo. The implementation of these measures will have an effect on the stabilization of the political situation and on the creation of a more favorable political climate in Kosovo, as well as on the trust of working people and citizens of all nations in LC's efficiency and strength and the system of socialist self-management in solving problems which are of vitasl interest to them. This will strengthen their confidence in prospects for life together in brotherhood, unity, and full national equality.

Through greater involvement of subjective forces and mobilization of wide strata of working class, working people, and citizens, the gap will be narrowed and a decisive blow will be delivered to nationalistic and various other destructive forces which continue to show steady and organized activity to destabilize the situation and hinder actions by the LC and other progressive forces. The Presidium and the Presidency stressed that it is necessary in the spirit of the 13th LCY Congress to maintain constant involvement in strengthening unity in assessments and actions, as well as to oppose more resolutely the destructive forces in Kosovo, Serbia, and Yugoslavia -- forces which try to take advantage of the situation in Kosovo for their hostile aims, the statement from the joint session of the Presidium of the Kosovo KC Provincial Committee and the Presidency of the Socialist Autonomous Province of Kosovo concluded.

MACEDONIAN LC CENTRAL COMMITTEE ELECTS PRESIDENT

LD032127 Belgrade TANJUG Domestic Service in Serbo-Croatian 1535 GMT 3 Jul 86

[Summary] Skopje, 3 Jul (TANJUG) -- Today's Macedonian LC Central Committee session, presided by Jakov Lazaroski, focused on current economic developments in the republic. Stevan Djordjijevski, who submitted the introductory report, spoke about departures from this year's resolution and tasks aimed at overcoming such a situation. The Central Committee members also passed a decision to abolish the post of president of the Macedonian Central Committee and replace it with the post of president of the Macedonian LC Central Committee Presidium. In this way the Macedonian LC Statute is coordinated with the LCY Statue adopted at the 13th LCY Congress.

At a meeting held shortly after the Macedonian LC session, the Macedonian LC Central Committee Presidium elected Jakov Lazaroski its president.

WEST SAID 'PROCRASTINATING' AT VIENNA TALKS

[Bedrich Zagar Vienna dispatch: "The West Constantly Speaks of 'Inspection'; The 39th Round of the Vienna Negotiations Has Ended"]

[Text] The course of the last session of NATO and Warsaw Pact countries' delegations, held yesterday [3 July] in Vienna's Hofburg, was typical of the dribbling and procrastinating tactics of the Western countries. Instead of striving to draw closer to the aim of the negotiations -- namely, to cut down the strengths of armed forces and armaments in central Europe, the West makes these negotiations more complicated, keeping them at a deadlock and, moreover, trying to shift the blame for this state of affairs to the socialist countries.

Ambassador Robert Blackwill, head of the U.S. delegation demonstrated the West's obstructionist tactics in its entire breadth in his speech at yesterday's session. First of all, he called the issues of inspection and verification a key issue, although he knows perfectly well that this issue has been wrecking the negotiations to date. Does this perhaps indicate that the West wants to have stagnation in the future too? Ambassador Blackwill deepened the problem of verification even further when he demanded that soldiers on regular rotation within the framework of the situation agreed on should also pass through inspection points. It seems that the head of the American delegation is applying President Reagan's transparent method: He stated that the United States is greatly interested in the agreement and wishes to have it "immediately." But in negotiations the U.S. delegation emphasizes marginal matters, and ignores the main issue which leads to the desired goal. This strongly reminds one of Washington's reactions to the Soviet peace initiatives.

Another speaker at yesterday's session was Ambassador Valerian Mikhaylov, head of the Soviet delegation, who also took part in the subsequent press conference. The Western delegations were represented at the press conference by Ambassador Jan Heim van de Mortel, head of the Dutch delegation; immediately after he had finished reading his statement, he had to face an unpleasant question from a Western journalist: Could you substantiate more specifically the claim that the socialist countries are responsible for the stagnation at the Vienna negotiations? Ambassador van de Mortel had no reply of his own; he found a way out of the situation by quoting from the preceding press statements of the socialist countries -- but this did not confirm in the least his accusation that it is the socialist countries which are responsible for the stagnation. On the contrary, the quoted passage affirmed the systematic efforts of the Warsaw Pact countries, aimed at fulfilling the mandate of the Vienna negotiations -- namely, at reducing the armed forces and tension in central Europe. The complicated path taken by the Western delegations merely leads to their embarrassment and to discrepancies in logic when they are forced to explain their course in greater detail to the public.

An absolutely clear statement was made by the head of the Soviet delegation, who stated both at the morning session of the delegations, as well as the press conference in the afternoon, that the complicated and tense situation reigning at the Vienna negotiations is caused by the confrontational policy of certain Western countries and by their effort to achieve supremacy over the socialist countries. The ambassador recalled that the Warsaw Pace states are doing all they can to ensure peace, halt feverish armament, and improve the international situation. In this context he again pointed out the appeal made by the Warsaw Pact to all European states, which contains a program for extensively limiting armed forces and nuclear and conventional arms from the Atlantic to the Urals -- a program clearly proving the preparedness of socialist countries to limit armament in all kinds of weapons. [paragraph continues]

However, the Western governments for not devoting appropriate attention to these proposals, but rather evading any discussion of them.

The same can be said of the Western delegations at the Vienna negotiations, where one could reach a solution to the inspection and verification problems only via realistic steps aimed at disarmament. In fact, the Budapest proposals of the Warsaw Pact represent an important complement to the Soviet program of 15 January 1986 for averting a nuclear war and for liquidating all arms of mass annihilation. The socialist countries are convinced these initiatives could also serve the Vienna negotiations in the effort to achieve European security. But the West is resorting to an arbitrary manipulation of the issues of inspection and verification of an agreement which does not exist yet, instead of resolving such vitally important issues as arms limitation, the reduction of military confrontation, and the consolidation of trust.

Contrary to the mandate of Vienna negotiations, the West does not agree in the least with arms reduction, while on the other hand artifically raises unresolvable problems. For instance, its demands in the realm of inspection can be characterized as an attempt to illegitimately penetrate the defense structure of the socialist countries. These demands have nothing in common with the Vienna agreement. The West does not respect the principle of equality and equal security. What is the use of inspection measures reaching into the territory of the Soviet Union? The West claims that the Soviet Union shares common borders with the area of central Europe. According to such logic, one should also apply inspection measures to all European NATO states; and if we regard the entire matter from a strategic viewpoint, they should also be applied to the United States.

The West should proceed with greater realism, and it should approach negotiations in a more constructive manner. Otherwise the Vienna negotiations will never break the deadlock. After the 39th round, the situation in Vienna remains unsatisfactory. Not a single specific step has been taken in direction of the agreement. The next round will be opened on 25 September, and, after yesterday, the question remains: will autumn bring a turn for the better?

POLISH VIENNA ENVOY CITES 'NEW OPPORTUNITIES'

LD262201 Warsaw PAP in English 2004 GMT 26 Jun 86

[By PAP correspondent Franciszek Malinowski]

[Text] Vienna, June 26 -- Initiatives advanced during the meeting in Budapest have opened new opportunities for halting the arms race, stated the head of the Polish delegation, Ambassador Stanislaw Przygodzki, addressing the penultimate session of delegations in the 39th round of Vienna talks on armed forces and arms reduction in central Europe here today.

The programme of reducing armed forces and conventional weaponry in Europe, along with the Soviet proposals of January 15, this year, constitute a great, complex programme of freeing the nations of Europe and the world from the threat of war. Poland will do everything in her power to implement the proposals contained in the Budapest message. The programme has an independent character and that is why it can be put to effect without waiting for the results of other negotiations.

The elasticity of approach as concerns the choice of a possible forum at which the programme could be discussed, not forwarding pre-conditions as to the start of discussions, and readiness to review appropriate proposals of other countries should all favour a positive reply from governments concerned with a view to beginning concrete discussion on the topic.

Ambassador Przygodzki stated that the lack of a constructive answer from the West to the proposal of socialist states of February 20, this year, and the efforts of Western partners to decrease the military significance of the future agreement along with attempts at building up the means of verification out of proportion have brought about a serious impasse in negotiations.

The Polish representative rebuffed and billed as absurd the Western claim about the alleged differences between declarations made by the political leaders of socialist countries and the approach adopted by representatives of those countries at the negotiating table in Vienna. Both the leaders and the delegations of socialist countries base on the assumption that there can be no disarmament without verification but that verification without disarmament would not have sense, he said.

The Polish delegate stressed that socialist states were still ready to seek out mutually acceptable, compromise-like and realistic solutions to all problems, including the issue of verification.

SED, SPD DISCUSS NUCLEAR-WEAPONS-FREE CORRIDOR

LD302027 East Berlin ADN International Service in German 1520 GMT 30 Jun 86

[Text] Berlin, 30 Jun (ADN) -- The SED Central Committee working group and the SPD Bundestag group conducted its fifth round of consultations on principles for a nuclear-weapons-free corridor in accordance with the proposal of the Palme Commission in Berlin on Monday. The two sides are eager to bring important issues, which remain open, closer to clarification in intensive result-oriented factual discussions.

The working group discussed the new proposals on disarmament in the conventional area, submitted in the Budapest appeal from the Warsaw Pact states to NATO and all European states. It is now necessary to do everything to ensure that the start of appropraite substantive negotiations will come about in the shortest space of time.

The working group repeats its expectation that the FRG Government should respond constructively to the proposals on the principles and main directions of a treaty on the establishment of a zone in central Europe free of chemical weapons, presented by the governments of the GDR and the CSSR. This would serve [the goal of] an early agreement on a global ban on chemical weapons.

The working group will conduct its sixth meeting in Bonn on 5-6 September 1986. The fifth working meetings was attended for the SED by: Hermann Axen, member of the Politburo and secretary of the SED Central Committee; Dr Manfred Uschner, deputy head of a department in the SED Central Committee; Professor Dr Karl Lanius, director of the High Energy Physics Institute; Karl-Heinz Wagner, assistant in the SED Central Committee; and Dr Guenter Hillmann, section head in the GDR Ministry of Foreign Affairs;

For the SPD Bundestag group by: Egon Bahr, chairman of the Subcommittee for disarmament and Arms control in the German Bundestag and member of the SPD Presidium; Karsten D. Voigt, chairman of the chemical disarmament working group and representative of the foreign policy working group of the SPD Bundestag group and member of the executive of the SPD Bundestag group of the SPD party executive; Erwin Horn, member of the executive of the SPD Bundestag group; Dr Hermann Scheer, representative of the disarmament and arms control working group of the SPD Bundestag group and member of the SPD party council; and Dr Uwe Stehr, SPD Bundestag group expert on disarmament and arms control.

INTERPARLIAMENTARY GROUP PROPOSES CSCE COUNCIL

LD071808 Warsaw PAP in English 1636 GMT 7 Jul 86

[By PAP correspondent Eugeniusz Guz]

[Text] Bonn, July 7: The inter-parliamentary working group for confidence-building measures, established in 1984 by the leaderships of the PUWP Parliamentary Group and the SPD Parliamentary Faction, entered a proposal here today to establish a "European Council for Building Confidence" within the CSCE process.

The new council, proposed as a permanent body open to all CZCE-signatory states, would hold regular meetings on high political levels. The meetings, held under the rotating chairmanship of all council members, would be confidential.

At a jont press conference held today after the PUWP-SPD group's meeting, its members reported on the hitherto results of their works and the stand worked out by both sides. The group issued a joint communique expressing its belief that the strengthening of security and peace requires, most of all, the use of means which would prevent the emergence of crises and detente between the CZCE-signatory states, and the joint shaping of permanent confidence.

Meeting of the European Council would also serve the regular exchange of views on current topics, carried out in an atmosphere of mutual confidence. In the opinion of the PUWP-SPD parliamentary working group the establishment of such a forum would contribute to the consolidation of the CSCE process.

The Polish participants in the conference, with the PUWP parliamentary caucus vice-chairman Ryszard Wojna, stressed that "supra-national interests stemming from the threat to peace and the madness of armaments constitute a binding agent for a new European, pan-European awareness."

ALIA SPEAKS AT DURRES MILITARY MANEUVERS

AU090846 Tirana ATA in English 0730 GMT 9 Jul 86

[Text] Tirana, July 9 (ATA) -- All today's newspapers devote a prominent place to the conclusion in the district of Durres of a military training, in which took part effectives of arms and services of different structures of defence. This training was done in the context of the implementation of the tasks set by the Central Committee of the party for the allround strengthening of the country's defence.

Attending was the first secretary of the Central Committee of the party, the general commander of the Armed Forces, Comrade Ramiz Alia and other party and state leaders.

Comrade Ramiz Alia and the other comrades, after going to the region where the training took place, followed closely the military actions carried out by effectives of different arms and services of the Army. Due to the mobilisation, the lofty feeling of responsibility and firm discipline, the cadres and soldiers, the cooperativists and students reached the targets set in the training.

Comrade Ramiz Alia went to the command centers of different arms and services, which take part in the training and after cordially greeting the officers and soldiers, congratulates them for the high level of their training.

Then Comrade Ramiz Alia congratulates the cooperativist soldiers for the work done and the results attained in the production of wheat, enters the positions and had a talk with them.

We are glad to see that you are not only good workers, but are also capable to defend the homeland, he says to them. Our people is clear on the road of the socialist construction and the country's defence. We are trained to defend the homeland. Our country has neither intended nor does it intend to surpass its borders to grab a piece of land from the others, or to grab the others of their freedom. We do not wage such wars. In all their millenary history, the Albanian people have never waged aggressive wars against the others. On the contrary, the others have attacked us, have wanted to grab the freedom of our people. But we have known how to defend this freedom and independence of the people. Therefore, now that we are building socialism, that we are making progress, and are developing, now that we are elevating the well-being of the people and embellishing the homeland, at the same time we train ourselves and are ready to defend the country.

Comrade Ramiz Alia went also to the agricultural cooperative of Kryevidh where he had a meeting with cadres, specialists and cooperativists of this economy. Comrade Ramiz congratulated them for the successes attained in the military training and on the front of agricultural production.

On July 8, the first secretary of the Central Committee of the party and general commander of the Armed Forces Comrade Ramiz Alia and other party and state leaders took part in the closing ceremony of the military training.

Accompanied by Prokop Murrad, minister of people's defence, Comrade Ramiz Alia passed in review the forces of the different arms and services of the defence structures.

Then amidst a great enthusiasm Comrade Ramiz Alia took the floor. He greeted those present in the name of the Central Committee of the party and the Council of Defence.

After congratulating those present in the military training for the exemplary performance of the task, at the beginning of his speech Comrade Ramiz Alia stressed that the question of the defence of the homeland, freedom and independence has been and is in the center of the attention of the party. Under the care of the party and Comrade Enver Hoxha our People's Army, which inherits and maintains the traditions of the heroic partisans and of the national liberation army is strengthened in all directions.

Speaking of the situations in the world and the aggressive policy of U.S. imperialism and Soviet social imperialism, which are the main danger to peace, freedom and independence of the peoples, Comrade Ramiz Alia stressed that our people are a brave people, a people who have put all their energies to the construction of socialism. The freedom and independence of the homeland are dear to them. Therefore they are determined to safeguard them at any cost, because by defending the homeland they defend the country of their ancestors, everything inherited from the previous generations, who devoted their entire life to Albania, but above all, they defend socialism the happiness and prosperity of the country which they have created and are creating with their hands, they defend peace and tranquility.

After speaking of the 15th plenum of the CC of the party, who approved the draft directives of the economic and social development of the counry for the 5 coming years, Comrade Ramiz Alia said that the Central Committee of the party notices with pleasure that during this year our economy is marching ahead vigorously. The mobilisation of the masses, their creative spirit is expressed ever better in the revolutionary drive "Standard bearers of implementing the teachings of Comrade Enver Hoxha" which has assumed great proportions.

Further on Comrade Ramiz Alia spoke of the draft directives of the 8th five year plan, which reflect the policy of the party for the socialist construction of the country, its program for the progress of the economy and culture, based on our Marxist-Leninist theory and the teachings of Comrade Enver Hoha.

In conclusion Comrade Ramiz Alia stressed that the positions of socialism in Albania are strong and the defence is invincible, because our people is united like a steel fist round our glorious party. The moral-political unity of our people has never been stronger than today. Our people, workers, peasants and intellectuals, youngsters and old people have never been so united in interests, opinions, aspirations as today. This is the great deed of the party and Comrade Enver Hoxha.

After the greetings, the ceremonial parade was made. Our national flag, the flag of the battles and victories in the socialist construction and the defence of the country, was in the lead.

At the end of the ceremony, the Minister of People's Defence Prokop Murra spoke in the name of all the Army effectives and promised the general commander, Comrade Ramiz Alia that they shall put into life resolutely the tasks and instructions he gave in this training by raising higher the readiness and vigilance for the defence of the beloved homeland.

Then Comrade Ramiz Alia left the zone where the training took place seen off with great love.

PARTY SENDS GREETINGS TO LCY CONGRESS

AU060604 Sofia RABOTNICHESKO DELO in Bulgarian 27 Jun 86 p 5

[Report by Nikolay Koev, BTA special correspondent and Stanislav Stanchev, BTA correspondent]

[Text] Belgrade, 26 June -- Leader of the Bulgarian delegation, Milko Balev, member of the BCP Central Committee Politburo, handed in a greetings message from the BCP Central Committee to the LCY Presidency at the 13th LCY congrss, addressed to the delegates of the congress. The greetings message reads as follows:

Dear comrades:

The BCP Central Committee most cordially greets you, the delegates to the 13th LCY Congress, and through you, the Communists and all working people in the SFRY, wishing you successful work in the construction of socialism to the benefit of the Yugoslav peoples.

The Bulgarian Communists and the working people in our country sincerely rejoice at the achievements of the SFRY. These achievements are the results of perserving efforts by the Yugoslav peoples, the results of the great efforts of the LCY in mobilizing and rallying the working people for the solution of the complicated problems of socialist construction in your country.

The People's Republic of Bulgaria and the SFRY, as socialist countries, have a great and important share of responsibility for the consolidation of peace and security, for good-neighbor relations and cooperation in the Balkans. We can state with satisfaction that much has been achieved in relations between our two neighboring countries and parties. However, there are still many unutilized opportunities. Certain difficulties not yet overcome, as well as certain differences of opinions, as our acquired experience shows, should not represent an obstacle to the development of an extensive and fruitful cooperation which is in the interest of our peoples. This will depend upon our joint skill in manifesting greater political realism and in more fully using the advantages of the socialist social system.

The 13th BCP Congress, which took place in April 1986, raised our party's general Leninist April line to a qualitatively new level and specified and expanded the party program under new existing conditions. We assigned to ourselves the task, on the basis of the scientific-technical revolution, of accelerating the rates of speed of our economic development, making it even more dynamic, and optimally utilizing all intensifying factors. We will thus create real conditions for a better satisfaction of our people's material, social, and cultural needs and interests.

The BCP congress confirmed the unchanging line of our party and country of elevating our comprehensive cooperation and drawing together with the Soviet Union to a higher, new stage; it confirmed our policy of a closer integration and production sharing with the socialist community countries. The consolidation of the unity and cohesion of all socialist countries, of the international Communist and workers movement on the basis of Marxism-Leninism and proletarian internationalism -- in strictly observing, at the same time, the principles of equal rights, independence, and noninterference in domestic affairs -- will remain a task of primary importance for us in the future as well.

The present complicated and tense international situation provoked by the policy of the aggressive forces of imperialism, which is dangerous to peace, demands from all of us, from Communists throughout the world, that we even more closely rally our ranks. This situation demands the establishment of a united peace front with the socialist and social democratic parties, with the revolutionary, democratic, and national liberation movements, with all peace-loving forces in the word, regardless of their political, national, and religious affiliation. The proposal submitted by the Soviet Union to build a comprehensive system of international security represents a realistic prerequisite for this. This system is based on the program for gradual liquidation of nuclear and other types of mass destruction weapons by the end of the 20th century, under the conditions of a peaceful outer space. It is also based on the most recent initiative of the Warsaw Pact Political Consultative Committee on the reduction of armed forces and conventional weapons from the Atlantic to the Urals.

The People's Republic of Bulgaria devotes considerable attention to its mutual relations with the Balkan states. Comrade Todor Zhivkov declared as follows at the 13th BCP Congress: "Our policy on the Balkans is constructive, based on principle, and realistic. It is and will always be devoted to peace, good-neighbor relations, and cooperation, to the intensification of mutually advantageous bilateral and multilateral relations. Our country will do everything within its power to transform the Balkans into a zone free of nuclear and chemical weapons. The idea that the Balkan states would work out and sign an agreement on the ecological defense of our peninsula and that they should adopt an appeal on this question to all countries and peoples of the European Continent was launched at the 13th BCP Congress.

We believe that the decisions which the 13th LCY Congress will adopt, will give a strong impetus to the working people's struggle for a further political, economic, and cultural progress of the SFRY, that they will represent a new contribution to the struggle for peace and social progress in the world.

Long live the friendship and cooperation between Bulgarian and Yugoslav Communists, between the Bulgarian and Yugoslav peoples!

Long live and strengthen the unity and cohesion of the socialist countries, of the worldwide Communist and workers' movement, of all democratic and peace-loving forces in the world!

Long live peace!

signed: the BCP Central Committee.

[Text] Todor Zhivkov, general secretary of the BCP Central Committee, has sent the following telegram to Milanko Renovica, president of the LCY Central Committee Presidium:

Esteemed Comrade Renovica,

In the name of the BCP Central Committee and in my own name, please accept most cordial congratulations on the occasion of your election as president of the LCY Central Committee Presidium. I wish you good health, personal happiness, and successes in your responsible work to fulfill the decisions of the 13th LCY Congress.

I use the opportunity to express my satisfaction with the cooperation between our two parties and countries up to the present, as well as the deep conviction that the yet more dynamic development of the relations between the People's Republic of Buulgaria and the SFRY, and between the BCP and the LCY, will be of particular importance for the Bulgarian and Yugoslav peoples, and for the cause of peace and socialism in the Balkans, in Europe, and throughout the world.

ZHIVKOV GREETS JARUZELSKI ON REELECTION

AU071208 Sofia RABOTNICHESKO DELO in Bulgarian 4 Jul 86 p 1

[Text] Todor Zhivkov, general secretary of the BCP Central Committee, has sent the following message to Wojciech Jaruzelski, first secretary of the PZPR Central Committee:

Dear Comrade Jaruzelski,

On behalf of the BCP Central Committee I most cordially greet you on being reelected first secretary of the PZPR Central Committee.

The Bulgarian Communists and the entire working people of our country followed the work of the 10th PZPR Congress with great interest. The decisions of the forum of the Polish Communists, and especially the first party program adopted by it, will reveal broader prospects for the further economic, social, and cultural progress of fraternal Poland.

I am deeply convinced that friendship and cooperation between our parties and countries will further develop on the basis of Marxism-Leninism and socialist internationalism, in the interest of the Bulgarian and Polish peoples, and the unity and cohesion of the socialist community's countries.

Dear Comrade Jaruzelski, please accept my sincere wishes for new and even greater successes in your highly responsible activity for the benefit of the fraternal Polish people, to implement the decisions of the 10th PZPR Congress, and for the cause of world peace and socialism.

ZHIVKOV GREETS MONGOLIA'S BATMONH ON REELECTION

BTA DECLARATION ON U.S. HOUSE NICARAGUA DECISION

AU021943 Sofia BTA in English 1721 GMT 2 Jul 86

[Text] Sofia, July 2 (BTA) -- The decision of the House of Representatives of the U.S. Congress to pass the 100 million dollars aid grant requested by the White House for financing the activities of the mercenary counter-revolutionary gangs against the people and government of sovereign Nicaragua has given rise to profound indignation and alarm among the Bulgarian public. A step has been taken in a dangerous direction which shows lack of political realism and which is yet another manifestation of total disregard of the most elementary and universally recognized norms of the modern international legal order. It is inadmissible for a state such as the United States of America, which is responsible for the maintaining of international law and security, to strive to legalize violence as a norm in international relations into an official state policy under the cover of defence of its vital national interests. In this case the question inevitably arises who, if not the Nicaraguan people themselves, have the right to determine and defend their own vital national interests.

There is no doubt that the decision of the U.S. Congress means new escalation of tension in Central America and leads to critical increase of the danger of open military conflict with unforeseeable consequences for the direct participants in it, as well as for universal peace and security.

Yet another provacation has been directed to the world public, to the peoples and governments of the Latin American countries, which demonstrates most unceremonious disregard of the three-year efforts in he frameworks of the Contadora process for achieving of reasonable, mutually acceptable political solution on the basis of the norms and principles of relations among states, underlying in the U.N. Charter, and considering the legitimate right of the Central American peoples to self-determination, freedom and national independence. There is not and there cannot be a just and permanent normalization of the situation in the region through the means of brutal force, militarism and hegemonism.

The People's Republic of Bulgaria joins the just protest of all progressive and democratic forces in the world and insists on immediate cessation of the rude interference in the internal affairs of the Republic of Nicaragua and of the rest of the Central American countries. The only way for abolishing of that dangerous hot bed of tension, due to the many year policy of imperial dictate, is the unconditional respect of the rights of the peoples of these countries to determine themselves the ways of their national development. The Bulgarian people expresses its solidarity with the just struggle of the people of Nicaragua in defence of its national sovereignty, for peace, freedom and social progress.

RABOTNICHESKO DELO ON GORBACHEV PZPR SPEECH

AU032033 Sofia RABOTNICHESKO DELO in Bulgarian 2 Jul 86 p 6

[Unattributed editorial article: "Time for Radical Change — for Thought and Actions"]

[Text] Comrade Mikhail Gorbachev's speech at the congress of the Polish Communists rightly and naturally attracted the attention of politicians, observers, and ordinary people, because it is a concrete continuation of the analysis of the contemporary international situation made in the Political Report to the 27th CPSU Congress.

The Soviet leader's speech contained a profound analysis of events in Poland in recent yars and lessons necessary for the whole of the socialist community. The main important conclusion is that socialism has extended deep roots into the consciousness of the workers of our countries. At the same time, the development of the new socialist order now requires creativity in applying the teachings of Marxism-Leninism, strengthening of the parties' ties with the workers class and the broad masses of the workers, and bold rejection of everything which hinders initiative and a frank and honest dialogue with the people. In this lies the guarantee that socialism will speedily and successfully resolve the problems of this stage and that it will take the most direct path.

The lessons drawn from the development of the socialist social order in recent decades, as Mikhail Gorbachev pointed out, require us to apply ourselves without hesitation to the main goal at the moment, namely the full use of the vast potentials of our society. Only in this way will the socialist states be able to respond to the provocations of the class enemy, and not only win the historical duel, but also make themselves a true example and impose their outlook on the consciousness of the broadest masses of the people throughout the world.

The international situation in which the issues of the socialist community are being resolved is complex. As Comrade Gorbachev stated, the situation remains tense, and has even further deteriorated recently in certain respects. [paragraph contines]

The most reactionary circles in the West bear the responsibility for this development. They do not renounce settling the historical confrontation by means of force., thus gambling with the world's very existence. And what claims might they be able to make against the socialist countries after the latter's numerous concrete proposals for limiting the arms race, disarmament, and peaceful coexistence? A logical question, to which no one in the West has given any well-reasoned answer.

The Soviet Union is once again making a call for negotiations, but for honest negotiations, in which both sides are really to strive to achieve real results. The smokescreen of empty promises and hollow assertions about striving for peace is today something more than irresponsibility. The actions of the Western politicians should be guided not by the illusions of being able to make a nuclear strike without retribution, but by serious, sober analysis. For the world -- the world of all -- can only be preserved by common efforts.

Human civilization is standing at an exceptionally important crossroads in its development, from which there is one, and only one, reasonable continuation -- not only for the advance of mankind, but also for its survival. In recent months the USSR and the other fraternal socialist countries have been ever more persistently giving warnings of this objective fact. The importance of this fact was once again -- in a soundly argued, clear, and categorical manner -- pointed out in the greetings speech to the 10th PZPR Congress delivered by Comrade Mikhail Gorbachev. The time has come for a radical change -- both in thought and in actions. The quicker this truth is apprehended by the other side, too, the greater will be the chances for us to look forward to the new millenium with optimism.

ROMANIAN PARLIAMENTARY DELEGATION ARRIVES

[Text] Sofia, July 7 (BTA) -- A Romanian parliamentary delegation headed by Mr Nicolae Giosan, alternate member of the Executive Political Committee of the Central Committee of the Romanian Communist Party and chairman of the Grand National Assembly of Romania, arrived here on an official visit.

The delegation was welcomed at Sofia Airport by Mr Stanko Todorov, member of the Politburo of the CC of the BCP and chairman of the National Assembly, and other high ranking officials.

Hold Official Talks

They briefed each other on the two countries' socioeconomic development, on the tasks carried out by the working people in the various economic branches in fulfillment of the decisions on comprehensive and accelerated introduction of techno-scientific advances into production. Mr Stanko Todorov drew attention to the BCP policy seeking to develop a material and technical base adequate to advanced socialism, to use efficiently various economic levers aimed at speeding up economic growth, and to satisfy the steadily growing material and intellectual requirements of the people. He expounded the significance of the new formulations about the owner and the manager of socialist property.

Mr Stanko Todorov and Mr Nicolae Giosan commented upon the two parliaments' role in the broadening of the democracy, the development of the socialist self-management and the improvement of the efficiency of their countries' governing bodies.

They assessed highly the contacts between the two parliaments and expressed the desire to further improve and broaden the contacts between the supreme state bodies. This would also help promote the bilateral cooperation in all fields between the two states.

The participants in the talks emphasized upon the fact that their countries share the same views on all international issues and that Romania and Bulgaria will continue to contribute to the strengthening of the good neighbor relations and cooperation in the Balkans. In this connection they commended the significance of the initiatives aimed at turning the Balkans into a zone free of nuclear and chemical weapons. Mr Nicolae Giosan supported the proposal made by the Bulgarian head of state Mr Todor Zhivkov on the signing of an ecological protection treaty by all Balkan states.

The chairman of the Grand National Assembly of Romania also had talks with Mr Khristo Khristov, minister of trade of Bulgaria.

MICROPROCESSING EQUIPMENT PRODUCTION REPORTED

[Text] Sofia, July 8 (BTA) -- In 1983 the instrumentation plant in the town of Pravets (County of Sofia) produced the first 500 Bulgarian personal computers. In 1984 the output was increased to 2,500 and the production figures for 1985 reached 18,000.

This venture changed the basic concept of the whole plant which directed its work entirely towards the manufacturing of microprocessor equipment. Now the enterprise is a science and production combine consisting of four factories (for microcomputers and systems, for mechanical components, for printed circuit boards and for instruments and non-standard equipment), as well as of two software houses (Pravets programme).

The increasing of the volume of the combine's output is accompanied by an improvement of the product range. The first universal personal computer Praverts 82, working on basic, was followed by the Pravets 8M which has an extended memory and better data transfer features. Both computers have immediately found their way into schools, scientific laboratories, offices and manufacturing companies.

The next step in the improvement of the variety of the produce was the 16-bit Pravets 16. It is equivalent and compatible with IBM PC. The data can be processed both in the Cyrillic and Roman characters.

5,000 Pravets 8D personal computers will be marketed by the end of 1986. This computer can work with an ordinary TV set and can use a cassette player as a peripheral recording device.

Production of the new 16 bit Pravets 16X and Pravets 16H will be starting soon. These machines can be used for the establishment of local computer networks with a mainframe data base.

The combine is currently developing the Pravets I, a 16 bit computer designed for automated systems in industrial enterprise, and Pravets 8E, an 8 bit computer of a higher degree of integration. By 1990 the production of computers will be increased by 2.5 times against the 1985 figures. The general reconstruction of the combine, which is now under way, and the combine's high degree of automation would allow for the inclusion in the production lists of microprocessor devices for all branches of the national economy. The greatest ambition of the combine's specialists is to make their products competitive with the equipment produced by the world's leading manufacturers.

The successful fulfillment of these plans is guaranteed by the proper integration of science and culture. A branch of the Technical Cybernetics and Robotics Institute with the Bulgarian Academy of Sciences was recently established in Pravets to operate jointly with the combine. This institute designed the first Pravets computers, better known by the name of IMKO. The combine is broadening its cooperation with the Lenin Higher Institute of Mechanical and Electrical Engineering. As from the next academic year the combine will train the institute's 3rd level students of microprocessor technology.

SOFIA COUNCIL DISCUSSES BREAD PRODUCTION

AU030909 Sofia RABOTNICHESKO DELO in Bulgarian 1 Jul 86 p 6

[Text] At its first session, held yesterday, the newly elected Executive Committee of the Sofia City People's Council discussed the implementation of Decree No 61 issued by the Council of Ministers in 1980, regarding an improvement in the production and trade of bread and bread products in our capital, as well as in connection with the construction of some food industry plants. The Executive Committee expressed dissatisfaction with the respective officials directly responsible for the implementation of the aforementioned decree. So far only 41 of the 52 planned projects have been built. The other 11 projects must be commissioned by all means by the end of 1986 or 1987. Yesterday's decision of the Sofia City People's Council Executive Committee points out the necessity of fully clarifying the reasons for the unjustified lagging behind and the need to adopt severe sanctions against all officials who are responsible for the delay in construction.

GREEK PARTY LEADER FLORAKIS INTERVIEWED

[Text] Sofia, July 7 (BTA) -- "Fortunately the cause of peace does not depend on the U.S. alone", Mr. Kharilaos Florakis, secretary general of the Communist Party of Greece, said. In an interview for the daily of the CC of the BCP RABOTNICHESKO DELO, published today, he stresses that the cause of peace depends above all on the peoples and on the struggle they lead against war. Mr. Kharilaos Florakis comments on the policy of the U.S. in the Balkans. He stresses that the principal aim of U.S. imperialism in this region is not only to maintain the existing but also to fan up new hotbeads of tension. The imperialist circles are not giving up their attempts to reserve the development of the relations in the Balkans. The Greek Communists are convinced that it is the duty of the countries and peoples of the region to preserve and promote peaceful cooperation. This duty stands above all disputes and differences, Mr. Kharilaos Florakis stresses. The secretary general of the Communist Party of Greece declares himself in support of the Bulgarian initiatives directed towards turning the Balkans into a nuclear-weapon-free zone, towards the non-admittance of the deployment of nuclear weapons on the territory of those Balkan countries which have no such weapons at present, towards the undertaking of obligations not to increase the nuclear arsenals and towards the starting of their reductions.

Mr. Harilaos Florakis supports the Soviet proposals for settling the Cyprus problem because their realization would guarantee the independence and the non-alliance of the island and to the elimination of the foreign basis and the withdrawal of the foreign troops from it. He condemmed the U.S. stand on the Cyprus issue and its striving to turn the island into an "unsinkable aircraft carrier."

The leader of the Greek Communist Party is of the opinion that there should be expected a new attempt on the part of the U.S. to preserve its military bases on Greek territory. In these conditions the struggle for Greece to leave NATO should acquire new dimensions. The answer of the Communist Party of Greece to the dilemma "PAASOK or the right wing" is a change in Greece by means of uniting the wide public and political forces which are really striving to this," Mr. "Kharilaos Florakis stresses. [quotation marks as received] The interview gives a high assessment to Bulgarias' achievements in socio-economic development in the conditions of socialism.

GUSTOV HUSAK ADDRESSES YOUTH MEETING

AU061950 Prague RUDE PRAVO in Czech 28 Jun 86 pp 1,2

[Speech delivered by Gustav Husak, CPCZ Central Committee general secretary and CSSR president, at the meeting between representeatives of the Czechoslovak youth and representatives of the CPCZ and the state, held on 27 June at Prague Castle: "The 17th Congress Program Opens Broad Scope for Youth"]

[Text] Esteemed Comrades, dear young friends, on behalf of the CPCZ Central Committee and the National Front Central Committee, on behalf of the Czechoslovak Government, as well as in my own name I sincerely welcome you to Prague Castle, at the meeting with the representatives of our political and public life. On this occasion I cordially greet the young people throughout our fatherland.

Comrade General [chairman of the Central Committee of the Socialist Youth Union] spoke of the life and activity of the Socialist Youth Union (SSM) and its Pioneer Organization (PO), of the work, joys, and problems of the new generations. We highly appreciate the young people's political and working activity and their contribution to to task fulfillment in our national economy, in services and culture, in medical care, in schools, in the armed units, as well as in other spheres of our society's life. We esteem the young people's sincere attitude toward the policy of the Communist Party and the National Front, which also expresses the youth's own interests and needs. We are glad that the young people are identifying themselves out of deep conviction with our peaceful foreign policy and with the struggle of the Soviet Union, of the entire socialist community for a world without wars and arms, for making war terrors unknown to both the current and the future generations for all times.

We consider the relationship with youth and understanding for its needs, concern for its good training and for the favorable conditions for its increasingly broad assertion, to be one of the basic components of our policy. We spend considerable financial means on education, culture, medical care, physical educatin, sports, and other spheres so as to achieve a lasting growth of qualification and educational standards and a healthy physical and mental growth of the young generation. We devote great care to making the young people's entry into life easier and to supporting young married couples and families with children. Contrary to their contemporaries in the capitalist world, who have to bear today the heavy burden of the crisis and of mass unempoloyment, the young people in our country can plan their future with confidence, without fear for tomorrow. All this inseparably belongs to the achievements of the socialist system.

At the 17th CPCZ Congress we appraised with justified pride the successes we achieved in the past in building our socialist society; we also openly pointed out the weaknesses and shortcomings and formulated the trends and goals of our further course. On the basis of an analysis of the internal and external conditions of further development, and particularly on the basis of the revolutionary consequences of the scientific-technical revolution, we set as the main task the demand to speed up the dynamics of development in the socio-economic and other spheres, to radically improve work in all sectors, and to make better and more efficient use of all material resources and of the intellectual and social forces of our country.

Great demands follow from the programmatic goals of the 17th Congress both for the standards of upbringing and educational work, and for the young people and the youth movement. It fully applies to this field, too, that one must be more energetic in looking for, and implementing, new approaches and methods (paragraph continues).

The present generations of young people will be gradually taking over the responsibility for our country's destiny at the turn of the millenium. That is why it is so significant to prepare them as well as possible politically, morally, and professionally to cope with the striking growth of demands which will be brought by the transition into the 21st century, demands which are being asserted even today. It will depend on all this whether socialist Czechoslovakia will lastingly hold a dignified place in the world and our people will live a good life. That is why we are placing such great emphasis on the importance of the young people's upbringing as a common and extremely responsible task of the Communist Party, of the socialist state, of all national front organizations, of the entire society.The issue of scientific-technical development must hold a far more significant place in the contents of activities of our entire upbringing-educational system. It is necessary to stimulate and develop yet more efficiently the young people's interest in the achievements of science and technology and their endeavors to master the basics of micro-electronics, electronics, and other progressive trends of scientific-technical progress. In this respect good experience is being provided by the state exhibition of young people's scientific-technical creativity "ZENIT" in Prague.

The improvement of upbringing standards among the workers youth demands great attention. By reorganizing the upbringing-educational system we have taken a significant step toward raising the training of young workers to the level of secondary education.

This enormously enhances the responsibility of school agencies, but also of enterprises and ministerial departments, for the correct implementation of the adopted intentions in practice. Today practically one third of the young people who are being trained for workers professions are living in youth homes attached to enterprises. The appropriate agencies must see to it that thse young people become models of the good upbringing of new workers generations.

The absolute majority of young people has an honest and responsible attitude toward the socialist system, toward life, work and studies. We know of many examples of young people proving by their deeds their selflessness, high awareness, discipline, and grasp of society's needs. However, we cannot overlook the fact that a certain part of youth is also manifesting, to this or that extent, certain unfavorable traits, superficiality and indolence, egotism and immodesty, and inclination to regard the achievements of socialism as a matter of course, and a tendency to demand a great deal from the society, but to give back to it only very little. One must devote great attention to these phenomena and to their causes; one must effectively ward off the attempts to introduce in our country various harmful, so-called fashionable, trends from the West and also the endeavors of hostile propaganda to count on the lack of experience among the young generation. Wherever necessary, the appropriate agencies must offer the young people a helping hand, and adopt effective measures against the negative influences on youth.

To cultivate among young people good human moral qualities, honesty, honorable attitudes, diligence, conscientiousness, and respect for work, for parents, and for elderly people in general -- all this is as important as professional knowledge. Upbringing inside the family plays an irreplaceable role in this.

Socialist awareness does not crop up automatically; it requires a purposeful influence by word and deed. The thing is to promptly explain to the young people both domestic and international problems, frankly to reply to their every question, to help them come to the correct conviction on the basis of their own experience and knowledge. Much depends on their grasping how our socialist present has emerged from the difficult struggles for national freedom and social justice -- on the young people's consolidating their sentiments of national pride, socialist patriotism, and internationalism -- on their awareness of the significance of friendship and alliance with the Soviet Union and other socialist countries for our peaceful life.

Our party approaches youth as its active comrade-in-arms in the struggle for the socialist transformation of the world. It attributes great significance to the practical participation of coming generations in the economic and cultural building, management, and administration of the society. In the recent elections, up to 67,000 young people under 35 years old were elected to the representative agencies on all levels -- this is almost one third of the total number of deputies. Their percentage in the CPCZ' membership base is the same. The young people significantly participate in the activities of the Revolutionary Trade Union Movement and other National Front organizations, and are increasingly represented in executive functions in the state and economic agencies. We will continue in this direction, and even more intensively.

The Program of the 17th Congress opens new possibilities for developing all-round activities of our young people, for implementing their energy, educational level, and sense of the new. Today the main purpose of the SSM's work is to organize the young people's participation in the realization of the Program. We feel respect for the SSM's varied activities, for its confidence in the policy of the Communist Party and the National Front, and for its active participation in the realization of this policy. In the spirit of the Congress resolutions we are counting on further developing the SSM's social role. This demands that the SSM be even more courageous in looking for more attractive, really fresh forms of work, for ways to raise its influence on all age groups and strata of young people. This particularly applies to activity among the worker youth. The more the SSM implements creativity, variety, and ingeniousness in its entire activity, the more vigorously will it act as youth's spokesman and representative, and the more actively will it help push through the new initiatives, the better will this be for the society, for all youth, as well as for the SSM itself. In this it can count on the full support of the Communist Party, of the National Front, and of our socialist state.

Esteemed comrades, esteemed friends, I want to assure you that we will also in the future devote our lasting attention to the needs of our youth, to improving the conditions for its development and assertion in life. We rely on the young people's even more active participation in work for our fatherland's upsurge, in the fight for peace and progress in the world. We are convinced that in the young people our society has a reliable guarantee of a good future.

I wish you and all young people in our fatherland many successes in work, in studies, and in personal life.

FEDERAL PRICES OFFICE HEAD ON PRICING POLICY

LD081427 Prague CTK in English 1355 GMT 8 Jul 86

[Text] Prague, July 9 (CTK) -- The Czechoslovak price policy in the 8th Five-Year Plan period (1986-1990) will focus on supporting the intensification of economy and contributing to speeding up the social economic development, Minister, Chairman of the Federal Prices Office Michal Sabolick, told a press conference here today.

These aims are to be attained through prepared wholesale price adjustments. Michal Sabolcik said that in the previous five-year plan period, the level of wholesale prices increased by 17.7 per cent, i.e. marked one of the lowest growths within the socialist countries. As from the beginning of 1988, wholesale prices will be reduced in industry and in the production of building material and in the years 1988 and 1989 price adjustments will be made in the agricultural-food complex.

The aim of these adjustments will be to increase the incentive of producers to cut production costs, to speed up the system of replacing outdated means of production with modern machines and equipment.

Michal Sabolcik further said that in the price policy, Czechoslovakia will proceed from prices on the decisive world markets and from Czechoslovak export prices. He added that the demands put on the required contemporary standard and quality of products will be increased also within a new law on state control which is currently being prepared.

Adjustments in wholesale prices will not affect retail prices whose level will be based on a harmony between the price, wage and social policy of the state.

EXPANDING CIVIL DEFENSE FACILITIES IN BRATISLAVA

AU080832 Bratislava VECERNIK in Slovak 3 Jul 86 pp 1, 4

[Interview given by Colonel Rober Muska, chief of staff of the Bratislava Civil Defense, to a reporter identified as "Lelo": "Civil Defense in the 5-Year Plan; Dual Purposefulness Is More Effective" -- place and date not given; first paragraph is newspaper's introduction]

[Excerpts] Bratislava -- The Slovakia-wide party-political aktiv has elaborated the resolutions of the 17th CPCZ Congress and the documents of the CPSL Congress according to the conditions of the civil defense of the Slovak Socialist Republic. On that occasion we asked Colonel Robert Muska, chief of staff of the civil defense of the SSR capital, Bratislava, for an interview.

[Muska] Practically all of them. [passage omitted] In this 5-Year Plan, our society will expand hundreds of millions of korunas for ensuring reliable shelters for the citizens of Bratislava alone. But here we are also keeping effectiveness in mind. In accordance with the new construction-technical measures, we are giving preference to building the so-called dual-purpose shelters. For example a cinema-shelter, a club-shelter, and so forth. As an example I can name the new underground garages in Ruzinov, which are at the same time a shelter for 1,800 persons. The underground part of the rapid transit system will have a similar purpose. What pleases us is the fact that shelter building is becoming a part of the comprehensive housing construction, for example, in the new housing construction, for example, in the new housing development Dlhe Diely. We are pressing hard for such an approach becoming standard procedures for any new investment project.

VISITORS TO WEST URGED TO MAKE FAIR COMPARISONS

AU081102 [Editorial Report] Prague RUDE PRAVO in Czech on 5 July on page 3 carries a 1,300-word Zdena Stepankova article headlined "Patriotic Pride," mainly aimed at Czechoslovak critizens who will spend their vacations this year in one of the Western countries.

Stepankova opens her article by saying how proud she feels whenever she meets a fellow countryman who has been accorded international recognition.

However, there are also Czechoslovaks, she says, "who a few kilometers past the border already begin admiring nicely packaged wares in the first shop window, and immediately everything we have in our country seems to them to be worthy of contempt. And not only that.

Some have not even been anywhere, but they know exactly what is better than in our country, and where it is better. And thus one finds out that elsewhere they have better or much better health care because they can, for example, choose and pay a doctor; or education because they can study at private -- and thus paid for -- schools; that there are, of course, more forthcoming salesgirls, more competent directors, and tastier soft drinks. In short: We must learn a great deal. Only beer and dumplings are not better anywhere. That is at least something."

Stepankova goes on to say that the CSSR "is not the world's leading country," that a 15 million-strong state cannot excel in everything, be it science, technology, or the "practical management of daily life."

Although material wealth means much, it is not everything. National cultural traditions, respect for man, "especially for the working man" are also important.

In the CSSR there are "many problems calling for solutions," but elsewhere they have problems too, although different ones. For example, there are people who have finished their studies and cannot get a job. It seems to me, Stepankova says, that especially for a young person, such a situation is much worse than, for example, having to move from one part of the country, in which he lived or studied, to another, where he could make use of his abilities and realize his life plans. "Some people, however, are passing off the first situation -- the unemployment of young people -- as the better" of the two, "since a young unemployed person allegedly receives unemployment benefits and thus his vacations are, in fact, prolonged," whereas when those who have finished their studies in our country are called upon to go where society needs them, this is regarded as almost unfair.

Not so long ago, Stepankova continues, a scientist who returned from abroad for the first time to gain practice and experience in an illustrious institute. He went worrying whether he would be up to the work there. He was up to it. He was even offered another internship. He could also convince himself about the effect of anti-Czechoslovak campaigns. The head of the institute was not at all surprised at his abilities, but his younger colleagues were surprised that he was so good at his job despite being from Czechoslovakia.

Nobody in the CSSR wants anybody to praise something that deserves criticism, to admire something that is not worth of admiration. We do not deny any country the advantages it has. On the contrary, particularly in medicine, we are taking over findings that can serve our people. It is unthinkable for every state to rely only upon itself. Scientific progress advances very rapidly and requires teamwork even on the international scale, Stepankova says, adding that for that reason all those going abroad to gather experience are being rightly reminded to keep their eyes open to see in what fields other countries are ahead of the CSSR. After all, this is why one goes abroad. However, one does not visit only the West to gather experience; many new things, progressive and useful things, could also be learned in the USSR and the other socialist countries.

It is now vacation time and many Czechoslovaks will spend it abroad, some going to the seaside, others studying the cultural traditions and way of life of the local people. "However, we would like to recall that the standard of living and the life of people cannot be assessed in accordance with the first shop having nicely packaged wares. If we want to compare, let us have a more profound interest in everything, for example, in the attitude toward work, organization, and order. And let us also not forget those things of which we, too, can be proud, as well as those we will not find abroad. There are quite a few such things," Stepankova concludes.

CSSR DEPUTY PREMIER POTAC CONTINUES VISIT

Holds Talks With Stoph

LD081946 East Berlin Voice of GDR Domestic Service in German 1700 GMT 8 Jul 86

[Text] Council of Ministers Chairman Willi Stoph and Svatopluk Potac, deputy chairman of the CSSR Government, noted a dynamic development of bilateral relations in all spheres in Berlin today. They stressed that the consolidation of the unity and cohesion of the socialist community of states and the strengthening of socialism are of great importance for the maintenance of peace and security in Europe and in the whole world. An important foundation for even more effective cooperation between the two sides was established with the signing of the joint plan of measures for the long-term program of economic and scientific-technological cooperation up to the year 2000.

Joint Cooperation Plan Signed

LD081941 East Berlin ADN International Service in German 1602 GMT 8 Jul 86

[Text] Berlin, 8 Jul (ADN) -- A "joint plan of measures for the implementation of the program of the development of economic and scientific-technological cooperation between the GDR and the CSSR up to the year 2000 for the period 1986-90 and beyond" has been signed at the consultations of the GDR-CSSR joint Economic Committee.

During the discussions in Berlin on Monday and Tuesday, the vice-premiers of the two states, Horst Soelle and Svatopluk Potac, conducted an exchange of views on cooperation in microelectronics, the production of television tubes, the coordination of capacities in the petrochemical industry, the development and production of flexible automated machine systems in machine tool construction, and robot technology. They discussed how the division of labor in the development, production, and delivery to each country of integrated circuits and microprocessors, especially technological equipment and auxiliary materials, is to be intensified.

On Tuesday Svatopluk Potac, chairman of the CSSR State Planning Commission, met with his GDR counterpart, Deputy Premier Gerhard Schuerer, for a discussion on economic and scientific-technological cooperation, which has been agreed upon on a long-term basis. Both sides highly rated the coordination of cooperation experienced thus far in research, development, and production and for the dynamic development of bilateral deliveries of goods.

They emphasized that the cooperation between the two planning organs is determined in the long run, primarily by the tasks laid down for the development and introduction of key technologies. This is of particular importance in raising the performance strength of the national economies of the two countries by means of comprehensive intensification and for the deepening of socialist economic integration.

FURTHER ON MITTAG IN TOKKYO FOR ECONOMIC SESSION

Conveys Message to Nakasone

LD081523 East Berlin ADN International Service in German 1333 GMT 8 Jul 86

[Text] Tokyo, 8 Jul (ADN) -- Guenter Mittag, member of the Politburo and secretary of the SED Central Committee and deputy chairman of the GDR State Council, was received by the Japanese Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone in Tokyo on Tuesday.

Guenter Mittag brought the prime minister a personal message from Erich Honecker, the general secretary of the SED Central Committee and chairman of the GDR State Council, as well as his cordial greetings. Yasuhiro Nakasone expressed thanks for them and received the message with great interest. He said that he fully agrees with the thoughts contained therein for constructive cooperation in the service of improving the international situation and safeguarding peace.

He shared the view on disarmament stated in the greetings message and expressly emphasized that Japan will adhere to the three non-nuclear principles. Prime Minister Nakasone asked Guenter Mittag to convey his best greetings to Erich Honecker, the chairman of the GDR State Council.

The deputy chairman of the GDR State Council praised the successful work of the joint GDR-Japan and Japan-GDR Economic Committees, whose 15th conference in Tokyo under the leadership of Gerhard Beil and Eishiro Saito, concluded with good results, positive prospects were marked out for further cooperation on the basis of friendship for mutual benefit.

Yasuhiro Nakasone noted this with pleasure and then went on to questions of international politics. Again referring to the message from Erich Honecker, he emphasized that the meeting between Mikhail Gorbachev and Ronald Reagan in Geneva had a strong effect. He took the view that a lasting path to peace and disarmament could be found and followed.

Japan and the GDR, the Japanese prime minister said, should both continue to actively contribute to the safeguarding of peace and to disarmament on the basis of their own positions.

Guenter Mittag emphasized that the safeguarding of peace is the supreme principle of GDR policy, as was also emphasized in the message from the GDR to the Japanese prime minister. The GDR is doing everything so that progress can be made through constructive steps and proposals in the process of safeguarding peace. In this connection Guenter Mittag strongly emphasized the constructive initiative by Mikhail Gorbachev and the Warsaw Pact states in Budapest for the freeing of mankind from the danger of a nuclear inferno.

Prime Minister Nakasone showed great interest in the stable and dynamic economic development of the GDR and in the high growth rates that have been achieved.

Guenter Mittag spoke about the resolutions adopted at the 11th SED Congress and said that it is known in the GDR on the basis of a clear economic strategy that growth rates of 4-5 percent per annum of national income for the next 5 years and beyond will be achieved. The GDR accords priority to the economic use of the latest results in science and technology. New and major opportunities for the further expansion of bilateral economic and trade relations will emerge from this.

Gerhard Beil, the GDR foreign trade minister; Dieter Jaeger, the GDR ambassador to Japan; and Eishiro Saito, chairman of the Japan-GDR Economic Committee and chairman of the Japanese Keidanren Employers Federation, took part in the talks.

Holds Talks With Shintaro Abe

LD081749 East Berlin Voice of GDR Domestic Service in German 1505 GMT 8 Jul 86

[Special Correspondent Malte Slettstoesser report from Tokyo]

[Excerpts] In the course of his talks with leading Japanese politicians today Guenter Mittag was received by Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone and Foreign Minister Shintaro Abe. [passage omitted]

Late this afternoon Guenter Mittag met with Japanese Foreign Minister Shintaro Abe. Once again the GDR politician conveyed cordial greetings from Erich Honecker. The two politicians expressed pleasure at the renewed meeting and the opportunities it provides for continuing the constructive talks which were held last June in Berlin. That first visit by a Japanese foreign minister to the GDR, Guenter Mittag underlined, played a considerable role in deepening and enriching the political dialogue between the two states and governments. Shintaro Abe underlined this assessment and said he recalls his stay in Berlin and his talks with Erich Honecker with pleasure.

The two sides stated that the political, economic, and cultural relations between the GDR and Japan have developed successfully since then. It was agreed to further intensify cooperation on the basis of what has been achieved, and there was agreement in noting that the expansion of trust between states with different social systems, in line with the principles of peaceful coexistence, serves disarmament, detente, and the preservation of peace.

Attends Dinner; Departs

LD081758 East Berlin ADN International Service in German 1608 GMT 8 Jul 86

[Excerpts] Tokyo, 8 Jul (ADN) -- [Passage omitted] The chairman of the Parliamentary Consultative Committee of the Liberal-Democratic Party for Japan-GDR economic questions, Ichiro Sato, gave a dinner in Guenter Mittag's honor. In a toast the Japanese politician expressed confidence that Mittag's visit and the further expansion of the economic and scientific-technical cooperation agreed upon created favourable new conditions for the further development of good, all-round relations between Japan and the GDR.

This evening Guenter Mittag embarked on his journey home.

COOPERATION TALKS WITH HUNGARY END; AGENDA SIGNED

LD081859 Budapest MTI in English 1705 GMT 8 Jul 86

[Text] Budapest, July 8 (MTI) -- The 24th session of the Hungarian-GDR Committee for Economic and Technological and Scientific Cooperation concluded Tuesday in Berlin with the signing of an agenda.

At the talks the co-chairmen of the committee, Hungarian Deputy Prime Minister Jozsef Marjoi, and GDR Deputy Prime Minister Wolfgang Rauchfuss, evaluated the economic, and technbological and scientific cooperation between the two countries. They concluded that results had been achieved in cooperation principally in economy with materials and energy, the engineering industry, micro-electronics, computer technology and the chemical industry, as well as in the development of direct relations between companies and combines.

They considered it necessary to reinforce traditional cooperation of automated production systems new opportunities for cooperation have been found.

The sides examined trends in technological and scientific cooperation and agreed that the work should concentrate principally on the development and production of the latest achievements of science and technology.

Jozsef Marjai met with Willi Stoph, chairman of the Council of Ministers of the GDR. Both deemed the joint measures resolved upon to introduce and apply key technologies to be particularly important. They considered it timely to make the system of cooperation more flexible.

On his departure from Schonefeld Airport in Berlin Tuesday Jozsef Marjai was seen off by Wolfgang Rauchfuss and by Istvan Roska, Hungary's ambassador to the GDR. Karl-Heinz Lugenheim, the GDR's ambassador to Hungary, was present at Ferihegy Airport on the deputy prime minister's return to Budapest.

FELFE RECEIVES FRG AGRICULTURE MINISTER

LD081717 East Berlin ADN International Service in German 1531 GMT 8 Jul 86

[Text] Berlin, 8 Jul (ADN) -- Werner Felfe, member of the Politburo and secretary of the SED Central Committee, received Ignaz Kiechle, FRG federal minister of food, agriculture and forestry, who is on a visit to the GDR at the invitation of Bruno Lietz, minister of agriculture, forestry and foodstuffs, for a talk in Berlin on Tuesday.

During the meeting, which took place in a businesslike and open atmosphere, an exchange of views on issues of the safeguarding of peace and the development of relations between the two states, especially in the sphere of agriculture, took place. Werner Felfe and Ignaz Kiechle agreed that the safeguarding of peace is a vital issue for mankind and that both German states must do everything to ensure that never again will war emanate from German soil, only peace.

Werner Felfe stressed the necessity of steps to prevent the arms race in outer space, to abolish nuclear weapons, and to bring about a change for the better in international relations. Thus, the GDR supports the far-reaching Soviet disarmament proposals.

Werner Felfe outlined the Budapest appeal of the Warsaw Pact states and stressed that the implementation of the proposals of Budapest and of the Soviet Peace initiatives would open the way to stopping the arms spiral, reducing military confrontation in Europe, and creating peace, with fewer and fewer weapons. The question of peace, Werner Felfe stressed, was and remains the most important questions regarding relations between the two German states as well. They have a particularly great responsibility for peace and must act accordingly.

He referred here to the joint statement by Erich Honecker and Helmut Kohl on 12 March 1985, which affirmed that the inviolability of frontiers and the respecting of territorial integrity and sovereignty of all states in Europe in their present frontiers are fundamental conditions for peace. This has had a beneficial effect on the situation in Europe.

The GDR has an interest in relations with the FRG being shaped in such a way as to promote peaceful, trusting coexistence, based on equal rights among the states and peoples of Europe. It is a matter of relations on the basis of the principles of international law and of regard for legitimate interests.

Minister Kiechle also stressed the great importance of the safeguarding of peace., He agreed that peace is the basic precondition for the successful development of agriculture for the benefit of the people.

Minister Kiechle said that he regards peace and good-neighborliness as important building bricks of the future. For this reason he is convinced that Geneva will bear fruit.

The two politicians exchanged their opinions on agricultural problems. Among other things, an exchange of trainees in institutions of agricultural sciences in the GDR and the FRG was agreed upon for this year. Minister Kiechle said that he was impressed by the considerable state of performance in agriculture, of which he was convinced at the Agra 86 agricultural fair. He spoke very appreciatively about his visit to the Bockwen agricultural production cooperative in Dresden Bzirk.

Bruno Lietz, GDR minister of agriculture, forestry and foodstuffs; Karl Seidel, director of the FRG Department in the Ministry of Foreign Affairs; and other figures took part in the talk. Dr Hans Otto Braeutigam, head of the FRG permanent mission in the GDR, was also present.

This evening Werner Felfe, member of the Politburo and secretary of the SED Central Committee, gave a banquet in honor of Ignaz Kiechle, FRG federal minister of food, agriculture and forestry. Minister Kiechle has since begun the journey home.

SINDERMANN RECEIVES PRC'S SONG RUFEN, DELEGATION

LD081958 East Berlin ADN International Service in German 1638 GMT 8 Jul 86

[Text] Berlin, 8 Jul (ADN) -- Horst Sindermann, GDR People's Chamber president and member of the SED Central Committee Politburo, received on Tuesday the study delegation from the Legislative Work Commission of the Standing Committee of the Chinese National People's Congress led by Song Rufen, vice chairman of the commission.

Horst Sindermann and Song Rufen exchanged views on the international situation and bilateral relations, particularly between the highest People's Assemblies of the two states. They both expressed a desire for the expansion of relations between the two states and stressed that in the present situation there is no more important task than the struggle to safeguard peace.

Sindermann expressed the GDR's determination to safeguard peace and create a worldwide coalition of reason and realism. The GDR worked actively for the realization of the Warsaw Pact states' peace program.

The two sides stressed the usefulness of the exchange of views between the two Peoples' Assemblies. They also praised the results achieved so far and expressed their certainty that relations would continue in the interest of strengthening socialism and peace, and to the mutual advantage of each state.

KROLIKOWSKI RECEIVES CSCE EXECUTIVE SECRETARY

AU060625 East Berlin NEUES DEUTSCHLAND in German 2 Jul 86 p 5

[Text] Berlin (ADN) -- On Tuesday [1 July] Herbert Krolikowski, state secretary and first deputy minister for foreign affairs of the GDR, received Ambassador Helmut Liedermann, designated executive secretary of the CSCE member-states' follow up meeting that will start in Vienna on 4 November 1986. Liedermann is in Berlin for consultations.

Herbert Krolikowski explained in the talk the GDR's policy aimed at safeguarding peace, averting the danger of a nuclear war, and shaping peaceful and prosperous cooperation among all states.

Concerning the forthcoming CSCE follow-up meeting in Vienna, he reaffirmed the firm will of the GDR to consistently support the continuation of the CSCE process through further implementation of the Helsinki Final Act as a whole.

Together with its alliance partners, the GDR will work for results at the Vienna meeting to contribute to strengthening security on the European Continent and to practically advancing cooperation in all fields included in the Helsinki Final Act. Herbert Krolikowski underlined that the GDR highly appreciates the active role of Austria in the CSCE process.

Ambassador Liedermann reported on the level of the preparations for the Vienna follow-up meeting. He stressed that Austria, as the host country, is interested in making this meeting a forum of constructive dialogue. The preparatory work of the Executive Secretariat will be marked by efforts to create favorable working conditions for the successful deliberations of the follow-up meeting.

The talk was attended by Franz Wunderbaldinger, ambassador of the Republic of Austria to the GDR.

POPE CARRIES CARDINAL LEKAI'S OBITUARY

AU060642 Budapest MAGYAR HIRLAP in Hungarian 2 Jul 86 p 3

[Obituary signed by the PPF National Council: "Laszlo Lekai-1990-1986"]

[Text] Cardinal Laszlo Lekai, archbishop of Esztergom and chairman of the Hungarian Catholic Episcopate, died on 30 June at the age of 77 following a heart attack.

Laszlo Lekai was born in Zalalov on 12 March 1910. In 1928 he began theology studies in Rome at the Collegium Germanico Hungaricum of the Papal Gregorian University, where he graduated with a PH.D. in theology. He was ordained in Rome in October 1934. As a priest of the Veszprem Diocese, he filled several important church positions: teacher at the Veszprem Seminary from 1937 to 1944; bishop secretary from 1944; vicar at Balatonlele from 1948; commissioned bishop office director in 1956-57; and later vicar at Zalaszentivan and Badacsonytomaj.

In 1972 Pope Paul VI appointed him titular bishop and apostolic regent of Veszprem; in 1974 he was nominated apostolic regent of Esztergom, and in 1976 bishop of Esztergom. In May of the same year, the pope appointed him cardinal.

In the course of more than a decade of activity as head of the church, Laszlo Lekai carried out tasks of epoch-marking importance in the further development of the good relations between the socialist state and the Catholic Church and in developing and deepening the creative cooperation between believers and nonbelievers, Marxists and Christians. He expressed his political belief in his interview given to MTI on the occasion of his appointment as bishop of Esztergom, also taking into consideration the interest of the widest strata of Hungarian society: "As cardinal primate of Esztergom, I regard it as my mission to stand on the soil of reality: to try to advance the process of development rather than reverse it. And the reality is that believers and nonbelievers are living together in the socialist society. We all wish to prosper here and we strive to further develop this life worthy of human beings and this well-being through our own manual and spiritual work." His often quoted bishop's motto, "succisa virescit" -- "the trimmed tree blooms," expresses his belief.

Based on the experience of a rich life, Laszlo Lekai believed with conviction that the Catholic Church was also ready and able to adjust to the new social conditions and was able to find its place in a society constructing socialism and that it saw its fundamental mission in serving the people.

This mission, the joint responsibility in the construction of the Hungarian society, was also expressed in Cardinal Lekay's public activity. From 1976, he was a steadily appreciated and universally respected member of the Presidium of the PPF National Council.

In the course of his initiatives and active and creative work, several concepts of his became reality -- primarily related to the care of old, sick, and lonely people -- concepts that served the national consensus, our common goals, and the fullest possible care for the people.

For his activity, the Presidential Council decorated Laszlo Lekai in 1980, on his 70th birthday, with the Order of the Banner of the Hungarian People's Republic, adorned with rubies. With his death, an outstanding church leader and Hungarian patriot faithful to his country, people, and his church left us. We are convinced that his life work is of lasting value to our most recent history, which we must further construct with a responsiblity worthy of the cause.

LAZAR, MARJAI MEET USSR DEPUTY PREMIER VORONIN

MINISTER VARKONYI HOLDS TALKS IN WEST BERLIN

LD081921 Budapest Domestic Service in Hungarian 1630 GMT 8 Jul 86

[Correspondent Zsolt Szalai dispatch from Berlin]

[Text] Peter Varkonyi's talks in West Berlin have ended with a visit to FRG President Richard von Weizsacker. The Hungarian minister of foreign affairs left Bonn a short while ago from the city's airport.

During the talks which Peter Varkonyi held yesterday with the chancellor and the foreign minister among others, and today with Economics Minister Martin Bangemann and Interior Minister Friedrich Zimmermann, it was considered that bilateral relations have been developing well and there are no barriers to further progress. In this context several new ideas were raised; much time was spend on dealing with the expansion of economic cooperation and the creation of conditions needed for this. The wish of the Hungarian side in this respect is that turnover should not be hindered by the limiting measures of the EEC, and the Hungarian side also hopes for the involvement of West German firms in Hungarian development programs. A so-called investment protection agreement offering favorable conditions to interested FRG firms was signed a few months ago in order to promote this goal.

During the present negotiations by Peter Varkonyi it was agreed that further steps would be taken to improve contacts between the citizens of the two countries. This would extend to the practice of issuing visas as well. The Hungarian side considers abolition of the compulsory visa requirement as the most favorable solution, but the stand of the Bonn Foreign Ministry is that as far as the West German authorities are concerned they argue against the abolition of compulsory visa requirements because of security considerations. However, they would be ready to speed up and simplify the process itself.

Further Details of Visit

PZPR CONGRESS ADOPTS DECLARATION ON SECURITY

LD031328 Warsaw PAP in English 1216 GMT 3 Jul 86

[Excerpt] Warsaw, July 3 -- The 10th PUWP Congress adopted a declaration on security and cooperation in Europe which stressed that chances for a peaceful development of the European Continent created by the final act of the historic Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe were not, unfortunately, fully used. [passage omitted]

Congress Declaration

[Text] Warsaw, July 3 -- More than 10 years have gone by since the historic Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe was held. The Final Act adopted at the conference has created a realistic opportunity for a breakthrough in relations between all its participants. In accepting the inviolability of the political and territorial order it outlined a long-term programme of the peaceful development of Europe.

Unfortunately, the chances provided by it have not been fully put to use. Almost immediately following the great meeting, confrontational political forces have undertook attempts, lasting till this day, to weaken its significance and the effectivenss of the act's influence on the state of international relations. In NATO circles, especially in the U.S., efforts have been revived to gain military edge and pursue a policy from the position of strength, to use discrimination and economic embargo, to destabilize the internal situations of various states, including Poland. This facilitated the re-activization of revisionist-revanchist forces in the FRG hitting out at the postwar peaceful order in Europe.

We think that despite setbacks and disillusionments the Final Act and the CSCE process initiated by it remain a significant and positive factor in the shaping of the situation and climate on the European Continent. They still constitute a great chance of reversing negative trends, of strengthening lasting peace and equal security for all its states, of mutually advantageous cooperation. This chance cannot be wasted. Poland, so experienced by the effects of wars which affected our continent, was one of the initiators of this historic conference and has made a significant and constructive contribution to the elaboration of the Final Act. This Poland is today once again addressing all CSCE-member states with an ardent appeal.

Let us return jointly and immediately to the full abidingness by and application of all the principles of this great card of peace in Europe which opens the way to creating an effective system of collective security.

Our continent, despite national, cultural, religious and political system differences, is still our common place on earth. That which ties Europeans together is much richer, stronger and more significant that that which differs them. We are united by, first and foremost, the need to do away with deadly threats and the need to preserve and consolidate peace which is the most profound need for all our nations. At the end of the 20th century we are more than ever doomed to a joint fate.

Let us undertake joint efforts to check the arms race on earth and prevent it from space in order to avert the threat of nuclear annihilation. Let us lend our support to the great idea of Mikhail Gorbachev to free mankind from nuclear arms and other mass-destruction weapons by the end of the 20th century. Let us firmly support the issue of limiting, till complete elimination is achieved, the number of medium-range missiles on Europe's territory deployed there in recent years. Let us support efforts to totally ban nuclear weapons tests accompanied by the most stringent inspection.

Let us unite efforts to remove the threat posed by mass-destruction weapons with a radical reduction of armed forces and conventional weaponry in all of Europe, from the Atlantic to the Urals. Warsaw Treaty-member states have created a platform for these efforts through their recent appeal issued from Budapest.

At the same time we speak out for the creation of an all-European mechanism which would serve agreement on the issue of the means and methods of preventing and decreasing tensions and crisis on our continent. This would fortify the means of constructing mutual confidence currently being elaborated within the framework of the CSCE process.

We call on all CSCE-member states to show good political will and to immediately start negotiations on these and any other constructive proposals. We demand that a constructive course of talks within the framework of the CSCE process be guaranteed.

Let us jointly strengthen the infrastructure of peace in Europe through the realization of all the decisions of the Helsinki Final Act. Above all, let us put an end to the regress which has emerged in recent years in economic cooperation and which poses a threat of an economic cooperation and which poses a threat of an ecomonic division of our continent with all the immense damage it could cause to its prospects in the face of the scientific-technological revolution.

Let us return to economic relations already formed and let us search for new forms of cooperation, including the cooperation between CMEA and the EEC. Let us remove barriers and limitations, let us create broader opportunities for exchange and joint action in mastering new techniques and technologies.

Let us create the premises for the possibly most broad cooperation in the field of Europe's natural environment protection, including especially the strengthening of safety precautions and exchange of technologies in the field of nuclear power. Let us support scientific and cultural exchange, tourism and other inter-human contacts, let us abide by the whole Final Act and other broader CSCE documents through lively and increasingly broad cooperation in all fields of life. Poland is a country traditionally open to broad and mutually beneficial cooperation in all fields.

It is in this spirit that we address:

-- All political parties, organizations and social groupings;

-- Let us do all we can to assure that our continent is not a seed of conflicts but that it make an appropriate contribution to the peaceful development of human civilization;

-- To all states-signatories to the CSCE Final Act -- let us do all we can to assure that the 21st century generations live without threat of war, in conditions of lasting security and peace, in an atmosphere of mutual respect and friendship;

-- To all Poles -- Let us do all we can to assure that developing, strong and socialist Poland make a worthy contribution to consolidating the peaceful existence of the nations of Europe and the world.

CONGRESS DELEGATES ADDRESS WIDE-RANGING ISSUES

AU081256 Warsaw TRYBUNA LUDU in Polish 2 Jul 86 pp 10, 11

[Roundup of summarized speeches made from the floor at the 1 July session of the 10th PZPR Congress in Warsaw]

[Excerpts] Jan Sokolowski, senior foreman in the "Zamech" plant in Elblag:

The precongress campaign in Elblag Voivodship helped to increase the militancy of party organizations and members and to evaluate more thoroughly our party ranks and our potential for effective militant activities in order to be equal to the 10th Congress tasks.

We were aware of the conditions under which we do our work. Some communities still continue to display doubtful social moods, indifference toward the problems of the community and plants, consumerism, expectations of benefits that are impossible under present conditions, and susceptibility to the influence of our adversaries. [passage omitted]

Krzysztof Rau, stage director and director of the Bialystok puppet theater:

[Passage omitted] The areas outside the large urban centers need cultural investments most of all. Despite all the undoubted achievements of the past 40 years, this is especially true of all the areas east of the Vistula, in which cultural shortcomings are now becoming an insurmountable barrier to the further development of these areas. Of over 120 Polish theaters only 10 are placed in the areas east of the Vistula. No television center and none of the 17 dramatic art schools can be found there, except for branches of two such Warsaw schools. [passage omitted]

Jerzy Wilk, first secretary of the Legnica PZPR Committee:

[Passage omitted] The precongress discussion in our voivodship organization stresseed that the status of the workers class is not high enough and that the backbone of the workers class in the PZPR has been weakened. [paragraph continues]

During the precongress campaign we were also aware of the desire to further reduce this backbone in the composition of the congress delegates, and it seemed that even the workers agreed to this.

I think we must never forget that the party is able to play its leading role only if it is supported by the leading class and if it represents the overall, and not parochial, interests of this class. [passage omitted]

The precongress campaign demonstrated that the critical stream in the party is rather strong and that its distinctive feature is the fact that we have abandoned destructive criticism in favor of constructive criticism.

We continue to stress with satisfaction that members of our party organization level rational criticism against central and voivodship authorities, but we are concerned that their criticism of the immediate environment is feeble. This is so in production enterprises, institutions, and offices at various levels. Criticism of one's own weaknesses is a very rare occurence because people stick to the false principle that one should not speak badly about one's own community and party organization. [passage omitted]

Zenon Slowikowski, machine operator in the Plock oil processing combine:

[Passage omitted] The community I represent is astonished and concerned on account of the fact that neither the draft party program nor the congress theses have outlined any prospects for the oil processing sector of our industry. During the precongress discussion the comrades continued to stress that our basic task in the coming years is to maintain the production capacity of our combine. We want to be completely ready for the greater and more effective processing of crude oil as soon as our economy is able to make larger oil purchases.

For this reason our specialists have devised a specific program, but its implementation continues to encounter various difficulties. We will not be able to accomplish the program tasks on our own. We need the assistance of the central authorities in the form of materials, of foreign exchange so that we can buy the necessary equipment in capitalist countries, and of construction investments.

The precongress discussion also frequently pointed out that we could avoid some of our difficulties through organizational measures. My friends in the combine often ask me why it is that we have to curb the processing of oil because of the lack of storage whereas people continue to wait in long lines in front of gasoline stations. [passage omitted]

Teresa Wozniak, physician and deputy head of the health center in Elk, Suwalki Voivodship:

The adversaries of our system assert that it is impossible to reform socialism. This is political nonsense, of course. However, when we see how the principles of this system are implemented on occasions many of us become thoroughly frustrated. Yet, it is socialism -- the system of social justice -- that creates for everyone the opportunity for self-realization. But why is it that we are unable to take full advantage of this? Why is it that party members are unable to effectively oppose whatever hinders us from enjoying worthy and happy lives?

The answer must come from ourselves because it is our consistency and party perseverance that determine the effectiveness of our work and the speed with which we can overcome our crisis. Our attitude toward criticism is bad: We avoid like the plague anything that upsets our complacency. We are so sensitive to criticism that we never try to improve ourselves, but always try to improve others. When on occasion I listen to party discussions or to the statements made by local wiseacres I no longer wonder why there are so many defects in their socialist plants and institutions. [passage omitted]

Norbert Aleksiewicz, farmer from Klukowo, Pila Voivodship, and chairman of the Main Administration of the National Farmers Union and Agricultural Circles and Organizations:

[Passage omitted] The volume of farm production continues to be curbed by the shortage of production means, services, electricity, and fuels. The flow of mineral and lime fertilizers has been reduced, and we lack pesticides. The situation has been made worse by the permanent shortage and low quality of farm machines and, often, of spare parts. This is responsible for the farmers' poor attitude toward production as glaringly attested to by the precongress meetings. Such are the results of the failure to observe the Ninth Congress' decisions on raising the industry's production capacities in favor of farming. [passage omitted]

I ask the congress to restate in its resolution the cardinal principles of equal opportunities for efficient farmers, of the parity of earnings of farmers and nonfarmers, and of the full flow of production means for farming.

The farmers union is primarily active in the rural areas. It includes party members, the ZSL, nonparty people, believers, nonbelievers, experienced activists, and young farming aktivs. It is soil, toil, national culture, and regional folklore that unite us. [passage omitted] The farm policy of the past few years has inflicted many wrongs on peasants, and this is responsible for the fact that socialism is for the peasant and that the peasant is not afraid of socialism. [passage omitted]

Edward Lukasik, first secretary of the Poznan PZPR Voivodship:

[Passage omitted] Efforts to intensify the dialogue and cooperation with all of the social forces that accept socialist reality and to wage a resolute struggle against the political adversary are to us the road to the necessary increase in the militancy of our own ranks and other milieus. The first telling results are already there: The number of people on the sidelines continues to decrease. [passage omitted]

Our task is to ensure that the people's discontent with the injutices of life, with shortages, and with the individual and collective living standards does not turn into lamentations, wrangles, and claims for more benefits. Let us ensure that the criticism of various wrongs mobilizes the people for militant and energetic actions.

The experience of Poznan people shows that the most difficult task is to keep up the struggle against that which is obsolete -- against conservatism, staleness, dogmatism, and the other features that caused us great losses and that have nothing in common with the Leninist style of party life. Constant efforts to keep ourselves in critical focus should be the permanent motto of our daily party work. [passage omitted]

Exactly 30 years ago we experienced an explosion of the workers protest in Poznan. The fact that, despite the intentions of our adversaries, we are able to recall those events calmly and with dignity and to learn lessons from them is one more proof that we are treading the right road.

Miroslawa Polatynska, brigadier and storage attendant in the Miranda silk mill in Turek, Konin Voivodship:

It has to be clearly said at this congress that despite our various efforts, we have been unable to make progress in solving the problem of housing construction. [passage omitted] This congress should charge the government with the necessary comprehensive tasks of housing construction to be implemented by specific people who are made officially responsible for their commitments. I am so blunt about this problem because my present experience forces me to assume that we have no clear concept in the area of housing construction and that what we have is anarchy. We cannot afford to go on like this. At least not in our country, which is building socialism. [passage omitted]

Bogumil Moraczewski, welder and first secretary of the shop party organization in the cellulose-paper plant in Wloclawek:

The draft party program covers the next 15-20 years, which means that it is the young people's program and that young people must be ready to assume coresponsibility and then full responsibility for the country. [passage omitted]

On the strength of various views I am able to assert that the process of attracting young people to the party program is producing some positive results, but that they are far from what we should expect.

Young people continue to look for their place in life, but we must bear in mind that the view that only the party and government are responsible for the fates of young people is the greatest menace and ideological trap. In enterprises we have to listen to many demands and proposals, the implementation of which, young people allege, will determine their positive or negative attitudes toward work, enterprises, and party and government activities.

On the other hand, they have little to say on how they intend to help build the Poland of the year 2000. How is it that young people who come to enterprises as trained workers do not realize that they should participate in communal life and are not interested in the situation in enterprises? The only thing they are interested in is to get the highest possible wages for the least effort. We all keep on grumbling that modern young people are asocial and consumerist, but we do very little to change this situation. [passage omitted]

Our people are very bitter about the fact that social justice, which is the fundamental principle of our system, continues to be disregarded. It is the duty of the party to eliminate from our life features such as clique-mongering, cronyism, refusal to work, parasitism, and arrogance. These features are nothing new. We have been fighting them for years, but the results are very poor. [passage omitted]

Stefan Lenartowicz, first secretary of the primary party organization, physician, head of the surgical department in the regional hospital in Gryfow Slaski, Jelenia Gora Voivodship:

[Passage omitted] We have made great legislative efforts to counter the results of disturbing social features such as alcoholism, drug addiction, and profiteering. [paragraph continues]

However, we are giving too little attention to the causes of these features and we continue to all but completely ignore their economic and social determining factors. [passage omitted] Nor can I disregard the issue of the protection of the environment. It is true that tangible progress has been made in this protection, especially in that of water, at a great cost, but it is a fact that our activities in this regard are too inadequate and too slow. The pollution of the atmosphere through the excessive emission of industrial dust and gases has caused the ecological disaster in the Sudeten forests. [passage omitted]

RESULTS, REMARKS AT 10TH CONGRESS EVALUATED

PRON Assessment

LD072105 Warsaw PAP in English 1941 GMT 7 Jul 86

[Text] Warsaw, July 7: The presidium of the Executive Committee of the national council of the patriotic movement for national rebirth PRON today acquainted itself with information on the course and decisions of the 10th PUWP Congress. The Presidium underscored with satisfaction that the Central Committee report delivered by CC First Secretary Wojciech Jaruzelski, the PUWP programme and the resolution of the 10th Congress contained valuable impulses for continuing socialist renewal -- the policy of agreement and reform. The aims of PRON were reaffirmed. The decisions of the 10th Congress constitute an inspiration for PRON's activities, for outlining the programmatic tasks of the movement at the 2nd Congress of PRON. PRON wishes to actively participate in putting to life all the initiatives undertaken by the 10th Congress which express social expectations and needs.

Commentary on Gorbachev Speech

AU031043 Warsaw TRYBUNA LUDU in Polish 1 Jul 86 p 11

[Zbigniew Lesnikowski commentary: "Listening to Mikhail Gorbachev"]

[Text] The speech by Comrade Mikhail Gorbachev, CPSU general secretary, was a very important part of the second day of the 10th PZPR Congress and was received particularly warmly by the congress delegates. For over 12 months we have been monitoring with undiminishing interest his broad political activity and efforts to perpetuate world peace. But this time the Soviet leader's voice was heard in Poland with particular attention and satisfaction.

With attention, because this was the voice of a great socialist power and at the same time, our neighbor, closest friend, and ally, addressed to our party and the whole of Polish society. With satisfaction, because he expressed sincere interest in the success of our intentions and actions and in Poland's being a strong, independent, and socialist country. "The Soviet Communists," he stressed, "understand and support your plans for the future and warmly wish for the fulfillment of all your plans. Your congress proves once again that the PZPR is a vanguard force, capable of uniting Poland's society and leading the country along the road of economic, social, and cultural progress."

Particular attention is deserved by that extensive portion of the speech about the universal, international significance of our experience and about the fact that the lessons stemming from the Polish crisis are important to more people than just Polish Communists because "those problems with which socialism is struggling at a very complex and momentous stage in its development have stood out in sharper contrast."

Comrade Mikhail Gorbachev referred to the 27th CPSU Congress, which recognized that an ability to perform self-criticism, to soberly assess one's actions, and to draw the necessary conclusions from past errors and mistakes is also an important form of struggle for socialism. "This is the basic principle behind successful activity by the workers class party which Lenin has bequeathed to us." said M. Gorbachev, and this thought concurs with Comrade Wojciech Jaruzelski's assurance, expressed in his report, whereby our party is in complete solidarity with the innovative achievements of Lenin's party and with the future socialism stream that we in Poland call the line of socialist renewal.

When we listen to Comrade Mikhail Gorbachev's speech and compare its contents with those of the Central Committee report to the 10th PZPR Congress, we cannot fail to notice how many assessments and conclusions from these reports that there are in common. For example, both speeches view at the same time the prospects for Polish-Soviet cooperation, the expansion of which serves well the interests of both countries and the entire community. "Close cooperation and alliance between Poland and the USSR, two of the largest European socialist states, is an essential condition for the favorable development of our countries and for stability and peace in Europe," the Soviet leader said.

A further important part of Comrade Mikhail Gorbachev's speech dealt with current problems in Europe and the world. He severely criticized the U.S. Administration's moves aimed against detente and disarmament dialogue. He said: "We will put paid to the adventurist and destructive activity of the United States. One cannot let U.S. imperialism decide the fate of the world according to its own whims."

The attention of observers was drawn by the fact that the views of Poland and the Soviet Union are identical as far as an assessment of the present international situation is concerned. The conclusions drawn from this assessment by the Soviet leader are pervaded with principle-mindedness and a determination to pave the way toward dialogue, peaceful international cooperation, and bridgeheads of joint activity wherever possible. He stressed: "We support everything that serves the authentic interests of nations, peace, social justice, and human progress. We firmly reject everything that goes against these goals."

Comrade Mikhail Gorbachev's Monday [30 June] speech from the podium of the 10th PZPR Congress has confirmed the steadfastness of the bonds joining Poland to the Soviet Union. But the significance of this voice from Warsaw exceeds the framework of relations joining our fraternal parties, states, and peoples. It has become an important international event. It has revealed important truths and correlations occurring at the present stage of socialist and communist construction in our countries. It has thrown new light on a series of important issues concerning international life, in which the countries of real socialism are a decisive factor of peace and progress.

Solidarity Spokesman's Remarks

PM0114112 Stockholm SVENSKA DAGBLADET in Swedish 30 Jun 86 p 5

[Undated interview with Solidarity spokesman Janusz Onyszkiewicz by Anders Bodegard: "First Party Congress Since Solidarity: 'Ideology Merely Window-Dressing'"]

[Text] Warsaw -- The Polish Communist Party's 10th Congress began Sunday [29 June]. little interest in the event, which is taking place against the background of the recent arrest of Zbigniew Bujak, the leader of underground Solidarity, is to be found among Poles in general.

"The arrest of Bujak has great psychological significance." Solidarity spokesman Janusz Onyszkiewicz told SVENSKA DAGBLADET in an interview in Warsaw. The interview with Onyszkiewicz is the first of two items on the situation in Poland today.

"It is characteristic of the current situation in Poland that the authorities are making lots of administrative decisions that are subsequently either not carried out at all or only carried out half-heartedly." So said Solidarity spokesman Janusz Onyszkiewicz, giving the example of Solidarity adviser and historian Bronislaw Geremek's position at the Polish Academy of Sciences. He was dismissed from the academy over a year ago but still continues to conduct his seminar.

Onyszkiewicz himself is a mathematician at Warsaw University. Despite constant nudges from the ministry the university's rector refuses to get rid of him. Resistance is thus considerably more widespread than merely that practiced by the active opposition. Onyszkiewicz is part of this, and members live under the constant threat of reprisals.

I asked Onyszkiewicz to comment on the 10th PZPR Congress. (The people I had met so far had shrugged their shoulders and said: "What congress?")

"The congress will not change anything for the population, for us. It is, however, of some significance for the party itself. The Jaruzelski leadership wants to use it to strengthen its position. The consolidation will happen through the abolition of the statute changes in the direction of democratization, which were introduced during the Ninth Congress, during the Solidarity era. For example, it was decided then that the party first secretary should be elected by the whole congress, not by the Central Committee plenum, and that elections at all levels of the party should be secret and that more than one candidate should be nominated. The whole of this new party statute was suspended 13 December 1981 -- without any legal basis, of course -- and on several points it is still in disuse. Thus, it is a return to the norm of the old and so discredited democratic centralism. The aim is to make it easier for the incumbent leadership to retain power and control over the party machine.

"You have to bear in mind that Jaruzelski inherited a Central Committee and a Politburo that do not consist of his people alone. It is true that he has carried out several personnel changes in the government, but as far as the party leadership is concerned he has been considerably more careful. This time Jaruzelski has at his disposal a new means of applying pressure. In the past people have been elected to the position of delegate and to a local position at the same time. This time the congress delegates' future out in the provinces is dependent on their behavior at the congress.

"Another difference from the previous congress is that the party machine's people were not elected as delegates then; it was thus a congress of the party masses. Once again it is chiefly people from the party and state machines that are now being elected. Another new element is that these include many people from the security machine -- 19 people in Warsaw alone. This shows the growing role the police is playing within party and state."

So what sort of decisions can the party be expected to make? The documents and proposals that have been published in advance have, according to Onyszkiewicz, the character of a government program couched in general terms -- more housing, increased production, and so on -- despite the fact that this is a communist party congress. The ideology is pure decoration -- something that it has long been, for that matter, Onyszkiewicz said.

In the last few years the party has played a fairly discreet role -- in connection with the Sejm elections last month, for example. This is because the party is still significantly weakened, Onyszkiewicz said. In the past the party was a tool which controlled all areas of social life. In had its cells and its people in all institutions and associations, in all work places. This tool is now unusable and the control must be exercised through other means, chiefly through the police. This needs a legal base for its activities -- the reason for the "galloping legislation," inflation in the form of new laws.

During the Stalin era Poland had what was in formal terms very liberal legislation, which, however, no one was able to use because the omnipresent party stood in the way. Now, however, the leadership needs formal obstacles, possibilities of threatening legal repercussions. Police reporting has been extended and has at its disposal special units dealing closely with work places and institutions.

I asked how successful the regime had been with recruitment to the mass organizations -- the youth league, the legal trade unions, and so on. The youth organizations are still very marginal. This applies particularly to schools and universities. At Warsaw University with its 20,000 studdents only a few hundred belong to the student association, which is intended as a broad organization with very low ideological demands on its members, and the more politicized socialist youth association has only a few dozen members.

"The situation is somewhat different with the new trade unions. Membership in them is linked to certain material advantages -- for example, the possibility of vacations at reasonable prices. In many places -- in Silesia, for example -- trade union membership is prerequisite for getting a job. Membership, which is now put officially at 50 percent, is thus determined by material considerations and is not the result of a political decision."

However, those who keep their distance from the new trade unions do so for expressly political reasons. In many places membership lists are kept secret, since many people consider it shameful to be a member. In Krakow a study has been carried out by an institution linked to the party.

"The report, which was not intended for publication, has leaked out. The work seems reliable, even though half of those interviewed refused to answer the questions at all. The results show a smaller number of trade union members than in official figures. In a commentary this fact is explained with the argument that there are people who are ashamed to admit membership and that there are any who do not even know whether they are counted as members. It is not Solidarity but a party institution that is saying this.

"The only way of testing members' loyalty to the new trade unions would be to give them the opportunity for choosing another union. I am convinced that if there were such a possbility we would not get the same situation as when Solidarity was formed in the fall of 1980. Then the offcial trade unions fell apart within a few weeks."

I then asked how Onyszkiewicz views the independent civil society that has developed in parallel with official society. He said that there are limits to its development potential. It can only be a partial duplicate of the official structures. The area in which there has been the greatest successes is information. The large number of periodicals and books that appear outside the control of the censor means that the monopoly on information that is necessary to the communist state has been broken. Onyszkiewicz referred to the above-mentioned opinion poll. It showed that 10 percent of Poles have regular access to the independent press and base their view of the situation on this. The figure should in actual fact be higher.

"The parallelism between official and independent society also exists in the fields of culture and, to a certain extent, education," Onyszkiewicz said. The state has lost its exclusive rights as patron for art and culture. This function is now performed in part -- to a limited extent, for very understandable reasons -- by Solidarity, in part, and on a very large scale by the church.

I then asked Onyszckiewicz to comment on the arrest of Zbigniew Bujak, Solidarity's underground leader for 4 and 1/2 years.

"The majority of Solidarity's well-known underground leaders are now in jail -- Bujak, Frasyniuk, Lis, and others. I think the arrest of Bujak has great psychological signifigance. Bujak -- still free after 4 and 1/2 years of underground work -- was a living legend needed by the people to the extent that for several days there were rumors circulating that in actual fact it was not Bujak who had been arrested. It was a psychological shock. But this does not mean that Solidarity's underground structures have been torn down. They are very decentralized and rest on the actions and initiative of the individual, on what we call 'self-organization.' The Central Committee is more a coordination and information body than a combat staff for the planning of actions."

The Polish resistance movement is still supported in the West by the trade union movement, by the Trade Union Confederation in Sweden, for example. But interest in Sweden is growing weaker. Events are less spectacular and are losing their news value. I asked Onyszkiewicz how public opinion in the West could influence developments.

"The situation in which we find ourselves could be described as deadlock, where the state leadership has dug into one trench and the population into another. As a result we are very far from any sort of stability. At present Poland is a very unstable country in which the situation could rapidly become explosive. New forces have grown up -- social and professional groups are now represented in a new way. People are in the process of drawing up new programs for the future. As a result the political spectrum in Poland is considerably more varied than the official power structures can permit. The Polish political system lacks self-regulating mechanisms, and that is why it develops and changes only as a result of crisis and pressures from outside. Every crisis in Poland not only has internal effects but also means that the situation in Europe is disturbed. Because Poland, with its 40 million inhabitants living in a strategically important area, is a not inconsiderable country.

YUGOSLAVIA'S DIZDAREVIC ARRIVES FOR VISIT 8 JUL

Holds Talks With Vaduva

[Text] Bucharest, July 8 (TANJUG) -- Yugoslav-Romanian goodneighbourly relations constitute a factor of stability in the Balkans and Europe, thereby confirming their broader international significance, Yugoslav Foreign Secretary Raif Dizdarevic and his host Romanian Foreign Minister Ilie Vaduva assessed here today.

The two countries' foreign ministers confirmed the readiness to encourage the development of Yugoslav-Romanian overall cooperation, especially in the field of long-term deals and industrial cooperation. The need for completing in time the works on the Djerdap 2 hydro-electric power project, being jointly built by Yugoslavia and Romania on the Danube, was stressed during the talks.

Dizdarevic and Vaduva underscored the importance of expanding border cooperation which, both sides stressed, could be intensified on the basis of contacts, on which negotiations are currently in progress.

The Yugoslav side emphasized the significance being attached to the position of the Romanian nationality in Yugoslavia and the Serbian and Croat nationalities in Romania, setting out from the principled stand that they contribute to friendly relations, rapprochement and the strengthening of good neighbourly cooperation.

Dizdarevic and Vaduva indicated the need for expanding cultural, educational, scientific and technical cooperation, as well as cooperation in the field of information.

Comprehensively reviewing key international issues, the two countries' foreign ministers noted the high level of similarity in their views. It was jointly assessed that progress at the Stockholm Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe would be major inportance.

Dizdarevic and Vaduva pointed to the need for expanding and making more dynamic bilateral and multilateral cooperation in the Balkans. The Balkans, they said, should increasingly be turning into a zone of peace, goodneighbourliness and comprehensive cooperation based on equality.

Dizdarevic invited Vaduva to visit Yugoslavia. The invitation was accepted with pleasure.

Received by Ceausescu

AU081800 Bucharest AGERPRES in English 1722 GMT 8 Jul 86

[Text] Bucharest, AGERPRES 8/7/1986 -- On Tuesday, July 8, Nicolae Ceausescu, general secretary of the Romanian Communist Party, president of the Socialist Republic of Romania, received Raif Dizdarevic, federal secretary of foreign affairs of the Socialist Federal Republic of Yugoslavia, who paid a working visit to Romania.

The guest thanked for having been received and showed he had the pleasant mission of conveying President Nicolae Ceausescu and the party and state leadership a friendly salute and the best wishes on behalf of Sinan Hasani, president of the Presidium of the Socialist Federal Republic of Yugoslavia, of the Yugoslav party and state leadership.

President Nicolae Ceausescu thanked and conveyed President Sinan Hasani, the other comrades in the Yugoslav party and state leadership a warm salute and the best wishes.

During the interview, which took place in a warm, comradely atmosphere, the traditional relations were highlighted of friendship and collaboration between Romania and Yugoslavia which follow a positive course, in the spirit of the understandings reached at top level. It was considered that the economic potential of the two countries offered broad possibilities for the further growth of Romanian-Yugoslav cooperation, through joint efforts, for the intensification of cooperation in production and on third markets, for the expansion and diversification of bilateral commercial exchanges.

Current problems of the world political life were approached. President Nicolae Ceausescu stressed that under the current circumstances, when the international situation continued to be extremely serious, the fundamental problems of our epoch were the cessation of the arms race, the achievement of a passage to disarmament, to nuclear disarmament in the first place, the ensurance of peace on our planet.

The need was underscored to work responsibly to halt the deployment of new intermediate-range missiles in Europe, eliminate nuclear weapons from our continent and from all over the world. In that framework, the importance was brought to the fore of turning the Balkans into a zone free of nuclear and chemical weapons, of creating a climate of confidence and broad cooperation among all Balkan countries.

During the interview, the significance was emphasized of intensified efforts and political and diplomatic actions to put an end to all military conflicts and settle all interstate litigious issues by peaceful ways, through neogitations alone.

In connection with the world economic situation, the need was stressed for a global solution to underdevelopment-related questions, to the problem of the developing countries' extremely high foreign debt included, for the establishment of a new international economic order.

Highlighting the role of the Non-aligned Movement in the international life, President Nicolae Ceausescu showed that action was needed to overcome divergences among some nonaligned countries, to strengthen those states' unity of action with a view to enhancing their contribution to the resolution of the major problems that face mankind.

Romania's and Yugoslavia's determination was underscored to intensify their cooperation in the international arena, to contribute actively to the successful conclusion of the Stockholm conference, to the assertion of the policy of detente, disarmament, understanding, collaboration and peace in the Balkans, in Europe and all over the world.

'COMMUNIQUE' ON VISIT BY CAPE VERDE PRESIDENT

AU300831 Bucharest AGERPRES in English 1647 GMT 26 Jun 86

["Communique" on official visit paid by Aristides Maria Pereira, president of the Republic of Cape Verde, to Romania from 23-26 June at President Nicolae Ceausescu's invitation]

[Text] Bucharest, AGERPRES 26/6/1986 -- A communique on the official visit of friendship to Romania of Aristides Maria Pereira, secretary-general of the African Party for the Independence of Cape Verde, president of the Republic of Cape Verde issued in Bucahrest says that his talks with Nicolae Ceausescu, RCP general secretary and president of Romania, were an in-depth analysis of how to expand the friendly and cooperative ties between the two parties and states, covered opinions on the major international problems.

A general long-term cooperation agreement between the Government of the Socialist Republic of Romania and the Government of the Republic of Cape Verde was signed during the visit, as well as an agreement of collaboration between the Romanian Communist Party and the African Party for the Independence of Cape Verde.

The president of the Socialist Republic of Romania and the president of the Republic of Cape Verde examined the international political and economic situation and were pleased to note their identity of views on the major problems confronting mankind.

The two presidents expressed their deep concern over the very serious situation worldwide, as a result of the arms race, of the nuclear one more particularly, of the multiplication of the hotbeds of tension in various parts of the globe, of the persisting world economic crisis and the unprecedented deterioration of the economic cessation of the arms race and a passage to concrete measures of disarmament, of nuclear weapons elimination as cardinal questions of our age, the two presidents stated their belief that international peace and security could be ensured only by a complex general disarmament approach through measures that should include nuclear dissarmament, a substantial reduction of conventional weapons, troops and military spending, and other measures apt to pave the way for disarmament. They are of the opinion that the nuclear powers should step up their efforts at the underway negotiations to come to mutually acceptable agreements on disarmament, on the complete liquidation of nuclear arsenals and the prevention of the deployment of nuclear weapons in space.

The two leaders take the view that action should be taken to stop the location of new medium-range missiles in Euorpe and eliminate the ones in place. The president of the Socialist Republic of Romania and the president of the Republic of Cape Verde were for the creation of nuclear free zones in various parts of the world. In context, they expressed their support to the initiatives for the creation of such a zone in the Balkans and of a chemical weapons-free zone in the region.

The two heads of state were firmly for the freedom of navigation in the international waters of seas and oceans, and underscored the danger of holding military manoeuvres in those waters.

President Nicolae Ceausescu and President Aristides Maria Pereira underlined that more insistent action had to be taken to step up the work of the Geneva disarmament conference, to come to concrete agreements at the Vienna talks and at the Stockholm conference, to agree on efficient measures of confidence- and security-building, non-recourse to the threat or use of force in Europe.

Hailing the UN General Assembly's proclamation of 1986 as the International Year of Peace, the two presidents are of the opinion that this initiative should bring substantial changes in the international life -- concrete results on the path of disarmament and peace, a negotiated settlement of conflicts, the non-recourse to the threat or use of force.

On analysing the situation in Africa, the two leaders reiterated their full support to the fight of the African peoples for national independence and liberty, and expressed their concern over the worsening economic and social situation, the persistent hotbeds of tension and the aggressive destabilizing actions of the imperialist forces against the peoples on that continent.

On the situation in austral Africa, the two presidents assessed the anachronistic apartheid system as a source of violence and tension, the chief obstacle to peace, progress and social justice for the peoples in that region. The two heads of state firmly condemned the aggressive actions of South Africa and of the force hostile to Africa against the sovereignty, independence and territorial integrity of the neighbouring countries, against the Peoples' Republic of Angola and the People's Republic of Mozambique more particularly. President Nicolae Ceausescu and President Aristides Maria Pereira also underscored the important role incumbent on the Organization of African Unity in rallying the African countries' efforts for a political settlement of differences and states of tension in that continent, the promotion of economic cooperation among the respective states, and the rejection of manoeuvres and acts of aggression undertaken against the African peoples by imperialist, colonialist, neocolonialist and racist forces.

The communique reiterates the two countries' position on the Middle East and shows that the two presidents stated for the calling, under UN aegis, of an international conference on Middle East issues to be attended by all the sides concerned, including the Palestine Liberation Organization. Referring to the war between Iraq and Iran, the two leaders stated for an undelayed passage to negotiations between the two countries with a view to peacefully solving their problems and ensuring their development in conditions of peace and good neighbourliness.

President Nicolae Ceausescu and Aristides Maria Pereira expressed their country's support to and solidarity with the fight waged by the peoples in Africa, Latin America and Asia for safeguarding and strengthening their national independence, for ensuring their free, self-reliant development on the road of economic and social progress. They agreed on the need to call an international conference at the UN on global negotiations between developing and developed countries to find ways and means apt to narrow down the ever wider gap between them and lay the foundations of a New International Economic Order.

The two heads of state consider that corresponding, firm steps are needed to find a global solution to the foreign debt problem of developing countries, more particularly, of the least developed ones. President Nicolae Ceausescu and President Aristides Maria Pereira also considered as highly important the expansion and deepening of economic cooperation among developing countries, the consolidation of their solidarity and unity of action in the efforts for the development and establishment of relations of equality and equity in the world economy.

Referring to the recent UN General Assembly special session on the critical situation in Africa, the two presidents underlined the necessity that the international community should show its support to the endeavours made by the African countries in their fight against underdevelopment, especially against the disastrous effects of a long drought, of desertification phenomena and other natural calamities.

It was agreed that the two countries should closely cooperate at the forthcoming non-aligned summit in Harare so that it may substantially help the resolution of problems in southern Africa, of those concerning the economic situation in Africa and of present-day issues.

The two presidents assess that action should be taken for the strengthening of the UN role and its higher efficiency in the consolidation of peace and security, in the peaceful settlement of interstate differences, in support of socioeconomic development and international cooperation.

President Nicolae Ceausescu and President Aristides Maria Pereira decided to intensify collaboration between the Socialist Republic of Romania and the Republic of Cape Verde in the international life, within the UN and its specialized agencies, the Group of 77 and the Non-aligned Movement, with a view to enhancing their contribution to solving the major problems of the contemporary world, promoting international peace, security and cooperation.

Aristides Maria Pereira and Carlina Fortes Pereira invited Nicolae Ceausescu, general secretary of the Romanian Communist Party, president of the Socialist Republic of Romania, and Elena Ceausescu to pay an official visit of friendship to the Republic of Cape Verde. The invitation was accepted with pleasure, the date of the visit is to be set subsequently through diplomatic channels.

RCP GREETINGS MESSAGE SENT TO 13TH LCY CONGRESS

AU070954 Bucharest SCINTEIA in Romanian 27 Jun 86 p 8

[Text] On behalf of the RCP; its secretary general, Comrade Nicolae Ceausescu; and all the Romanian people we extend to you, to all the Communists, and all the working people in the SFRY cordial, comradely greetings together with our message of warm friendship and best wishes for fruitful activity and complete success to the congress proceedings.

The Communists and the whole Romanian people are familiar with the creative activity carried out by the working people in Yugoslavia and with the deep socioeconomic changes they brought about, led by the Communist League in the years of the socialist construction, and sincerely rejoice in the undeniable achievements attained in developing the country's material and cultural base. We believe that by implementing the decisions that will be adopted by the 13th LCY Congress you will successfully resolve the problems brought about by the continuous development of the economic potential and the cultural heritage of the country, and will give an impetus to the passage to the revolutionary process of building a new society in the SFRY, for the well-being and prosperity of all the peoples and nationalities in friendly Yugoslavia.

We notice with particular satisfaction that relations of solid friendship and cooperation, based on equality, esteem, and mutual respect have been established between the RCP and the LCY. The meetings between Comrade Nicolae Ceausescu and Josip Broz Tito played a particularly important role in developing these relations.

The mutual visits and the Romanian-Yugoslav summit talks held during the past years have stressed that the broad possibilities, the traditional relations of friendship, and the relations of good neighborliness provide for amplifying the mutually advantageous cooperation and they have reasserted the joint determination to further develop cooperation in various fields of activity, for the benefit of the peoples of the two countries.

Romania and Yugoslavia are also very interested in cooperating closely in the international arena in order to establish a climate of trust, cooperation, and peace in the Balkans, in Europe, and throughout the world.

Under the leadership of its Communist Party, the Romanian people have attained outstanding successes on the path of building the new system, increasing the productive and scientific-technological potential of the national economy, developing and modernizing the production forces, increasing economic efficiency, and making science, education, arts, and culture flourish.

Today, Romania is a country that is firmly engaged in implementing a great program of peaceful construction. In the 1981-85 5-year plan period, our country traveled another very important stage on the road of socioeconomic development and increasing the whole nation's standard of living. A number of difficulties caused by the international economic crisis and by some contradictions that emerged in developing various sectors of activity had to be overcome. As a result of the activity carried out, industrial production increased by 21 percent, agricultural production by over 10 percent, and national income by more than 24 percent. On this basis both the overall development of the production forces and the increase of the working people's real income by 8 percent have been ensured. The other branches of the national economy have also developed adequately. Science, education, and culture have greatly developed.

The successes attained in all fields of socialist construction are the result of the whole Romanian people's work and of the RCP policy, which acts to apply the general truths of scientific socialism and the revolutionary, materialist-dialectical concept about the world and life to the concrete conditions prevailing in our country.

The working people in our country act to unflinchingly implement the policy of the RCP -- which is celebrating the 65th anniversary of its creation this year -- and they firmly act to implement the 13th RCP Congress decisions. The Romanian people, closely united around the party and its secretary general, Comrade Nicolae Ceausescu, are firmly engaged in fulfilling the Eighth 5-Year Plan, whose fundamental objective is Romania's progress to a new, superior stage of socioeconomic development and the implementation of the party program of building the comprehensively developed socialist society and the country's advance toward communism.

In order to achieve all these important objectives, our party works to confer a new quality in the work and life of the entire society. We attach the greatest attention to continuously developing the production forces on the basis of broadly applying science and modern technologies, achieving a thorough agrarian revolution, perfecting consistently the forms of organizing and managing society, and developing the revolutionary workers' democracy, self-management, and self-administration by expanding the democratic framework of the working people's participation in formulating and implementing the domestic and foreign policy of the party and state.

The international situation continues to be very serious as a result of the arms race, of the accumulation of new and increasingly more perfected types of weapons, of the worsening of some conflicts in various parts of the world, and of the manifestation of the policy of force and dictat. All these lead to the increase of the danger of a new war, which would inevitably turn into a nuclear catastrophe with the most serious consequences for the existence of life itself on our planet. Therefore, the RCP and its secretary general, Comrade Nicolae Ceausescu consider that, today, the fundamental problem of the international situation is to defend peace, halt the arms race, and pass to concrete disarmament measures and the elimination of nuclear weapons.

Romania believes that it is necessary that a comprehensive disarmament program should be formulated, focusing on nuclear disarmament, but which would also be aimed at reducing conventional weapons, troops, and military expenditures. We believe that all countries should act firmly to solve all problems confronting mankind, including the serious problems of underdevelopment and foreign debts, solely through negotiations. The economic development programs and social progress of peoples can be achieved only under conditions of tranquility and peace and by broad international cooperation.

As a country situated in the Balkans, Romania carries out sustained activity to turn this region into a zone of peace, cooperation, and good neighborliness, free of nuclear and chemical weapons and free of foreign military bases.

Our country actively militates for accomplishing security and cooperation in Europe. We believe that everything should be done in order to conclude successfully the Stockholm Conference on Confidence-Building Measures and Security and Disarmament in Europe and the Vienna negotiations on reducing force and weapons in the central part of the continent, and to attain positive results at the Geneva disarmament conference.

Romania pays particular attention to developing relations of friendship and cooperation with all socialist countries, primarily with its neighbors. We also work to expand cooperation with developing countries, with developed capitalist countries, and with all countries regardless of their social system, based on the principles of national independence and sovereignty, territorial integrity, noninterference in domestic affairs, respect, and mutual advantage.

We firmly speak out for strengthening solidarity among developing countries, nonaligned countries, and small- and medium-sized countries, which, by acting in unity, will be able to bring about solutions to economic problems and the achievement of an international economic order.

The RCP carries out a broad activity to strengthen solidarity and the unity of the communist and workers international movement, based on respect for the independence of each party and its right to independently formulate its political line, in accordance with the concrete conditions under which it carries out its activity. We firmly believe that, by increasing cooperation among communist, workers, socialist, and social-democratic parties and progressive, democratic, and people's forces everywhere, we can ensure a happy future for mankind.

We extend to you once again, esteemed comrades, sincere wishes for success in the 13th LCY Congress proceedings and in implementing the decisions to be adopted for the benefit of friendly, socialist Yugoslavia's development and progress.

GREETINGS CONVEYED TO 10TH PZPR CONGRESS

AU060615 Bucharest SCINTEIA in Romanian 2 Jul 86 p 5

[Text] On behalf of the RCP; its secretary general, Comrade Nicolae Ceausescu; all the communists; and all our people, we convey to the delegates to the 10th PZPR Congress, the communists, and all the Polish people revolutionary greetings with wishes for complete success in the proceedings of your congress, an event of particular importance in the life of the party, the people, and the socialist Polish state.

The communists and all the Romanian people hail and highly value the tireless efforts made by your party and people on the road of socialist renewal to overcome obstacles along the path of achieving important successes in the socioeconomic development of the homeland and in raising the material and cultural well-being of the working people. We also value Poland's active participation in international events. As close friends, we express our profound joy for your successes and we extend to you our warmest congratulations.

We wish you full success in fulfilling the important tasks that will be adopted by your congress for Poland's firm advance along the road of socialism.

We take this opportunity to recall, with particular satisfaction the positive course of the relations of friendship and cooperation in various fields between the RCP and the PZPR and between our countries and peoples. A decisive role in deepening and strengthening these relations, with old and long-standing traditions, was played and is still being played by the frequent meetings between the leaders of our parties and countries -- Comrade Nicolae Ceausescu and Comrade Wojciech Jaruzelski -- and by the agreements reached on these occasions, agreements which give a strong impetus to developing economy, science, technology, and culture as well as to increasing contacts and exchanges of experience between our parties and mass and civic organizations.

Strongly mobilized by the decisions of the 13th RCP Congress, all the Romanian people, closely united around the party and its secretary general, Comrade Nicolae Ceausescu, are taking forceful actions to commendably implement the party program for building a comprehensively developed society and the country's advance toward communism, says the message, and it stresses the priority concerns during the 8th 5-Year Plan period, the objective of which is Romania's passage from the stage of a developing country to the stage of an averagely developed country.

We act to increase the leading role of the party in all fields of socioeconomic life and to strengthen, in every possible way, its indissoluble ties with the people. At the same time, we are concerned with strengthening the workers revolutionary democracy and with perfecting the framework of the working people's direct participation in the management of the whole socioeconomic life and in formulating and implementing the internal and foreign policy of our party and state.

In order to be able to fulfill their objectives, the Romanian people -- as all other peoples -- need peace. The international situation continues to be very serious as a result of the continuing arms race, primarily the nuclear arms race, increasing military conflicts, and the imperialist policy of aggression and diktat. Comrade Nicolae Ceausescu stressed that "we are living in such time in the history of mankind when the fundamental issues are to halt the dangerous course of events toward a nuclear catastrophe, to determine the passage to disarmament, primarily nuclear disarmament, and to do everything possible -- before it is too late -- to save mankind from destruction and ensure the people's existence, freedom, independence, and life.

Romania hailed and actively supports the disarmament program to be achieved by the year 2000 in several stages proposed by Comrade Mikhail Gorbachev and the decision of the Soviet Union to extend the unilateral moratorium on nuclear tests. We believe that everything possible should be done to reach, as soon as possible, an agreement on halting the deployment of new medium-range nuclear missiles in Europe and to move on to the elimination of those already in place.

The achievement of the proposals included in the appeal of the Warsaw Pact countries, recently addressed to the NATO countries and to all European countries, would mean an important step toward this goal.

Our country also speaks out for the adoption of a comprehensive general disarmament program, focusing on the nuclear weapons, which should include chemical and conventional weapons and should envisage a cutback of up to 50 percent of all weapons and military troops, the corresponding cutback on military expenditures, and the limitation of the manufacturing and selling of weapons.

Romania believes that increased efforts should be made so that positive results are reached at the Stockholm Conference on Security Building Measures and Disarmament in Europe, at the Vienna negotiations for reducing troops and arms in central Europe, and at the disarmament conference in Geneva. Likewise, of great significance would be the setting up of nuclear-free and chemical weapons-free zones in the Balkans, in the center and northern parts of Europe, as well as in other regions throughout the world.

In its overall foreign policy our country devotes particular attention to deepening relations of friendship and cooperation with all the socialist countries and to strengthening unity among them. We act to implement the decisions adopted at the economic summit meeting of the CEMA countries and the long-term program of scientific-technical cooperation.

At the same time, we develop our relations of cooperation with developing countries and with developed countries.

We consistently base our foreign policy on the principles of full equality of rights, respect for independence and national sovereignty, noninterference in domestic affairs and mutual advantage, and respect for the right of each nation to independently decide on its development path.

We firmly militate to eliminate the use of force in international relations and to solve all conflicts and interstate disputes only by peaceful means, through negotiations.

Romania calls for concrete measures to eliminate the great gaps which separate developing countries from developed countries and to establish a New International Economic Order.

The RCP increases cooperation and militant solidarity with the communist and workers parties, with socialist and social democratic parties, with national liberation movements, and with democratic parties and progressive forces everywhere in the struggle waged for social progress and peace throughout the world.

We convey to you, the communists, and the fraternal Polish people friendly wishes for complete successes in the implementation of the decisions that will be adopted by the 10th PZPR Congress and success in your activity devoted to the continuous progress of socialist Poland, to the happiness and well-being of the Polish people, and in the struggle for peace and cooperation among nations.

FURTHER REPORTAGE ON ZHAO ZIYANG VISIT

Mikulic Dinner Toast

LD062133 Belgrade TANJUG Domestic Service in Serbo-Croatian 1534 GMT 6 Jul 86

[Toast by Branko Mikulic, president of the SFRY Federal Executive Council and member of the State Presidency, at dinner for PRC State Council Premier Zhao Ziyang, in Belgrade on 6 July 86]

[Text] [no dateline as received] Greeting to the high-ranking guest from the PRC, Branko Mikulic, the FEC president said:

Your visit comes at a time when (?relations) and cooperation between our two countries are developing very successfully and when new prospects are opening up for their further comprehensive development.

The authentic revolutions and ktheir achievements, the aspirations and determination to build socialism in their own ways in accordance with their own conditions and needs, are a firm link between Yugoslavia and China. There are no open questions between us and we have identical or similar views on international questions.

Yugoslavia attaches special importance to the further development of friendly relations with the PRC.

Since President Tito's visit to China, our relations have entered the stage of intensive and comprehensive cooperation. We are maintaining a continuous dialogue at all state and party levels and are carrying out an exchange of experiences in many fields of economic and social development. The meetings between the most senior leaders of our two countries during the last few years have given an impetus to the furthering of the acquaintance and the strengthening of the friendly cooperation between Yugoslavia and China on a stable and long-term basis.

Comrade Premier, we are following very closely the achievements that the PRC is attaining in socialist construction on the basis of its specific conditions and experiences, undertaking reforms that have far-reaching significance. It is our wish that you achieve even greater successes on this road.

With the same attention we are following the active, constructive, independent and peaceful policy of China on an international level. This involvement of the PRC represents a great contribution to the efforts toward the positive development of international relations, broad and equitable cooperation, the relaxation of international tensions and lasting peace and progress in the world.

Comrade Premier, the international situation continues to be very complex and dangerous for peace in the world. Negative tendencies are continuing, particularly in East-West relations, which are based on an unstable balance of forces.

The possibility for a rapid return to detente is not being perceived. Yugoslavia has always advocated a policy of relaxing tension, stressing that detente should be universal in accordance with its essence and in terms of the area it covers. Without universal detente neither real peace nor full security can be realized.

The fundamental problem of today's world is the halting the arms race and making a transition to disarmament, primarily nuclear disarmament. The only way to solve this problem is through negotiations and understandings.

The nonaligned and other developing countries are most frequently on the receiving end of the policy of force and military intervention. As a result, the Nonaligned Movement has long since advocated the military disengagement of the great powers and blocs from the field of the nonaligned countries. In this way there would be a restriction in the space for bloc confrontation and the nonaligned countries would strengthen their security.

We are very concerned, Comrade Premier, about the failure to solve old crises and the outbreak of new ones in various areas of the world.

The rascist regime of the Republic of South Africa is continuing to implement even more brutally, the policy of apartheid and the illegal occupation of Namibia.

We have condemned in the harshest terms the aggressive and violent acts of the Republic of South Africa both against the majority of the population and against neighboring countries.

Yugoslavia advocates an equitable and lasting solution to the crisis in the Middle East, based on the withdrawal of Israel from the occupied Arab territories and the securing of the legitimate rights of the Palestinian people to self-determination and the creation of their own independent state. We support the idea of an international conference on the Near East, under the auspices of the United Nations, and with the participation of all interested parties, including the PLO -- the sole legitimate representative of the Palestinian people.

Yugoslavia continues to be worried by the situation in the Mediterranean, where a particular threat is posed by the increasingly intensive operation of the military factor and the increased interference and conflict of forces and factors outside the Mediterranean. Yugoslavia offers full support to the independence and sovereignty of the countries of the Mediterranean and is actively advocating that this region become a zone of peace and cooperation and that the countries of the Mediterranean have sovereignty in deciding on what happens in this region.

We are concerned by the escalation of the Iran-Iraq war, in which both countries are suffering great human and material losses. We support peaceful initiatives that could lead to the cessation of bloodletting and the initiation of negotiations between the two nonaligned countries.

We are for a just and lasting political solution to the problems of Cambodia and Afghanistan on the basis of the withdrawal of foreign troops and the creation of conditions for the peoples of these countries themselves, without outside interference, to decide on their own future. The 8-point proposal of the Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea, we believe to be useful in reaching a political solution to the Cambodian problem.

We also support the actions and proposals of the DPRK for the peaceful unification of Korea.

Comrade Premier, the economic crisis affecting all countries, especially the developing countries, is a source of tension and general instability in the world. International economic relations are of essential significance for the position, development and security of the nonaligned and other developing countries. The problem of debts has grown into the most direct threat to the development and security of many countries and thus become a prime political problem of today's world. It can be solved only if the further economic development of the developing countries is ensured.

Yugoslavia is investing great efforts in finding a solution to the problems in North-South relations and in strengthening South-South cooperation. Our strategic orientation is that all burning problems should be solved through constructive dialogue between the developed and the developing countries.

In the present complex international situation, the movement of the nonaligned countries, as a global and independent factor in international relations, has an irreplaceable role in coming up with peaceful and equitable solutions to international problems. We are convinced that the forthcoming summit in Harare, too, will be a significant stage inthe development of the movement and policy of nonalignment and that it will give a new impetus to their further affirmation on the international scene.

On this occasion, too, I wish to stress, Comrade Premier, that Yugoslavia highly values the appreciation that the PRC has for the policy and movement of the nonaligned countries.

Being guided by the principles of the UN Charter and the policy of nonalignment, Yugoslavia is advocating that in the interest of stable development, security, and peace in the world, relations among states be built on a basis of equality, and that all forms of inequality, the politics of force and pressure, interference and intervention, domination and hegemonism, be removed from international relations. The preconditions for the preservation of peace are the renunciation of the use of force and the peaceful solution of problems, the development of relations of trust and the strengthening of equitable international cooperation.

We attach great importance to the expansion of cooperation in the Balkans and support the initiatives for its transformation into a zone of peace, security, and cooperation -- without nuclear weapons. Comprehensive cooperation with neighboring countries is the enduring orientation of our foreign policy. Yugoslavia is constantly trying to enrich cooperation with its neighbors -- in accordance with the principles of the United Nations, the Final Act of the Helsinki Agreement, and other international documents.

Comrade Premier, considering this fairly bleak picture of the world, both countries and peoples need to blaze new trails, roads to peace, understanding, mutual solidarity, and the building of a better tomorrow. This is also a function of your friendship mission, a mission that links the states and nations from the different parts of our world. I would once again like to wish you a very pleasant visit in our country and hope that you will acquaint yourself with our achievements and feel, this time as well, the friendship which the nations and nationlities of Yugoslavia have for the PRC and the Chinese people. I am sure that your visit will give a new stimulus to the strengthening of friendship and the expansion of cooperation between our peoples.

Hasani Receives Zhao Ziyang

[Text] Belgrade, 8 Jul (TANJUG) -- Sinan Hasani, president of the SFRY Presidency, today received Zhao Ziyang, premier of the PRC State Council, and his aides.

The talks were also attended by Radovan Vlajkovic, member of the SFRY Presidency; Branko Mikulic, president of the Federal Executive Council; Ibrahim Tabakovic, member of the FEC; Budimir Loncar, deputy federal secretary for foreign affairs; and Zvone Dragan, SFRY ambassador to China.

The head of the Chinese Government extended greetings from PRC President Li Xiannian to Sinan Hasani, president of the SFRY Presidency. It was jointly assessed during the talks that both China's and Yugoslavia's goals as well as their views on many issues of internal development and foreign policy are very close thus providing ample scope for comprehensive cooperation between the two countries.

Both sides expressed satisfaction with the fact that the talks in Belgrade over the last few days were very useful. They outlined the paths and specific forms of further development of friendly cooperation between China and Yugoslavia.

When discussing topical international issues, particular reference was made to preparations for the conference of heads of state and government of the nonaligned countries to be held in Harare. The Chinese premier expressed his belief that the conference in Harare will further help to promote the original principles of the policy of nonalignment and that this important international gathering will make a specific contribution to the efforts to resolve urgent international problems.

In his response to the statement by the Chinese premier to the effect that China has a high opinion of the Nonaligned Movement's positive role and, by implication of Yugoslavia, in international relations, Sinan Hasani, president of the SFRY Presidency, stressed that Yugosalvia sets great store by China's positive attitude to the Nonaligned Movement.

Final Talks Held

[Text] Belgrade, 8 Jul (TANJUG) -- Branko Mikulic, president of the Federal Executive Council, and Zhao Ziyang, premier of the PRC State Council, met in the Palace of the Federation in New Belgrade today. During the meeting, they exchanged views on issues of interest to both countries. They were later joined by their aides who also took part in the dialogue.

The final round of the Yugoslav-Chinese talks, which were conducted in an atmosphere of mutual understanding and full openness, was used to sum up the previous meeting as well as the meetings between departmental ministers.

The talks reaffirmed the very high level of friendly relations and cooperation existing between Yugoslavia and the PRC. It was agreed that there were no obstacles in Yugoslav-Chinese relations and that cooperation between the two countries should be further developed and promoted. Both sides expressed readiness to devote full attention to the development of economic cooperation so as to raise it to an even higher level. This also applies to industrial and agricultural cooperation as well as to cooperation in all other sectors of the economy. It was stressed that some classical forms of cooperation should be abandored and a new phase in tune with the high level of political relations should be found. In the context, agreement was reached on the need for various groups of experts to meet to develop cooperation on a more modern basis, particularly scientific-technological cooperation and joint ventures in third markets.

In the course of today's talks, particular attention was focused on the issue of how to further expand trade between the two countries. To this end, sides are planning to organize meetings at the level of ·inisters, both as a means of providing fresh stimultus to the development of bilateral relations and cooperation. It has been agreed that the next session of the mixed committee for Economic and Scientific-Technical Cooperation will take place in Yugoslavia.

The two heads of government supported the idea of a conference on economic cooperation between Yugoslavia and China. The conference is expected to take place in Ljubljana in November, and will be attended by representatives of the scientific institutions involved in monitoring various trends in international economics as well as representatives of work organizations from the two countries. The conference is expected to outline some new directions for the development of economic cooperation between Yugoslavia and the PRC.

The two prime ministers heard and approved the reports on the separate talks that took place between Milos Miloslavljevic, vice president of the FEC and Lu Dong, minister in charge of the PRC State Economic Commission. The talks concentrated on the state of economic relations between the two countries. They also heard and welcomed the report on the talks between Budimir Loncar, deputy federal secretary for foreign affairs, and Gian Qichen, vice minister of foreign affairs. These talks dealt with the international situation. On that occasion, emphasis was placed on the proximity and identity of views on many issues concerning international relations, on disarmament efforts and the realization of universal detente. The exchange of views also covered other topical issues on the international scene.

Arrival in Slovenia

[Text] Brdo Kod Dranja, Yugoslavia, July 8 (TANJUG) -- Chinese Premier Zhao Ziyang and members of the Chinese delegation, who arrived in Ljubljana this afternoon, held talks at Brdo Kod Kranja this evening with President of the Executive Council of the Yugoslav Republic of Slovenia Dusan Sinigoj.

Within the framework of Yugoslav-Chinese cooperation, Slovenia has developed particularly extensive contacts with the Chinese Province of Sichuan, primarly in the field of economic cooperation, it was assessed during the talks.

Good results have also been achieved in the fields of transport, tourism, banking and medicine and in specific-technical and cultural-educational cooperation. During the talks, special attention was devoted to possibilities for expanding economic cooperation, primarily commodity trade and cooperation in transport and banking.

The Chinese permier and members of the Chinese delegation will tomorrow tour the smelt working organization in Ljubljana and the port Kopar.

FURTHER REPORTAGE ON ADDRESSES TO LCY CONGRESS

Popit Speech to Commission

AU061821 Belgrade BORBA in Serbo-Croatian 26 Jun 86 p 5

[Report on the opening speech made by France Popit at the first meeting of the Commission for All-People's Defense and Social Self-Protection of the 13th LCY Congress on 25 June -- capitalized passages appear in boldface]

[Text] -- In this very place we concluded 4 years ago that the main battle for strenghtening our defense and self-protection capability must primarily be fought in terms of achieving economic stabilization; developing socialist self-management; strengthening the equality, brotherhood, and unity of our peoples and nationalities; making the functioning of the political system more efficient; and strengthening the international position of and respect for nonaligned Yugoslavia.

Considering the complex economic and political trends in our society and the expression of tendencies that are menacing the sources of the strength of our defense and security, today we have even stronger reasons to arrive at such a conclusion.

This was stated by France Popit, member of the LCY Central Committee, in his introductory speech in the Commission for All-People's Defense and Social Self-Protection at the 13th LCY Congress. Let us also use this occasion to say that the worsening economic crisis, the country's huge debt, the enormous increase in inflation, the falling of the standard of living of the working class and of a great number of working people and citizens over a number of years, the inefficiency in the functioning of the political system, the strengthening of statist and bureaucratic tendencies, the phenomenon of disunity and federalization in the LCY, the slowdown in the implementation of self-management and production relations, and other distortions and subjective weaknesses are all reducing the moral force and material capacities of all-people's defense and are weakening the efficiency of our social self-protection. The defense and security of our country in the past several years has been particularly negatively affected by more and more overt non self-management tendencies and by various kinds of divisions in more or less all spheres of social life, and in this connection, by the more frequent phenomena of the statist way of solving socioeconomic problems.

This is where great dangers lurk for the whole of our security and the territorial integrity of the SFRY.

Security in Our Hands

In his introductory speech France Popit stressed that the interests of strong defense and security require a faster and more energetic solution to the problems and contradictions in society, a solution that would be based on the principles of self-management. Our efforts in this respect must be much greater than they have been up to now. We must be more efficient in overcoming indecisiveness and stagnation in following the policy of consistently implementing planned policies; we must change our own behavior faster and find ways which will lead us out of the current economic and sociopolitical difficulties. Let us always bear in mind that the revolution can be most firmly defended through the constant development and improvement of our attained achievements. It should be clear to all that the stability and security of our country primarily depends on us alone.

In this period of crises in our socioeconomic development, by using the weaknesses, passivity, and opportunism of organized socialist forces, some ideological and class enemies of our system and revolution have found room for conducting more frequent, organized, and arrogant attacks on the revolutionary achievements, foundations, and the vision of development of the self-managing Yugoslav society. In their attacks they are sometimes and in some places using legal institutions and means.

We must be particularly aware of great dangers to the internal strength and cohesion of our society stemming from the strengthening of nationalist consciousness and the increasingly more aggressive expression of nationalism. Our experience in fighting both Albanian nationalism and irredentism and Serbian and Montenegrin nationalism in Kosovo shows the destructive effects of nationalism on the entire organism of our multinational communty and thus on its ability to successfully protect the achievements of the revolution. We know from experience that the unity of the peoples and nationalities of Yugoslavia is the first condition for our historic victory and the most essential supposition of unity and efficiency in our defense.

The security of the socialist self-managing Yugoslav society is the joint as well as the indivisible interest of the workers class, working people, citizens, and all our peoples and nationalities. This kind of interest in defense and self-protection is based on the consciousness that the peoples and nationalities of Yugoslavia are tied by fate and on the implementation of the constitutionally established socialist self-managing relations.

The worsening of the military and political situation in the world also necessitates greater LC involvement in strengthening all-people's defense and social self-protection. There are no signs of a calming down in international relations, particularly in the relations between the big powers and blocs. We are the witnesses of a sharp increase of the military factor's role in international relations. A very intensive arms race continues to be pursued, reaching almost limitless proportions and recently spreading into space. Advances in science and technology have made possible the continual introduction of new and the improvement of existing kinds of weapons. The increasingly more frequent use of military power began to assume new forms including the form of so-called state terrorism.

The Consequences of Antisocialist Ideologies

In developing our all-people's defense and social self-protection and in its theoretical, doctrinal, and practical parts we must start from those factors and real dangers that affect the security of our country. In doing so, as the development of events has shown, we must take into account the fact that the space that our country occupies is the space where the interests of great power and blocs cross and intertwine, and that the focus of confrontation in Europe is shifting toward its south-eastern part and the Mediterranean region. In the long run we must also consider the territorial pretensions of some of our neighboring countries.

The underestimation of these and other dangers and the failure to understand the rationale of our defense and self-protection efforts is also present. There were even some attempts that contested some of our conceptual choices regarding defense. This is not only a matter of not understanding the conditions in which we live. The cases mentioned are to some extent the result of a deeper penetration of antisocialist ideologies and forces and constitute a part of the whole of their activities. I think that we can say that the LC has not recently been active enough in preventing these phenomena, said France Popit.

The Yugoslav People's Army is, it is understood, open to constructive criticism and is ready and willing to overcome weaknesses that exist even in its ranks.

On the other hand, we in the whole of our society and in the LCY must be more decisive in rejecting unacceptable ideological and political concepts about our Army and the defense of our country.

We have recently passed a large number of doctrinal documents and normative acts in which many essential questions of the organization and functioning of the system of all-people's defense and social self-protection were worked out on a unified bases. New republican and provincial laws on all-people's defense have been passed, the strategy of combat fighting and the study regarding the attained level of the realization of the national defense concept were produced, while the work on a document of a conceptual and doctrinal character entitled "The Strategy of All-People's Defense and Social Self-Protection" is going through its final stage. The methodology of planning has also been improved, and our defense plans have been updated and expanded in all communities.

At the heart of the achieved results primarily lies the strong patriotic conciousness of a great number of the working people and citizens, youth, members of the Yugoslav People's Army, the organs of internal affairs, civil defense, and the continuous care of the working and other organizations, sociopolitical communities, and organized socialist forces with the LC caring above all about the security and defense capability of the country. It is thanks to this that we succeeded in these unfavorable socioeconomic conditions in securing the continuity of defense preparations and in further improving the country's defense capability.

In connection with the assessment and results of preparing society for defense and protection we must be critical and must overcome the existing phenomena of complacency and idealization of the state in this field. The demands stemming from this complex political situation and from the character of a war and a battle fought under modern conditions are becoming greater, while material, organizational, and other preparations for the conduct of an all-people's defense war are becoming more and more complex.

Only those systems of the economy and of other activities which are well-prepared and which operate without much disturbance in peacetime will operate successfully in war and under the extraordinary conditions.

We must bear in mind that the defense preparations do not run evenly and equally in all the communes, local communities, and associted labor organizations. All the elements of the defense system also do not develop evenly. Economic problems unfavorably affect the defense preparations in the economy and social activities and make the materialization of wartime production plans difficult especially in underdeveloped communes, and in some hilly and mountain and border regions.

To Strengthen Social Self-Protection

The draft resolution rightly stresses that the focus of the LC activities should be on the further socialization [podrustvljavanje] of defense and security and on an even greater involvement of associated labor and the working people and citizens in making decisions regarding essential questions in the development of all-people's defense and social self-protection and in the direct realization of the tasks in that area. We must create organizational and other conditions for the more massive and creative involvement of the working people and citizens, particularly youth and women, in defense and protection. The battle for the broadest defense and self-protection front should be primarily fought in the organizations of associated labor, local communities, and in other self-management organizations and communities.

Despite the network of defense institutions, the fact is that our society does not sufficiently protect some basic values. This is evident from the data about economic and other kinds of crimes, the usurpation of social property, damages caused by fires, the widespread phenomena of the illegal behavior of individuals and groups of individuals, the usurpation of self-management rights, public nationalist incidents, and other events that are causing public disturbances and the justified dissatisfaction of the working people and citizens.

Considering the state of our economy and society as a whole, economic crimes more than ever before threaten socialist self-management and the achievements of our revolution. This is why one of the prime objectives of the LC is, through ideological and political action, to secure a more efficient eradication of all forms of crime and the causes that enable the emergence of these crimes. The organs of investigation and judicial organs have special responsibility in that area, as they are the most expert part of the system of social self-protection in solving tasks in this field.

The need has evolved to work out and expand certain systemic solutions that would contribute toward the implementation of self-protective organization and activity to all cells of our society in exactly this way, and that is directed toward concrete conditions and needs. It is therefore understandable why solutions should not be searched for in the great institutionalization of social self-protection. Starting from the fact that the protection of the society's basic values is the right and obligation of every working man and citizen, it is necessary to develop and affirm the forms of man and citizen, it is necessary to develop and affirm the forms of activities which will enable their continuous, coordinated, and efficient self-protective activities.

It was pointed out that striving to continuously strengthen the all-people's, workers and working class, and pan-Yugoslav character of our Armed Forces is in the center of LC activities.

We will continue to follow the policy of not lagging behind the armies of neighboring countries as far as the technical modernization of the Armed Forces is concerned, and will, in equipping our Armed Forces, take society's objective material capabilities into account. Technical modernization must continue to be primarily based on the development and production of weapons and equipment by the home military industry which under current conditions emerged as an important factor in the technical and technological development of the country as well as in the implementation of the policy of stabilization. The LCY supports the initiative to secure more permanent and stable sources of financing the programs and plans of developing our Armed Forces in accordance with the economic capabilities of our society.

We must invest greater efforts and work out concrete measures in order to secure as proportional a representation as possible of the peoples and nationalities of Yugoslavia and of republics and provinces in the officers' ranks of the Yugoslav People's Army, particularly from those areas in which the number of young people wanting to go to military colleges and academies is still small, France Popit said.

UNACCEPTABLE DIFFERENCES

IT IS OF SPECIAL IMPORTANCE THAT WE MORE CONSISTENTLY WORK TO OVERCOME UNACCEPTABLE DIFFERENCES IN QUALIFYING AND ASSESSING THE DANGERS OF NATIONALISM, PARTICULARLY IN OVERCOMING THE PHENOMENA OF DISUNITY, OPPORTUNISM, AND INDECISIVENESS IN A PRACTICAL IDEOLOGICAL STRUGGLE, AND COURTING NATIONALISTS IN CERTAIN PARTS OF THE LC, EVEN IN SOME OF ITS LEADING ORGANS. IT IS VERY IMPORTANT THAT RIGHT AT THE START WE REMOVE ALL CAUSES THAT INDUCE NATIONALISM AND OTHER SOCIALLY DANGEROUS PHENOMENA BOTH IN THE FIELD OF ECONOMICS AND THE FIELD OF POLITICS.

WE CAN FIRMLY SAY THAT THE LC HAS NOT SUFFICIENTLY LEARNED THE LESSONS OF THE KOSOVO COUNTERREVOLUTIONARY EVENTS, AND THAT ONLY RECENTLY IT STARTED, JOINTLY WITH THE RESPONSIBLE ORGANS OF THE PROVINCE, THE SR OF SERBIA, AND THE FEDERATION, TO MORE RESOLUTELY UNDERTAKE MEASURES TO CURB HOSTILE ACTIVITIES OF NATIONALISM AND IRREDENTISM, TO HALT THE EMIGRATION OF SERBIAN AND MONTENEGRINS, AND TO CURB THE RELATIVELY WIDE-SPREAD FORMS OF THE ENDANGERED CONSTITUTIONAL RIGHTS AND FREEDOMS OF THE WORKING PEOPLE AND CITIZENS OF THE AUTONOMOUS PROVINCE OF KOSOVO. TO A GREATER EXTENT SUCH ACTIVITIES ARE THE RESULT OF THE FACT THAT WE HAVE FINALLY BECOME AWARE THAT SOLVING PROBLEMS IN KOSOVO SHOULD BE APPROACHED AS AN ALL-YUGOSLAV PROBLEM IRRESPECTIVE OF THE FACT THAT THE GREATEST RESPONSIBILITY SHOULD BE BORNE BY THE COMMUNISTS AND ALL SUBJECTIVE FORCES OF THE AUTONOMOUS PROVINCE OF KOSOVO AND THE SR OF SERBIA.

THE YUGOSLAV PEOPLE'S ARMY -- THE IRREPLACEABLE FORCE

THERE ARE SOME CASES WHERE THE CONSTITUTIONAL ROLE AND THE YUGOSLAV PEOPLE'S ARMY HAVE BEEN CHALLENGED. SOME INDIVIDUALS EVEN CONTEST THE NEED FOR ITS EXISTENCE. IT IS CLEAR THAT SUCH THESES ARE UNACCEPTABLE AND THAT THEY WERE PUSHED BY THOSE FORCES THAT HAVE DIFFERENT VIEWS OF THE CONCEPT OF OUR ENTIRE DEVELOPMENT AND WHO, JUST BECAUSE OF THAT, FIND THE YUGOSLAV PEOPLE'S ARMY TO BE A STRONG FACTOR OF STABILITY AND SECURITY OF OUR SOCIETY THAT ENDURES.

THE BEST ANSWER TO THE ADVOCATES OF SUCH VIEWS HAS BEEN GIVEN BY OUR WORKING PEOPLE AND CITIZENS, THE WORKER'S CLASS, AND ALL PEOPLES AND NATIONALITIES WHO SEE OUR ARMY AS THEIR OWN AND WHO SEE IT AS THE IRREPLACEABLE FORCE FOR DEFENDING THE PEACE AND SECURITY OF SOCIALIST SELF-MANAGING YUGOSLAVIA.

Stojanovic Speech To Commission

AU061819 Belgrade BORBA in Serbo-Croatian 26 Jun 86 p 2

[Report on opening speech by Nikola Stojanovic at the first session of the Commission for Socioeconomic Relations of the 13th LCY Congress in Belgrade on 25 June]

[Excerpts] In his opening speech in the Commission for the Development of Self-Managing Socioeconomic Relations and the Economic and Scientific and Technical Development, Nikola Stojanovic first recalled that the LC in the past faced the task of finding solutions for a way out of the present crisis situation. It therefore embarked on clearing up the ideopolitical differences and determining unified positions on the further development of the economic and political system. The results did not fail to appear. The Long-Term Economic Stabilization Program was adopted, based on direct and lasting interests of the workers class and all working people and citizens of Yugoslavia. The worst consequence of the crisis were mitigated in the field of foreign liquidity. Regular repayments of foreign debts were assured. Shortcomings were overcome in the supply of basic foodstuffs and electricity. In a democratic discussion within the delegate system, many of the changes to the economic system were carried out in conformity with the requirements of economic stabilization, while many dilemas were clarified and differences of opinion were overcome.

However, Stojanovic stressed, it is obvious that we did not exert comprehensive and efficient effects on all the essential causes of economic instability and other great difficulties in our development.

Above all, there have been no essential changes in the field of implementing the constitutional position of workers in associated labor in controlling the entire income and overall social reproduction resources, and this objectively weakened the material basis of self-management and the front of the struggle for its development, and enhanced the economic and social basis of bureaucracy and technocracy that offer a very strong resistance to a consistent implementation of the Constitution, the LCY policy, and the Long-Term Program. Under such conditions, the manner of conduct and of business operations generating inflation penetrated deeply into all the corners of social reproduction.

Under such conditions, accelerated increase in inflation and serious disturbances in the process of social reproduction, low efficiency and business operations and a fall in the productivity of labor, still unsatisfactory exports, and increased unemployment have come about. The social stratification continues bypassing the results of work, and the economic and social position of workers deteriorates. A large part of the workers class and of the working people struggle with great difficulties to meet their basic daily needs, while on the other hand tremendous personal and social resources are spent uneconomically.

The LCY Program unequivocally says that lack of respect for the law of value and other market laws does not strengthen the socialist elements in the economy, but weakens them, hampers the initiative of individuals and enterprises, holds back the development of production forces, and generates forces outside production that do violence to this production. These warnings are still valid and will be valid as long as commodity production is historically objectively conditioned by the level of development of the production forces of society depending on this development.

Hidden Dangers Threaten

We must work resolutely toward enabling the organizations of associated labor as self-managing goods producers, not only to independently decide about their work and development but also to bear economic responsibility for their decisions. In seeking this goal, we ought to secure their emancipation from the pressures of noneconomic elements, redistribute social funds in favor of those who are creating them, strengthen the reproductive and accumulative abilities of associated labor organizations and their self-managing pooling of labor and resources based on economic interest, and develop self-managing socioeconomic relations in all organizations of associated labor so that the workers decide about all essential questions regarding development and business, so that the self-managing role and function of workers' councils is strengthened, and that managing and other expert organs are trained for the responsible fulfillment of their tasks. Affirming these positions of the LCY program and statute we must in practice break the dogmatic and bureaucratic, statist, technocratic, and other resistances of the surviving consciousness and autarchic behavior which want to erect barriers to the self-managing integration of our economy and society. We must finally realize and plant deep into the consciousness of the workers class, working people, and citizens the fact that this is the hiding place of great dangers that question Tito's course of our revolution, the dangers which both the LCY and our society as a whole try to render incapable of effectively fighting with the historically given external and internal conditions of the development of our revolution.

At the 17th LCY Central Committee session, the LC adopted a clear ideopolitical positions on the realization of the anti-inflationary policy. We must proceed from the premise, and persist with it, that there will be no lasting results in the struggle against inflation unless we comprehensively implement the Stabilization Program.

This means that we cannot achieve a lasting success in the struggle against economic instability either through a restrictive policy or through partial measures, especially not when the solutions and the measures being adopted depend on the relationship of forces at a given moment and the possible blocking moves, and when the adoption of new measures envisaged in the Stabilization Program is uncertain.

An efficient struggle against inflation is possible only through increasing socially profitable production, especially production for exports. At the same time, unless distribution according to work is carried out more consistently and unless all aspects of consumption grow more slowly than income created on this basis, real results in the stabilization of the market and prices cannot be expected. This means that we must for once stop the practice of spending beyond our material means, which has been going on for years.

There is no struggle against inflation unless rigorous financial discipline is established in the country, the socialization of inefficient business operations is stopped, and the attitude toward loss-makers is essentially changed. It is untenable that we have a very large number of loss-making associated labor organizations whose production does not sell in the domestic market, and even less in the world market, but the number of such organizations that have been liquidated or were forced to redirect their production, to make it more profitable, and to adjust it to the requirements of the market is very small. On the contrary, the situation continues to be supported for all kinds of reasons, most frequently with the blessing of sociopolitical factors, through the use of the accumulation funds which are meager anyhow, or through an uncontrolled increase in the money supply. It is likewise necessary to eliminate the shortcomings in the system and in economic policy that generate losses even in the associated labor organizations whose production is modern, competitive, and has good prospects.

The Federal Executive Council has just come to the public with a proposal of measures for the implementation of the goals and tasks of the economic and development policy in 1986 fixed by the resolution. The measures are directed against inflation. They should stimulate the development of production and exports and contribute to the realization of other goals and tasks of the medium-term plan this year. These Federal Executive Council activities are along the line of the requirements of the Stabilization Program and the LCY policy in general. A part of these measures is now being adopted, and all other measures envisaged by the Long-Term Stabilization Program and under intensive preparation. The LC and all the socialist subjective forces must be fully engaged in implementing these and other measures on the lines of the Long-Term Economic Stabilization Program.

A quicker escape of our society from the present situation must also be based on a resolute restructuring of our economy on modern foundations, which is to say through production programs which will contribute to a more successful inclusion in the international divisions of labor, or rather to higher exports, accumulation and income.

All this indicates a clear answer must be given to another very important question, which is that solutions for our big economic and other problems must be looked for in the Yugoslav sphere. It is only through unified action in the LCY and in society as a whole that we can efficiently combat and prevent bureaucratic and technocratic tendencies, and the domination of partial interests over common interests. We must develop consciousness in the LC and in society and must change the behavior primarily of the members and leaderships of the LC, to the effect that positions cannot be formed and realized only on the basis of the criteria prevailing "in one's own community," but along the line of promoting one's own community, but along the line of promoting one's own interests synthesized in a self-managing way within the framework of the overall strategy of implementing the interests of the workers class and the peoples and nationalities of Yugoslavia.

On the premise of an exclusive defense of one's partial interests without responsibility for self-managing constitution [konstituisanje] and implementation of common interests, and in the belief that it is possible to implement responsibility for the development of one's republic or province without responsibility for the development of Yugoslavia as a whole, bureaucratic and technocratic relations and positions have increased. Not only that on the one hand the conviction has been widely created that advocates of such premises are the true fighters for the development of their community, and on the other hand, at the same time, as a reaction to the situation in society provoked in this way, the belief has been spread that the main problem of our development is the existence of the republics and provinces.

This has also been made possible by the fact that the LCY in its ideopolitical activities has not helped to differentiate the republican and provincial bureaucracy from the constitutional function of the republics and provinces, nor has it clearly labeled this bureaucracy. It has been, and it is particularly now, necessary to defend the role of the republics and provinces -- developing and successfully implementing their functions in the system -- from the assaults of both republican and provincial bureaucracy and from centralist bureaucracy.

We must also resolutely continue and implement our lasting policy of equality of all the peoples and nationalities, the republics and provinces, as an essential property of the strategy of our overall development. In this connection, the LC must resolutely advocate a consistent implementation of its tenets regarding an accelerated development of economically underdeveloped republics and the fastest development of the Socialist Autonomous Province of Kosovo.

BOSNIA-HERCEGOVINA COUNCIL DISCUSSES SECURITY

[Excerpt] Sarajevo, 8 Jul (TANJUG) -- The Council of the Republic of Bosnia-Hercegovina discussed at today's session the current political-security situation in the Republic. According to the Information Office of the Bosnia-Hercegovina Presidency, an introductory report was submitted by Gojko Ubiparip, member of the Presidency. The report stressed that the political-security situation in the Republic was favorable, and that it should be further consolidated through a speedier solution, on the basis of a long-term program of economic stabilization, of the problems and contradictions in the republic's economic life. Efforts are currently being undertaken to accelerate the drawing up and adoption of necessary measures, and to mobilize all social factors in the action to overcome the problems now emerging.

The enemy, external and internal, is trying to take advantage of the complex economic situation by directing its activity toward undermining our constitutionally established order as well as our revolutionary achievements. The Republic is constantly reassessing the situation, and, accordingly, is taking measures that will have a positive effect on the consolidation of the overall security situation.

In the course of the discussion, support was given for the assessment of the political-security situation in Bosnia-Hercegovina, and a number of proposals were put forward to enhance it.

Mehmedalija Tufekdzic has suggested that in the struggle against the enemy, political action must be intensified and the public denunciation of nationalism should be implemented. [passage omitted]

RABOTNICHESKO DELO MARKS CPC ANNIVERSARY

AU081427 Sofia RABOTNICHESKO DELO in Bulgarian 1 Jul 86 p 5

[Mirolyub Todorov article: "The 65th Anniversary of the CPC"]

[Text] The establishment of the CPC on 1 July 1921 marked a new stage in the revolutionary movement which started in China under the influence of the ideas of the Great October Socialist Revolution, inspired by the ideas of Marxism among the progressive strata of the Chinese working people. The CPC emerged in the period of national revolution in China, which was distinguished by its democratic, antiimperialist and antifeudal character.

During the last 65 years, the CPC has covered a long and difficult path, a path of glorious victories and of difficulties.

Thanks to the revolutionary enthusiasm of the Chinese people, thanks to the selfless efforts of the communists-internationalists, thanks to the international assistance of the CPSU and of the Comintern during the hard times of revolution, the CPC succeeded in preserving its leading role and in leading the armed struggle to victory.

The defeat of Hitler's Germany and of militarist Japan, with the decisive role played by the USSR, was of exceptionally great importance. In the 1945-49 period, in liberated Manchuria, where the center of the Chinese revolution had been transferred, the necessary prerequisites were established for a successful conclusion of the struggle waged by the people's masses under the leadership of the CPC, and China proceeded along the path of socialist construction.

Following the proclamation of the PRC, the CPC faced the task of organizing the struggle to overcome the centuries-old semi-feudal backwardness of the country, the task of building up a new society. Under the CPC leadership, with the selfless and fraternal assistance of the USSR and of the other socialist countries, with the support of all progessive forces, the Chinese people successfully began to build up their new life.

The present tense international situation, created as a result of the intensified arms race, provoked by the United States and NATO, demands decisive actions. Specific measures are necessary for a transition to genuine disarmament and for the elimination of military threats, for the consolidation of the situation in the Asian-Pacific area, which is assuming an ever-growing political, economic, and military importance. This is the basic task of all communists, of all progressive and peaceloving forces on our planet. With its great economic potential, China, which is one of the 5 permanent members of the UN Security Council, has the opportunity of making its contribution to the preservation of peace, to preventing war.

The People's Republic of Bulgaria welcomes the process of expanding relations with the PRC, which has begun in recent years. Our country is in favor of mutually advantageous cooperation in the economic and scientific-technical sectors between our two countries, in favor of cultural and sports relations, which are creating a favorable atmosphere of further development of relations. From the rostrum of the 13th BCP Congress, Comrade Todor Zhivkov stated as follows in this respect: "The People's Republic of Bulgaria expresses its readiness to further develop our bilateral relations with the PRC. We are ready to cooperate with the PRC in the struggle for peace and socialism, against imperialism." This certainly is in accordance with the interests of both peoples, as well as in the interest of peace and security.

On the occasion of the 65th anniversary of the CPC, the Bulgarian communists and the Bulgarian people wish comprehensive successes to the Chinese people are confident that the PRC will contribute to the prevention of war and to the consolidation of peace throughout the world.

USSR TRADE UNION DELEGATION PAYS VISIT

Arrives 7 Jul

[Text] At the invitation of the Central Council of the Bulgarian Trade Unions on 7 July a delegation of the All-Union Central Council of the USSR Trade Unions led by Stepan Shaleyev, chairman of the Central Council, arrived in Sofia. The delegation will take part in events related to the 10 days of Bulgarian-USSR trade union cooperation.

At Sofia Airport the delegation was greeted by Petur Dyulgerov, chairman of the Central Council of the Bulgarian Trade Unions and candidate member of the BCP Central Committee Politburo, and Kostadin Andreev, secretary of the Central Council.

Talks Reported

[Text] Sofia, July 7 (BTA) -- Bulgaro-Soviet trade union ties are stable. The fraternal relation between the two countries' working people and labour organizations are in full harmony with the letter and the spirit of the line of further promotion of cooperation and increasing closeness between the Bulgarian and the Soviet peoples, implemented by the BCP and the CPSU. That was emphasised here today by Mr Petur Dyulgerov, president of the Central Council of the Bulgarian Trade Unions, by Mr Stepan Shalayev, chairman of the All-Union Central Council of the Soviet Trade Unions. The guest arrived here at the invitation of the Central Council of the Bulgarian Trade Unions for the days of Bulgaro-Soviet trade union cooperation, held here from July 1 through 10.

Mr Petur Dyulgerov and Mr Stepan Shalayev spoke in favour of a still better and more efficient contacts between the two organisations in all spheres of trade union work. An emphasis was held on the importance of close businesslike cooperation between individual workteams. A positive example in this connection is the current days devoted to interaction in techno-scientific progress.

Information was exchanged on the activities of the two trade union organisations in carrying out the tasks set by the 27th Congress of the CPSU and the 13th Congress of the BCP.

[Sofia Domestic Service in Bulgarian at 1730 GMT on 7 July 1986 adds the following information, after reporting the talks:

["The Soviet trade union guests, accompanied by Comrade Petur Dyulgerov, arrived in Blagoevgrad later in the day. They visited the cigar factory of the town and were briefed on the automation and on the highly productive technologies of the factory. At a meeting with the economic management, the party, and trade union leadership, Kiril Buchinski, director of the combine, briefed the delegation on the production tasks, on the work of the trade union organization, and on the implementation of the social program of the collective."]

SOFIA TALKS FOCUS ON YUGOSLAV ECONOMIC TIES

[Text] Sofia, 8 Jul (TANJUG) -- Kiril Zarev, deputy chairman of the Bulgarian Council of Ministers responsible for cooperation with CEMA countries and socialist countries; Belcho Belchev, minister of finance in the Bulgarian Government and cochairman of the Bulgarian side in the Yugoslav-Bulgarian mixed committee; and Ivan Delchev, deputy trade minister and deputy chairman of the Economic Council of the Bulgarian Council of Ministers, today held separate talks with Abdulah Mutapcic, president of the Bosnia-Hercegovina Chamber of Economy, and Vukota Visnjevac, president of the Republic's Committee for Energy and Industry.

The talks dealt with the ways of realizing Yugoslav-Bulgarian economic cooperation and the part which organizations of associated labor from Bosnia-Hercegovina could have in it. The two sides noted mutual commitment to the development of this cooperation, agreement on which was reached by the two countries' top representatives. They also agreed there is every opportunity for the volume of economic exchange to be realised within the planned $380 million this year, which is also the first year of the current medium-term period. It was stated that if all the jobs already concluded are realized the planned volume will be reached.

Both Kiril Zarev, deputy chairman of the Bulgarian Council of Ministers, and Belcho Belchev, minister of finance, placed particular emphasis on the need to realise the long-term forms of cooperation, especially in industrial cooperation, business and technical cooperation, joint investment in and work on large projects.

In the course of all these talks, attended in part by the Yugoslav ambassador in Bulgaria, Ilija Djukic, the need was particularly stressed for joint efforts in acquiring new technologies and for increased bilateral cooperation, particularly in energy industry, ferrous metallurgy, chemical industry, engineering industry, electrical industry, robotics and automation. Both sides expressed an interest in the development of and increased trade in consumer goods.

Within the framework of the discussion about Yugoslav-Bulgarian economic cooperation a positive assessment was made of the exhibition Bosnia-Hercegovina Economy on display to Bulgaria. A similar exhibition is being planned for next year in Sarajevo which will present the achievements and potentials of the Bulgarian economy.

CHNOUPEK LETTER TO UN HEAD ON SPACE ARMAMENT

AU081200 Prague RUDE PRAVO in Czech 4 Jul 86 pp 1, 7

[Text] New York (CTK) -- Bohuslav Chnoupek, CSSR minister of foreign affairs, sent Javier Perez de Cuellar, Un secretary general, a letter in which he explains the Czechoslovak stand on issues of averting feverish armament in outer space.

In the letter he states that, like most countries Czechoslovakia is deeply alarmed by the threat of an expansion of feverish armament into outer space, which would emphatically increase the danger of unleashing a nuclear war and would lead to an extensive destabilization on a worldwide scale. It would stimulate feverish armament further, and it would create a serious obstacle on the path of disarmament, security, economic development, and peaceful cooperation in the use of space.

Czechoslovakia judges that, in the nuclear and space age, security can be ensured for everybody through nuclear disarmament and by averting the militarization of space. For this reason it fully supports the line aimed at establishing a comprehensive system of international security, and the Soviet Union's program of 15 January 1986 on the total liquidation of nuclear arms by the end of the present millennium -- a program which organically combines steps toward gradual nuclear disarmament with measures which would prevent the launching of weapons into outer space.

Together with all Warsaw Pact states, the CSSR is prepared for broadest possible cooperation with other states in the interests of halting feverish armament on earth and averting it in space; this was once again affirmed in the communique on the Warsaw Pact Political Consultative Committee session on 10-11 June 1986 in Budapest.

The letter stresses that the CSSR proceeds from the thought that the trends toward space militarization can and must be halted. A significant partial step in the direction of this goal would be the conclusion of an international agreement on the inviolability of the earth's artificial satellites, and on banning the development, tests, and deployment of new antisatellite systems and simultaneously on the liquidation of the existing systems. We also attribute supreme significance to the halting of all nuclear explosions on the basis of mutuality; and speak in favor of consolidating the 1972 Soviet American treaty on limiting antimissile defense systems.

We see the main direction of the efforts made by all states to halt the militarization of space in a strict ban on the development, tests, and deployment of offensive space arms, accompained by efffective control, including the accessbility of appropriate laboratories.

In our opinion, the avert the militarization of space also means to establish the basic prerequisite for the peaceful utilization of outer space for the benefit of all peoples, on the foundations of a broad, open, and generally advantageous international cooperation without any discrimination whatsoever. We are convinced that the gradual program of common political actions for the peaceful utilization of outer space, contained in the message of Nikolay Ryzhkov, chairman of the USSR Council of Ministers, of 10 June 1986, material, political-legal, and organizational foundations for a "star peace" and we speak in favor of comprehensively discussing it in the United Nations.

We support the proposal to convene an international conference or a special UN General Assembly session on the issues of outer space by 1990 at the latest, or else to discuss these issues comprehensively in some other suitable forum.

We speak in favor of such a discussion leading to the foundation of a World Space Organization, to the elaboration of principles for a qualitatively new universal cooperation in the peaceful conquest of space, and to the adoption of a long-term common program of states' practical activity in this respect. The CSSR regards this program of "star peace" submitted by the Soviet Union as an extremely significant, realistically elaborated, and highly humane initiative, which corresponds to both the current and the future needs of ensuring the peaceful life and prosperity of all peoples living on our world. It is also prepared to contribute to the maximum toward realizing this program.

CHNOUPEK, HALEFOGLU DISCUSS MUTUAL RELATIONS

[Text] Prague (CTK) -- Bohuslav Chnoupek, CSSR foreign minister, and Vahit Halefoglu, Turkey's foreign minister, conducted negotiations on Friday [3 July] in the Cernin Palace in Prague. The topic of their talks, which were conducted in an atmosphere of constructive exchange of views and mutual understanding, was the assessment of the state of Czechoslovak-Turkish relations and of the possibilities of their further development, as well as the discussion of the topical issues of international life.

The ministers stated with gratification that the relations between the two countries are stable, viable, and unburdened by any problems. They are developing on good and firm foundations, on the principles of mutual advantage and peaceful coexistence of states with different social systems. The ministers stressed the significance of political dialogue and of personal contacts between the representatives of governments and parliaments. They affirmed their governments' interest in raising the mutual contacts in the political sphere to a yet higher level. They called the continuation of consultations between the leading staff of the two countres ministries of foreign affairs useful.

Ministers Bohuslav Chnoupek and Vahit Halefoglu also exchanged views on the possibilities of further intensifying economic cooperation, using all its modern forms, including that of establishing and expanding production cooperation and cooperation on third markets. The Czechoslovak side expressed its preparedness to realize further deliveries of investment equipment for the rubber and chemical industries, and particularly for the power industry. The two ministers also pointed out their bilateral interest in establishing cooperation in the agricultural sphere. They concurrently stated that the exchange of cultural values is a significant and lasting part of Czechoslovak-Turkish relations; it aids the acquisition of mutual knowledge about the rich traditions and the current level of cultural life in the two countries, and is a significant contribution to the development of international cooperation and to the rapproachement of the peoples. They called the program of cultural exchanges for the period 1986-88 a solid foundation of cultural contacts. The two ministers also assessed the paths of developing mutual cooperation in mass communications media.

Ministers Bohuslav Chnoupek and Vahit Halefoglu also exchanged views on the main issues on which the two countries' attention is focused. They concurrently stressed that, regardless of Czechoslovakia and Turkey belonging to different military-political alliances, their people are linked by the effort to achieve a turn from a policy of confrontation and armament to a policy aimed at averting the danger of a nuclear war and at preserving peace, international security, and disarmament.Czechoslovakia's minister of foreign affairs briefed his Turkish guest on the main tasks of the CSSR's foreign policy and called the active and intensive support for the USSR's peace program -- aimed at building a comprehensive system of international security and calling for specific steps in the military, political, economic, and humanitarian spheres -- the core of this policy. [paragraph continues]

He stressed that the realization of this system would quite certainly yield the so greatly desirable turn in international relations already in the very first, initial stage. Minister Bohuslav Chnoupek also expressed the opinion held by the Czechoslovak Government that, were the other side also seriously to react to the series of significant initiative steps recently undertaken by the USSR -- from the specific plan for the liquidation of nuclear arms and the moratorium on nuclear explosions up to the proposals on Soviet-American Geneva negotiations of 11 June 1986 -- this would contribute toward alleviating and accelerating this turn.

The ministers briefed each other on the stands taken by their governments on the problems of European security and cooperation in the spirit of the Final Act of the Helsinki Conference. They concurrently spoke in favor of reviving, consolidating, and further developing it in the sphere of military detente. In this connection the Czechoslovak side stressed the appeal launched by the Budapest session of the Political Consultative Committee, in which the Warsaw Pact member-states propose to the NATO member-states and to all European countries a radical reduction of all components of ground troops and conventional armaments, as well as of nuclear operational-tactical equipment with a range of up to 1000 km.

The two ministers also appraised the suggestions to be dealt with as the follow-up Vienna meeting in the interests of normalizing the political atmosphere in Eurpoe. They exchanged opinions on the course of the Stockholm conference to date, and spoke in favor of a successful culmination of its first phase.

Ministers Bohuslav Chnoupek and Vahit Halefoglu also exchanged views on the topical problems connected with developments in hotbeds of tension and with conflicts. They concurrently spoke in favor of a peaceful and just settlement of the Mideast situation, and affirmed the necessity of resolving the Palestinian issue as the core of the problem. They expounded their governments' stands on the Cyprus issue and spoke concurrently in favor of an immediate conclusion of the Iranian-Iraqi War.

DPRK PARTY DELEGATION RECEIVED BY HAMAN

[Text] Prague -- Josef Haman, CPCZ Central Committee Presidium candidate member and secretary, received on Monday [30 June] the delegation of the Central Committee of the Workers Party of Korea (WPK), led by Pak Song-bang [name as published], first deputy head of the WPK Central Committee Department of Engineering Industry, at the conclusion of the delegation's study visit to the CSSR. The Korean guests have been acquainting themselves in our country with the experience acquired in party work while ensuring the tasks of the 17th CPCZ Congress in the sphere of nuclear energetics.

During their comradely talk they also exchanged experiences in the activity of party agencies acquired in ensuring the development of the fuel and power complex. They also devoted attention to the issues of rationalizing the consumption of fuels and energy.

The reception was attended by Karel Erbes, head of the CPCZ Central Committee Department. Kim Kwang-sop, DPRK ambassador to the CSSR, was also present on the occasion.

BILAK HOSTS LUNCHEON FOR ZAMBIAN DELEGATION

LD091455 Prague Domestic Service in Czech and Slovak 1400 GMT 9 Jul 86

[Text] Vasil Bilak, Presidium member and secretary of the CPCZ Central Committee, gave a festive luncheon in Prague today in honor of the delegation of the United National Independence Party [UNIP] of Zambia, headed by its Secretary-General, Alexander Grey Zulu. Also taking part on the Czechoslovak side were Milos Jakes, Presidium member and secretary of the party's Central Committee; Jan Fojtik, candidate presidium member and secretary of the party's Central Committee; Mikulas Benk, secretary of the party's Central Committee; and other representatives. On the Zambian side those present included the members of the Zambian entourage.

In his address, Comrade Vasil Bilak praised the satisfactory relations between the CPCZ and the UNIP and between the two states as well as the unity of views on the main questions of international development.

He said that our people deeply sympathize with the effort of Zambia to protect the true sovereignty and independence of the country, while respecting the fact that it stands univocally on the side of progress and peace on the African Continent and in the world, struggling against apartheid and neocolonialism.

Alexander Grey Zulu conveyed the cordial and friendly greetings of President of Zambia Kenneth Kaunda as well as all the Zambian people and expressed the conviction that the so far successful political economic and cultural contacts can be further developed for the benefit of the two countries. He went on to condemn the aggressive policy of the Republic of South Africa, which prevents free development in this part of the world, and highly praised the peace initiatives of the USSR and the other socialist states aimed at halting the arms race and disarmament.

Alistair Hunter, head of the British delegation, was received by Bohumil Urban, CSSR minister of foreign trade; and by Bedrich Culik, CSSR's first deputy minister of general engineering.

LENART NOTES SHORTCOMINGS IN SPEECH TO CPSL CC

AU091328 Bratislava PRAVDA In Slovak 4 Jul 86 p 3

["For a Creative Approach, High Degree of Organization and Discipline; Excerpt from Comrade Jozef Lenart's Speech at the Session of the CPSL Central Committee on 26 June 1986"]

[Excerpts] In addition to assessing the results of the elections to representative bodies, the CPCZ Central Committee devoted itself at its third session to issues pertaining to raising the party's action capability, and in this connection to the further development and improvement of the membership base. It assessed the results achieved since the 16th CPCZ Congress, and in the spirit of the line of the 17th Congress it adopted a resolution aimed at the further growth and improvement of membership ranks. [passage omitted]

We value the responsible approach of the party's regional and district committees to assimilating and elaborating the resolutions of the 17th Congress. This approach is characterized by striving for pragmatism, adopting a critical attitude toward shortcomings, and exposing the causes of failures and searching for solutions to improve the situation. [passage omitted]

The party's district committees are searching for more effective ways of achieving a unification of forces and coordination procedures in the decisive directions of fulfilling the socioeconomic program. [passage omitted] However, despite certain positive achievements, one cannot but see that this endeavor has thus far not yielded the desired results. One of the reasons for this is the fact that a part of the functionaries and ranking personnel are marked by unwarranted skepticism about our possibilities. There are quite a few instances where one pays lip service to new approaches, but in practice things are done the old way. And it frequently happens that in striving for new approaches one searches far too long, one drags one's feet far too long. [passage omitted]

The results up to now in fulfilling the tasks of the first year of the Eighth 5-Year Plan show that although we have, on the whole, been fulfilling the volume indicators, we have been lagging behind the requirements of the 17th Congress in realizing the quality indicators. We are not progressing fast enough regarding the growth of production effectiveness, the reduction of costs and of material and energy consumption, and the growth of labor productivity, a matter that has a negative influence on the overall creation of profits. The profitability of the economy managed by the Government of the Slovak Socialist Republic [SSR] is below the planned targets. [passage omitted]

In foreign trade the desirable turn has also not occurred; in the first 5 months the proportion of the annual tasks in exports to the nonsocialist states has not been achieved. We also cannot be satisfied with the effectiveness of foreign trade as expressed by the profit margin. This is evidence of the slow growth of the technical-economic and innovative standards of the majority of products. [passage omitted] We also cannot reconcile ourselves to the fact that in the first 5 months of the year the plan of adjusted value added in the centrally planned industry of the SSR was underfulfilled by 0.7 percent. In particular, the chemical and light industries, the wood-processing industry, and engineering are to blame for this. A total of 125 enterprises are not fulfilling their planned tasks, with the shortfall amounting to more than Kcs800 million. The imblance in the fulfillment of the plan continues, and this causes grave difficulties in supplier-user relations. This makes the conditions for the fulfillment of the annual tasks difficult.

In this respect the situation in capital investment is also unsatisfactory, above all in the vital projects of the state plan. There are lags in the work on projects such as the nuclear power plant in Mochovce, the Povazske Engineering Works in Banska Bystrica, the Bratislava Automobile Works, and on other projects. [passage omitted]

The 17th CPCZ Congress devoted exceptional attention to the issues connected with the party's activity, to raising its action capability, and to enhancing its leading role in society. [passage omitted]

We note with satisfaction that since the 14th CPCZ Congress, the CPSL's membership base has almost doubled. Members and candidate members enrolled after 1971 constitute more than half of the membership base. The party's workers core has been significantly strengthened. It amounts to more than 43 percent, and 64 percent of the accepted candidate members are workers. In the party ranks more than one-third are young people; the average age of members and candidate members is around 43 years.

At the same time, however, the number of elderly comrades over 55 has increased; they constitute almost a fourth of the membership base. [passage omitted]

Since the 14th Congress the proportion of women organized in the party has increased from 13.7 percent to 22.1 percent.

The party's international character has been strengthened. Its composition in Slovakia almost corresponds to the population's nationalities composition.

Today, the CPSL has more than 436,000 members and candidate members, which means that every eighth inhabitant over the age of 18 is a party member. [passage omitted]

We are facing the tasks of achieving a condition where truly all communists see in the party statutes the fundamental law of party life, to which they must unflinchingly adhere. [passage omitted]

The statutes demand that we Communists be a model when it comes to safeguarding socialist property; observing socialist legality and discipline; consistently fighting for a just, differentiated remuneration; combating egalitarianism, speculation, and unearned incomes; and strengthening good comradely relations in collectives and among invididuals. And what does life reveal?

Numerous letters reaching the CPSL Central Committee and other party agencies show that some Communists' conduct is at variance with the statutes: They look at their own ways without self-criticism; they suffer from megalomania; have big-shot manners; misuse their positions; and there are frequent cases where they violate laws and engage in criminal activity.

Facts show that in the past 5 years 1,426 party members were expelled from the party for criminal activity, theft of socialist property, drunkenness, rowdyism, and other transgressions.

Party agencies and organizations must oppose such practices in the spirit of the statutes and forestall them by means of a critical and demanding atmosphere. The struggle for the party's quality must be connected with the struggle for its purity. [passage omitted]

HORST DOHLUS RECEIVES PCI REPRESENTATIVE

[Text] Berlin (ADN) -- On Friday [4 July] Horst Dohlus, Politburo member and secretary of the SED Central Committee, received a delegation of the Italian Communist Party [PCI] headed by Aldo Amati, Central Committee member and secretary of the Marches Province PCI. During its stay in the GDR the delegation acquainted itself with experiences of the SED in implementing the 11th Congress resolutions, in particular in utilizing scientific-technological progress under the conditions of socialism.

Horst Dohlus reported on the resolutions of the 11th Congress to further shape the developed socialist society in the GDR. He stated that the tested course of the main tasks in the unity of economic and social policy has found the broad approval of the working people and has initiated new creative initiatives. The close combination of the achievements of the scientific-technological revolution with the advantages of socialism and the comprehensive application of top technologies are to the benefit of the people. The SED's work concentrates on man, the development of his creative capacities and the active development of all social processes through the working people.

In this connection Horst Dohlus stressed the growth role of the party of the workers class and the high responsibility of every communist. The universal strengthening of socialism in the GDR is a decisive contribution to safeguarding peace and averting the danger of a nuclear war.

The head of the PCI delegation expressed appreciation for the significant economic and social successes of the GDR. He stressed the interest of the Italian communists in studying the experiences of the SED and praised the active peace policy of the GDR. He reported on the efforts of the PCI to implement the resolutions of the 17th Party Congress.

The partners in the talk reaffirmed the joint interests of the SED and PCI in deepening the trustful cooperation between both parties.

The meeting was attended by Heinz Mirtschin, SED Central Committee member and head of the Central Committee department for party organs.

HONECKER GREETS PEOPLE'S POLICE ON ANNIVERSARY

AU081451 East Berlin NEUES DEUTSCHLAND in German 1 Jul 86 pp 1-2

[Message From Erich Honecker, SED Central Committee general secretary, to the German People's Police]

[Text] Comrades sergeants, noncommissioned officers, officers, and generals!

Comrades civilian employees and voluntary helpers of the German People's Police!

On the occasion of the 41st anniversary of the German People's Police, the SED Central Committee conveys cordial congratulations.

You are honorably fulfilling the class assignment reaffirmed by the 11th SED Congress to protect the socialist order and the peaceful life of the citizens. Together with the citizens and in comradely cooperation with the other protection and security organs, you guarantee the public order and security, you work to implement law and order everywhere. With a high awareness of responsibility, you are facing the new tasks decided by the 11th Congress.

The SED Central Committee expresses thanks and recognition to all members of the German People's Police and the other organs of Ministry of Interior, the civilian employees, voluntary helpers of the People's Police, and other honorary staff members for their conscientious service and their high readiness for performance.

The qualitatively new phase in shaping the developed socialist society in the GDR, introduced with the resolutions of the 11th SED congress also sets higher yardsticks for the work of the Ministry of Interior and its organs. The efficiency linked with the working people, of the police work at all offices and in all collectives is of great significance. It is an important prerequisite for protecting the creative work of the people, their dignity, freedom, and social safety, and thus developing the relationship of trust between the people and their police in an even closer way.

Respectful relations between the superior and the people entrusted to them, convincing political-ideological work and constant care for good service, working, and living conditions promote the initiatives of the comrades.

We are certain that the members of the German People's Police and the other organs of the Ministry of Interior, as well as the honorary staff members, will use all their strength to guarantee the protection of our worker-peasant power at any time.

The SED Central Committee wishes you every success, health, and creative vigor for that.

With socialist greetings

SED Central Committee

E. Honecker

General Secretary

The council of Ministers has also conveyed congratulations.

ADN. HONECKER, CARLSSON DINNER TOASTS REPORTED

LD261119 East Berlin NEUES DEUTSCHLAND in German 26 Jun 86 p 3

[Report on speeches given by Erich Honecker, general secretary of the SED Central Committee and GDR State Council chairman, and Swedish Prime Minister Ingvar Carlsson at a 25 June Stockholm dinner given by Carlsson in honor of Honecker]: "For a Europe of Trust and Good-Neighborliness"

[Text] Dear Mr Prime Minister, ladies and gentlemen, dear friends:

Allow me, Mr Prime Minister, to once again thank you very cordially for the invitation to visit the Kingdom of Sweden. I am much obliged to you for the friendly reception and your kind words at the welcome.

We spoke together today for some time. Among the numerous topics we dealt with, the question of securing peace understandably took up a good deal of time. There was agreement in affirming that in today's dangerous world the peaceful coexistence of states and peoples must have priority.

If peace is to be presented so that mankind survives, political and philosophical differences in international relations must move into the background. In a word, there is no alternative to the policy of peaceful coexistence. It is the essential prerequisite for stability, continuity and predictability in international politics. The GDR, like Sweden, acts according to this principle; we confirmed this in our exchange of views. With its policy of nonalignment, Sweden is a factor recognized as important in East and West for trust-building and security in Europe.

Mr Prime Minister, you have firmly stressed that Sweden will continue to do justice to its responsibility for preserving a peaceful world. I would like to say once again that the GDR, too, will always act in this spirit. Our people wish nothing greater than the preservation and the securing of peace. This striving is the basis of the 11th SED Congress decisions directed at economic dynamism and the welfare of the people, aims which can only be achieved in peace.

In recent history the name of your capital Stockholm is closely linked with significant historic activities in the struggle for peace, and to prevent a third world war. On 19 March 1950 the historic 'Stockholm Appeal' was adopted here. By its signing over 36 years ago, millions of people of all countries and continents called for an absolute ban on nuclear weapons as a weapon of horror and mass destruction. It also declared that the government that is the first to use the nuclear weapon against any country commits a crime against humanity. These warning and admonishing words are more topical than ever in today's world, which is threatened by the danger of a nuclear catastrophe of an unimaginable extent. But more than ever before the extent of this danger unites our peoples and all peace-loving forces in the struggle for the fate of the world and of mankind. This was also clear in our exchange of views.

At their Budapest meeting a few weeks ago the Warsaw Pact states confirmed their goal of a world without war and without weapons, and put forward further proposals to this end. It is, so to speak, a flawless disarmament program. It encompasses all weapon types, whether nuclear or conventional, and it includes the necessary control measures. The GDR sees in this program a solid basis for the search for mutually acceptable solutions. The greatest danger, which threatens all peoples without exception, stems from nuclear weapons. For this reason an end to nuclear tests -- so far unilaterally practiced by the Soviet Union -- by all states possessing nuclear weapons, is a priority.

The striving for a comprehensive nuclear test ban is part of Olof Palme's political legacy. Together with the heads of state and government of India, Mexico, Tanzania, Greece and Argentina, he devoted his last international work to it. The work continued by you, Mr Prime Minister, in the framework of the six-state initiative meets with sympathy and strong support in the GDR.

An old Swedish proverb says: "In war everyone suffers a defeat, even the winner." But in a nuclear war there would be neither winners nor losers, it would be the self-destruction of mankind. Precisely in Europe, where more weapons have been amassed than anywhere else in the world, the responsibility of statesmen and politicians is all the higher. It must be our concern as Europeans to clear weapons from this continent, and not to acquire new ones, be they nuclear, chemical or other. The efforts of the GDR and Sweden to bring about the creation of nuclear weapons-free zones are in line with this. We regard the proposal for a nuclear weapons-free zone in the north of Europe, promoted by Sweden, as realistic and more topical than ever. The GDR works actively to bring about a start to negotiations on the realization of the Swedish proposal for the creation of a corridor free of theater nuclear weapons in Europe along the dividing line between the two alliances.

A noticeable reduction in military confrontation in Europe would be brought about by a reduction in the armed forces and conventional arms, as proposed by the Warsaw Pact states to NATO states and all European countries in their appeal of 11 June 1986. It would increase security for all our peoples and reduce the arms burden, if, at the start of the nineties, from the Atlantic to the Urals, the armed forces facing one another were reduced by over a million.

The GDR attaches great importance to the Conference on Security and Confidence-Building Measures, so attentively organized by Sweden. We will continue to do everything possible to bring about a viable compromise which is beneficial for all sides. We have repeatedly made clear our fundamental interest in an agreement. What is now needed is the political will on the part of all negotiating partners to bring about a first and also possible settlement about new measures to create trust and mutual security.

With a view to the forthcoming CSCE follow-up meeting in Vienna, I would like to stress that the GDR consistently supports the continuation of this process through the further realization of the Helsinki Final Act. Europe requires the revival and the consolidation of detente. Only in this way is it possible to reliably maintain the security of all European states and peoples, and to overcome the division of the continent. It is necessary to create through active efforts an atmosphere of friendly cooperation, trust, and good-neighborliness throughout Europe.

Mr Prime Minister, the GDR's relations with the Kingdom of Sweden are marked by the friendly feelings our people have for the Swedish people. Our relations are free from contentious questions. They breathe the spirit of good-neighborliness and are developing dynamically on a solid basis.

The intensive political dialogue for peace and disarmament, to which both states have devoted themselves, and the beneficial development of diverse cooperation go hand in hand, and stimulate one another. Personal talks promote mutual understanding and mutual respect. In the relations between our two countries, the extensive and increasingly close cooperation in the economic field occupies an important place.

This is proved by the positive development in trade in recent years. The program due to be signed on the development of trade and economic relations between the GDR and Sweden will be an important international basis for the further shaping of economic cooperation. It is now necessary for the possibilities thus created to be used quickly and purposefully by the concerns and firms of the two countries to mutual advantage. The GDR will continue to do everything to promote the constant and long-term stable development of trade and economic relations with Sweden.

The results of our discussions will provide a new impetus to the relations between the GDR and the Kingdom of Sweden, and give them good and secure prospects. It is my belief that these exemplary relations of peaceful coexistence will contribute effectively toward turning Europe into a continent of peace and security.

I would like to stress with satisfaction in this connection that in our relations the cultural, scientific and humanist traditions and values, which have come about in the long history of our two peoples, and also in joint work, are being continued and cultivated. The promotion of them furthers understanding and friendship between our peoples, who are linked by the Baltic.

Mr Prime Minister, I would like to thank you sincerely for the pleasant and trusting atmosphere in which our exchange of views took place. It was prevaded by concern about the fate of mankind and marked by the desire to make a contribution to solving the vital question for mankind, the prevention of a nuclear catastrophe and securing a lasting peace, in line with the opportunities open to us and the requirements of our time.

With these considerations, Mr Prime Minister, I raise my glass to

Peace and the good-neighborliness of our peoples,

The well-being of the Swedish people,

Your personal well-being, Mr Prime Miniser, and to the well-being of all those present.

In his toast, Swedish Prime Minister Ingvar Carlsson warmly welcomed Erich Honecker and his accompanying delegation. He continued:

There are many things which unite our peoples. We are neighboring countries bordering on the Baltic Sea. Our languages have the same roots. We both belong to the European cultural area and our peoples have a shared historical past which extends over several centuries.

Today our peoples are united in their longing for lasting peace. This wish for peace has found eloquent expression in the Helsinki Final Act. The principles set out in it for interstate relations are especially important in a period which has been marked by distrust and increasing differences.

There are also important differences between the GDR and Sweden.

The GDR and Sweden have chosen different paths for the development of society and for security policy. However, in our view, these differences do not represent obstacles for friendship, respect and cooperation. On the contrary, they are a stimulus and an important motive for expanded contacts between our peoples and governments.

In this connection I would also like to express our great respect for the policy of dialogue and cooperation which the GDR is pursuing under your leadership in its relations with other countries. This policy represents an important contribution to stability in Central Europe, and thus promotes efforts to reach detente between East and West in the long term. These efforts are also aided by the positive commitment which characterizes GDR policy in the sphere of international disarmament.

Swedish policy too is aimed at the promotion of peace and disarmament. The policy of neutrality, which rests on a strong national defense, contributes to calm and stability in Northern Europe. Our foreign policy also has the aim of maintaining a dialogue between East and West, and achieving disarmament and a lessening of differences between the leading superpowers.

The CSCE in Europe has given the European states a unique opportunity to discuss, on an equal basis, questions of security and contacts over and above bloc borders. In our view the CSCE process offers the best path for continued dialogue on Europe's future. Last year, however, produced certain setbacks in various sectors. It is therefore important that the Stockholm conference on confidence-building measures should be brought to a successful conclusion.

In the latter half of this year it will then be an important task of the follow-up conference in Vienna to attempt to maintain and inject vitality into the CSCE process. We hope for progress in all areas included in the CSCE documents; security, economic cooperation, as well as human rights and contacts.

Mr State Council Chairman, there are no significant problems in the relations between our countries. Our relations are good, stable and friendly.

Our contacts have recently been intensified, and our cooperation has been expanded and deepened in many spheres. Cooperation now incorporates the most varied spheres in which personal contacts have been established, including at a high level.

Your visit to our country at this time represents a highpoint in the course of these increasingly intensive relations between the GDR and Sweden. Before the visit we had an opportunity on both sides to take stock of the possibilities for cooperation in many areas.

Trade between our two countries is deeply rooted in history. Here, geographical proximity and other factors of nature have had a favorable effect on development. We see on both sides promising prospects for an expansion of economic trade. An expression of this is the program for the development of trade and economic relations between Sweden and the GDR which will be signed during this visit. We hope that this program will serve as a spur, and aid to strengthened cooperation to mutual use and benefit.

Environmental protection is a further obvious area of cooperation between two neighboring countries such as Sweden and the GDR. As for the protection of the marine environment of the Baltic region, great and important tasks await to be solved. Over the past few years, several signs of increasingly serious damage to the Baltic Sea have emerged.

On the Swedish side we intend to strengthen our action to remedy this damage and to try to prevent fresh damage. A challenge to all littoral states exists here. The same applies not least to work on improving safety in nuclear power accidents, both as far as information and help is concerned.

Cultural exchange plays an important role in spreading knowledge and promoting understanding between states. The foundations of the interest in expanding cultural exchanges with the GDR are, as far as we are concerned, in many respects the rich historical memories which link our two countries and peoples. The exhibition of art treasures from the noth of the GDR, now being held in Stockholm, is an eloquent testimony to these traditional ties.

Mr State Council Chairman, I have attempted very briefly to shed light on our present-day mutual relations. It is, gratifyingly, a very positive picture which emerges. I hope, and am at the same time firmly convinced, that the future development of relations between Sweden and the GDR will continue to run a similarly propitious course. Allow me, in this hope, to propose a toast to the continued friendship and cooperation between Sweden and the GDR to peace and process for our two peoples, and to your personal well-being, Mr State Council Chairman.

HONECKER GREETS KULIKOV ON 65TH BIRTHDAY

[Text] Erich Honecker, SED Central Committee general secretary and GDR State Council chairman, has sent the following greetings message to Marshal of the Soviet Union Viktor Georgiyevich Kulikov, commander in chief of the Joint Armed Forces of the Warsaw Pact nations:

Dear Comrade Kulikov!

On behalf of the SED Central Committee, the State Council, and the National Defense Council of the GDR, as well as on my own behalf, I convey to you most cordial congratulations on your 65th birthday.

Your day of honor today is for us an occasion to express to you the sincere thanks of the GDR party and state leadership for your great personal share in the successful development of the Warsaw Pact military organization. You have made a decisive contribution to making it a reliable bulwark for the protection of the peaceful construction work in the countries of the socialist community and for the safeguarding of world peace. As a communist and internationalist the universal deepening of the inseparable ties of friendship and cooperation between our parties, states, peoples, and armies has always been a matter close to your heart.

We wholeheartedly wish you, dear Comrade Viktor Georgiyevich, much success and creative vigor in your responsible work for peace and to strengthen socialism as well as the best of health and personal well-being.

With socialist greetings

[Signed] E. Honecker

SED Central Committee general secretary and GDR State Council chairman.

W. BERLINER SENTENCED FOR 'SUBVERSIVE CRIMES'

[Text] Berlin (ADN) -- on 4 July 1986 the Berlin city court sentenced the Berlin (West) resident Uwe Langenbach who had participated in organizing subversive crimes against the GDR as a courier of the Kraemer agency of the criminal Lampl association that is known to the court. Kraemer is a criminal who is dealing with drugs in West Berlin circles and who committed an insurance fraud with Langenbach. Personally instructed by Kraemer, he abused the generous entry and visitors' regulations for the GDR capital.

DAILY REJECTS WESTERN REPORTS ON SUBWAY INCIDENT

["The Horror Stories of Mr Landowski"]

[Text] Berlin (ADN) -- A new story coming from the dirty poison kitchen of Mr Klaus Landowski, general secretary of the West Berlin CDU, is at present being spread by some West German and West Berlin mass media. With a considerable lag in time, a subway train of empty passenger cars that caught fire on 7 May 1986 is to be turned into a western. As was published then, it was on its way through the subway overpass tunnel between Klosterstrasse and Alexanderplatz, a route which has no connection at all to West Berlin. Of course in the western Colt revolvers and executions, just like in the time of Al Capone, must not be left out. The nice Mr Landowski would do better to resign from his function in the West Berlin CDU and start to write westerns. For his very "human actions" he lets the cat out of the bag, by stating on Tuesday [1 July], according to DPA, thet one must not "play down" these events "because of a wrongly understood policy of detente." This speaks for itself. Any denials are superfluous. The best thing would be to put the one who makes up such horror stories into the madhouse.

KARPATI ISSUES SPEECH AT NATIONAL ASSEMBLY

AU070601 Budapest MAGYAR HIRLAP in Hungarian 27 June 86 pp 5-6

[Speech given by Colonel General Ferenc Karpati, defense minister, at the National Assembly session in Budapest on 26 June: "Ferenc Karpati's Address"]

[Text] "I fulfill my honorable task when, on behalf of the government, I report on the implementation of the defense act created and adopted 10 years ago and on its major experiences" -- the minister said in his introduction. "A decade provides an adequate basis for drawing well-founded conclusions even concerning a state and public task of such great importance. I would like to stress that there is no special reason for placing the issue on the agenda today. It is well-known, however, that for some time now we have been constantly living under international conditions that have required and still require our state to pay special attention to the development of defense and to its maintenance at an adequate level.

"In passing the Defense Act, the National Assembly was led by the desire to bring the defense responsibilities of the state bodies, the economic and public organizations, and the citizens into harmony both with the achievements of the social-economic development and the requirements of the changes in the concepts of warfare. The National Defense Law sought to create an adequate legal basis for our country to assure the joint and efficient activity of the political, economic, and intellectual forces aimed at defending our fatherland's sovereignty and its socialist achievements by uniting these forces, and to ensure that, in accordance with our strength and possibilities, we contribute to the defense capacity of the socialist coummunity, which safeguards the peace and security of mankind.

"Now, considering the experiences of the past decade, we can state with satisfaction that the defense law serves well the cause of the defense of the fatherland in all respects and assures a high level and efficiency in our defense capacity. In this period, it has become even more accepted in our entire society that the defense of the fatherland is the affair and responsibility of the entire nation. It has been proven that our national and international obligations connected with the defense of the fatherland are based on firm pillars. Today the main source for our ability to report on a considerable development of our national defense and on its adequate level is the fact that the construction of the socialist society in our country is being carried out through the collaboration of the widest strata of our people and through the constant strengthening of our national unity. Our achievements in the industry, agriculture, transportation, telecommunications, and last but not least, in the area of public education, guarantee the conditions for our national defense capacity.

"The fact that the law has beem modified only once in the past decade -- to reduce the duration of the compulsory military service from 24 to 18 months, to everyone's satisfaction -- also shows its regulations are durable and that they can be carried out.

"In the meantime, we have carried out the corrections required to make the law more clear-cut and to ensure the better implementation of its requirements through regulations that assure the implementation of the law.

"The defense management system has been established and strengthened in accordance with the regulations of the defense law and it is functioning well from government organizations to local councils.

"The National Assembly and its Defense Committee have regularly and genuinely dealt with the issues of the implementation of the defense law in the past years. In the course of the discussions on the 5-year plan law and the annual budget plans, the National Assembly determined the material-financial provisions available for national defense.

We Guarantee the Interests of National Defense

"Last year, the National Assembly discussed important issues like the strengthening of our country's participation in our joint defense alliance, the Warsaw Pact.

"There have been 26 sessions of the Defense Committee of the National Assembly in the past 10 years where the Ministry of Defense and the Ministry of Interior reported annually on achieved results, on further tasks, the utilization of the budget, and on development and maintenance issues. The system of National Defense Committee sessions held outside its headquarters has stood the test as it efficiently contributes to the on-the-spot evaluation of the situation of preparation and training, the extensiveness of the construction and investment activity, and of the efficiency of the activity aimed at helping the people's economy.

"Taking realistic demands into consideration, the National Assembly has regularly taken a stand in favor of guaranteeing every aspect of the Army's training and development, as well as of the defense budget and defense readiness. The National Assembly has recently adopted measures aimed at ensuring defense interests in the area of production also amidst the further development of the system of economic management.

"The Defense Committee of the National Assembly has consistently coordinated the activity of ministries and supreme authorities in the implementation of the stipulations of the defense law and of the decisions of the Council of Ministers. The activity of the committee has been an important contribution in solving the tasks connected with national defense.

"On the basis of the stipulations of the law, considerable progress has taken place in all areas of the activity of the state administration in working out the genuine tasks of the issues connected with defense, in determining the spheres of authority, and in coordinating the activity in practice.

"The municipal and county defense committees, as well as the organs of the county and local councils play an important role in the uniform system of management. They play an outstanding role in the defense preparation of the population, the institutions and the economic units, in solving the tasks of civil defense, in organizing the preliminary defense training, in precisely keeping in evidence the population liable to military service, in qualifying them from the point of view of their health, and in the state administration activity connected with national defense.

"The adequate operation of the mechanism of management requires skill and adequate training. The central, county, and town leaders are successfully and well trained in the military knowledge necessary for the implementation of the tasks at the Miklos Zrinyi Military Academy.

"This well-organized system of management, which covers everything, has today become indispensable in the defense preparation of the country, a preparation that the current concepts of warfare make inevitable. Therefore, we must devote adequate attention to this in the future too, asserting in this way the demand citing national defense as the affair of the entire nation, of the entire society."

Then, Ferenc Karpati spoke about the state, preparation, and activity of the Armed Forces and troops.

"As part of the evaluation of our society's reality, an appreciative formulation was heard at the 13th MSZMP Congress last year: Closely cooperating with each other and enjoying the support of our people, the Armed Forces and troops of the Hungarian People's Republic, the People's Army, the border-guards, the police, the workers' militia, and the other armed units successfully contribute to safeguarding peace and ensuring our internal order.'

"This concise formulation is based on the careful consideration and analysis of numerous factors. I can report to the esteemed National Assembly that there is good-minded and intimate cooperation between our Armed Forces and troops and there is a coordinated and appropriate division of labor in their activity, This includes the issues of development and training and covers various tasks to be solved jointly such as, the defense of the country's borders, the tasks of rear and civil defense, as well as police activity when necessary. The mutual confidence and respect toward each other increase our strength and often also help in solving our problems."

Safeguarding and Defending Peace

Then, the minister stated that the defense policy of our socialist state is based on firm principles, the content of which is to protect our country's independence, and safeguard its socialist achievements and peace. The development and training of the Hungarian People's Army and of the border guards is also based on these principles. We are carrying out both our foreign and defense policy in harmony with the fraternal socialist countries gathered in the Warsaw Pact, and we are coordinating our activity.

"Over the past decade, we have continued to modernize our People's Army and to assure its qualitative development. As a result of the planned and resolute work, our Army today possesses modern weapons and military techniques. Our professional staff and the training of the commanding staff are of a high level and fulfill their vocation with great skill. As a result of their self-sacrificing work, the training, preparation, and combat readiness are on an adequate level.

"Our People's Army is an recognized and appreciated member of the Joint Armed Forces of the Warsaw Pact. In evaluating our Army, we regard its moral and political unity, its devotion to our country and our socialist social order, and its unity with the people as determining factors. All these derive from the socialist character of our Army and we will always place the assertion of this character and the promotion of this character in first place among our tasks.

"It also derives from the nature of our Army that in addition to he strictly military tasks, our working people can always count on the responsibility of our soldiers and the work of their hands too if the prosperity of the country and of society require it. As in the past, we continue to regard it as a natural responsibility both in the present and in the future to come to the aid of the population in avoiding natural diasters, in the course of railway or other catastrophies, and in all cases when there is need for the organized strength and quick contribution of the Army.

"In addition to this, our People's Army also takes part in carrying out the tasks of construction. The construction and engineering corps are taking part in the implementation of outstandingly large investments with some fifty enterprises. [paragraph continues]

The reconstruction of the railway and public road networks, the development of telecommunicatins of the Paks Nuclear Power Station, and the construction of Budapest residential districts, the subway system, the Ferihegy II Airport terminal, and health institutions are being carried out with their cooperation. The building solider is part of our social reality. While he contributes to the prosperity of the country, he also prepares fo this particular military tasks. Other troops help with the agricultural work in some seasons and some cases, on the basis of the agreement signed with the farms and enterprises. During the peak time of agricultural activities, for example at harvesting time, all the combine drivers from among the soliders take part in the harvesting and during the autumn agricultural season several thousand soldiers and numerous vehicles of the Army work in the fields.

The Educational Activity of Our Army

"It is also our honorble duty to continue the socialist education of the growing young generation during military service. During their military service, we educate the young people in love for their country, devotion to the people, conscious acceptance of order and discipline, and for the development of their socialist human values. As a result, the political commitment of youth toward our socialist goals becomes stronger and their responsibility and willingness to act for the socialist society and for the cause of peace increases. We are striving to make the majority of discharged soldiers able to think in terms of the people, of the nation.

"The KISZ, whose operational conditions and sphere of authority are also ensured in the Army, plays an important role in the education of young soldiers. We also endeavor to strengthen the increasing influence of the KISZ organizations by advancing their activity of interest representation.

"The majority of our soldiers, after overcoming initial difficulties, fulfill their duty devotedly and in an orderly way. More than 70 percent of the soliders voluntarily take part in competetive movements aimed at facilitating training and order, and several thousand soldiers attain once, twice, or even three times in the 1 and 1/2 years of their military service the rank of 'Outstanding Solider of the People's Army,' a rank connected with very high requirements.

"We also devote a lot of care to the development of the young soldiers' general and professional training. Within the Army, there is a significant system of skilled and semi-skilled workers training and of special machine-handling courses. Annually some 3,500 young people obtain skilled and semi-skilled workers qualifications during their military service. Many of them who enlist in the Army with 8 years of general schooling behind them, leave the Army as railway or road foremen or perhaps as brigade leaders. To our satisfaction, the competent ministries recognize and appreciate the professional skill of discharged soldiers and their favorable attitude to work.

"In the case of those who for some reason have not completed the 8 years in general schooling, we make it possible for them to study during their military service, in addition to their military training, in order to make up for their backwardness, all this in a system that has been developed jointly with the Ministry of Education.

"We also devote special attention to developing the intellectual values of young people enlisting for compulsory military service. This is guaranteed by a network of youth clubs, amateur artistic groups, study circles -- including large numbers of linguistic, video, and computer study circles -- as well as the well-stocked troops' libraries.

"No doubt the question occurs to many of you: Do we have any problems in training the soldiers? Yes, we have, and we have to speak honestly about these. Although a large proportion of the young people enlisting have an adequate education and professional training, at the same time today's young people in their twenties do not have much experience of life. For this reason their education is thoroughly considered a serious task demanding attention and a high degree of competence on the part of educators.

"There is a growing number among the new recruits who have already committed acts that are against the law. Dealing with them causes many problems for the professional staff which is considerably strained as it is.

"In spite of the regulations and the health instructions brought into effect so far, there is frequent drinking among soldiers and the troubles arising from this are increasing. This occurs mainly outside the service, on leave and travel, and this naturally gives rise to a bad reaction from the population. I must mention that it is a misconception on the part of the relatives and friends of the soliders when they offer drinks to the soldiers on leave, or when visiting them in the barracks they add drinks to the home-made food parcels. Unfortunately, this sometimes leads to serious problems.

"We have not yet been fully able to overcome phenomena which have their roots in bygone days, such as the so called bad-taste tricks which occur between the so called 'old soldiers' and the recruits. Although these tricks are more and more rare nowadays, they are nevertheless harmful and therefore we take a determined stance against them.

The Role of the Natinal Defense Education

"I would like to mention here the problems connected with the soldiers' state of health too. There is a significiant number of young people, who when recruited, are given the qualification 'unfit for service', or are suitable only to a limited degree and have to be exempted from strenuous physical training, and in the course of their service, a further 3 to 4 percent of these soldiers have to be discharged for health reasons. With these young men the illnesses take the forms of mainly nervous or mobility disorders, cardiovascular and digestive complaints. This causes serious problems which are social and at the same time also have an effect on national defense. Therefore, we also extensively support the endeavors of the government of the KISZ to considerably widen and develop the mass sport movement compared to its current state by placing the student sports movement on new bases. We ourselves wish to increasingly participate in this endeavor to promote a more healthy lifestyle of the growing young generation and its physical and bodily fitness.

"Social development has raised further demands in military life and service too. Taking them into consideration, we have to provide more modern accommodation, food, clothing, and health care. We have achieved significant and concrete results although the implementation of our targets is often limited by financial and material means. It is also a significant achievement that the conscripts' pay was increased by 100 percent as of 1 January 1986.

"The national defense education whose system and necessary personal and material conditions have been established in the past years plays a considerable role in preparing the youth for military service. Significant work is being carried out in this respect by the Hungarian National Defense Association [MHSZ], partly in helping the educational institutions and partly on its own. The almost 4,500 clubs of the MHSZ in their majority contribute to the activity of the secondary and vocational schools, universities, and colleges. [paragraph continues]

I can also speak with sincere appreciation also of the activity carried out by the Pioneers Association and the KISZ primarily in the national defense subunits of the Pioneer and youth guards aimed at the conscious and physical preparation of the youth prior to their military service.

"We are witnessing as a whole the activity of a crowd of many thousands of general and secondary school and higher education institution teachers, MHSZ educators, and movement activists who are laying the foundations of the youth's national defense readiness. Their joint activity helps many young people overcome the difficulties of military training in the first weeks of military service. However, we can only truly achieve our goals if we are more successful in instilling the conscious acceptance of military service in today's young generation and we can better prepare them not only in their patriotism but also in the moral and physical stand required by the complex tasks of military service.

"The overwhelming majority of the teachers of general and secondary schools today are women who naturally need greater help in this respect. Together with the Ministry of Education we are seeking a solution to this task. We regard it as possible and useful if a part of the national defense hours in the curriculum are used by visits paid to the adjacent military and border guard units where the children can receive personal impressions and experiences."

Then Ferenc Karpati concluded that general compulsory military service is enforced in Hungary in accordance with the regulations of the military service law. Under the law, men are obliged to do military service in a regulated way. Women, however, do unarmed military service in certain fields only in the event of war. Their conscription is not followed by the obligation to serve."The duration of conscript military service today is a uniform 18 months. There is need for that much time partly to acquire the more and more complex military knowledge and partly to be able to maintain combat readiness and preparation of the troops. It is well known that maintaining the combat readiness of the armies organized on the basis of general conscription requires the presence of adequately prepared conscripts and reserve soldiers at all times. In the profesesional armies -- there are still such armies in numerous capitalist countries -- jobs demanding greater training and skill, like tank drivers, are naturally filled by professionals.

"An 18-month military service is also mandatory in the case of university and college students. Among them, the admitted university students fulfill their military service in part prior to commencing their university studies and in part after graduation. In order to better coordinate individual interests with those of society, we are jointly studying with the Ministry of Education ways to enable the students admitted to universities that prepare them for professions that are directly useful to the Army to choose to fulfill their military service either prior to their university studies or after graduation.

"Reduction of the duration of military service is basically possible only from social considerations. Soldiers who have 2 children can be discharged after completing 12 months of military service and when a 3rd child is born, the soldier is discharged irrespective of the time he has served before the birth of that child. In addition, in order to help the people's economy, the conscrips working in certain sectors of the economy for example, the mining industry, serve a military service of shortened duration.

"This system has worked well so far. It is possible, however, that in the coming years we will have to considerably reduce the circle of conscripts who serve less than 18 months. We are obliged to do this because we have to ensure the supply of new contingents to the army even after the nineties when, due to the demographic situation, there will be considerably fewer people at our disposal.

"It is also part of the exemptions that the constrips who are married and are in a more difficult situation for other reasons will be recruited to units close to their residence. It is true, however, that, due to national defense interests or simply because there is no unit stationed in the area of a soldier's residence, this requirement will not be filled.

"Men of military ago who have not fulfilled their conscript military service canbe recruited for reserve duty, and those who have fulfilled their military service caub e recruited for reserve training in a way regulated by law.

Civil Defense Is at an Adequate Level

"The majority of recruits called up in the reserves in the last 10 years served no longer than 20 days -- in accordance with the stipulations of the National Defense Law -- except for some reserve officers and warrant officers. We regard it as very important to regularly inform the reserves about the expected time and duration of the planning summons in order to enable them to settle their personal problems in time. We depart from this rule when military interests do not allow it and then we summon reserves on the basis of immediate notification.

"In the course of planning and organizing exercises and reserve needs, we strive to proportionally share the burden among the various countries and we take into consideration their outstanding tasks in the people's economy. We summon only the absolutely essential staff and technical means for the planned military exercise. However, under our conditions, the summons, training, and further training of the reserves from time to time is inevitable.

"Our experiences show that the majority of the reserves display a high level of civic responsiblity in the way they fulfill their national defense obligations. The summons causes problems to everyone since they have to stop their work, leave the family, perhaps even postpone a planned trip or vacation, and so on. Nevertheless, the majority of the reserves fulfill their responsibility with understanding, discipline, and devotion. There are, of course, also justified cases that cannot be postponed and we take these into consideration.

"I can also report another brilliant manifestation of the way the citizens fulfill their obligations. As I have already mentioned, the National Defense Law also stiuplates the obligation for the women to serve in the Army in the event of war. On the basis of this requirement in the past years we have conscripted women with health care skills. The more than 100,000 women obliged to show up for conscription fulfilled this obligation in time and with understanding and only 21 of them raised objections.

"The National Defense Law contains important regulations for the organization and operation of civil defense. The state organs, cooperatives, public organizations, as well as the Armed Forces and the armed associations and law and order organs fulfill their civil defense tasks at an increasingly high level: the preparation of the population and of the civil defense organs for the defense and protection of life and property.

"The role played by civil defense in the whole of the society -- both in the residential districts and at work -- has become well-known. The civil defense organizations and the population have always taken part with self-sacrifice and a commendable attitude in the domestic and international civil defense exercises and in the elimination of damage caused by natural disasters. Therefore, I can report with satisfaction that the overwhelming majority of the population is completely fulfilling its civil defense obligations."

Our Interests Concur With the Efforts of Our Allies

Then the minister recalled that 10 years ago, when the National Defense Law was passed, the world lived in a period after the Helsinki Final Act characterized by detente and its development, and hoped that detente would also include the military sphere.

"The socialist world, particularly the fraternal countries belonging to the Warsaw Pact have made great efforts in order to turn this hope into reality so far, however, the initiatives of the Warsaw Pact have not met with a favorable reception or understanding. Instead of seeking an agreement, the responsible circles in the United States and NATO have concentrated their activity on the creation and utilization of possibilities for confrontation. Instead of disarmament, they have embarked on an even more accelerated arms race which the U.S. Government tries to extend to outer space too.

"As always, the socialist countries, the fraternal socialist community, acted with responsibility this time as well. Starting from the premises that there are possibilities for halting the increase in the danger of war and blocking the road leading to a nuclear catastrophe, the session of the Warsaw Pact Political Consultative Committee held in Budapest on 11 June submitted further initiatives to the United States and the other NATO countries. In addition to the proposals to halt nuclear tests, mutually and fully eliminate intermediate-range missiles in Europe, halt space armament, and eliminate chemical weapons and their industrial bases, this time the Political Consultative Committee also initiated the significant reduction of the armed forces and conventional weapons stationed in Europe.

"The interests of the Hungarian People's Republic fully coincide with the efforts of our allies. For socialist Hungary, peace, security, friendship, and cooperation are not only words; they represent a long-term policy based on firm principles and terrible historical experiences. Hungary has no claims from anyone. Together with the other fraternal nations constructing socialism and in cooperation with them and enjoying the support of progressive countries and nations, we wish to construct socialism and prosper here, on this land. We believe that, in the current world situation, there is no rational alternative to peaceful coexistence. We adopt the jointly formulated and published concepts at reducing armaments because the road to confidence and lasting peace leads through these concepts.

"Our people's opinion is also included in the concept that the socialist countries do not wish to achieve military superiority but they do not allow anyone to achieve it, either. Therefore, as long as the responsible circles of the United States and NATO do not realize the realities of our age, it is our duty to adequately assure our security.

"The National Defense Law passed 10 years ago provides an adequate framework for our further tasks which derive first of all from the current international situation. In this context, we hold it important to maintain the standard of our Armed Forces in compliance with the readiness of our opponents and our brothers-in-arms alike. Industry, the production units, state administration, and public education have a great share in this task.

Thanks to Families Rearing Good Soldiers

"It is particularly important to make the patriotic and internationalist education of society, and primarily of the youth, more efficient. Love for one's country, patriotism is the ideal that enables the armed defender of the fatherland to overcome the most difficult situation, and keeps him alive in the most difficult circumstances.

Literature and the arts play a great role in shaping the patriotism of the youth. We are expecting them to take a greater share, in accordance with their best traditions, in strengthening the human values indispensable for military service, like commitment, steadfastness, discipline, realiability, and responsibility to the community.

"It is our conviction that this is also the basis of that fact that an ever increasing number of people suitable for it embark on the career of a professional soldier fully aware of the goal and point of their activity: to safeguard peace. We, for our part, wish that this good and important mission is orderly and attractive from all points of view.

"An adequate social judgment on the reason for our activity is indispensable in order to maintain the good general feeling of the Army. Public opinion often voices the demand to provide better and fuller information on the activity and internal life of the Armed Forces. The same demand -- perhaps an even increased one -- is also present on the part of the Armed Forces and troops, particularly on the part of the professional staff, to make sure that the population receives the most realistic picture of their determination and defense preparation. This demand is justified on both sides. Therefore, we ask the press organs to take this into consideration more than hitherto in their activity.

"Nowadays, the social recognition of military service is based on realizing the fact that the most precious value of mankind today is peace and the staff of the Armed Forces and the soldiers of the Hungarian People's Army have an important role in our present peaceful life and activity."

In conclusion, Ferenc Karpati thanked the families rearing soldiers and those who contribute, through their self-sacrificing work, to the fact that their sons can fulfill their obligations toward their fatherland and their people with honor. All the citizens who, fulfilling their personal national defense responsibilities, are directly involved in national defense deserve respect and appreciation, he stressed.

"I express my thanks to the leaders and workers of the state administration, public organizations, economic organizations and institutions, and to the teachers who, with their activity, strengthen our national defense. In conclusion, let me thank the political and state leading organs of our country, the National Assembly, and our poeple for their efforts for our country's security and defense and for the care they provide us, on behalf of the staff of the Armed Forces."

PRESIDENTIAL COUNCIL DECORATES USSR'S SOKOLOV

AU071421 Budapest NEPSZABADSAG in Hungarian 1 Jul 86 p 5

[Text] In appreciation of his outstanding achievements in deepening the friendship between our peoples, in strengthening cooperation between our armies, and in serving the cause of socialism and peace, the Presidential Council decorated Marshal Sergey Sokolov, Soviet defense minister, with the Order of the Banner Adorned With Rubies of the Hungarian People's Republic on the occasion of his 75th birthday.

POLITBURO CONSIDERS CONGRESS CONCLUSIONS

LD091751 Warsaw Domestic Service in Polish 1700 GMT 9 Jul 86

[Text] We have just received news about a session of the PZPR Central Committee Politburo. At its first postcongress session on 9 July, the Politburo addressed the most important conclusions ensuing from the Central Committtee report and the discussions and decisions of the 10th Congress -- implementation of which should begin without delay. Jointly with the government Presidium, the Politburo made an initial evaluation of the main problems broached at the congress. This included inter alia discussion of a draft schedule of implementation work, with particular attention devoted to a review and modernization of the organizational structures of the economy and the state, in addition to those of work places, with utilization of certification methods.

PZPR LEADERS DISCUSS CONGRESS WITH WORKERS

[Excerpts] Members of the highest party authorities, the Politburo and the PZPR Central Committee Secretariat, have today [8 July] gone to the factories to meet with the work forces and party organizations and to listen to opinions on the 10th Congress decisions and to workers' remarks on the matter of implementing the congress resolutions. These meetings are the fulfillment of the announcement of the PZPR Central Committee first secretary, which he made during his closing speech at the 10th Congress.

Wojciech Jaruzelski today went to the Mera mechanical and precision engineering enterprise in (Lona). He familiarized himself with the history of the enterprise and talked with workers at their places on the shop floor in the main tool shop, the machining department, the sheet metal shop and the assembly shop. Wojciech Jaruzelski was informed that production in this enterprise in the first 6 months of the year was 25 percent higher than last year. Exports also rose considerably. Janusz Kubasiewicz visited this enterprise together with Wojciech Jaruzelski. [passage omitted] In turn, Sofia Stepien visited work places in Czestochowa.

KRAKOW OFFICIAL ADDRESSES 2 JUL CONGRESS SESSION

[Speech by Jozef Gajewicz, first secretary of Krakow Voivodship PZPR Committee, during the PZPR Congress plenary debate in Warsaw -- live]

[Excerpts] Esteemed comrade delegates: The expectations and hopes of all society are focused on the deliberations of our congress as never before, that is, hope for a politically stable and economically prosperous future.

The past and the mistakes have often been analyzed. There is a need to remember the resulting conclusions, but we cannot dwell exclusively on the past. We are a young and educated society. Thanks to alliances we have lived in peace for 40 years. These values are undeniably the real achievement of our party. But, comrades, we have to translate them here, in this hall, into wise and honestly considered resolutions and into a specific program of action that not only addresses problems but also resolves them to the benefit of our state and its place in the world.

This is the greatest need of our time, our nation, and our party.

In practice, almost everything depends on restoring the strength of our party and on regaining the ability to really influence the importance processes of public life. We have had to deal with everything. We had to deal with chaos and conflicts within our ranks, which considerably affected Krakow and other regions. There was a period when, unfortunately, we also had these problems in the party. These phenomena are mostly behind us. While combatting them we did not give them great publicity. We attempted to avoid perfunctory assessments and qualification of attitudes. We discussed, we tried to convince, and we showed great patience. Today it has paid off. Some people who had lost a personal sense of direction and who were misled by the demagogy of enemies or apparent friends began to stand on their feet again. The consistently implemented idea of national accord together with the initiatives by Comrade General Wojciech Jaruzelski, PZPR first secretary, which showed farsightedness, openness, confidence, patience, and indulgence, have been extremely important. This changed awareness and social attitudes.

Esteemed comrades, the proof and expression of the rebirth in the party and the enhancement of its position are that the deadlock in the development of party ranks has been overcome. I will say briefly that in Krakow, as in the country as a whole, the previous and current years have been marked by a dynamic growth in the party ranks. This process is slower in the rural areas of Krakow, although the new agriculture policy has undoubtedly created conditions for the development of party ranks in the rural areas also. Most difficult, and in effect still unresolved, is the party's status in the academic environment, particularly among students. In this we are not only doubling our efforts but are also creating a new concept of our party activity because, to put it briefly, the present approach has not passed the test. [passage omitted]

We have also done a great deal to normalize the situation in creative circles. In principle we have behind us the stage of negation, of the boycott of state institutions, and of brutual persopnal pressure. But the political struggle in the sphere of culture will surely continue for some time. All the forces and centers opposed to us, opposed to us because of their politics, ideology, and world view, are not giving up. In the Krakow writers' circle for quite some time now political common sense has prevailed. The atmosphere there is determined by the quite numerous, authoritative creative party and nonparty. In the actors' circle the process of creating attitudes of political discretion is still in progress. The creation of creative unions and the undertaking of public activity in the artists' circle encountered great difficulties and recalcitrance. All in all, despite constant pressure and attempts to win people over by elements politically opposed to us and by extreme clericalists, it is a success for our party, at least in Krakow that creative people -- though not all of them -- are increasingly close to us. They are collaborating increasingly closely with us and are also undertaking tasks that are most important to us at present. Our aim is to creat a creative climate for work and for creating new works and achievements increasingly often linked with the socialist transformations in our country.

Esteemed delegates, I have reminded you of the antisocialist activity of clerical circles. There was such activity in Krakow as well as in many centers in Poland. We tried not to aggravate the situation and to show restraint and patience both in party activities and in our mass media, particularly in our GAZETA KRAKOWSKA. We put to the test of public opinion the political adventurism carried on under the banner of the church. We should support and promote these trends and eliminate every sign of intolerance, of exploiting religious feelings for antistate and, as a result, anti-polish activity.

We realize that the whole country often looks at Krakow. This has recently been the case because, together with other centers, our city has been the object of still concentrated activity both by domestic and foreign political centers hostile to us. [passage omitted]

CONGRESS DELEGATED ADDRESS NATIONAL ISSUES

AU091554 Warsaw TRYBUNA LUDU in Polish 3 Jul 86 pp 3-6

[Roundup of summarized speeches made from the floor of the 10th PZPR Congress at the 2 July session in Warsaw]

[Excerpts] Krystyna Lasek, farmer in Okopy, Chelm Voivodship: [passage omitted] Experience shows that private farmers will not be able to solve the problem of developing neglected farmlands by themselves. They will never return to the villages that have already been deserted. A resettlement campaign will also be useless. That is why new socialized farms must be established in such areas on the farmlands owned by the State Land Fund, and the state should help do it.

Perhaps it is strange that a private farmer is in favor of state farms, but there is no other way out. Our state farms continue to pass test and win the rural community's praise for their good farming results.

Farming results of the past few years are the best proof that farming investments give us a good return for our money. However, when we have to waste our time and energy in trying to obtain fertilizers, fuels, spare parts, and pesticides, and wait in long lines for hours on end in front of the procurement stations, we begin to doubt whether all departments are really aware of the needs of farming and whether their determination to implement the correct lines of farm policy does not falter as the food situation continues to improve.

I am certain that if our farmers could devote the time lost in this way to their own farming tasks, our agriculture would be among the leading performers in Europe. [passage omitted]

Jerzy Szmajdzinski, chairman of the ZMS Main Administration:

[Passage omitted] Not all our difficulties are behind us. We are still absent from some communities of young people. We lack the necessary resources and aktivs, and we are not always able to translate the party program and our own program into specific tasks for our branches. Not all of our members comprehend and correctly discharge the duties posed by ZMS membership. In some communities ideoeducational work does not extend beyond mere declarations. Some ZMS members still enjoy indolence and inactivity. [passage omitted]

Young people in the ZMS keep asking: Is it true that we have succumbed too much to ideological compromises, tactical silence, and political procrastination? Is it true that we have been too quick in proclaiming the stabilization and normalization of our ranks? Have we not done this in a situation when we still have around us various ideological fixers and opportunists as well as people who are afraid of any risk lest it may upset their self-complacency and who attempt to go back to the system of bureaucratic and command management generations? [passage omitted]

Zygfryd Kwiatkowski, skipper of the Korab fishing boat in Ustka, Slupsk Voivodship:

[Passage omitted] At every meeting of our party organization party members criticized the shortcomings of our fishing base because they cost us millions and millions of zlotys in losses. The reason for this is a lack of necessary processing facilities in the maritime area, the poor standards of mechanization, and the incompetence of the Central Fishing Agency. It is with great pain that we continue to watch how our fishing efforts are being wasted. Human labor is being frittered away for the sake of simulated activity. At the same time great masses of fish are being lost. We keep wasting our time in ports with fully loaded holds, and large containers full of fish continue to occupy space on wharves because we are somehow unable to provide transportation to take all this fish into the country's interior for sale. [passage omitted]

Henryk Marciniak, head of the horticultural station in Petryki, Kalisz Voivodship:

The experience of the past few years shows that the practical implementation of the party's food policy continues to encounter many material and socio-organizational barriers.

I think farmers are right when they say that not all creators of economic reform understand the specific nature of farming. They are also right when they point to the many examples of corrupt activities by some sectors of industry and economic administration. Let me cite no more than the frequent price hikes for spare parts and finished products, the worsening quality of products, as well as the usually effective efforts not to supply farming with what has been decreed by party decision. [passage omitted]

Alicja Kostrzewska, head of the Regional Office Internal Affairs in Wrzesnia, Poznan Voivodship:

[Passage omitted] The disciplined attitudes of Wrzesnia workers, peasants, and intellectuals are responsible for the fact that our political adversary is unable to develop the activities that endanger state security and public order. This was signally reaffirmed when, on 29 June, on the 30th anniversary of the Poznan events, attempts were made in Wrzesnia to organize political provocations and hostile actions and to disturb public order. The local sponsors of these actions, who were assisted by people from other voivodships, wanted to exploit for this purpose a church function that was attended by a large crowd of believers. However, these designs ended once again in a defeat for our adversaries. All functions took place in an atmosphere of seriousness and calm. [passage omitted]

Aleksander Ference, foreman and secretary of the primary party organization in the Przeworsk transportation equipment plant, Przemysl Voivodship:

[Passage omitted] The workers class and other people as well continue to point to the fact that more and more individuals get rich by illicit means. These individuals give up their jobs in state establishments, buy and sell, smuggle, act as fixers, speculate, act as intermediaries in various deals, bribe, take advantage of legal loopholes, and laugh in the face of authority. At the same time, we will continue to assert that the struggle against all this in ongoing, that we will never permit such practices, and that we have made progress in this struggle. We also appeal to the conscience of partiotic Poles.

It is only too often that we tie our hands with regulations and laws that frequently protect the cunning and not the interests of the socialist state and the workers class. Young people see this and assume that they can achieve nothing through normal and honest work in industrial enterprises. [passage omitted]

There are many examples to show that we are inconsistent in implementing appointed resolutions and programs. It is true that this does not obscure the genuine achievements we have scored, but there is no doubt that this inconsistency makes an unfavorable impact on the economic results we obtain and on the political atmosphere among the working people, who become apathetic and distrustful of our party's decisions. [passage omitted]

Leszek Lesniak, chairman of the ZMW National Administration:

It is true that young people have many faults, but, as experts say, previous generations had about the same faults. It is also frequently said that, unfortunately, the present young generation has little belief in socialism and in the party. Today we are building new foundations for this belief, but, let us be frank: Where could young people find this belief, considering their practical experience and the defects of their thinking in terms of history? It is natural that they take for granted all the achievements of the material and social base of socialism. On the other hand, they regard as abnormal the fact that the system, which we tell them is the best and most equitable system and one that guarantees equal opportunities for everyone through effective work, is full of shortcomings, failures, and defeats.

Young people are not against authority and the party as such or against socialism. They are against a weak authority and its failures. They are averse to the party that has to spend so much energy to make good previous losses and to rebuild its authority. Young people would like to see the authority, the state, the party, and socialism as victors. It is only natural that one loves a winner. [passage omitted]

The ZMW wants to be a social force in the rural social front; it is such a force in many communities. Unfortunately, we are still weak in many communities, and the activities of the ZMW circles and the interests of young people continue to be centered on having a good time in discotheques and other places of doubtful recreation. [passge omitted]

Ryszard Wosinski, head of the Polish Scout Union:

[Passage omitted] The Polish Scout Union tries to participate in transforming the system of our education and upbringing. The concern we display for Polish education is a result of our sense of responsibility for the fate of this education. We are concerned that the modernization of education often involves crowding out the school curricula with new study commitments, which are supposed to be forced on us by scientific and technological development. This bunching up of study commitments often results in extremely superficial study and in the discontent, frustration, and overburdening of students. [passage omitted]

The struggle for the heart, minds, and trust of young people goes on all the time. Unfortunately, this struggle is also being waged by the people who are motivated by ideologically alien reasons and who believe in tolerance for their own convictions and religious practices, but are intolerant and hostile toward other convictions, especially those that are socialist. Unfortunately, all this takes place despite our traditional tolerance and despite the assurances and declarations made by the party and the state. [passage omitted]

Norbert Krawczyk, journalist and head of the newscast department of the Bydgoszcz radio studio:

It is not always that a section of our society is positively disposed toward the term of propaganda. Is it really true that we are able to induce most of our people to accept the party program? My frequent impression is that the press, radio, and television try to induce those who are already in favor of the program. The fact is that a large section of our people are outside the mainstream of sociopolitical life and that we should direct our methods of persuasion primarily toward them. We are also too modest in presenting the arguments that are different from ours, but that are not at all hostile to socialisms. [passage omitted]

From time to time it happens that we are too late or too imprecise in supplying the people with various items of information, especially in the situations that theaten increased social tensions. [passage omitted] The reports, especially press reports, on various conferences and so-called obligatory official meetings are not of the best. At times one is under the impression that Poland is a counry where people do nothing except eternally confer and engage in discussions in various meetings and symposia. The present model of propaganda is not consistent with people's expectations and does not fit 1986.

The introdution of satellite television will create a new phase of not only idelogical, but also propaganda-information confrontation. Although we are still without the technological potential of most modern Western countries, our programs, especially those that propagate culture and affect the attitudes and awareness of viewers and listeners, can and should be competitive.

However, we should bear in mind the average viewer will be more interested in the events of his voivodship, township, or precinct than in the satellite television programs, for example. That is why the development of the regional mass media in the next few years is so important. [passage omitted]

Kaimierz Kolakowski, manager of the state farm combine in Pezin, Szczecin Voivodship:

[Passage omitted] I am unable to agree with those who want to belittle the socialized economy under the pretext of their concern for social aims. What such people really want to achieve is to hinder socialist transformations in farming. The disturbing thing is that they are often recognized scientific authorities. Is it a fact that state farms are the vanguard of social progress in rural areas and are equally interested in production and in improving living conditions, child care, and the cultural base? [passage omitted]

Wladyslaw Janusz, lathe operator, brigadier, and first secretary of the shop party organization in the Archimedes farm equipment plant in Wroclaw:

[Passage omitted] Many of us have no idea of the meaning of contracted prices. We do not know who contracts what. What is the connection between contracted prices, the individual share of work, and producion costs? Such prices can serve as a cover for all kinds of waste and bad management.

There are more and more crafty dodgers among us and more and more of those who get rich at the expense of the community. The groups of the so-called newly rich are getting bigger and bigger. Some people, expecially young inexperienced people, may find it attractive to make big profits for little effort. Getting rich quickly is an attractive prospect, but the socialist state and the workers party are surely not interested in it.

It is high time that we separate honest tradesmen from crafty dodgers. Let the tax system and the treasury become real factors in the state's control system over the private sector.

The fact that the university and secondary school graduates rush to get jobs in the private sector is a disturbing phenomenon. The engineers, economists, and teachers who have been educated in socialist schools often work in jobs that have nothing to do with their training. We young workers are pained by this fact, especially since it is all our people that pay for the education of these individuals. [passage omitted]

Antoni Dragan, chairman of the ZSP [Association of Polish Students] Supreme Council:

[Passage omitted] Each year about 50,000 young women and men graduate from universities, and the party and society cannot be indifferent to the question of their academic qualities. To fully evaluate this situation it is necessary to answer first of all the questions of how it is that university graduates often represent poor standards of professional skills in public life. A great deal has been done to change this state of affairs in the past few years, but we must solve outstanding problems within a more extensive social and economic context. [passage omitted]

Training in special skills and upbringing are the tasks of universities. The process of upbringing is something out of the ordinary because it is young adults who are subjected to it. Our adversaries have maintained that the process of upbringing in universities should be confined mainly to a good program of studies. That is why the party had to wage an especially difficult struggle for the socialist character of upbringing in universities. The necessary legal enactments adopted last year have created better conditions for the party and youth organizations to influence the processes taking place in universities. [passage omitted]

GROSZ SPEAKS TO WARSAW FACTORY WORKERS

AU060645 Budapest MAGYAR HIRLAP in Hungarian 2 Jul 86 pp 1, 2

[Text] "Please allow me to greet the highest forum of Polish communists from here and, fulfilling my mission, to convey to you and, thus, to all Polish workers, the friendly and comradely greetings and good wishes of the MSZMP Central Committee, of the membership of our party, of the Hungarian workers, and particularly of Janos Kadar," began Karoly Grosz in his speech. He continued as follows:

"One of the most difficult periods in the history of socialist Poland, full of serious tensions, afflictions, and struggles, had also been followed with anxiety by our public opinion. We regard it as a historical and internationally important action that, on its own, the PZPR, under the leadershp of Comrade Wojciech Jaruzelski and with the active collaboration of the Polish communist and patriots, blocked the way to dangers threatening the achievements of the people's power, managed to overcome anarchy, and created an opportunity for socialist development that shows the way out of the crisis. The experience of recent years proved that the PZPR, was right to call for a policy of renewal, which has been asserted in everyday life with consistence and flexibility.

"We have followed with great attention the congress speech by Comrade Jaruzelski, which gave a varied picture on reality and analyzed it with academic exactitude. Other speeches have also reflected responsibility for the nation's fate, a determined internationalist attitude, and anxiety over the peaceful future of mankind. Based on all this, we can conform the following: There has been progress in socialist consolidation, and the Polish communists have a Marxist-Leninist program to completely remove the results of the crisis and to employ the general laws of socialist construction by taking into consideration the country's characteristics and historical experience. They can rely on tested allies, and a growing number of people in society and its sensible majority have accepted and are ready to give active support to their efforts aimed at the progress of the entire Polish nation. Poland is again a firm link in the socialist community and has been successful in opposing imperialist aims to impose diplomatic isolation on the country.

"The path covered by Poland under the leadership of the PZPR arouses all people with common sense to express honest appreciation. We know that there are still unresolved problems, difficulties, and tensions. The principled policy conveyed by the speech, by other congress documents, and by frank and plain-spoken debates is an expression of clear intentions to avoid social shocks and to further regain the confidence of the society."

Next, Karoly Grosz spoke about the construction taking place in our homeland. Among other things, he said:

"We are at present working on the implementation of resolutions decided upon by the MSZMP Congress last March. However, the tasks facing us are not only great and complex, but are in certain fields also urgent.

"Our efforts rely on your tested political guidelines, on the active support of the masses, and on the public consensus manifested in our basic national goals. These goals rest on firm foundations. In line with our plans, we can increase our socialist achievements through disciplined labor and the mobilization of our financial and intellectual resources. We know that in our efforts we can rely on the strength of the socialist community and on the further exploration of possibilities inherent in CEMA.

"In spite of persistent joint efforts, no perceptible improvement was registered in international conditions for our socialist construction. The extremist forces of the capitalist countries, the military-industrial complexes, are striving to increase the arms race and are constantly refusing our proposals for disarmament and international peace and security."

Speaking about the foreign policy of our country, Karoly Grosz said: "The Hungarian People's Republic proclaims jointly with its Warsaw Pact allies that it is possible to arrive at equal security with a significantly lower level of weaponry. It supports and, according to its opportunities, promotes the implementation of those significant and consistent disarmament proposals that have been submitted to various forums by the Soviet Union and other socialist countries, namely, the Warsaw Pact Organization. We are convinced that all sensible people will respond with active support to our persistent and enduring peace initiatives, which were also expressed at the recent Budapest session of the Warsaw Pact's Political Consultative Committee. Our foreign policy is determined by strengthening the unity of socialist countries. In order to maintain the process of detente, we consider it important to promote dialogue among countries with different social systems and confidence-building cooperation based on mutual advantages. No country can consider a task more important today than to consolidate peace and to provide a guarantee for security. This needs political goodwill, negotiations, and extensive cooperation."

Next, Karoly Grosz mentioned the issue of Hungarian-Polish cooperation, and among other things, he underscored that this cooperation, nourished by the friendship between our nations for centuries, has in recent years increased in many respects. Karoly Grosz said: "The fact that our cooperation stood the difficult test of recent years shows the strength of the bond among the peoples constructing socialism. Our political relations are characterized by mutual understanding and confidence, as well as by sincere interest in each other's experience."

Concluding his speech, the head of the MSZMP delegation voiced his wishes for a lot of success and productive work in the implementation of the PZPR's new program, and presented a medallion of Budapest to director general Migdalski. The leaders of the factory gave a present to Karoly Grosz, a textile work depicting the Sigismund Column sympbolizing Warsaw. Next, Marian Migdalski awarded Karoly Grosz the Eminent Worker Decoration of the Radwar factory as an expression for the promotion of close cooperation between the Warsaw factory and the Hungarian precision mechanics enterprise.

BARCIKOWSKI VIEWS SOCIALIST DEMOCRACY FOR PRESS

LD301906 Warsaw Domestic Service in Polish 1700 GMT 30 Jun 86

[Report on the statement by Kazimierz Barcikowski, PZPR Political member and deputy chairman of the Council of State, on strengthening socialist democracy; made at a 30 June press conference at the press center of the PZPR Congress in Warsaw -- passages in quotation marks recorded]

[Text] [Barcikowski] "As you are well aware, ladies and gentlemen, our state is emerging from a deep breakdown at the beginning of the 1980's. The mistakes of earlier years and an anarchic lack of restraint resulting from this caused disruption in the functioning of the state. This is why it was necessary to take extraodinary measures to maintain constitutional order. The problem we have been trying to solve for some time now is how to overcome the bad consequences of the breakdown so as to emerge from the crisis with a stronger state and a stronger party. This is the question that also faces the 10th Congress and is, in essence, the question to which Comrade Jaruzelski replied yesterday [29 June] at length.

"The construction of democratic relations in the party and state is an important element of our positive reply to the events of that time. The thing is that citizens should have a real say regarding important decisions and that as many citizens as possible should take part in decision making processes and find out in practice what the difficulties are when making decisions -- for instance, which solution to select when resources are limited. The thing is that, by means of the broad participation of citizens in the execution and holding of power, one should also counter the danger of the bureaucratic degeneration of authority and counter the lack of respect for human needs, etc., etc.

"In all of this there is, of course, the enormous role of the party, which should enliven and animate these processes."

[Announcer] At this point, the speaker presented the activities that have been undertaken since the Ninth PZPR Congress for the democratization of the practice of power. He included among them the appointment of the supreme administrative court, the state tribunal, the constitutional tribunal and also the passing of a number of bills, including the laws on the cooperative movement. He went on to say:

[Barcikowski] "In sum, millions of citizens, without any exaggeration, fulfill various functions by choice, in other words, by their own agreement, or their own free will, and from social trust -- well at least the trust of their closest friends, work mates, electors, up to and including the Sejm. These citizens participating today in the exercise of power at its various levels were chosen in the course of democratic elections. On the other hand, that which the moralists from outside attempted to demand from us is to allow an unconstrained functioning in Poland of anti-socialist forces, which our constitution and model of democracy does not want to see."

[Announcer] In turn, Kazimierz Barcikowski recalled the decisions to appoint new institutions, functioning for the sake of democracy, contained in the speech given by Wojciech Jaruzelski. In conclusion he said:

[Barcikowski] "The question of the leading role of our party as a force constructing the political system of the country rests, among others, on her members in institutions and social organizations and in the echelons of the authorities, appropriately influencing the implementation of civil tasks and rights."

GOOD OF STATE GUIDES ATTITUDE ON RELIGIONS

["Excerpts" of the statement by Adam Lopatka, head of the Office of Religious Affairs, on religious policy at a 30 June press conference at the press center of the 10th PZPR Congress in Warsaw -- recorded]

[Text] The religious policy of the PPR laid out in political documents of the Marxist-Leninist party has permanent foundations in the Constitution and the laws of the PPR. Speaking of the Constitution, I have in mind the regulations of 1952, which have not yet been changed and are not planned to be changed. As you know, our religious policy is based on the principle of freedom of conscience and religion. That means freedom of activity for churches and denominational associations within the scope of performing their religious functions, equality of all churches and denominational associations, and separation of the church from the state, which in turn means treating religion as a private matter and the state as a lay organization. These principles constitute the permanent guideline in our state's activity in the field of religious policy.

I want to emphasize that the state or relations among the churches and denominational associations depends not only on the state and its policy. It also depends on the attitude of churches and denominational associations toward the state and toward the issues the nation faces.

As you know, Poland is commonly considered a Catholic country, but in reality this is a multidenominational country. There are 35 churches and denominations acting legally in Poland. Obviously, the Roman Catholic Church is, however, the greatest denomination among them, and its activity in the country's life is of the greatest significance.

I want to emphasize that the relations with non-Roman Catholic Churches and denominational associations are entirely normal. These churches and denominational associations acquired a place for themselves in the existing political system. They respect the Constitution and the laws and they have confidence in the state authorities. In return the state treats them with respect and ensures their freedom to practice their religious beliefs.

The relations with the Roman Catholic Church are in the process of being shaped. This process could be described as the process of the gradual entry of the church into the socialist system. This process is still far from finished, however, although we have already come a long way. Two tendencies are still visible in the Catholic church. The dominating one is the tendency toward dialogue and agreement and constructive participation in the life of the nation and the country, while the other is a tendency to support the struggle against the political system and oppose the existing legal order, frequently attacking the authorities with slander and insulting arguments. The authorities are convinced that the tendency toward dialogue and cooperation will win. The state, as a matter of fact, does not ask a lot of the Roman Catholic Church, or other churches. Namely, it does demand that the church, that is the clergy and its hierarchy, observe the Constitution and (?its) place and respect the reason of state of the PPR. In the most important matters they should be guided by the good of our country and the state.

Questions on Religious Policy

[Text] Kazimierz Barcikouski and Adam Lopatka replied to questions put by journalists at the 10th PZPR Congress press center today [30 June]. Most of these referred to religious policy. Here is an example by Editor (Wilczynski) from DPA:

[Begin recording with (Wilczynski) question in progress]... recently expressed concern and fears that a new subject, religious studies might be used in the conditions of Poland in the fight against religion. What is (?your) stance on this matter?

[Lopatka] It would be a strange tale indeed if the very fact of popularizing knowledge about religions were to harm religion. The thing is that, in a country such as Poland the Catholic Church really does dominate among churches and denominations in the world. I think nothing bad will happen if young people also see that, apart from things that devide the individual denominations, there are also several things that link them together. Perhaps this will serve to produce more tolerance among people. [end recording]

FILIPOV READS GREETINGS TO PZPR CONGRESS

AU060610 Sofia RABOTINICHESKO DELO in Bulgarian 2 Jul 86 p 7

[BCP Central Committee greetings message to the 10th PZPR Congress read Grisha Filipov, member of the BCP Central Committee Politburo and secretary of the BCP Central Committee, at a meeting with the workers of the Warsaw "Georgi Dimitrov," high-voltage equipment plant on 1 July 1986]

[Text] Dear comrades, dear Polish friends,

On behalf of the BCP Central Committee and on behalf of Comrade Todor Zhivkov, its general secretary; on behalf of the Communists and working people in our country we convey the most sincere greetings to you. It is a particular pleasure for us to meet you, the working people of the Warsaw high-voltage equipment plant, which is named after Georgi Dimitrov, the glorious son of the Bulgarian workers class, the first builder of socialist Bulgaria, the oustanding leader of the international Communist and workers movement.

Our delegation, which is participating in the work of the 10th PZPR Congress, listened with great attention to the remarkable report read by Comrade Wojciech Jaruzelski. [paragraph continues]

This report contains a thorough analysis of the results achieved by the Polish people, under the PZPR's leadership, in the struggle to overcome the difficulties, in protecting and consolidating the socialist achievements in your country. We're glad that, during the last 5-year period which has elapsed, considerable progress was achieved in all spheres of your socioeconomic life. The prestige of the PZPR has grown. Its policy is increasingly supported by the working people and by all people in your country. The Polish People's Republic strengthened its position within the socialist community, while the efforts of imperialism to isolate your country on the international scene did not succeed. We highly appreciate the peace-loving foreign policy of the Polish People's Republic, as well as its active contribution to the consolidation of the unity and cohesion of the socialist community countries in the struggle for peace, security, and cooperation in Europe and throughout the world.

The results of the period under review, which your congress is assessing, are truly positive. The tasks of the forthcoming 5-year plan period and of the period up to 1995 are of exceptional importance. The socialist transformations will be intensified through the implementation of the tasks mapped out in the draft documents and through the adoption of a party program for the future. The dynamic acceleration of economic growth will increase and better conditions will be created for raising the Polish people's living standard. Your plans naturally reflect the characteristic features and the complexity of the problems as well as the methods of their solution. The common traits which characterize both our activities and your activities are the striving to work better and to achieve a more rapid progress. The comprehensive work of your congress justifies the conclusion that it will be of historic importance for the Polish People's Republic.

Comrades,

As a result of the aggressive policy conducted by the United States and its NATO partners, the threat of a world war has increased as never before. The United States is striving to disrupt the military strategic balance in the world, is increasing the arms race, and is preparing to transfer this race to outer space. The United States is committing inadmissible actions of state terrorism, steps aimed at the total destabilization of the international situation; it is committing gross acts of violation against other nations. The refusal to observe the SALT II treaty is also an expression of this policy conducted by the United States.

We consider the declaration by Comrade Mikhail Gorbachev regarding the liberation of the planet by the end of this century from mass destruction weapons and from nuclear arms above all, and the program adopted by the 27th CPSU Congress for the establishment of an all-around international security system as actions of historic importance. The Soviet Union once more demonstrated its good will, and through the unilateral moratorium pertaining to nuclear tests, through its proposals submitted to the UN as regards the gradual, joint, practical actions for the peaceful utilization of space, the USSR confirmed this good will. The appeal to the NATO countries and to all European countries for reducing armed forces and conventional weapons on our continent from the Atlantic to the Urals is an important, new contribution of the USSR and of the other Warsaw Pact states. This appeal was adopted at the recent Budapest meeting.

As the 13th BCP Congress pointed out, under these circumstances the People's Republic of Bulgaria, as an inseparable part of the socialist community, is conducting an active and consistent foreign policy; it does everything within its power to ensure possibilities for our people so that they may work under conditions of peace and security.

Being closely linked with the principles of internationalism, the People's Republic of Bulgaria will continue in the future to make its contribution to the consolidation of the unity and cohesion of the fraternal socialist countries, to the implementation of our common, peace-loving policy. The line of friendship and close cooperation with our common ally, the Soviet Union, and with the other, fraternal, socialist countries is the cornerstone of our foreign policy.

We attach the greatest importance to the initiative of transforming the Balkan peninsula into a region free of nuclear and chemical weapons, for the development of good-neighbor relations of mutual trust and understanding among the Balkan peoples, for cooperation and peace.

Comrades,

The relations between the BCP and the PZPR are built upon the principles of Marxism-Leninism and socialist internationalism, upon the basis of common goals and tasks. These relations are characterized by extensive cooperation in all sectors of social life. The meetings and talks between Comrades Todor Zhivkov and Wojciech Jaruzelski play a particularly important role in the development of all-round Polish-Bulgarian relations; they contribute to the development of these relations to a new level. In recent years the relations between the BCP and the PZPR particularly expanded. We are linked together by the Bulgarian-Polish Friendship, Cooperation, and Mutual Assistance Treaty, by our common Warsaw Pact membership, and by our membership in CEMA. Active cooperation is developing between our sociopolitical organizations, between the sister okrugs and voivodships, and among the working people of both countries. In implementing the accords reached, numerous agreements were signed for specialization and production sharing in the machine-building sectors, in the production of electronic calculating equipment, in chemical industry, and so forth. The scientific-technical cooperation program signed between the People's Republic of Bulgaria and the Polish People's Republic for the period up to 1990 opens new opportunities in this respect. Favorable prerequisites exist for the intensification of integration links through the use of more effective forms and methods of work, through the establishment of joint enterprises, and through direct production links with the participation of hundreds of thousands of working people.

All this demonstrates our cooperation is entering a new stage in its development. We are ready to continue to make our contribution to solving the growing, ever more complicated new tasks which the BCP and PZPR congresses are assigning to us.

Permit me, in closing my speech, dear comrades, to wish the working people in your plant, the working people of Warsaw, the Communists, and all fraternal Polish people great successes in implementing the decisions of the 10th PZPR Congress.

Long live the fraternal friendship and comprehensive cooperation between our two parties and countries, between our two peoples!

Long live peace and socialism!

DEPUTIES REVIEW STATE FINANCIAL REPORTS

LD090823 Warsaw PAP in English 0035 GMT 9 Jul 86

[Text] Warsaw, July 8 -- The Sejm (Parliament) committee for Economic Plan, Budget and Finance, met here today [9 July] under the chairmanship of deputy Jan Kaczmared to review a report on the accomplishment of the state budget, balance of payments and the accomplishment of the national socio-economic plan for the years 1983-85. The meeting was attended by Vice-Premier and Chairman of the Government Planning Commission Manfred Gorywoda.

The meeting opened with a report by Finance Minister Stanislaw Nieckarz on Poland's joining the International Monetary Fund and the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development (the World Bank) last June.

"Poland's membership in these organizations," stressed the minister, "should be viewed in connection with our debt problem. On last June 1, Poland's debt amounted to 31.4 billion dollars. We view the IMF membership as one of the factors supporting the settlement of our problems. However, the key to overcome them is in our hands, and this is first of all a considerable growth of exports."

The committee also reviewed and adopted a report on the accomplishment of the state budget in 1985. The deputies emphasized the strengthening last year of the role and significance of the budget in the system of centrally controlled economy. However, 1985 was another year of unbalanced state budget. The deficit of 35.2 billion zlotys included the central budget deficit of 127.3 billion zlotys and a surplus in local budgets of 92.1 billion zlotys. The central budget closed with results better by 11.7 billion zlotys than planned. The report on the accomplishment of the plan of credits and the balance sheet of money incomes and expenditures of the population in 1985 shows that planned levels were not reached. The planned credit levels were exceeded by over 3437 billion zlotys and the money incomes levels by 368 billion zlotys.

The committee reviewed and adopted Poland's balance of payments along with an assessment of the accomplishment of the plan of foreign financial turnovers last year, emphasizing that the economic solutions in foreign trade were not satisfactory. The committee also stressed the lack of a long-term programme to balance the payments and repay debts.

The committee also reviewed and passed reports on accomplishments of plans of the central fund for development of culture and the state labour reemployment fund. Assessing the report on the accomplishment of the national socio-economic plan for the years 1983-1985 together with realization of the austerity programme, the deputies underscored the consistency in carrying out the policy of social shield to protect the socially weakest groups.

AGRICULTURAL PRODUCE PRICE INCREASE ANNOUNCED

LD010223 Warsaw Domestic Service in Polish 2200 GMT 30 Jun 86

[Text] Purchasing prices paid for agricultural produce are going up as of today [30 June]. The aim of the increase is to maintain the profitability of agricultural production, to make up for the increased production costs that agriculture has no influence over, and to improve the economic conditions of milk and sugar beet production. The principles of the increase were outlined during a press conference in the Ministry of Agriculture, Forestry, and Food Economy.

AGERPRES STATEMENT ON U.S. AID TO CONTRAS

AU302007 Bucharest AGERPRES in English 1900 GMT 30 Jun 86

["Statement of the Romanian News Agency AGERPRES Related to the Support Given by the USA to the Counterrevolutionaries in Nicaragua" -- AGERPRES headline]

[Text] Bucharest AGERPRES 30/6/1986 -- The Romanian News Agency is empowered to state:

The public opinion in Romania has received with feelings of deep concern the decision of the U.S. Administration, recently passed by the House of Representatives, to grant an important financial support to the counterrevolutionary forces that fight against the legal regime in Nicaragua. This measure gravely trespasses the principles of international law, represents a direct interference in the domestic affairs, a threat at the independence and sovereignty of the Republic of Nicaragua, an act of a nature to aggravate further the complex explosive situation in the Central American region. Likewise, such a decision affects the political climate in general, enhances tension and places new obstacles in the way to good live-together in the region, to building a climate of peace and collaboration for which the Republic of Nicaragua, the Contadora Group, the Support Group, and other Latin American countries militate.

Consistent in its foreign-policy principles, with the spirit of understanding, of solving by way of negotiations all the states of conflict, the Socialist Republic of Romania disapproves firmly of this flagrant interference in the domestic affairs of a sovereign state member in the UN, and considers it to be an act aimed against the order of international law, against the Nicaraguan people's legitimate right to freedom, sovereignty and independence, the right to choose by itself, self-dependently the way of life and the path of its economic and social development.

Expressing its solidarity with and support to the cause of the Nicaraguan people, the Romanian people stands firmly and calls for an end to be put to any actions of interference in other states' domestic affairs, and sternly condemns the violations, of any kind, of the norms of international law and jutice, of the principles of the UN Charter.

The USA ought to heed the rightful protests of world public opinion, as well as of public opinion at home renounce the support to the Contras in Nicaragua and make a constructive, negotiating spirit prevail, which should underlie the actions of all the states, be they big or small, in the international arena. A just and lasting resolution of the complex problems in Central America cannot be found by way of the policy of force and interference in those states' internal affairs, but only by way of a political, peaceful settlement, based on the unanimously accepted norms of international law. This is the only solution that meets the requirements of peace, the cause of detente and understanding throughout the world.

SCINTEIA EDITORIAL MARKS 65TH CPC ANNIVERSARY

[Editorial: "An Outstanding Moment in the Life of the Friendly Chinese Communists and People"]

[Text] On 1 July the Chinese Communists and working people celebrate an event of great significance for China's multimillenia-old history: the 65th anniversary of the CPC's founding.

In the past 65 years the Chinese people, led by their Communist Party, have covered a glorious road of struggle. Being a faithful spokesman of the people's strivings and interests and a continuer of their rich revolutionary traditions, the CPC has organized and led the anti-imperialist and antifeudal struggle and has mobilized and guided the masses in the great battles waged against foreign occupiers and for national and social freedom and the socialist revolution.

The CPC's founding occured at a time of sharpened social contradictions generated by feudal oppression and aggravated by imperialist domination, which turned the country into a semicolony. In these circumstancese, there was a great revolutionary upsurge stimulated by the dissemination of Marxist-Leninist ideas and an urgent need was felt for the creation of a party of the workers class which could unite the hundreds of millions of working people and guide them in struggle. This historic event occurred on 1 July 1921 in Shanghai, where representatives of Marxist groupings from various provinces adopted the decision to set up the CPC, the organizer of revolutionary struggles and all the victories which would radically change China's destiny. This even also had a great impact on the entire world's development.

Since its founding, the CPC has inspired and led all class battles waged by the Chinese workers and peasants. It created the People's Liberation Army, which covered itself with glory during the struggles for the country's liberation, and wrote down epic pages in China's history with the "Long March" and the battles waged against Japanese imperialism, which had conquered the country. This long national and social liberation struggle was crowned by the 1 October 1949 victory and the proclamation of the PRC, thus marking the triumph of the revolution and the transition to building a new and socialist society in China. Along the way opened by the Great October Socialist Revolution, the victory of the people's revolution in China has seriously hurt the positions held by imperialism in Asia and throughout the world and has contributed to a large extent to the change that has taken place in the world balance of power by exerting a great influence on the revolutionary struggle of peoples for eliminating foreign domination and attaining freedom, national independence, and social progress.

In the new conditions, having become free masters in their own country, the China people, led by the Communist Party, mobilized their creative strength to eliminate the hardships inherited from the past and build a new life. By creatively applying the general truths of scientific socialism to concrete realities prevailing in China, the CPC guided the efforts of the working masses to attain profound revolutionary changes in all socioeconomic fields. The entire world knows of the outstanding achievements attained by the diligent and talented Chinese people in developing industry, agriculture, science, and culture and raising their material and culture well-being.

The Romanian people follow with interest and warm sympathy the friendly Chinese people's great achievements in their socialist construction and the intensive work to implement the decisions of the 12th CPC Congress and of last year's national party conference as well as the program designed to turn China into a strong socialist state with a modern industry, agriculture, and science and with an even higher living standard. The great achievements of the PRC, along with the achievements of the other socialist countries, make a very important contribution to asserting the superiority of socialism and increasing its force and influence in the world.

Today's anniversary is a happy opportunity for the Romanian Communists and all our people to express our high appreciation for the ties of warm friendship and cooperation between the RCP and CPC and between our countries and peoples. These are lasting ties, established between two parties and peoples which are far away from one another from a geographical viewpoint, but close to each other through the same ideals of struggle, concerns, and aspirations. The Romanian Communists have actively shown their international sympathy and solidarity with the struggle of the Chinese Communists to eliminate foreign domination and gain their freedom. The Romanian people hailed the victory of the revolution and the proclamation of the PRC with great satisfaction; Romanian-Chinese relations have thus acquired a sounder foundation in the new conditions thanks to the common system in our countries and the common goals of socialism and communism.

The links between the leading political forces in the two countries, the RCP and CPC, have been the dynamizing element of the Romanian-Chinese relations of friendship and cooperation. Everybody knows the decisive role played throughout the years by meetings and talks between the party-state leaders of the two countries in Bucharest and Beijing. A most important point in the evolution of Romanian-Chinese relations was the official friendship visit paid last year to the PRC by Comrade Nicolae Ceausescu and Comrade Elene Ceausescu; the decisions adopted on that occasion have opened up new prospects for the higher development of bilateral cooperation in various fields. In this respect, as an expression of the joint determination to utilize the opportunities offered by Romania's and China's economies, which are in the full swing of development, the two sides signed an agreement between the governments of the two countries concerning the development of bilateral economic relations in the 1986-90 period, a long-term agreement on goods exchanges, and other understandings capable of stipulating the mutually advantageous cooperation.

In this respect, Comrade Nicolae Ceausescu stressed: "We are convinced that the further development of Romanian-Chinese friendship, solidarity, and cooperation and the ever broader utilization of new opportunities to expand and diversify economic exchanges and production sharing make an important contribution to accelerating the material and cultural progress of the two countries and increasing the well-being of our peoples, thus serving the overall cause of socialist construction in our country and of socialism, progress, and peace in the world."

The durability of the Romanian-Chinese relations also derives from the fact that they rely on the socialist principles of full equality of rights, respect for national independence and sovereignty, noninterference in domestic affairs, mutual advantage, and comradely assistance; these principles contributed to the greater assertion of these relations, in keeping with the interest of socialist construction in our countries.

It is known that, in its turn, the CPC highly values our party's constant stance in favor of expanding Romanian-Chinese relations and its policy of strengthening the unity of socialist countries. In this respect, Comrade Hu Yaobang, general secretary of the CPC Central Committee, said: "China will never forget those countries which supported and sympathized with our revolution and construction and helped and supported us in difficult times. Romania is among these countries. The Chinese people consider your support and friendship as the best and most valuable thing in the world."

Along with increased cooperation in socialist construction, Romania and China cooperate internationally and actively work for bringing about disarmament, primarily nuclear disarmament, and securing peace, asserting the casue of all nations' freedom and independence, and attaining a new international economic order and a better and more just world.

On this glorious CPC jubilee, all our people extend to the friendly Chinese Communists and people warm greetings and heartfelt wishes for new and great successes in the socialist construction of their fatherland and reiterate the conviction that the Romanian-Chinese relations of friendship, solidarity, and cooperation will further develop to our mutual benefit and in the interest of the overall cause of socialism and peace.

PRESS RELEASE ISSUED ON ZHAO ZIYANG'S VISIT

AU061440 Bucharest AGERPRES in English 0822 GMT 6 86

["Press Release on the Official Visit of Friendship Paid to the Socialist Republic of Romania by Zhao Ziyang, Premier of the State Council of the People's Republic of China" -- AGERPRES headline]

[Text] Bucharest AGERPRES 6/7/1986 -- Comrade Zhao Ziyang, member of the Standing Committee of the Political Bureau of the CC of the Chinese Communist Party, premier of the State Council of the People's Republic of China, paid an official visit of friendship to the Socialist Republic of Romania over July 2-6, 1986, upon an invitation by Comrade Nicolae Ceausescu, general secretary of the Romanian Communist Party, president of the Socialist Republic of Romania, and by Comrade Constantin Dascalescu, prime minister of the Socialist Republic of Romania.

The staff council of premier and the officials accompanying him saw round economic, social, cultural and farming units in Bucharest and in Dolj and Arges Counties, being extended a warm reception as an expression of the feelings of friendship and special esteem which the peoples of the two countries harbour for each other.

Comrade Nicolae Ceausescu, general secretary of the Romanian Communist Party, president of the Socialist Republic of Romania, met and conducted talks with Comrade Zhao Ziyang, member of the Standing Committee of the Political Bureau of the CG of the Chinese Communist Party, premier of the State Council of the People's Republic of China.

On the occasion, Comrade Nicolae Ceausescu, general secretary of the Romanian Communist Party, president of the Socialist Republic of Romania, was conveyed a warm salute and the best wishes of good health and personal happiness, of prosperity and progress for the friendly Romanian people on behalf of Comrades Hu Yaobang, general secretary of the Central Committee of the Chinese Communist Party, Deng Xiaoping, Chairman of the Central Consultative Commission of the Chinese Communist Party, and Li Xiannian, president of the People's Republic of China.

Expressing sincere thanks for that message, Comrade Nicoale Ceausescu conveyed Comrades Hu Yaobang, Deng Xiaoping and Li Xiannian A warm salute and the best wishes of good health and personal happiness, of prosperity and progress for the friendly Chinese people.

During the talks, which passed in a cordial atmosphere of friendship, mutual respect and understanding, information was exchanged on current concerns for socialist construction in Romania and China, the stage of bilateral links was examined, with particular stress on the way in which the decisions and understandings reached during the Beijing summit of October 1985 are implemented, and opinions were exchanged on the major problems of the international life.

On the occasion, it was noted with satisfaction that the traditional relations of close friendship, collaboration and solidarity between the Romanian Communist Party and the Chinese Communist Party, between the Socialist Republic of Romania and the People's Republic of China, between the peoples of the two countries developed successfully, on the basis of a strict observance of the principles of national independence and sovereignty, full equality of rights, non-interference in internal affairs, mutual advantage and comradely mutual assistance.

In that framework, emphasis was placed on the deciding role of the Romanian-Chinese summit meetings and talks, which gave further decisive impact to the powerful development of cooperation between the two parties, countries and peoples, both bilaterally and in the international life. More particularly, the significance of the results of the official visit Comrade Nicolae Ceausescu, general secretary of the Romanian Communist Party, president of the Socialist Republic of Romania, and Comrade Elena Ceausescu paid to the People's Republic of China in October 1985 and the understandings reached on the occasion with comrades in the party and state leadership of the People's Republic of China, which laid the lasting foundations of cooperation between the two countries over 1986-1990 and, beyond, until the year 2000 were highlighted.

The belief was expressed that broad possibilities existed for the further expansion and diversification of the Romanian-Chinese links on the political, economic, technical, scientific and cultural planes, as well as in other areas of mutual interest, and so was the determination to work most firmly along that line for the benefit of the Romanian and Chinese peoples, of the cause of peace, socialism and collaboration throughout the world.

During the exchange of opinions on major international problems of mutual concern, Comrade Nicolae Ceausescu and Comrade Zhao Ziyang noted with satisfaction that the assessments contained in the communique released at the end of the summit visit paid to the People's Republic of China in October 1985 had proved fully valid, the fact being also highlighted that the Socialist Republic of Romania and the People's Republic of China shared identical or very close stances on the major problems confronting contemporary mankind. The two countries' deep concern was expressed over the serious international situation and stress was laid on the fact that the maintenance and furtherance of the arms races, of the nuclear arms race in the first place and the deployment of new nuclear weapons in Europe enhanced the threat of a new world war, which would ineluctably turn nuclear. That is why, both countries consider that the fundamental problems of the contemporary epoch are the safeguarding of world peace, the fight against aggression and war, a passage to disarmament, to nuclear disarmament in the first place, an end to the emplacement of intermediate-range nuclear missiles in Europe and the withdrawal of the ones in place, the reunification of all nuclear missiles and weapons in the other parts of the world, a halt to outer space militarization.

Romania and China consider that although the threat of a new world conflagration still exists, the forces of peace have asserted themselves ever more in the international arena and that, consequently, the peoples, the progressive forces everywhere can prevent the outbreak of a new war and ensure the safeguarding of peace in the world through joint actions.

Emphasis was placed on Romania's and China's firm determination to work, alongside the peoples in other countries of the world, for an immediate end to the arms race and the achievement of a passage to palpable measures of general disarmament, of nuclear disarmament in the first place, to further make sustained efforts for the elimination from the international life of the policy of violating the national independence and sovereignty of other states, of interference in their domestic affairs, or recourse to the use and threat of force against other countries.

The imperative need was underscored for intensified politial and diplomatic efforts to peacefully settle interstate disputes, to eliminate the hotbeds of tension from all the regions of the world, in the interest of international peace, stability and detente.

At the same time, stress was laid on the imperious need to pass on to a global resolution of the economic problems which face the developing countries, of the foreign debt problem too, to eradicate underdevelopment and establish a new international economic order and new-type relations on full equality and equity among states to provide for the faster economic and social progress of all states, of the developing countries in the first place. In that context, the active support was reiterated Romania and China grant to the strengthening of solidarity and the intensification of cooperation among developing countries and the need was underscored for those countries, for the developed states to make concerted sustained efforts for a recovery of the economy of developing countries, for a steady, harmonious and sound growth of world economy.

Romania and China attach great importance to the participation of the small and medium-sized countries, of the nonaligned states, of the developing countries in the international life, to their growing role in the resolution of the serious problems of the contemporary world, in the interest of all peoples, of the cause of peace and understanding throughout the world. In that framework, the hope was expressed that the future non-aligned summit to be held in Zimbabwe this year would contribute to strengthening those states' unity and solidarity, to enhancing their role in the resolution of the complex problems of the international life.

The proclamation of 1986 as the International Year of Peace by the UN General Assembly was welcomed and the need was stressed for that world organization's growing role in solving the major problems of the contemporary world in the interests of the peoples.

Satisfaction was expressed at the close cooperation between Romania and China internationally and the determination was set forth to expand their cooperation at the UN and in other international organizations.

Official talks were conducted between the prime minister of the Socialist Republic of Romania and the premier of the State Council of the People's Republic of China, which passed in a friendly atmosphere of mutual esteem and full understanding, and they focused on an analysis of the stage of bilateral links, in the economic area in particular.

During the talks, the current stage of commercial exchanges and economic cooperation between the two countries was examined. In the spirikt of the agreement between the Government of the socialist Republic of Romania and the Government of the People's Republic of China on the development of bilateral economic relations over 1986-1990, of the long-term agreement between the two governments on major commodity exchanges over 1986-1990, which were signed in Beijing in October 1985, of the other documents concluded between the two countries, tasks were set for relevant economic ministries and organizations in consideration of the experience acquired so far, the existing growing potential, the needs and possibilities of the national economies of the two countries concerning the identification of new ways and means to provide for a strong, further growth of commercial exchanges and economic cooperation on stable, long-term, mutually advantageous terms.

At the end of the visit, the prime minister of the Socialist Republic of Romania and the premier of the State Council of the People's Republic of China expressed their deep satisfaction at the productive results of the talks conducted in Romania, considering them to be a new and significant contribution to the strengthening and expansion of the links of friendship, collaboration and solidarity between the two parties, countries and peoples.

On behalf of the officials accompanying him, as well as on his own behalf, Premier Zhao Ziyang expressed gratitude to Comrade Nicolae Ceausescu, general secretary of the Romanian Communist Party, president of the Socialist Republic of Romania, and keen thanks to Comrade Constantin Dascalescu, prime minister of the Socialist Republic of Romania for the warm reception and hospitality extended to them throughout their visit, as an expression of the traditional feelings of friendship, esteem and solidarity between the Romanian and Chinese peoples.

On behalf of Comrades Hu Yaobang, general secretary of the Central Committee of the Chinese Communist Party, and Li Xiannian, president of the People's Republic of China, as well as on his own behalf, Comrade Zhao Ziyang, premier of the State Council of the People's Republic of China, invited Comrade Nicolae Ceausescu, general secretary of the Romanian Communist Party, president of the Socialist Republic of Romania, and Comrade Elena Ceausescu to pay a new official visit of friendship to the People's Republic of China at a convenient time. Furthermore, the premier of the State Council of the People's Republic of China invited Comrade Constantin Dascalescu, prime minister of the Socialist Republic of Romania, to pay an official visit to the People's Republic of China. The invitations were accepted with pleasure. The dates of the visits will be set later on, through diplomatic channels.

ANNIVERSARY OF TREATY WITH USSR MARKED

["Lasting Romanian-Soviet Links of Friendship and Many-Sided Collaboration" -- AGERPRES headline]

[Text] Bucharest AGERPRES 5/7/1986 -- The anniversary of 16 years since the signing of a new treaty of friendship, collaboration and mutual assistance between Romania and the Soviet Union on July 7, is an opportunity to reiterate the Romanian people's feelings of warm friendship for the Soviet peoples, the belief that the relations of productive bilateral cooperation will develop further in the future.

Enriching the provisions of the first treaty (of February 1948), which had provided a framework for the fruitful ties of alliance between Romania and the Soviet Union for more than two decades, the treaty of July 7, 1970, was -- in the conditions of the new historical stage -- a crowning of the traditional relations of friendship and solidarity between the peoples of the two countries, between their advanced revolutionary social forces. The strengthening of the Romanian-Soviet links of friendship is an organic part of the foreign policy promoted by the RCP and the Romanian state, within which the continuous expansion of cooperation and solidarity with the socialist countries, with the neighboring socialist countries in the first place, is a permanent principle, and special attention is being paid to the deepening of friendly collaboration with the USSR. We consider that the strengthening of collaboration among all socialist ocuntries is of special importance for the growing prestige of socialism, for peace and collaboration throughout the world, RCP general secretary, Nicolae Ceausescu said in the speech he delivered at the 27th CPSU Congress.

The treaty has proved a powerful instrument for the continuous expansion of the Romanian-Soviet many-sided collaboration. The joint declaration of 1976, as well as other documents signed by Romania and the USSR at top level -- documents which improved and materialized the provisions of the treaty and were also productive working programmes for the deepening of mutually advantageous cooperation -- were of great significance for the ascending course of those relations.

A deciding role in the development of Romanian-Soviet links is played by the ties of friendship and solidarity between the leading political forces of the two countries -- the Romanian Communist Party and the Communist Party of the Soviet Union -- and, more particularly by the summit meetings and talks, by the decisions and understandings reached on the occasions, which opened prospects to Romanian-Soviet collaboration on all planes. In this respect, the meetings between Nicolae Ceausescu, RCP general secretary and president of the Republic, and Mikhail Gorbachev, general secretary of the CC of the CPSU, held last year and in May this year, were of great political importance, as they went down as moments of major significance for the development of relations between the two countries and peoples.

The two leaders reiterated the mutual wish to work for the further expansion and growing efficiency of commercial, economic, technical and scientific relations, on mutually advantageous terms. In this respect, the long-term programme for the development of economic, technical and scientific collaboration between Romania and the USSR until the year 2000, which was signed during President Nicolae Ceausescu's visit to Moscow, opens favourable prospects.

The implementation of the provisions under that programme will encourage a stepped up growth of commodity exchanges, the deepening of cooperation in and specialization of production, the satisfaction of the requirements of the national economies for raw materials, fuels, machinery, equipment and consumer goods to a larger extent, the intensification of cooperation in science and technology, in line with the ever broader possibilities offered by the economies of the two countries, which will contribute to the resolution of major economic problems of mutual concern. The two countries pay special attention to the rise in the quality of their collaboration, the use of new ways and forms to promote it in their mutual interest, the development of links between economic organizations and scientific institutions.

The Romanian-Soviet economic cooperation, which has been expanding continuously on the bilaterial plane, has been developing multilaterally as well, within the CMEA. The two countries successfully implement the understandings endorsed by the economic summit of CMEA countries held in June 1984, carry on sustained activites to implement the technical-scientifc programme of CMEA countries until the year 2000, to jointly solve such problems as the satisfaction of requirements for fuel, energy, raw materials, machines, equipment and modern technologies.

At the same time, Romanian-Soviet collaboration in science, culture, the arts, education and mass media expands, to contribute to better mutual knowledge of the two countries' achievements in various areas of activity. The signing this year of the programme for the application of the agreement on cultural collaboration between Romania and the Soviet Union over 1986-1990 plays an important part. Collaboration on the level of trade union and youth organizations, friendship associations and other public organizations, on a sporting and tourist line also develops continuously.

Romania and the Soviet Union cooperate actively in the international arena. The fact is well known that Romania welcomed and most firmly supports the proposals Mikhail Gorbachev, general secretary of the CC of the CPSU, advanced on January 15 this year in connection with a passage to the implementation of a phased-out disarmament programme until the year 2000. These proposals, along with those set forth during the recent meeting of the Political Consultative Committee of the Warsaw Treaty participating states, which, as President Nicolae Ceausescu showed, correspondingly complement one another, open real prospects, for the first time in history, for a passage to disarmament and the complete elimination of wars from mankind's life.

CEAUSESCU CONGRATULATES RENOVICA ON ELECTION

[Text] To Comrade Milanko Renovica, president of the LCY Central Committe Presidium

On the occasion of your election to the office of president of the LCY Central Committee Presidium, on behalf of the RCP Central Committee and on my behalf, I convey to you warm congratulations and best wishes for success in fulfilling the function of high responsibility bestowed upon you. Likewise, I wish you, the LCY Central Committee, all the Communists, and the working people in friendly Yugoslavia full success in implementing the decisions adopted by the 13th Congress for building the socialist society in your homeland.

I express great value for the traditional Romanian-Yugolav relations and I express my belief that the relations of friendship and cooperation between the RCP and the LCY will continue to develop in the interest of the Romanian and Yugoslav peoples and the cause of socialism, international cooperation, security, and peace throughout the world.

PRC'S ZHAO ZIYANG CONTINUES SLOVENIA VISIT

Visits Work Organizations

LD090905 Belgrade TANJUG Domestic Service in Serbo-Croatian 0810 GMT 9 Jul 86

[Text] Ljubljana, 9 Jul (TANJUG) -- PRC Premier Zhao Ziyang, and members of his delegation had talks with representatives of a number of work organizations from Slovenia in the Smelt work organization of Ljubljana this morning.

It was emphasized that contacts so far have produced good results and have established a sound basis for expanding economic cooperation particularly in industry, transport, the pharmaceutical industry, scientific and technical research, and tourism. The Chinese premier and members of the delegation displayed particular interest in the work and results of the Smelt, Iskra, Gorenje-Emona, and several other work organizations which enjoy a reputation in the PRC as being respectable business partners.

It was also stressed during the meeting that all the necessary preconditions exist for cooperation at higher levels, for the realization of joint projects, and for Yugslav-Chinese joint ventures in third markets.

Today the PRC premier and members of his delegation will visit the Luka Koper work organization and the Bernadin tourist complex in Portoroz.

Holds Talks With France Popit

LD092241 Belgrade TANJUG in English 2118 GMT 9 Jul 86

[Text] Ljubljana, July 9 (TANJUG) -- Chinese Prime Minister Zhao Ziyang, who is currently in the Yugoslav Republic of Slovenia, had talks with President of the Republican Presidency of Slovenia France Popit today. During the talks, prospects were reviewed for increasing Slovenia's participation in overall Yugoslav-Chinese economic cooperation.

Both sides emphasized the wish for to-date trade contacts to serve as a basis for broader economic exchanges. The Slovenian economy, it was said, offered major prospects, since many work organizations from that Yugoslav republic are already successfully participating in Yugoslav-Chinese economic relations.

The Chinese prime minister and members of the Chinese delegation are closing their visit to Slovenia tommorrow, and the five-day official and friendly visit to Yugoslavia.

In the course of their 5-day official visit Zhao Ziyang and other PRC officials conducted a series of talks which concentrated on ways of further expanding Yugoslav-Chinese cooperation. At meetings with top Yugoslav officials particular attention was focused on bilateral economic relations.

FEDERAL ASSEMBLY COMMITTEE DISCUSSES PRICES

LD092004 Belgrade TANJUG Domestic Service in Serbo-Croatian 1555 GMT 9 Jul 86

["Session of the Markets and Prices Committee of the Chamber of the Republics and Provinces of the SFRY Assembly" -- TANJUG headline]

[Excerpts] Belgrade, 9 Jul (TANJUG) -- The Federal Prices Institute will propose that the Federal Executive Council look into the possibility of returning prices to the February level for those products whose prices had not gone up considerably before the decision was adopted to change the way prices are controlled. This was said by Branko Gostovic, deputy director of the Federal Price Institute, at today's session of the Markets and Prices Committee of the Chamber of the Republics and Provinces of the SFRY Assembly. He said the prices of those products and services which were determined on the basis of shared elements established in the medium-term plan (energy, railway, and postal and telecommunications services) are also increasing considerably. Therefore, in forming these prices and working out shared elements there should be more agreement-seeking between work organizations and federal organs in charge of prices.

Speaking about price trends in the first half of the year, Andrija Jovicic, assistant director of the Federal prices Institute, said that it is particularly worrying that in June food expenses "have jumped" by as much as 109 percent (in relation to June of 1985). The prices of the producers of industrial products in June were up by 71 percent as compared to the same month last year, which is by far less than their retail prices, where the increase is around 92 percent. Jovicic explained this difference by the fact that manufacturer's oil prices were lowered while retail prices remained unchanged. Apart from this, the June statistics also recorded an exceptionally high increase in the prices of services which are not taken into consideration in calculations of retail prices. [passage omitted]

PRESIDENCY DISCUSSES CONSTITUTIONAL CHANGES

[Text] Belgrade, 9 Jul (TANJUG) -- The SFRY Presidency held a session presided over by President Sinan Hasani in Belgrade today. As one of the constitutionally established authorized proposers, the Presidency carried out an exchange of views on the character and dynamics of changes in individual regulations in the SFRY Constitution to further develop and improve the functioning of the political system of socialist self-management. The Presidency believes that it is necessary to intensify organized work to prepare a proposal to change individual regulations in the SFRY Constitution, so that it can be sent to the SFRY Assembly in autumn according to regular procedures.

These proposals should contribute to the further strengthening and affirmation of the fundamental regulations of our society and to a more efficient functioning of the political system of socialist self-management. The Presidency also pointed out the significance of continuing and intensifying positive changes in the behavior of all subjects of our society in the direction of more work and effort, carrying out what has been agreed upon, obeying laws, and strengthening personal and collective responsibility.

The SFRY Presidency also discussed a report on the capability of the state security service and supported measures for the improved functioning and execution of the tasks this service is responsible for in our society.

JUSTICE COMMITTEE DISCUSSES POLITICAL DELINQUENCY

LD091401 Belgrade TANJUG Domestic Service in Serbo-Croatian 1210 GMT 9 Jul 86

[Excerpt] Belgrade, 9 Jul (TANJUG) -- In view of the exceptional dangers generated by the acts of political crime, the delegates in the Federal Chamber's committee for Justice today described as disturbing the fact that the volume of political delinquency in 1984 and up to mid-1985 remained unchanged. According to the figures presented, last year 763 persons were reported and 335 were sentenced for committing political crimes. Although political crimes constitute only 0.31 percent of the overall number of crimes, the committee expressed displeasure over the high incidence of serious crimes in the structure of this type of crime. It was stressed that particular concern is being caused by the activity of all types against brotherhood and unity and country's independence; by the enemy's activity through the legal institutions of the system and; in particular, by the nationalists' growing influence among the young.

In discussing the document on the analysis of political delinquency in the country, the committee concluded that the organs responsible for suppressing such delinquency acted in an efficient and legal manner, but that the need for action by all subjects of social self-protection still exists in preventing political crimes.

The committee delegates also called for a more thorough analysis of the differences in the penal policies applied in individual republics and provinces. This analysis would help to establish whether the differences arose as a result of the individualization of the crimes (which would be justified) or whether they arose due to the differing views as to the social danger posed by the acts committed (which would not be justified).

Stojan Djuranovic, president of the Federal Court, stressed that political crimes were being uncovered with increased efficiency, that courts were giving priority to these crimes, and that in the past they acted within the law. He also said that certain differences in the penal policies did exist, but that these were not serious. According to the Federal Court, the penal policy is generally adequate for the type and seriousness of these crimes. This is illustrated by the fact that 33 percent of the accused were given unconditional sentences ranging from 1 to 15 years and the rest were given sentences over 3 years. In Stojan Djordjevic's view. These cannot be called lenient sentences. [passage omitted]

Prosecutors Discuss Kosovo

[Excerpts] Pristina, 9 Jul (TANJUG) -- Apart from their high degree of promptness achieved in matters of political crime, the public prosecutor's offices in Kosovo are less efficient in starting procedures for other types of crime and violations of law. Indeed, prosecutors cannot act on their own if they do not quickly receive signals and information if they receive none at all from competent organs and individuals. For example, the legal deadline for starting a procedure to annul contracts on selling and buying real estate under duress is about to expire, while this action is yet to start.

This was pointed out today at a meeting beteween Milos Bakic, federal public prosecutor, with the republican prosecutors of Serbia, Montenegro, and Macedonia and the provincial public prosecutors of Kosovo, devoted to the agreement for implementing the conclusions of the SFRY Presidency and the LCY Central Committee Presidium on measures for normalizing the situation in Kosovo.

The Kosovo courts still do not have procedures to annul such contracts, while the clients are not showing initiative in starting them. As it turned out, it is not completely clear against whom they should be undertaken. Because of this the Kosovo prosecutors were criticized for only now pointing out these problems. Moreover, since trade in real estate has been going on outside the law for years, it is not being taxed, and nobody is called to account for such evasions. [passage omitted]

Among other things the Kosovo prosecutors said that these were completely new issues for them with specific problems and that they could not deal with them without assistance from the federal and republican prosecutors. [passage omitted]

On the other hand, prosecutors commented on the lack of promptness in the work of the courts in the province. For example, it has been noticed that while early sentences passed for political crimes were severe, they have recently become less so. However, prosecutors do not react promptly to this either.

At a meeting it was also said that people should be called to account for not respecting legal obligations and deadliness for solving these problems.

KOSOVO LC COMMITTEE ADOPTS PROGRAM ON TASKS

LD091443 Belgrade TANJUG Domestic Service in Serbo-Croatian 1146 GMT 9 Jul 86

[Text] Pristina, 9 Jul (TANJUG) -- At its session today the Provincial Committee of the Kosovo LC established its tasks of further promoting and improving the method of work and activity of the LC organizations and organs in the province. It was stressed during the session that the situation in the province called for generalized criticism, and for statements and descriptions of the situation to be replaced by the activity that would transform words into concrete actions and implement what had been agreed upon.

The warning was given tdhat forum-type work and communication through paper and documents between the party organs and organizations must be replaced with direct contacts. In accordance with the calls for new approaches and methods on the part of the Kosovo LC, the program and plan of work of the Provincial Committee and its bodies up to the middle of 1987 was adopted. The program specifies the most important issues to be dealt with and duties stemming from the stance adopted at top-level party meetings and from the measures laid down by the SFRY Presidency and the Presidium of the LCY Central Committee.

SERBIAN LC CENTRAL COMMITTEE SESSION HELD

Agenda Discussed

LD091737 Belgrade TANJUG Domestic Service in Serbo-Croatian 0826 GMT 9 Jul 86

[Text] Belgrade, 9 Jul (TANJUG) -- The directions for forther action on the stabilization of economic and political conditions, as well as the main questions to be solved in which communists and their leaderships must urgently become involved, are clearly established with the congress stands. This was also the starting point in the preparations of the work program of the Serbian LC Central Committee and its Presidium, which are on the agenda of today's session of the Central Committee.

This primarily refers to the need, as Zoran Sokolovic, secretary of the Presidium, said in his introductory report, to resolutely continue the process of necessary changes in social practice in the economic and political system, to intensify the ideological struggle of the League of Communists and to overcome inertia, opportunism, passivity, and the lack of unity more speedily and successfully.

This Central Committee and its Presidium in the coming months will devote primary attention to the concrete questions of socioeconomic development: shifting the burden of the economy, self-managing integration, employment, and so forth. In the entire Serbian LC, and in each organization and organ, people must resolutely and without vacillation persevere in implementing tasks and in promoting unity and togetherness in the SR of Serbia, while the greatest responsibility for this is borne by the Central Committee, provincial committees and their presidiums. The work of all organs, organizations and members of the League of Communists in the republic, Sokolovic stressed, must also be directed toward providing most immediate assistance to communists and the leaderships of the Kosovo LC in conducting more resolute political actions which have received strong support in the conclusions and measures of the LCY Central Committee Presidium and the SFRY Presidency.

MONTENEGRIN LC CC VIEWS INCOME MANAGEMENT

[Excerpts] Titograd, 9 Jul (TANJUG) -- It is high time that we break with the established practice of reaching agreement on what has already been agreed upon and effectively and consistently put into effect the political conclusions and constitutional orientations, because this is the precondition for a more rapid way out of the economic and social crisis. This warning was voiced at today's joint session of the Montenegrin LC Central Committee Presidium and the Presidium of the Republican Council of the Trade Union Federation, which discussed the implementation of the stands of the 24th LCY Central Committee session relating to the realization of the constitutional position of workers in the management of income and the means of social reproduction. The debate should serve to prepare for the coming session of the LC Central Committee of this republic, which will establish the tasks of the LC in putting into effect the constitutional principle of the decisive role of workers in the disposal of total income.

Milovan Djurickovic, member of the LC Presidium, noted in his opening speech the very serious tasks which will not be at all easy to implement in such a very complex economic situation. On the contrary, he considers that, along with the application of the new packages of measures, it will be very difficult to implement the stands of the LCY Central Committee without certain upheavals and resistance. [passage omitted]

Since Montenegro is in a very specific position, with the indebtedness of its economy twice as high as the average for the country, personal incomes one fifth below the average for Yugoslavia, and unsettled debts reaching worrying proportions, it was noted that the application of the new measures would mean difficulties in a large number of work collectives in the payment of the already low personal incomes. It was said, therefore, that all workers must be familiarized in detail with the essence of the stands of the 24th session of the LCY Central Committee and with the measures which are being approved, otherwise the action will not yield the desired results. In this connection some participants in today's session criticized the latest drastic increase in the price of bread without all working people and citizens being informed on time and in detail of the reasons contributing to the high price jump of this basic foodstuff. it was noted, in fact, that such moves are not in keeping with the political stands of the recently concluded congresses of the LC and Trade Union Federation and that they could lead to undesirable social and political consequences.

CROATIAN PRESIDENCY DISCUSSES ECONOMIC TRENDS

[Excerpt] Zagreb, 9 Jul (TANJUG) -- All economic trends in the first half of the year go against the adopted orientations.

It is becoming apparent that industry has reorientated itself toward the domestic market and this adds to the inflationary effect, despite the restrictive credit and monetary policy, through unrealistically high personal incomes and investment. It is therefore necessary to give a greater foreign exchange stimulus to exports within the framework of the existing system, and if this is not possible, to change the system.

These views were expressed at today's session of the Presidency of the SR of Croatia which analyzed economic trends and the realization of eonomic policies in the Republic and the country in the first half of the year.

According to the information put forward, industrial production in Croatia rose by 4.1 percent in the first 5 months of the year as compared to the same period last year, while in the country as a whole it rose by 5.3 percent. The level of employment is up by 3 percent. Exports of commodities are dowm 16.7 percent in Croatia, and by 3.8 percent in the whole country. Imports are down by 4.2 percent in Croatia, and by 0.4 percent in the whole country. At the same time, personal incomes have more than doubled.

As far as tourism is concerned, more overnight stays have been achieved in the first 5 months than last year, but in June there were 10 percent fewer tourists, and of these there were 12 percent fewer foreigners, while there were 1-2 percent more domestic tourists. [passage omitted]

FEDERAL STATISTICS INSTITUTE REPORTS ON INFLATION

[Summary] Belgrade, 3 Jul (TANJUG) --According to the latest figures released by the Federal Statistics Institute, June's retail prices were up by 91.8 percent as compared to the same month last year and 44.2 percent up from last December's prices.

In comparison with May, June prices were 6.3 percent higher. The June inflation was sparked by dearer transport, meat, fruit, radio and television licenses, and increased prices of a number of industrial products. The cost of living in June was 5.8 percent higher than in May while in comparison with June of last year it rose by 96.1 percent.

ALAI ADDRESSES TROOPS ON ARMY ANNIVERSARY

AU100840 Triana ATA in English 0730 GMT 10 Jul 86

[Text] Tirana, July 10 (ATA) --Today's newspaperes, ZERI I POPULLIT, BASHKIMI and LUFTETARI front page report on the meeting of Comrade Ramiz Alia; first secretary of the Central Committee of the party and the general commander of the Armed Forces, with cadres of the Army. The meeting was organized on the occasion of the July 10th celebration, the 43rd anniversary of the creation of our People's Army and the conclusion of the military training in Durres district.

When Comrade Ramiz Alia entered the hall the militarymen present at the "Aleksander Moisiu" theater of Durres, where the meeting took place, burst out into applauses and cheers for our glorious party. The meeting was also attended by other party and state leaders. Amidst the enthusiasm of those present Comrade Ramiz Alia took the floor.

I am very happy to meet with you, comrade officers, commanders, and commissars of the units of our People's Army, Comrade Ramiz Alia said among others. I avail myself of the opportunity to bring to you and to all the effectives of our Armed Forces the most ardent greetings of the Central Committee of the party and the best wishes for the fulfilment of the duties you have been charged with by the people.

I also greet you on July 10th celebration, the anniversary of the founding of the People's Army, one of the most significant dates in the history of our national liberation war.

By celebrating this event we confirm and emphasize the uninterrupted continuity and links of our present day Army with the Army which was founded, reared and educated by our great glorious leader, Comrade Enver Hoxha, with the Army which brought freedom and independence to our people, which defended and defends the victories of revolution and socialism.

The defence of the homeland, its freedom and independence, the defence of the victories of socialism has been and remains a sacred duty for everybody. The party has always seen this vital question in close connection and unity with other fundamental tasks it has carried out at every stage of revolution.

The Army and the people in our country are inseparable, they are united by the same ideal and the same interests, by the ideal of the freedom and independence of the homeland, by the ideal of socialism.

We do not intend to attack any county, we do not intend to occupy any foreign territory. But, we will also never allow anyone to violate our borders, to seize even the smallest track of land from our country.

With its characteristic maturity and farsightedness, our party and our unforgettable leader, Comrade Enver Hoxha, said further on Cormade Ramiz Alia, have provided our Army with a clear, political, ideological and military orientation which is embodied in the people's military art. This art, which the party has elaborated in accordance with our conditions and possibilities, also defines the roads for an efficient use of the military forces and means so that they guarantee the defence of the homeland the victory over any aggressor.

Our party of labour has set up a whole original system for the military training of the people and the military preparation of the entire country. The setting up of the free military school and its extension throughout the country constitute a creative application of the teachings of Lenin in the concrete conditions of our country.

Further on Comrade Ramiz Alia said that our people are a brave, courageous people, who are determined to defend the freedom and independence of the homeland at any cost. These lofty patriotic virtues, which have been inherited from one generation to another, have been deeply inculcated in them by the party and socialism. These virtues gain strength and are turned into a decisive factor when they are also associated with a high military preparation, when they are in unity with the combat abilities of the people.

From this stems the great importance of the training, which is indispensable for the ceaseless strengthening of the combat readiness. In the organization of the training we are guided by the requirements of our military art, which is based on the teachings of Comrade Enver Hoxha, on his Marxist-Leninist, theoretical military thought.

The party, Comrade Ramiz Alia continued, has worked and will work to ensure that in the future too our people be politically, ideologically and militarily prepared and capable to successfully cope with any possible situation and emerge always victorious.

After speaking about the educative workwith the communists, cadres and all the effecives and structures of our Armed Forces, about the strengthening of the links between the cadres and the soldiers, as well as between the army and the people, about the constant enhancement of the active, conscious role of the organisation of the Labour Youth Union of Albania in the Army, Comrade Ramiz Alia dwelt on the international probems and the political-military situations created in the world, on the aggressive policy of the two superpowers, American imperialism and Soviet socialimperialism.

In conclusion Comrade Ramiz Alia said: After the latest plenums of the Central Committee of the party we notice that the inexhaustible energies of the broad masses of our people, the heroic youth and our creative intelligentsia have burst out everywhere. the effectives of our People's Army, and all the Armed Forces are also making preparations to go to the 9th Congress of the party and 45th anniversary of its founding being closely linked with and eternally loyal to the party and people, in a state of high readiness for the defence of our socialist homeland.

His speech was listened to with a great attention.

The meeting was declared closed by the minister of the people's defence, Comrade Prokop Murra.

Comrade Ramiz Alia was seen off with a great love by the cadres of the Army and the inhabitants of the city of Durres.

MEETINGS WITH USSR TRADE UNION GROUP ENDS

AU101225 Sofia Domestic Service in Bulgarian 1730 GMT 9 Jul 86

[Text] The final talks werre held today in Sofia between the visiting Soviet delegation from the All-Union Central Council of Trade Unions, led by the Central Council's chairman Stephan Shalayev, and the delegation of the Central Council of Bulgarian Trade Unions led by Petur Dyulgerov, chairman of the Central Council. The common view was once again voiced that the cooperation between the two trade union organizations is continuously developing and deepening, and will undoubtedly contribute toward implementing the strategic tasks posed by the 13th BCP Congress and the 27th CPSU Congress for the accelerated socioeconomic development of our fraternal countries.

Comrades Petur Dyulgerov and Stepan Shalayev signed a long-term agreement for the further development of the cooperation and drawing together of our countries' trade unions. The Soviet guests laid wreaths in front of the Georgi Dimitrov Mausoleum and at the Soviet Army Memorial.

Later, at a press conference for representatives of the mass media and foreign jounalists accredited in Bulgaria, Petur Dyulgerov and Stepan Shalayev, the leaders of the two trade union delegations, gave detailed answers to the journalists' numerous questions relating to the ten days of Bulgarian-Soviet trade union cooperation.

BTA COMMENTATOR ON MITTERRAND-GORBACHEV TALKS

["Dialogue in the Name of Peace" -- BTA headline]

[Text] Sofia, July 10 (BTA commentator Venelin Mitev) -- The talks between Mr. Mikhail Gorbachev and Mr. Francois Mitterrand in Moscow have proven the vitally of the policy of detente. The Soviet Union and France are developing and promoting their relations in the spirit of the Helsinki Final Act.

The Moscow summit has shown that the Soviet Union and France, regardless of their belonging to different economic and social systems and to opposing political and military alliances, can and should be partners in the resolution of the cardinal issues of peace and security.

As it was no surprise to anyone that Paris was the first Western capital to which Mr. Mikhail Gorbachev paid an official visit last October after being elected secretary general of the CC of the CPSU, now it was also no surprise that the talks in the Kremlin passed in a spirit of sincerity, high responsibility and a striving to mutual understanding. It was with satisfaction that the two sides noted the progress achieved in Soviet-French cooperation and what is most important they showed goodwill for the further promotion of bilateral cooperation.

The dialogue in the Kremlin proved the conviction that the Soviet Union and France, which were the initiators of detente in the 60's, regard their cooperation as an important factor for peace and security in Europe and the world. It is not fortuitous that most commentaries on the Moscow summit laid emphasis on the importance of the continuation and activation of the dialogue between the two countries in the present turning point in the development of international relations.

At the same time it was also no surprise that the present Soviet-French talks showed some differences in opinion between the two countries. These ensure from the different ideologies and stands on some foreign political issues. However, what is more important is that the talks were prevailed [as received] by political realism, that they outlined some common stands and some points of contact and that the two sides laid emphasis on the necessity to continue their efforts for doing away with the threat of a nuclear catastrophe and for effecting an irreversible revival of the process of detente.

The present experience has shown that the importance of each new impetus to the promotion of Soviet-French relations goes beyond the framework of bilateral relations. And Mr. Francois Mitterrand's visit to Moscow will doubtless give such an impetus to bilateral relations. As a result of the four-day talks between the Soviet Union and France progress has been achieved in the resolution of the difficult problems which are now facing the world -- the preservation of world peace and the prevention of a nuclear war.

BCP SECRETARIAT DECISION ON PARTY CONTROL

[Genho Boshnakov commentary "Party Control -- Among the Burning Issues of Our Time"]

[Text] In according with the amendments of Article 46, line IV of the BCP Statute, the BCP Central Committee Secretariat decided to reorganize the former auditing commissions of municipal and rayon party organizations with more than 3,000 members into control-auditing commissions.

This is another new element in our party-political practice! So far the municipal, rayon, and town party organizations were entitled to elect control-auditing commissions only if they had more than 10,000 members, otherwise they were entitled to auditing commissions only.

What is the difference between the two types of commissions? The difference lines in the extension of their functions and of their action, above all, and not in the number of members. The auditing commissions contributed with their activities of the observance of the BCP Central Committee instructions, as regards the correct management of financial and business activities of the party organizations and their leaderships, as well as the correct handling and careful preservation of party documents and property. The functions of these organs are mainly of an auditing character, but they do not deal with cases of communists and with their petitions regarding such cases.

Control and Audit Commissions, on the other hand, have the right of control: They exert control over the behavior of the communists, holding them responsible whenever they violate the BCP Program or Statute, when they vioilate socialist law and morality. Such commissions also exert control over letters, complaints, objections, and proposals submitted by party members and working people, as well as over the budgets of party committees, and so forth.

Party control has intensified, it has made great strides from inner party life to the strategic tasks assigned by the 13th BCP Congress; party control now plays a role in solving these tasks, in implementing economic intensification and the scientific-technical revolution in our country. Why is this so? We know what awaits us in the future. It is enough to recall that over 15 years we have to treble the national income and labor productivity. How will we accomplish this task? Naturally, we will build up a modern material-technical base, we will create and apply the highest scientific and technical achievements, we will perfect management, and we will assert the new style of work. This is all true, but we also know that all this depends upon man, upon the working and party collective, upon their leadership. What does this imply? It implies that we must convince and train the individuals and the collectives, both professionally and psychologically, that we must assist them, if we wish to achieve the desired results, that they must be an object of systematic, daily, political, and social control, which will guide them in the main trends of work, so that they may achieve a qualitatively, new growth of the economy, and so that they may guarantee the achievement of our goals.

A good example of this respect is the investigation carried out jointly by the BCP Central Control and Audit Commission and the Committee of State and People's Control, and the RABOTNICHESKO DELO editorial board on the utilization of the Danube for irrigation purposes.

In the scientific-technical and socioeconomic policy of our party comprehensively fulfilled? In answering this question we must also involve the responsibility of the control and audit commissions. This is fully in the spirit of their rights and obligations stemming from the BCP Statute.

The intensification of the social functions of party control is inseparable from the care for the expansion of its social basis. Through the transformation of 54 former auditing commissions into control and audit commissions, party control is more closely linked to man and to the workers collective, it comes closer to the "hot" areas of the implementation of programs and plans. On the other hand, opportunities are envisaged for establishing auxiliary control organs attached to the commissions, entitled to deal with responsibility in cases of violations of economic, scientific-technical, social and cultural policy in inner party life, and so forth, and entitled to create a broad circle of collaborators among the most distinguished public figures and aktivists.

The increased social role of control, implemented by the BCP control-auditing commissions, the expansion of the areas of the preventive action of control, and its attacking effect, and its transformation into one of the factors for the acceleration of social development, among other things, is an expression of the steadily increasing role of the party as a guiding and leading force and of the individual as a subject in building mature socialism. It is an expression of the constant expansion of socialist democracy and of real people's power. A topical and promising solution that represents a new example of the creative development solution of problems is in process, and which represents a new example for the creative, further development of the principles upon which our society and its political system are built, upon which the party theoretical and practical activities are expanding.

ATANASOV RECEIVES LIBYAN ECONOMIC SECRETARY

DEPUTY FOREIGN MINISTER GANEV VISITS ALGERIA

AU031905 Sofia BTA in English 1717 GMT 3 Jul 86

[Text] Algiers, July 3 (BTA) -- Mr Ahmed Taleb Ibrahimi, minister of foreign affairs of the Democratic and Popular Republic of Algeria, received Mr Ivan Ganev, Bulgaria's deputy minister of foreign affairs, who is in Algeria for political consultations between the two countries' Ministries of Foreign Affairs.

They exchanged views on key international issues and on the promotion of friendly relations between the Bulgarian and Algerian peoples.

Mr Ivan Ganev conferred also with Mr Abdelrazak Bouhara, member of the standing secretariat of the CC of the Front de Liberation Nationale Party (F.L.N.) in charge of international relations. They discussed the relations between the F.L.N. party of Algeria and the Bulgarian Communist Party and the ways for their further strengthening. The sides also exchanged views on a number of topical international issues.

The Bulgarian official was received by Mr Mohamed Rouighi, the Algerian minister of hydraulics, environment and forestry. They considered the prospects for cooperation between the two countries in the sphere of irrigation and forestry. Their agenda included questions concerning the preparations for the forthcoming sitting of the Bulgaro-Algerian Committee for Economic and Techno-Scientific Cooperation.

BENO SPEAKS ON IDEOLOGY AT PARTY SESSION

["Excerpt from the Speech of Mikulas Beno, CPCZ Central Committee Secretary, at the 20 June session of the Slovak Communist Party Central Committee: To Raise the Party's Ideological and Action Unity"]

[Excerpts] The CPCZ Central Committee regards care for the healthy growth of the party and for improving the quality of the party's membership base as the most prominent task. This preferential delimitation stems from the need to resolve the key issue with which we are confronted due to the requirements of the current phase of development, and the essential need to speed up the socio-economic development of our society, to substantially enhance the efficiency and efficacy of the national economy, and to mobilize our entire material and spiritual potential for this yet more efficiently.

The results achieved by us in improving the quality of party ranks during the period since the 14th CPCZ Congress are proof of our party's correct course in this vitally important issue and represent a good starting base for the coming period. The changes in the structure of the membership base, as well as in its numerical strength, have led to the consolidation of party ranks. The party agencies and organizations in Slovakia are significantly contributing to this positive development. The Slovak Communist Party (CPSL) is a combat detachment of the united CPCZ, a detachment which is developing in a healthy way and which is contributing to the ideological and action unity of the entire party. The acceptance of candidate members from younger generations is positively reflected in a favorable age structure of Communists in Slovakia: Almost 20 percent of them are less than 30 years old. We are also justified in expressing appreciation for the effort to increase the percentage of women -- and this must remain a priority also in the coming period. The class of the structure of party ranks is lastingly strengthening. At the same time the membership base is also becoming consolidated among other groups of working people. Despite this, one must also say that it was not always that one preferentially accepted candidate members from those working places and vocations which were primarily desirable from the viewpoint of the party's tasks.

These problems are the result of incorrect practices. Certain districts are acting in a backward manner. Instead of proceeding from the analyses of party organizations and the needs of strengthening the party's influence, they focus on itemizing the tasks. This is also the source of continuing shortcomings in the training and selection of people for the party in some of the primary organizations.

Inseparable Part of Everyday Activity

The CPCZ Central Committee's resolution on the further development and improvement of the quality of our membership base demands that its implementation in the party agencies and organizations become an inseparable component of everyday activity in ensuring the conclusions of the 17th CPCZ Congress in all spheres of social life, so that the formation of the party would actively contribute toward developing all substantial aspects of the logical process of the growth of its leading role. [passage omitted] The successful satisfaction of these demands stresses as the decisive criterion improving the quality of party ranks, based on the party's firm ties with the working people. Both theoretical knowledge and the political experience anchored in our party's main congress documents, as well as the documents of the 27th CPSU Congress and of the congresses of other fraternal parties of socialist countries, all lead us to the above conclusion.

To Create the Awareness of Personal Responsibility

The Revolutionary doctrine and the practices of socialist construction convince us again and again that our plans, programs, and resolutions can be successfully realized only if the people grasp how advantageous they are for them and for the society; only if they make them their own, only if they become the people's deep personal conviction. It is only thus that the awareness of one's personal responsibility is created for the fulfillment of tasks by everybody doing his best. And it is here that we must see the essence of today's struggle for a change in the people's way of thinking, for their grasp of the novelty of the tasks, for their willingness and resolve to fight for these tasks by their own activity. The unambiguous conclusion to be drawn from such an understanding of the task is that it is essential not to tolerate indifference to the topical tasks of the present on the part of certain Communists, but also not to tolerate a lenient attitude of party agencies and organizations toward manifestations of passivity, inflexibility, and the failure to resolve many ripe problems by responsible staff workers, and frequently even party organizations themselves. The improvement of the quality of our membership base must be understood as a process of overcoming these weak places and abuses.

That is why we are justified in stressing and repeating the truth which has been tested in practice, namely that it is not sufficient to merely agree -- one must actively enforce and implement the political line of the congress; it is not sufficient to merely point out the problems and shortcomings and to condemn them -- one must help resolve them; it is not sufficient to merely register mistakes and shortcomings or vestiges in others -- one must begin with oneself, by fulfilling one's commitments toward one's partners and toward the entire society in an exemplary way. One ought not to speculate on benefiting at the expense of others; one should fight enterprisingly in the first ranks of the working and civic front, while keeping all-social viewpoints and interests in mind. One should constantly search for new possibilities to contribute by one's creative and honest work to acceleration, quality, and thrift. One should not put off the accomplishment of this strategic task -- one should adopt a crystallized stand on how to utilize all accessible means in one's own work and in the working collective's activity, so that the final results would contribute more fully to all-social intentions and toward making our work more efficient and better.

From these viewpoints, or rather primarily from this viewpoint, one should be more demanding in weighing to what extent, from where, and with whom the party should be complemented, and also in weighing how to be more purposeful, and far more demanding with respect to quality, in training people for the party and in accepting them into the party. It is desirable that the district committees weigh, on the basis of specific conditions, what to include among the priorities they are striving for; for instance, they should aim to reach important scientific research working places and design other preproduction sections, but also sectors where production is realized and which will decisively contribute to the tasks which strikingly accelerte society's development. However, in deepening the Marxist-Leninist character of the party it is an on-going task to consolidate its worker core with young active qualified workers who are connected with modern technology and techniques. In this respect we must expect the CPSL agencies and organizations to proceed, as in the past, in a very responsible way to ensure this task. [passage omitted] We must demand, above all from the district committees, that they critically and constructively reassess the state and standards of the candidate members' training, but also of the party education to which we must devote particular attention. [passage omitted] We must purposefully demand the fulfillment of the demand for active work in the youth union movement on the part of all young Communists and candidate members; and we must regard this activity as one of primary political importance. Deplorably, it is true that the activity of Communists working among the youth -- as organizers of production, education, or hobby activities, or involved in the general shaping of young people -- is not always appraised in this way and appreciated.

To Strengthen the Vanguard Mission of Communists

The resolution adopted at the CPCZ Central Committee's June session on the further development and improvement of the quality of party ranks places emphasis on lasting care for the development of internal life and on the consolidation of the ideological, organizational, and action unity of party ranks closely linked with the specific contents and aims of every party organization. [passage omitted]

It is necessary to constantly keep in mind that it is only in a businesslike and principle-minded atmosphere, in party organizations where a healthy dissatisfaction and a critical attitude toward the achieved results reigns, in organizations where the Communists actively participate in an exemplary manner in the fulfillment of the adopted tasks, that the candidate members and members grow up into real fighters for the party's policy, that their vanguard mission is strengthened, and that their authority among the working people is enhanced. In every primary organization, in every party agency, the reassessment of the results achieved to date in improving the quality of the membetship base must become the decisive criterion; the same applies to the impact of deepening the party influence on the solution of the basic material problems of implementing party resolutions, plans, and economic tasks -- in brief, the basic criterion must be the way the working people's participation is developing on all fronts of the struggle for speeding up the society's economic and social development.

JAKES, HAMAN AT INDUSTRY SECRETARIES' CONFERENCE

LD101911 Prague Domestic Service in Czech 1630 GMT 10 Jul 86

[Text] A statewide conference of secretaries for industry of regional party committees and or Prague and Bratislava city party committees took place today in Prague in the presence of Milos Jakes, member of the Presidium and secretary of the CPCZ Central Committee; Josef Haman, candidate member of the Presidium and secretary of the party's Central Committee, and other officials.

The conference discussed the conclusions of the session of the CPCZ Central Committee Presidium on the elaboration of the approved plan for the economic and social development of Czechoslovakia for the Eighth 5-Year Plan and next year. The elaboration of the state plan will be carried out by middle sections of the management for organizations by 5 September, and they will work out 5-year economic plans and plans for next year by 17 October 1986. Economic plans must be confirmed by the end of this year. Party organs and organizations must ensure that the tasks of the state plan are discussed with the workers and are consistently secured.

The conference also discussed economic results for the first 6 months and the prospects for the fulfillment of the state operational plan for this year. It was stated that the acceleration of economic social developoment and the fulfillment of the tasks of the state plan for this year require increased demands and responsibility at all levels of management, the consistent implementation of the tasks as set out, and the rejection of attempts to dilute the plan. This requires the acceleration of the implementation of results of science and technology, the strengthening of discipline in supplier-customer relations, matching production to the needs of domestic and foreign trade, concentrating attention on reducing production expenditure, in particular material and energy consumption, on considerable improvement of production quality, acceleration of innovation, and on consistent implementation of deserved remuneration. The organizational and control activity of party organs and organizations and the development of workers' initiative must also be aimed toward this.

SED SENDS CONDOLENCES ON DEATH OF SERV'S LE DUAN

LD101934 East Berlin ADN International Service in German 1658 GMT 10 Jul 86

[Text] Berlin, 10 Jul (ADN) -- The SED Central Committee, communists, and the entire GDR people have conveyed their sincere sympathy on the death of Le Duan, general secretary of the Central Committee of the Vietnamese Communist Party, to the members of the Vietnamese Communist Party and the fraternal Vietnamese people.

"We mourn with the Vietnamese people an outstanding party functionary, an ardent patriot, proven Marxist-Leninist and internationalist, who faithfully continued the cause of Ho Chi Minh, and who is highly respected and valued by the first German workers' and peasants' state," states the telegram, which is signed by Erich Honecker, general secretary of the SED Central Committee and chairman of the GDR State Council.

"The life of Le Duan was filled with untiring work and devotion to the cause of socialism. Even in his childhood and youth he took an active part in the revolutionary movement. He became a member and functionary of the Communist Party at an early stage. Neither incarceration nor exile could break him," it states. It adds: "His rich knowledge, his great experiences, his close ties with the workers and peasants made him a highly-regarded leader of our fraternal Vietnamese party and respected functionary of the international communist and working class movement."

The victory of the Vietnamese people in the heroic struggle against the American aggressors is indivisibly linked with the work of Le Duan at the head of the Communist Party of Vietnam.

"Comrade Le Duan played a leading part in the course of socialist construction, under conditions of peace and the unity of the country, which was stipulated at the Fourth Congress of the Vietnamese Communist Party. Since then, our Vietnamese fraternal people have achieved, under the party's leadership, significant results in the construction of the socialist social order, in the struggle for peace and security," the telegram stresses.

"With each step forward, Socialist Vietnam can count on our country's fraternal help and support. True to the Treaty of Friendship and Cooperation, the GDR will continue on the proven path of close cooperation between our states, which are united in the socialist community," it is assured.

"Comrade Le Duan worked for his party, his people, our common cause, right up the last hour of his militant life. The GDR Communists and people will always honor the memory of their loyal friend and comrade," the message states.

HONECKER CONGRATULATES USSR'S SOKOLOV ON BIRTHDAY

AU090849 East Berlin NEUES DEUTSCHALND in German 1 Jul 86 p 2

[Text] Berlin (ND) -- The SED Central Committee has sent the following greetings message to Marshal of the Soviet Union Sergey Leonidovich Sokolov, CPSU Central Committee Politburo candidate member and USSR minister of defense:

Dear Comrade Sergey Leonidovich Sokolov!

On behalf of the SED Central Committee, all Communists of the GDR, as well as on my own behalf, I convey to you cordial congratulations on your 75th birthday.

In the staff of the party of Lenin and as minister of defense of the USSR, you are making a great contribution to strengthening socialism and consolidating peace, to increasing the defense capacity of our socialist community, and to deepening the comradeship-in-arms between the Soviet army and the GDR National People's Army.

I wish you, dear Sergey Leonidovich, new successes in your responsible work in fulfilling the resolutions of the 27th CPSU Congress, health, and creative vigor.

With communist greetings,

SED Central Committee

E. Honecker,

general secretary

[Text] On behalf of Erich Honecker, Army General Geinz Kessler, GDR minister of defense, today in Moscow presented the Soviet Minister of Defense Marshal Sergey Sokolov with the Karl Marx Order. It had been awarded to him on the occasion of his 75th birthday.

In his address, Heinz Kessler said that the decoration praised the great personal contribution by Sergey Sokolov to the strengthening of peace and to the deepening of brotherhood-in-arms.

Marshal Sokolov said that he received the honor as an expression of great respect for the Soviet people and its Armed Forces.

GEORGI SIGNS MACHINE TOOL AGREEMENT WITH ROMANIA

LD091319 East Berlin Voice of GDR Domestic Service in German 1200 GMT 9 Jul 86

[Text] The GDR and Romania referred today to the positive development of cooperation in the construction of machine tools and processing machinery. As was assessed at a meeting in Bucharest between Minister Rudi Georgi and the deputy premiers, Gheorghe Oprea and Nicolae Constantin, relations between the combines and enterprises of this branch of industry have become closer. The two sides signed a program on further cooperation in this sector up to 1990. At the same time, measures for the expansion of cooperation between the GDR and Romania in machine-tool construction, the tools industry, and textile machinery construction were initiated.

KADAR SENDS CONDOLENCES ON LE DUAN'S DEATH

[Text] Budapest, July 10 (MTI) -- On the death of Le Duan, general secretary of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of Vietnam, Janos Kadar, general secretary of the Hungarian Socialist Workers' Party sent the following telegram of condolences to Hanoi Thursday, to the Central Committee of the Communist Party of Vietnam.

The Central Committee of the Hungarian Socialist Workers' Party and the entire Hungarian people were deeply shocked to learn of the death of Comrade Le Duan, general secretary of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of Vietnam, the faithful son of the Vietnamese people, and outstanding personality in the international communist and workers' movement. Allow me on this tragic occasion to express our sincere condolences and sympathy to the Central Committee of the Communist Party of Vietnam, the Vietnamese people and the family of the deceased. We share your deep mourning.

With the death of Comrade Le Duan the Vietnamese people have suffered an enormous loss. His entire life, and his outstanding revolutionary work were strongly intertwined with the heroic struggle waged by the people of the country under the leadership of the Communist Party of Vietnam for the liberation and the creation of a re-united Vietnam. His merits in the building and development of Socialist Vietnam are lasting.

The Central Committee of the Hungarian Socialist Workers' Party highly values the outstanding activity of Comrade Le Duan in advancing cooperation among our parties, and the friendship of our peoples. In the heavy hours of mourning we would like to declare that we will continue to protect and reinforce the friendship of our peoples in the future, and we shall retain the memory of Comrade Le Duan with compassion.

BUDAPEST TV DISCUSSES TRADE UNION ISSUES

LD102305 Budapest Television Service in Hungarian 1605 GMT 10 Jul 86

[From the "New Reflector" program with unidentified announcer]

[Excerpts] [announcer] Let me start with your letters. Several of them have mentioned that while we, quite rightly, criticize the weaknesses of our stagnating economy and the inconsistencies of economic management, we say, less, and are not critical enough, as regards the fact that the trade unions are also unable to rise to the new challenges and have, consequently, lost some of their prestige. As regards this latter point, the observation is perfectly true, and we have never claimed the opposite. We have spoken, even if not enough, about the endeavors with which the Hungarian trade unions are looking for their new place and role amidst the changed circumstances.

Who could deny that, despite its endeavors, the movement has lost some of its prestige? The issue was raised by Sandor Gaspar at the latest session of the National Union Trade Union Council. He gave the following reply: However much we dislike this fact, naturally it has lost some of its prestige, because the economic situation is a difficult one and it is not easy to say optimistic things to people. We have, nonetheless, to admit that we have not yet made sufficient progress in being able to set out the place and role of the trade unions in socialist society in any given situation.

The trade union movement has become an integral part of socialist society; it takes it place in the sphere of power and is an important part of it. However, when this process of integration takes place, care must be taken that the independent identity of the movement should increasingly manifest itself within this natural process. If this does not happen, we lose prestige.

The membership pays its dues so that the trade union movement provides services. Thus, the movement has a commitment to the membership. From another aspect, the movement has a commitment to the authorities; in other words, the trade union considers not only the interests of the members when determining the short- and long-term tasks, but also the interests of the whole country. Our explanation of this is, however, still incomplete. It is because of this that we have -- and this is not an illusion -- lost some of our prestige. [passage omitted]

Otto Pirityi, [head of research at the Theoretical Research Institute of the National Council of Trade Unions], you have written an interesting and controversial article, which was published in the May issue of SZAKSZERVEZETI SZEMLE [TRADE UNION REVIEW]. It has evoked a great storm. This is not a bad thing: the stagnant water must be stirred up. Further, I think that you do not regard your views as infallible.

Let me, however, remind our viewers of what you have said: In Hungary the political sphere expects the trade unions to exert their influence first and foremost in the direction of the membership, mobilizing and educating their members. The members, however, are fed up with being mobilized and educated. What they want is that the trade unions should not mobilize and educate them but all those on whom the realization of the workers interests depends. It is not those whose interests have to be protected who should be the constant object of attention, it is not they who should be subjected to long speeches, but those who violate those interests. What a collective wants is that the trade union should not try to improve its membership but should try to improve the situation and exert an influence on the national leadership and on enterprise management. This would improve the situation of the members.

Otto Pirityi, one of our viewers has phoned us to say in connection with this statement that Engles is turning in his grave because the once strong and militant trade unions are to be turned into service institutions. How, of course, Engels was able to and wanted to doubt everything that was not justified by practice. Nonetheless, your theoretical opponents are complaining that the trade unions cannot be reduced to mere service institutions willing to do anything in return for their membership dues. The commitment of the movement is not in one but in two directions. Let me recall the quote from Sandor Gaspar at the beginning of our program. Thus, here is a mass movement with a great tradition of class struggle, a movement which is a participant in the exercise of power, which has an obligation to payattention to the interests of the country, the interests of the entire people, and which ought to adjust to the new tasks. But, your critics say, it should not do so in the way which you have have set out. What can you bring up in your own defense?

[Pirityi] First of all, this is not the way I envisage it. All I am saying is that there is a process underway whereby the trade unions must perform more and more service functions. but when they represent the interests upwards, when they fight, when they make demands, the trade unions do this as a political function and not as a service.

The trade unions coordinate interests at various levels, taking as their point of departure that the highest level interests, that is, the interests of the nation, of the economy, of the population, of the consumers as a whole, are probably interests of a higher status than the interests of employees. Consequently, when we are forcing what might be a short-term interest of employees, it could easily happen that we violate an interest with a higher status. Thus, by now the trade unions themselves can also violate interests. The illusion which has been around for so long, that everyone can violate the interests but we shall protect them, is at an end.

[Announcer] Here is a very tempting idea which might appeal to some people in the short term: Let the trade unions be much more militant in representing the interests of the population, let them push the government into a corner, make it defensive, let is say day by day that there is no money for this or that, let it appear stingy, and then the trade unions can wash their hands and say, we fought but the state is stronger.

[Pirityi] We must be militant but not demonstratively so; we must not make a show of being militant. There is a great deal that we must achieve concerning the state, the state apparatus. The important thing is that we should be able to coordinate interests in the appropriate way, that we should raise issues in a responsible manner -- after all, we are responsible as well, and that we should go about reaching an agreement in the knowledge that we must come to an agreement with the state. Under these circumstances, and considering that both the state and the trade unions are implmenting the policies of the party, we are militant but not in order to gain cheap popularity and lower the prestige of our own state.

[Announcer] This is so because I think one cannot ask the trade unions to serve one day the people against the government and another day the government against the people. The movement is not suited for this. Instead, it serves simultaneously the interests of those living on wages and salaries and the interests of the socialist state. But how? That is the difficult question.

[Pirityi] Well, as a movement, we must be present everywhere with our influence, initiatives and strength and must gain a prestige which is based not on our permit to function but on the quality of our work.

[Announcer] Be a bit more specific: What are the emphasis and actual methods in the new situation?

[Pirityi] First and foremost, the control functions of the trade unions must be strengthened. This means more than just checking on things; it means being in control of them and handling the problems. Second, the long-term and comprehensive interests of the membership must be increasingly represented as against individual, ad hoc, correctional, and defensive representation. It must be noted at this point that the decently working majority must be protected against those who constantly violate our interests, that is, those who are lazy and ill-disciplined -- a minority. Constant attention must be paid to the views of the membership as regards how they see their interests. We must become, or must remain, the shapers of public opinion, until this function is taken over from us by parliament perhaps, or the Patriotic People's Front.

WALESA REQUESTS POLITICAL PRISONER STATUS

AU081918 Paris AFP in English 1911 GMT 8 Jul 86

[Text] Warsaw, July 8 (AFP) -- Lech Walesa, leader of the banned Solidarity trade union, and 530 other members of Poland's opposition Tuesday [8 July] called for political prisoner status for their more than 350 comrades jailed in Poland. In an open letter, they said that many of the jailed opposition militants were "detained in inhuman conditions," adding that there was particular cause for concern in the cases of those whom they expected would serve several more years.

Poland's opposition says there are more than 350 political prisoners detained, including leading Solidarity figures Zbigniew Bujak, Wladyslaw Frasyniuk, Bogdan Lis, Tadeusz Jedynak, Bogdan Borusewicz and Adam Michnik. Polish authorities say only 151 political prisoners are detained.

Polish leader General Wojciech Jaruzelski suggested last week at the Polish Communist Party Congress that he might grant amnesties to some prisoners, on certain conditions, by the end of this month. But opposition leaders fear this will do no more good than the previous amnesties, which partially emptied Polish prisons only to fill them again.

POZOGA COMMENTS ON 'CLANDESTINE' ACTIVITIES

AU301425 Warsaw RZECZPOSPOLITA in Polish 24 Jun 86 p 4

[Interview given by Division General Wladyslaw Pozoga, deputy minister of internal affairs, to PAP -- date and place not given]

[Excerpts] [Passage omitted] [Pozoga] The successes of our counterespionage service should be measured in terms of the potential damage to our national economy, national defense, and foreign interests stemming from the espionage activities that have been averted. It will be possible to talk about these matters in greater detail once investigations are completed. The most I can say today [24 June] is that they are as morally repugnant as they are dangerous, like the CIA agents Dembowski, Chrost, Walewski, Jurzak, who were sentenced over the years.

I would like to emphasize that at the same time the counterespionage service has prevented several dozen people from becoming involved in espionage activities or has hindered the development of such activity. Both sides, that is we and the enemy, know who these people are.

[PAP] Apart from what is ultimately a small number of individuals, can hostile intelligence services count on a social base in Poland?

[Pozoga] It is evident from these documents that I have cited, that such calculations were linked with certain opposition groups that arose at the end of the 1970's.

At the present time a very convenient cover under which espionage and subversive centers operate is the domestic underground and the so-called foreign Solidarity bureaus, which are closely connected with the underground and the headquarters of intelligence centers hostile to Poland. Through this system of ties, "opposition" activity has -- or has acquired over time -- the character of the work of a network of agents. [paragraph continues]

Please compare the two photographs shown here. One shows the espionage equipment that belonged to a spy who was recently arrested; the second shows what we found among the possessions of an underground "trade union activists."

The first photograph shows: a personal computer used for encoding information; equipment used for locating and intercepting Ministry of National Defense and Ministry of Internal Affairs communications traffic; and a miniature "Minox" camera.

In addition to these items, the second photograph also shows a device for detonating explosives and a pistol in the form of a ball-point pen.

Both the spies and the conspirators are taught how to use this equipment by specialists, cadre employees of intelligence services. This leads one to ask who would need such equipment to conduct "union" activity? [passage omitted]

[PAP] What I have heard really does provide a full picture of the nature of activities engaged in by Western special services against Poland.

[Pozoga] Clandestine operations have always been one of the main forms of activity pursued, especially by the CIA. These operations are intended to influence the course of events in a country in a clandestine fashion and in line with the interests of the United States. To realize these aims various methods and means of operation are applied, depending on what is required. These methods can include: infiltration of political parties and trade unions, assassinations, the physical examination of politicians; propaganda moves (the use of radio, the press, incitements); and paramilitary activities (the training of rebels, military, and terrorist operations, Covert wars)

Since its inception the CIA has conducted secret seditious operations as part of thee U.S. doctrine of "restraining communism." These operations have become an extension of political and diplomatic activities conducted overtly, through official channels.

The criticism of the CIA's activities voiced in the United States and Western Europe and the attempts to explain the circumstances of covert operations in the past and their effectiveness resulted in a curtailment in the number of these operations during the 1970's. [passage omitted]

[PAP] Today's conversation has confirmed by conviction that the services that the Comrade General is responsible for have a profound knowledge of the enemy. I will permit myself to quote from General Kiszczak's interview in PIOLITYKA once again. He says: "The Security Service has acquired quite a thorough familiarity with the underground in our country and its foreign agencies. The main part in the acquisition of this knowledge was played by the people of the counter-espionage and espionage services who are active in domestic and foreign structures."

[Pozoga] We only operate where necessary, having a small but adequate cadre that is well trained, selfless, and committed. We work carefully and in doing so we enjoy broad social support and understanding. We try to be present wherever and whenever we are needed, wherever national interests, national security, and the nation's citizens are threatened. Our main goal is to prevent harm.

PLANS FOR EXPORT DEVELOPMENT BANK CITED

[Text] Warsaw, July 10 -- Marian Minkiewicz, a foreign trade minister's plenipotentiary for setting up an exports development bank, spoke with PAP about the decision of the Council of Ministers to establish the bank. Excerpts:

"The chief goal of the bank's activity will be to finance pro-export ventures, especially to provide credits for investments which contribute to growth and improvement of exports effectiveness. So far, activities of this kind have been dispersed among various banks that dealt with such matters.

"As soon as the exports development bank begins to operate, probably by the end of this year, it will concentrate on financing pro-export projects. Thus, the principles will change -- the hitherto criterion of supporting branches will be replaced by a subject criterion which means that the bank will finance investment projects irrespective of who undertakes them whether it be a state farm, a factory, or a cooperative. Their export affects will be the decisive factor. However, this does not mean a monopoly for the exports development bank. All banks will continue to support exports."

Marian Minkiewicz also stressed that the bank's idea lies in the fact that the bank should point at and look for possibilities of advantageous investment projects aimed to increase exports.

The establishment of the bank is closely connected with the concept of the so-called small restructuring of the economy. A special fund, financed from dividends which the state treasury receives from its shares in foreign trade companies, but first of all by a portion of the income tax, has been set up. The fund is to credit investments aimed to increase hard currency incomes. After the exports development bank is set up, it will supervise the fund. This refers to about 10 billion zlotys a year.

The bank will also have its own means. The joint stock of 5 billion zlotys (20,000 shares of 250,000 zlotys each) will be divided as follows: The state treasury represented by ministers of foreign trade and finance -- 51 per cent, the National Bank of Poland -- 10 per cent , the other three banks -- 10 per cent, and 29 per cent to be purchased by state enterprises through a public subscription.

The bank will be entitled to directly control export-import deals connected with investments credited by it in Poland. The bank, being a joint stock company, will operate on commercial principles.

Its capabilities to offer credits will gradually increase and are estimated to exceed 100 billion zlotys in five years.

The bank expects first credit applications to be submitted next December. The applications will be also reviewed and opined by a special consulting firm to be set up in the Foreign Trade Ministry.

'FIRST FRIENDLY YOUTH MEETING' WITH DPRK OPENS

[Text] Pyongyang, AGERPRES 9/7/1986 -- Events started in Pyongyang occasioned by the first friendly meeting between representatives of the youth in Romania and the Democratic People's Republic of Korea.

The participants in the opening meeting received with keen interest the messages addressed by Nicolae Ceausescu, general secretary of the Romanian Communist Party, president of the Socialist Republic of Romania; and Kim Il-song, general secretary of the Central Committee of the Workers' Party of Korea, president of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea. The messages were ready by Yi Yong-su, chairman of the League of Socialist Working Youth of the DPR of Korea, and by Ioan Toma, secretary of the Central Committee of the Union of Communist Youth of Romania.

Addressing the participants in the festive meeting, the Romanian chief delegate pointed out that, being aware of the need to do everything possible for the ensurance of world peace and security, the Romanian youth fully backed its country's foreign policy, took consistent action for the undertaking of tangible and efficient measures for disarmament, nuclear disarmament first and foremost, for a world free of weapons and wars, a world of confidence and collaboration among peoples.

In his turn, the Korean youth's chief delegate showed that the current international situation required the rallying of all the peace-loving forces to thwart the imperialist policy of extending the nuclear arms race, to safeguard peoples' peace and security. The Korean youths, he said, are resolved to actively fight in defence of world peace and security.

The Romanian youth's delegation met with executives of the Union of Socialist Worker Youth, and with young people working in economic units and sociocultural institutions in Pyongyang and Nampho.

CEAUSESCU SPEAKS AT PIONEERS' PALACE INAUGURATION

AU070935 Bucharest SCINTEIA in Romanian 29 Jun 86 p 1

[Speech by President Nicolae Ceausescu at the inauguration ceremony of the new Palace of Pioneers and of Homeland's Falcons in the Bucharest Park of Youth, on 28 June]

[Text] Esteemed Comrades, dear Pioneers and Homeland's Falcons: I would like to begin by extending to all Pioneers and Homeland's Falcons, to all the children of our country, and to all our youth warmest thoughts on behalf of the party and state leadership and on my own behalf. I wish for them to grow up and study by making full use of the wonderful conditions socialism has created for children and for the youth of Socialist Romania. (loud, prolonged cheers and chants; chants of "Ceausescu-RCP!" and "Ceausescu-the youth!").

This festival is devoted to the beginning of activity in the new Palace of Pioneers and of Homeland's Falcons, which is -- if I may say so -- a wonderful gift the party and the whole nation make to the children, to Pioneers and Homeland's Falcons, so that through the activities that will be carried out here they may learn about the latest discoveries of science, technology, and human knowledge and may study and learn how to make the best use of our people's wonderful achievements in all fields of activity, but particularly in the fields of science, education, and culture because the system we are building -- communism -- can be achieved only on the basis of the latest discoveries of science, culture, and human knowledge in general. (loud cheers and chants; chants of "Ceausescu-RCP!" and "Ceausescu-the Youth!")

During the last week, we have discussed with the RCP Central Committee, the bodies of the socialist democracy, and the Grant National Assembly the issues of the country's further development up to the nineties, and in the future, up to the year 2000, as well as the programs for Romania's passage to a new and superior stage of development, a rise in the whole people's material and cultural well being, and a continuous strengthening of the homeland, its independence, and its sovereignty. (loud, prolonged cheers and chants; chants of "Ceausescu and the People!")

Everything we have achieved during the years of socialist construction created the necessary conditions for the general development of the homeland and for the continued increase of the material well being and of the cultural and scientific level of the whole nation. Everything we envisage for the period up to the year 1990 and the year 2000 is meant to fulfill the strategic objectives of building a comprehensively developed socialist society and a steady advance towards communism -- the golden dream of mankind (loud, prolonged cheers and chants)

Everything we have achieved reflects the work of the whole nation, of the youth, of Pioneers, and of all children of our homeland, but, primarily, everything we achieve is meant to elevate our people's well being. We do all we can to ensure the youth and all children of our homeland the best conditions for life, work, and education.

Now, when you receive this wonderful palace -- the creation of the working people's enthusiastic work -- you must pledge to use it with the best results. This palace, all the other Pioneers' houses, schools, and all the other means of education must serve you to study, to study again, to thoroughly prepare yourselves, and get to know -- I stress it again -- the latest and greatest discoveries of science, technology, and human knowledge in all fields of activity! Only in this way can you ensure tomorrow the development of the wonderful achievements of your forefathers and of your parents and can you continue the revolutionary traditions of a past full of struggles of the party and of our people who, for more than 2,000 years have done all they could to preserve the independence of the land on which we are living and on which we will always have to live! (enthusiastic, loud cheers, and chants) Do everything you can do elevate our homeland to ever higher peaks of progress and civilization! (loud cheers and chants; prolonged chants of "Ceausescu and the People!")

I would like to mention, on this occasion also, the efforts our party and state make to develop friendship and cooperation with all countries of the world, regardless of their social system, for disarmament and peace. We wish to ensure our people, all the people of the world, youth, and children of our homeland conditions of peace so that they can study and train in order to continue specialist and communist construction!

From here, from this meeting of children, we call on all the leaders of European countries and throughout the world, on behalf of children, let us do all we can to eliminate nuclear weapons, all weapons from our planet, to achieve peaceful cooperation and a world without wars, a world of independence and dignity for each nation, a world in which every people can develop freely, as it desires, without any outside interference! (loud cheers and chants, chants of "Ceausescu-Peace!" and "Disarmament-Peace!")

Let us not use the wonderful discoveries of science to create weapons for destroying people but to ensure the socioeconomic progress and increase the material and cultural well being of each nation! Let us do all we can so that the best things the human mind created should serve peoples, their well being and happiness! (loud, prolonged applause)

I believe that, today, there is no more important issue than peace and ensuring the people and nation's vital right to existence, to life, to freedom, and to independence! (prolonged cheers and chants; chants of "Ceausescu and the people!" and "Ceausescu-Peace!")

I wish you dear Pioneers and Homeland's Falcons ever greater success and ever better results in your studies, much health, much happiness! I wish your families and all our people much health and happiness! (long cheers, chants; prolonged chants of 'Ceausescu-RCP!", "Ceausescu-Peace!", and "Ceausescu-Romania, protect childhood!". The Pioneers and the Homeland's Falcons, all those present at the impressive manifestation ethusiastically cheer and chant for the RCP -- the leading political force of the whole nation -- and for the general of the party, president of the SR of Romania, Comrade Nicolae Ceausescu).

GOVERNMENT RESTORES LOWER BREAD, FLOUR PRICES

[Text] Belgrade, July 10 (TANJUG) -- The Yugoslav Government today adopted a decision, effective immediately, that the prices of bread and flour, which were raised two days ago by 60 percent on the average, be restored to the June 25 level.

The government maintains that the immoderate rise in the prices of bread and flour has caused a serious disturbance on the market, which is having a negative effect on the cost of living and the living standards of the population.

This kind of disorderliness in the formation of the prices of bread seriously jeopardizes the implementation of the set policies of prices and economic stabilization, the Yugoslav Government emphasizes.

Domestic Radio Report

AU102038 Belgrade Domestic Service in Serbo-Croatian 2000 GMT 10 Jul 86

[Text] The Federal Executive Council has adopted a decision to return the prices of flour and all kinds of bread to the 25 June level. The immoderate increase of prices caused serious disturbances in the market because of monopolistic price formation behavior by associated labor organizations, which has serious negative consequences for the cost of living and standard of living of working people and citizens, the Federal Executive Council assesses.

It was noted that the associated labor organizations that behaved in this way did not act in accordance with the law on social price control system, and the respective organs in the sociopolitical communities in this case did not act in accordance with their powers under the social price control measures and in keeping with their responsibility for the situation on the market.

This decision takes effect immediately.

The Federal Executive Council also calls on associated labor organizations in coal production to form their new prices in keeping with the outline agreed upon in the Coal Mines Association. Otherwise the Federal Executive Council will take measures within its power.

ELECTRICITY PRICES TO INCREASE FROM 15 JUL

[Text] Knin, 10 Jul (TANJUG) -- From 15 July this year Yugoslavs will pay 38 percent more for electricity, and a further increase will follow at the beginning of October.

This was agreed today at a session of Jugel [Yugoslav Electricity Industry] in Knin. As Jugel Assistant General Manager Cedomir Segrt said, the amount of the increase will be determined in keeping with the legal authorization of the electricity industries of each republic and province. As an average for the whole of Yugoslavia, this will amount to 38 percent more compared with current prices.

FEC SESSION DISCUSSES FOREIGN TRADE, INVESTMENT

[Text] Belgrade, 9 Jul (TANJUG) -- According to a statement issued by the Federal Secretariat for Information, the FEC at its session today (presided over by Vice President Milos Milosavljevic) established the proposed changes and amendments to a number of laws. It also formulated its stance regarding the comments and suggestions made in the SFRY Assembly's working bodies about several draft laws.

The proposed changes and amendments to the foreign trade law on goods and services and to the customs law would provide more scope for opening duty-free shops throughout the country. In addition to foreigners, Yugoslav workers temporarily employed abroad would also have the right to purchase goods in these shops. The FEC will be authorized to decide which tourist resorts, ports and hotels could open duty-free shops. In the FEC's view these shops would be an additional source of foreign currency.

The changes and amendments to the law on foreign investment in Yugoslav organizations of associated labor will regulate, among other things, the issue concerning the funds Yugoslavia's partners will be allowed to use to repay joint credits, such as loans, and also the manner of repaying matured debts to foreign partners and compensation for the funds invested.

Assembly Chamber Session

[Excerpts] Belgrade, 10 Jul (TANJUG) -- Establishing that the policy of the country's socioeconomic development, envisaged by this year's resolution, is not being implemented, the Chamber of the Republics and Provinces of the SFRY Assembly today supported the directions of activity and measures of the Federal Executive Council for overcoming the present difficult economic situation. This primarily refers to efforts contributing to resolving the existing problems in the economy by decreasing the rate of inflation and increasing production and exports.

After the working bodies held a discussion of economic trends, today this topic was also discussed by the Chamber. The assessments are mostly similar, and they express the delegates' concern with the existing economic situation and the understanding that negative trends must be stopped quickly and with effective measures. Muhamed Mustafa, member of the Federal Executive Council, spoke before the delegate discussion. He made several remarks on how the federal government is assessing the present conditions, what it is undertaking, and what it intends to undertake so that the problems are dealt with more efficiently. He stressed that at present the Federal Executive Council is compelled to undertake not only the measures envisaged by the resolution, but also a series of additional, mostly urgent measures. What is to be done during this month should, according to him, ensure that by the end of the year the policy of social development is being implemented more consistently. These are the measures which will strengthen the effect of the already adopted provisions on improving production and exports, curbing inflation and expenditure, and so forth.

Intense preparations are under way for the measures designed to stimulate construction of housing and more energy saving, as well as to provide support to small businesses. [paragraph continues]

Muhamed Mustafa in particular noted the significance of provisions on taxing inflation-generated incomes which could be sent to the assembly before the summer recess. Also significant are the changes in the law on prices, since they introduce more severe punitive measures for failures to respect provisions in this area. The Federal Executive Council, Mustafa continued, will also work on preparing those provisions that are envisaged in the resolution, in which the measures for the financial consolidation of the economy are of particular significance.

Muhamed Mustafa stressed that it is exceptionally important that the already adopted measures are consistently applied. It is necessary, he stressed, that from assessments and principled support a move is made toward the realization of what has been agreed upon. [passage omitted]

The first participant in the discussion, Pavle Tasevski (Macedonia), stressed that it is necessary to curb price increases or eliminate the causes of inflation, which should be of primary importance for the series of measures toward realizing the objectives. According to Radman Milosavljevic (Kosovo), inflation is the most serious problem. Inflation is the synthetic reflection of the weaknesses that must be eliminated as soon as possible in order to overcome unfavorable trends and ensure more stable development.

Tasevski and Milosvljevic spoke about economic trends in Macedonia and Kosovo, illustrating with many examples the gravity of the situation and stressing that the development plans of Macedonia and Kosovo are not likely to be realized.

The seriousness of the problems of Kosovo is best illustrated by the 13 billion [currency unspecified] in current losses and another 10.3 billion of outstanding losses from previous years and by its debts that are too great. The Kosovo collectives' debts to the banks, which matured last year, amounted to 59 billion dinars, while debts of foreign creditors this year amount to 53 billion dinars. The Kosovo economy, from its own accumulation, will be able to meet only 1.5 billion of this debt, Radman Milosavljevic said. [passage omitted]

In the conclusions adopted after the discussion on economic trends, the Chamber of the Republics and Provinces Empitasized the significance of the full involvement of all social subjects in overcoming the crisis. Production must be increased, particularly production intended for exports, to facilitate the position of food manufacturers, to decrease business expenses, to us knowledge and cadres more effectively, and so forth.

The Federal Executive Council was instructed that in adopting new measures it should affirm economic criteria and synchronize all the provisions to make them more effective, while, according to the conclusions reached by the Chamber, inflation should be "knocked down" by eliminating the causes of inflationary economic activity. In this connection the Chamber of the Republics and Provinces believes it is necessary to consider the possibility of changing the law on prices so that the agreed policy in this area will be implemented as consistently as possible.

The Federal Executive Council was instructed first to prepare solutions for conducting the policy of interest rates in the next year, then to monitor the realization of the policy of a speedier development of the underdeveloped areas and propose the necessary measures, and, finally, to meet the deadline for preparing the materials significant to the adoption of the economic policy for 1987.

The Chamber of the Republics and Provinces also assessed that it is necessary to synchronize those measures that concern the fulfillment of general and common needs in all sociopolitical communities and to reexamine the rights of the users of social funds.

The Chamber Session adopted changes and amendments to the law on credit relations with foreign countries. The users of foreign credits approved by 31 December 1985 will still be able to sell foreign exchange from these credits to the National Bank of Yugoslavia, via an authoritized bank, under the same conditions that applied at the end of last year.

Today, the Chamber also adopted changes and amendments to the law on pursuing economic acitivity abroad. With these changes an opportunity has been created for banks and their members to found another bank abroad, provided they fulfill all the conditions envisaged. The deadline for coordinating the statute and other self-managing documents on founding banks, enterprises and other financial organizations abroad is 31 December 1986.

"A pass" was also given to the law on investments by foreign persons in Yugoslav organizations of associated labor, the main novelty of which is that the joint loan for importing equipment and technology can be repaid from business assets that are used for carrying out joint business up to the amount calculated for depreciation. If these assets are not sufficient, the loan is repaid from other business sources that are provided for joint business activity.

A more precise solution was found for the question of losses. The adverse balance is created when the realized income is not sufficient to pay joint commitments. Foreign persons are paid their maturing claims from the realizing joint exports in accordance with the agreement on investments.

By adopting changes and amendments to the law on trade of goods and services with foreign countries and the customs law, opportunities for opening duty-free shops are extended that will be a significant additional source of foreign exchange earnings. Apart from foreigners, our citizens temporarily employed abroad will also be able to buy Yugoslav and imported goods in duty-free shops. With the changes in the customs law, it is envisaged that duty-free shops may be opened in and luxury-class hotels; in tourist villages, marinas, nautical centers, and motels, and on motorways and ships for foreign tourists with a capacity for more than 250 passengers and that have organized custom control. The Federal Executive Council will determine in which tourist villages, nautical centers, marinas, and motels duty-free shops will be opened.

With the changes and amendments to the law on trade of goods and services with foreign countries, it is envisaged that the Federal Executivew Council should (?prescribe) the sorts and quantities and ways of selling goods in duty-free shops.

With the changed customs law, a possibility is created for persons who on any basis have worked aboard for at least 3 or 5 years not to pay customs duty for items for their households, except for cars, up to a total value prescribed by the Federal Executive Council, if they bring or receive these items from abroad within the period of a year after they have returned to the country.

Without paying customs duty or paying at the rate of 10 percent, our citizens who worked abroad on any basis for at least 3 years, or 5, may bring or receive from abroad business inventory (except cars) for carrying out private business. The condition is that they should bring or receive business inventory from abroad within the period of 1 year after they have returned from work abroad.

With the changes and amendments to the law on trade of goods and services with foreign countries, a possibility is created for the Federal Executive Council to establish stimulating measures. If exports programs are not being realized, stimulating measures will be reduced.

Today, the Chamber also adopted an amendment to the law on covering differences in exchange rates created in the banks by 31 December 1984. With this provision, the banks are enabled to meet this expenditure more quickly than is envisaged in the 15-year debt limitation. From the joint income the banks must first meet the current differences in exchange rates, then a part of the old ones (for this year it amounts to 118.5 billion dinars) and bolster funds. If, after they have met all these expenditures, the banks are still left with some money, they are obliged to direct this money toward compensating for old differences in foreign exchange and not to distribute this money to their founders. This law should assist in the financial consolidation of the economy and the banks.

The Chamber of the Republics and Provinces also adopted a law on subsidizing a part of the interest rates on credits within the framework of the selective program for agriculture in the second half of this year.

It implies subsidizing credits for production, stocks, and reserves of the basic agricultural products: wheat, corn, sugar beet, sugar, pearl barley, rice, oil crops (including soya), unrefined oil, and tobacco. This also includes organized fattening of sheep, beef, pigs and poultry, the production of milk, and reserves of mineral fertilizers.

The subsidy amounts to 10 percent of interest rates on investments from the first money issue and, exceptionally, 20 percent for milk; for fattening of beef, pigs and sheep; and for goods reserves of agricultural and food products.

For the subsidy the republics and provinces will provide 28 billion dinars, in six installments, of which the first falls due on 30 July.

The law will come into force a day after it has been announced so that it can start being implemented as soon as possible.

With the changes and amendments to the decision on the joint policy of issuing money and money policy, which the Chamber also adopted, limits for banking investments in agriculture and for exports are abolished. For these needs there will be more money under more favorable conditions. In accordance with this change, it is also envisaged that the money in circulation will be increased from 43 to 60 and banking credits will be increased from 38 to 52 percent.

A significant new feature is also the solution that stocks of agricultural articles in the hands of producers are financed for only 60 days and then loans are directed towards traders and processors. The objective is to prevent speculation with goods and artificial shortages on the market.

The Chamber also adopted a provision according to which the discount rate of the National Bank of Yugoslavia will be determined in accordance with the growth of inflation on the basis of the trends of prices by manufacturers of industrial products realized in the past 3, and the coming 4, months. This rate will be 1 percent higher than the attained growth of prices. (passage omitted)

The SFRY contribution to the world food program, according to the law adopted today, will for the last and this year amount to 142.8 million dinars, and it will be provided in the federation budget.

The Chamber also adopted reports on cooperation between the SFRY assembly and representative bodies of other countries.

CHAMBER INTERNAL POLICY COMMITTEE VIEWS SECURITY

AU101641 Belgrade Domestic Service in Serbo-Croatian 1300 GMT 10 Jul 86

[Text] The Internal Policy Committee of the Federal Chamber of the SFRY Assembly has discussed the security situation in the country. It was said that in order to strengthen the security situation it is necessary to implement the economic policy and the stabilization program as consistently as possible. The delegates also assessed that it is necessary to expand the scope of self-managing democracy so that the new interests and requirements of working people will not be pushed outside the system. All legal means of repression should be applied in combating hostile activities, the delegates pointed out. They indicated the importance of advancing the work of security organs and services and of an efficient working of the social self-protection system.

Dobroslav Culafic, federal secretary for internal affairs, also participated in the work of the committee. He said among other things that the worsening economic situation has favored increased activities of the enemies of our country. Internal affairs organs are consistently carrying out the tasks within their duties, but it is necessary that all other social factors be more resolutely involved in combating nationalist activities, and in efficiently protecting social property from crimes, accidents, fires, and other harmful occurrences.

Dobroslav Culafic informed the delegates about the measures and results of the internal affairs organs in implementing the conclusions of the SFRY Presidency and the LCY Presidium on the security situation in Kosovo. The development and advancement of the political situation, and thus of the security situation, in the country depend much on the determination of all factors of society in implementing the decisions of the 13th LCY Congress, it was said at the session of the Internal Policy Committee.

VLASI DISCUSSES KOSOVO WITH MEDIA EDITORS

[Text] Pristina, 10 Jul (TANJUG) -- In recent times, something has happened almost daily in Kosovo that deserves attention and affects the appraisal of the situation in this province. All these events have the effect that we are making assessments on a long-term basis. Thus, it is not realistic to "bandy about" the same assessment of the Kosovo situation for too long. It is not realistic to say simply that the situation is "favorable", or "increasingly favorable". Neither is it realistic to say that it is "slowly changing" and that some tendencies have remained the same.

This observation was made today by Azem Valsi, president of ther Kosovo LCY Provincial Committee Presidium, in talks with directors, chief editors, and responsible editors of the Yugoslav information media. The talks were devoted to agreeing on how to report from Kosovo and about Kosovo and informing the public, particularly in light of the implementation of the stands of the top party meetings of the conclusions of the SFRY Presidency and the LCY Central Committee Presidium.

Everything that happens in Kosovo, Vlasi said, must be seen as a fact concerning certain social trends in this environment. Our social situation, he added, continues to be characterized by the fact that we are faced with the consequences of the counterrevolutinary events of 1981, the fact that we still have enemy activity from positions of Albanian nationalism and irredentism. There are also many difficulties in the economy, unemployment, and social and international problems arising from nationalistic events. Today, we also have the fact that the sociopolitical climate that engendered nationalsim is changing.

However, in the past 5 years of our struggle we have not had a linear course of activity, but rather considerable contradictions, resistance, and hesitation. Thus, today, we have a contradictory situation: on one hand we have significant results in eliminating some of the causes and consequences of the counterrevolutionry events, the fact that much has changed in social and political practice, that many things are not as they were earlier. We also have a new heightened ideological awareness of the dangers brought about the nationalism, as a reactionary ideology, particularly in the case of Albanian nationalism and irredentism. Quite a lot has changed in the functioning of the system, the organs and government, and the judiciary.

On the other hand, we have complex political ferment which, for the public, sometimes has undertones of excesses and encourages the fear that there may be a more serious destabilization of the state of affairs. In particular, we have here the greatest problem of the emigration of Serbs and Montenegrins with all its causes and consequences and great political weight.

Among the public at large, Vlasi said, we have the belief that the situation in Kosovo is serious, that it is not calming down, that this region is a hotbed of unrest. There have been rather pronounced tendencies to impose other criteria for assessing the situation in Kosovo, so that many problems that are also present in other environments have acquired rather different connotations and political undertones here. Carried along by this tendency, a part of the public press has avoided writing about positive processes because of a fear that this would supposedly slow down action aimed at improving circumstances.

Vlasi stressed that in Kosovo we are still faced with certain primarily illegal forms of activity of Albanian nationalism and irredentism, but that this is not for one moment underestimated, regardless of the results which are achieved in this struggle. And these results are seen above all in the fact that in the ideological respect the irredentists have been dealt strong blows and in many areas the situation has been clarified. Now there are no particularly pronounced nationalistic centers that could strike a blow at us. Leaderships are reacting more effectively to phenomena of illegal activity and attacks on intranational relations. There is no ideological wavering and confusion.

In Kosovo, Vlasi emphasized, there is complete unity among the leaderships and genuine readiness and determination to unhesitatingly implement the measures of the SFRY presidency and the LCY Central Committee Presidium. These are no longer slogans, but, rather, concrete work is being done in the institutions and organs of government. Initial indications show that a good part of these measures are being realized and the organs of government, the judiciary and security organs have been operating more responsibly and efficiently in recent months. There is a high degree of responsibility and readiness for political activity in the field. Everything that was envisaged in the measures of the two presidencies as being a problem for examination, is being examined. Up to 90 percent of the complaints and petitions of citizens have been looked at, questions from the sphere of education are being examined, sales contracts are being investigated, and many cases have been resolved [paragraph continued]

This was not so a few months ago. The number of immigrants from Albania has also been established. Some of the deadlines set in the measures have had to be extended for objective reasons, but everything demanded in them will be resolved, Vlasi said.

He also dwelt on some more recent phenomena of the movement of a part of the Serbian and Montenegrin population which embodies tendencies of Serbian nationalism.

The problem of emigration is creating unease, defeatism, and dilemmas as to what tomorrow holds among the Serbian and Montenegrin population. This real concern is being used, however, by certain nationalist circles both in Kosovo and outside of Kosovo to incite the Serbs and Montenegrins to mistrust and various forms of excessive behavior. However, Serbian and Montenegrin nationalism in Kosovo has no real chance either in its strength or position of seriously destabilizing the situation in Kosovo as long as it is not collaborating with nationalist circles outside of Kosovo. Only with such collaboration, Vlasi considered, could it have the weight and prospects for worsening the situation in the province.

Responding to questions and the debate on what is written and what should be written on Kosovo, Azem Vlasi noted that there are noticeable major differences in this. Some of the press have objectively, correctly, and truthfully reported on the situation in the province ever since 1981, but there are newspapers that appear to have been paid to write about negative phenomena, "black subjects," and that "seem to be sorry that these no longer exist." He therefore called for objective and full reporting of the Kosovo reality, without embellishment but also without dramatization and insistence only on the negative. Many participants in the talks also advocated such an approach citing examples of stereotyped reports and also suggestions as to how to jointly approach the task and the creation of an objective picture and public view of Kosovo.

The directors and chief editors of the public press from the whole country also visited Kosovo's information centers today. They include Pristina radio and television, RILINDJA, Jedinstvo and TAN.

SPOKESMAN ASSESSES PRC PREMIER'S VISIT

LD102240 Belgrade TANJUG in English 1424 GMT 10 Jul 86

[Text] Belgrade, July 10 (TANJUG) -- Chinese Premier Zhao Ziyang's visit to Yugoslavia was another contribution to the strengthening and promotion of all-round cooperation between the two countries, a Yugoslav Government spokesman stated at a press conference here today.

The spokesman, Ambassador Aleksandar Stanic, said the Yugoslav-Chinese talks had focused on economic relations and on determining the prospects for further development of cooperation, particularly as regards its more advanced forms on a long-term basis.

The comprehensive exchange of views on international questions confirmed the identify or closeness of views, which would contribute to further activities of Yugoslavia and China on the international scene, with a view to the democratization of international relations and maintenance of world peace, Stanic said.

CONDOLENCES SENT TO SRV ON DEATH OF LE DUAN

AU131309 Tirana ATA in English 0730 GMT 13 Jul 86

[Text] Tirana, July 13 (ATA) -- The Central Committee of the Party of Labour of Albania, the Presidium of the People's Assembly of the PSR of Albania, the Presidium of the People's Assembly of the PSR of Albania, and the Council of Ministers of the PSR of Albania have sent the following message of condolences to the Central Committee of the Communist Party of Vietnam, the National Assembly of the Socialist Republic of Vietnam, the State Council of the Socialist Republic of Vietnam and the Council of Ministers of the Socialist Republic of Vietnam:

The Central Committee of the Party of Labour of Albania, the Presidium of the People's Assembly, the Council of Ministers of the People's Socialist Republic of Albania and the Albanian people received with profound grief the news on the death of Comrade Le Duan, secretary general of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of Vietnam, outstanding leader of the Vietnamese people.

Comrade Le Duan, close and determined co-fighter of Comrade Ho Chi Minh, devoted his entire life, abilities and forces to the lofty cause of the heroic struggle of the Vietnamese people for national independence, the defeat of the barbarous aggression of American imperialism and the reunification of the homeland. Being at the head of the party for many years he made a valuable contribution to the work and efforts for the reconstruction and the allround development of the country, for the building of a new life, for the defence and strengthening of the Socialist Republic of Vietnam.

In the name of the Albanian Communists and the Albanian people, the Central Committee of the Party of Labour of Albania, the Presidium of the People's Socialist Republic of Albania extended to the Communist Party of Vietnam and the Vietnamese people their sincere condolences over such a grave loss, and express their sentiments of fraternal solidarity.

It is our profound conviction that the fraternal Vietnamese people, under the leadership of their communist party, will score continuous successes on the road of the strengthening of the freedom and the national independence, the realisation of their aspirations for progress and socialism. We are also fully convinced that the friendship between our two peoples and countries will be constantly developed and strengthened.

ZERI I POPULLIT CRITICIZES LCY CONGRESS

["The Congress of the LCY and the Short-Sighted Anti-Albanian Policy" -- ATA headline]

[Text] Tirana July 4 ATA -- Under the above title the newspaper ZERI I POPULLIT carries today an article which says among the other things:

The 13th Congress of the Communist League of Yugoslavia wound up its proceedings in Belgrade a few days ago. This time it drew a special attention not only of the Yugoslav opinion but also of the international one. The grave economic, political and national crises that have this country in their grip and the roads sought to overcome them have made this interest more accentuated. The question asked is which road will post Tito Yugoslavia follow? The congress gave no answer to this.

It is difficult to heal its diseases deriving from the failure of self-administration and the more so their consequences cannot be foreseen.

We as its neighbour want that Yugoslavia be stabilised because this is to the good of its peoples, and to the peace and security in the Balkans as well. We have followed the policy of good neighbourliness towards Yugoslavia and have tried to establish relations of mutual interest with it in all the fields where collaboration has been possible. We have never interfered in its home affairs, we have never threatened its freedom and independence, territorial integrity and sovereignty.

They on the other side of the border have met our friendship with hostility, our internationalism with chauvinistic attacks. The insistence in this anti-Albanian policy was manifested with all its aggressiveness in the present congress of the LCY. It made no constructive step regarding the People's Socialist Republic of Albania.

The arguments the Yugoslav leaders brought forth at the congress to back up this policy are as groundless as stale. They accuse us that "Albania interferes in the home affairs of Yugoslavia", that it "instigates the Albanian irredentists", that it has "territorial claims to Yugoslavia", that "it indoctrinates the Yugoslav nationals", etc. There was even someone who was more zealous and spoke of "Albania's aggressive aspirations towards Yugoslavia".

As it seems they in Belgrade want to find those responsible for the difficulties at home outside Yugoslavia, to arouse psychosis of dangers in order to divert the attention of the people from the real troubles preoccupying it.

Perhaps did the "Albanian interferences" influence in the creation of all those cracks of the Yugoslav political and economic system of which it was spoken so much at the congress? Are we Albanians who indoctrinated the Slovene youngsters for the protests they made and the demands they put forth at the congress of the Yugoslav youth? Can a wise man believe the claims that are constantly heard in Belgrade, that romanticism of the Albanian literature of the past century has stirred up national feuds in Yugoslavia?

Numerous speakers at the Yugoslav congress repeated steadily the old refrain that allegedly Albania has territorial claims towards Yugoslavia. But no one brought forth facts for this and could not do so, because such facts do not exist, neither direct or indirect. What the Yugoslavs say are only insinuations, fabrications needed to keep alive the chauvinist spirit at home and to blemish the image of Socialist Albania abroad. But if the historical fact that the Albanians are followers of the Illyrians is considered a territorial claim as was proclaimed by the seminar of the Serb Academy in Belgrade devoted to the origin of the Albanians, then we really have nothing to do. We are descendants of Illyrians and we cannot change our ethnogenesis. Hence, is seen we will remain forever in the eyes of the Serb academicians and in the minds of the politicians in Belgrade as "men with territorial claims".

From what we are hearing it becomes clear that the chauvinist fevers are causing many hallucinations in the Belgrade ruling circles. But, if they think that we, Albanians, will reject our national identity, will sacrifice our freedom, independence and sovereignty, will abandon the road of our revolution and the political line of the Party of Labour and Enver Hoxha, so that the Yugoslavs become "generous" to us, so that they stop calling us, for example, "great Albanians", they are wrong, because this will never happen.

This will never happen despite the threats made by the leader of Serbia, Dobrivoje Vidic at the 13rd Congress of LCY to re-examine "the levels achieved in the existing fields of the cooperation between the two countries".

We have already been used to the Yugoslav pressures and threats, which have been made on us during these more than 40 years of free Albania. We have managed to live and have even led a very good life, we have achieved development and progress even without the love of Belgrade as regards "the levels of cooperation" between the two countries, which even at present are very low and limited only in some narrow fields, that Vidic wants to eliminate completely, they are not to the benefit of Albania alone.

It is common knowledge that numerous contradictions of ideological and political nature, problems inherited from the past and others created at modern times, exist between Albania and Yugoslavia. The Yugoslav leaders, as they proved in the last LCY congress, want to deepen and aggravate them. Vidic's threat testifies to this. However, let the responsibility for this policy and its consequences be borne by the Yugoslav side.

We have been and are for a good neighbourliness, we have been and are for the strengthening of the freedom and independence of the peoples of the Balkans, including Yugoslavia as well, we are for the peace and general security in this region. We have always been and are of the opinion that the establishment and the expansion of the trade, cultural, technical, scientific relations etc., contribute to the creation and the preservation of those conditions and that atmosphere which are indispensable so that the countries and peoples live in peace and friendship between them. However, to this end there should exist the mutual will and desire, which we do not see in the Yugoslav leaders.

It was expected that the problem of Kosovo, its grave situation and poverty the whole world is speaking of, would be examined at the congress seriously and with a sense of responsibility. However, this did not happen. Kosovo and the Albanians were denigrated and threatened. Nobody showed concern about its nondevelopment, about the 120,000 unemployed, about the education and culture, about the social and other issues of this region.

At the congress it was spoken and decided only on new tightening measures, on the further restriction of the autonomy of Kosovo and the democratic and national rights of the Albanians. The resolution adopted on Kosovo leaves practically the two million Albanians of Yugoslavia at the mercy of the great Serbs. This course is already being applied. The Serb trials are causing havoc. Now nobody can estimate how many thousands of boys and girls of Kosovo are put to jails, how many others are discriminated and isolated, how many have been offended and humiliated.

The campaign launched by the great Serbs is galloping and nobody knows where it is going to stop. But their thirst for hegemony and domination cannot be gratified only in Kosovo and with the Albanians. There can be no free Croatians and oppressed Albanians within a state. It is not possible that the Slovene language and culture be respected and the Albanian language and culture be denied. This should be already understood in Yugoslavia, the lessons of history should not be forgotten.

The accusations made against the Albanians in Yugoslavia that they allegedly seek to destroy the Yugoslav state and create a sort of great Albania are completely groundless and utterly concocted.

The Albanians are well aware of the historical realities and they have never lacked political maturity. They are only asking to have the same rights enjoyed by the other nations in Yugoslavia, that the constitution and the other fundamental laws in power be observed and applied for them as well, that they are not discriminated and segregated.

In an effort to deny the Albanians of their national and democratic rights and to provide a theoretical foundation for the chauvinist policy, much is being discussed in Yugoslavia now about the nation and the state, about the motherland, and the filial land, about the minorities and majorities. They have recourse to the Roman and Indian, Russian and Swiss legislations. But, all these are Byzantine discussions and theorizations. The fact is that there are four times more Albanians in Yugoslavia than Montenegrins and, as for their number, they are the third biggest population after the Serbs and Croatians. Moreover they have not settled in Kosovo and other regions at present, but have been living on these territories many centuries before the Slavs would migrate to the Balkans.

Just like the other nations, through its struggle against the oppressive regime of the Serb kingdom and the fascist occupiers, the Albanian population in Yugoslavia contributed to the founding of the Yugoslav federation. Therefore, there is no reason why it should not enjoy all the rights stemming from this fact.

Hence, it is not the Albanians, who want to destabilize and dismantle Yugoslavia. The destabilization is urged by those who negate its nations of their constitutional rights, those who disrupt the co-existence among the peoples, who seek to bring back the part when the great Serbs were patrons and rulers over the others.

The problems of Kosovo are grave, but they can be solved if they are examined with cold-bloodedness and realism. The road of the negation of their legitimate rights of the nationalist oppression and violence, which was also expressed at the proceedings of the 13th Congress of the LCY, is an impasse.

Time has come when the Yugoslav leaders should understand that the internal situation in their country cannot be improved by accusing the Albanians, Greeks, Bulgarians or others for interference They must not seek for the enemies outside the country, but must try to eliminate the real causes that keep alive the national, economic and social inequalities, which create favourable conditions and grounds for the interference of the imperialist powers.

Speaking of the Balkans at the congress, the minister of foreign affairs of Yugoslavia, Dizdarevic said that the "allsided cooperation in the fields of mutual interest for the countries of the Balkans is the way to create the conditions to lower the tension there where it exists. It is also the road for a constructive dialogue for open and debatable problems, for their solution and materialization of the aspirations of the peoples of the Balkans to live in lasting peace and friendship."

Such a statement is worth hailing, but whom must we believe, Dizdarevic or Vidic? Certainly we must not trust the words but facts and the facts so far do not show of a sincere desire of the Yugoslav leaders to preserve and develop the good neighbourliness among the countries of the Balkans, to consolidate peace and security in this zone.

ATANASOV RECEIVES ROMANIA'S NICOLAE GIOSAN

AU111515 Sofia BTA in English 1120 GMT 11 Jul 86

[Text] Sofia, July 11 (BTA) -- Today Mr. Georgi Atanasov, member of the Politburo of the CC of the BCP and chairman of the Council of Ministers, received a Romanian parliamentary delegation paying a visit to this country led by Mr. Nicolae Giosan, chairman of the Grand National Assembly of Romania and alternate member of the Political Executive Committee of the CC of the Romanian Communist Party.

Mr. Georgi Atanasov and Mr. Nicolae Giosan informed each other of the tasks which the two countries are solving at the present stage of their development. They discussed a number of issues of bilateral cooperation including the role of the parliaments in the promotion of bilateral relations.

The head of the Bulgarian Government spoke of the policy of the BCP directed towards the intensification of all processes of social development, towards the stepping up of the rates of economic growth in compliance with the achievements of the most advanced countries in the world. He stressed the role of the accelerated introduction of the achievements of science and technology in production in achieving the planned acceleration. Mr. Atanasov explained the meaning of the changes introducted in the mangement and the economic life of the country and in the style and methods of work of the state apparatus, including the Council of Ministers. The talks stressed the tendency towards granting ever greater independence to the economic units and towards an ever greater interrelations between their activities and the requirements of the market.

Mr. Georgi Atanasov and Mr. Nicolae Giosan stressed the existing possibilities for activating Bulgaro-Romanian economic relations and for the introduction of modern forms of cooperation.

ECONOMIC TALKS WITH LIBYA END, PROTOCOL SIGNED

AU102047 Sofia BTA in English 1844 GMT 10 Jul 86

[Text] Sofia, July 10 (BTA) -- The 16th session of the Bulgaro-Libyan Committee for Economic and Techno-Scientific Cooperation ended here today with the signing of a protocol. The document was signed by Bulgaria's Minister of Trade Mr. Khristo Khristov and by Mr. Hasan 'Abd al-Ai al-Barghati, secretary of the People's Committee for Industry of Libya.

The two sides made a review of bilateral economic cooperation and noted its considerable progress in the period after the last session with satisfaction. They adopted concrete resolutions directed towards the further broadening of interaction. It has been provided for Bulgaria to render aid to Libya in the construction of a number of projects in agriculture -- sheep and poultry farms, a packinghouse and hot houses. Cooperation in the field of underground water prospecting will be broadened. It has been provided for the construction of enterprises in the field of the food industry and mechanical engineering as well as for the setting up of joint societies for the production of consumer goods. The main aspect of cooperation -- trade -- will also be promoted.

Techno-scientific cooperation will be directed towards the training of technical cadres as well as towards the broadening of interaction in health care, in the industry and in agriculture.

TRANSIT DIFFICULTIES FOR TURKISH DRIVERS DENIED

AU111601 Sofia BTA in English 1334 GMT 11 Jul 86

["Vienna Convention not Violated -- Foreign Motorists' Travel in Bulgaria" -- BTA headline]

[Text] Sofia, July 11 (BTA) -- Members of the Turkish and Western media have of late been circulating stories that only holders of international driving licenses are allowed to cross Bulgarian territory with their cars. It is alleged that drivers who do not hold international driving licenses are subjected to solid fines.

The BTA was informed by the Ministry of the Interior of Bulgaria that the latter has issued no order to the effect that only foreign drivers holding international driving licenses may be allowed to travel through Bulgaria.

Bulgaria has ratified the Vienna Convention on Road Traffic of 1968 and is abiding strictly by the rules set down by it. Bulgaria has even relaxed her regulations in respect to the foreign drivers and their vehicles. Foreign nationals may drive motor vehicles within Bulgarian territory if they possess one of the following documents: national driving license of the type approved by the Vienna Convention; international driving license; any other national driving license if it is accompanied by an officially legalized translation into Bulgarian.

Bulgarian laws do not envisage fines for irregularities in respect to the driving licenses in the sizes quoted by the Western press. The traffic control authorities have not fined foreign drivers for not possessing international driving licenses.

All allegations that Turkish nationals employed in the F.R.G. and passing through Bulgarian territory and falling into a "trap" are absolutely untrue. Bulgarian laws and traffic control authorities are treating all drivers equally irrespective of their nationality. It is, however, obvious that certain circles are interested in kindling unexisting problems and in creating anti-Bulgarian feelings.

MORE, BETTER CONSUMER GOODS CALLED FOR

AU082015 Sofia RABOTNICHESKO DELO in Bulgarian 7 Jul 86 pp 1, 2

[Editorial: "The Production of Consumer Goods and Services -- Industry for Man!" -- capitalized passages published in wide-spaced type]

[Excerpts] THE SUPREME GOAL OF THE WHOLE OF SOCIAL DEVELOPMENT AND OF THE PARTY POLICY WHICH WAS SCIENTIFICALLY SUBSTAINTIATED AT THE 13TH CONGRESS IS THE COMPREHENSIVE PROGRESS OF SOCIETY, THE RAISING OF ITS LIVING STANDARDS, AND THE PROSPERITY AND HAPPINESS OF MAN, OF THE WORKER. FROM THIS BASIC POSITION ESPECIALLY IMPORTANT PROBLEMS OF SOCIAL PRODUCTION WERE DISCUSSED AT THE MEETING WHICH WAS HELD ON SATURDAY, CONVENED BY THE SECRETARIAT OF THE BCP CENTRAL COMMITTEE AND THE BUREAU OF THE COUNCIL OF MINISTERS. THE THEORETICAL POSTULATES AND NEW APPROACHES EXPOUNDED BY COMRADE TODOR ZHIVKOV ARE OF FUNDAMENTAL IMPORTANCE FOR THE PARTY'S SOCIAL POLICY AND FOR THE TOTAL RESTUCTURING OF SOCIAL PRODUCTION UNDER THE INFLUENCE OF THE CONTEMPORARY SCIENTIFIC-TECHNICAL REVOLUTION. IN THEIR PROFOUND ESSENCE THE TASKS FOR CONSUMER GOODS PRODUCTION AND IN THE SPHERE OF SERVICES FORM A TOTAL AND BROAD-SCALE PROGRAM FOR THE FULFILLMENT OF THE CONGRESS DECISIONS FOR RAISING THE PEOPLE'S LIVING STANDARDS.

THE NEW STAGE WHICH THE COUNTRY'S IS ENTERING FOLLOWING THE HISTORIC DECISIONS OF THE 13TH BCP CONGRESS REQUIRES A NEW ATTITUDE, NEW THINKING, AND DECISIVE PRACTICAL ACTIONS, WHICH WILL LEAD TO COMPLEX SATISFACTION OF THE POPULATION'S MATERIAL AND INTELLECTUAL NEEDS, AND TO THE POPULATION'S REACHING THE LOFTY PEAKS OF WORLD CULTURE, SCIENCE, AND PRODUCTION. [passage omitted]

All the processes of renewal in the economy lose their meaning and become purposeless and ends in themselves if they fail to solve to the greatest extent the concrete problems of social development and the population's living standards. THE IDEA -- HISTORIC IN ITS CONTENT AND IMPORTANCE -- OF QUALITATIVELY NEW GROWTH IN THE ECONOMY AND IN THE SOCIAL AND INTELLECTUAL FIELDS, DICTATES A DIFFERENT STYLE, THINKING, AND ACTION, IN HARMONY WITH THE NEW STAGE OF SOCIAL DEVELOPMENT. [passage omitted]

Now changes are needed, changes which are to turn all the goods producers, which the economic organizations indeed are, according to Commrade Todor Zhivkov's figurative expression, into an industry for man. This formulation of the problem primarily signifies a uniform approach in the whole of the country's economic potential for the complex satisfaction of the population's needs.

The new approach presupposes the breakdown of branch and departmental barriers and views. Overcoming the old systems and organization will lead to uniform coordinated actions and to the integration of the efforts of all goods producers. The uniform policy in technological and technical development, provision of scientific services, prices policy, and the study and mass application of world experience will give a powerful impetus to production and to raising production quality and profitability.

The party's innovative conception has its sound foundation in our economy's material-technical base, in the achievements of goods production, and in Bulgaria's wide international economic relations. Only the wrongly understood interests of enterprises and plants which operate in isolation from one another within the framework of a branches can give rise to artificial shortages of goods and restrict the range of products. How painfully well aware we are of the harmful practice of goods being produced from which the enterprises derive a greater financial benefit, while other goods, so necessary for the population, are neglected. During the first half of this year alone more than 100 types of products which fall within the sphere of the population's basic needs were not supplied to the market.

The nonfulfillment of clearly defined plan tasks is due not to objective difficulties in the economy, but to the outmoded attitude of economic figures and plant managers. Even up to the present moment they are still living with the idea that it is more important to achieve a certain high income, even at the expense of product range and quality. But of what value is it to fulfill the plan in such a way, when products will enter the trading warehouses merely to lie there unsold, while the shelves for the goods in demand are empty?

What justifications can be given, for example, for the nondelivery to the market of joinery products, silk cloth, canned vegetables, synthetic latexes, panel radiators ...? Is there really a lack of production capacities, and is it really impossible to find the raw materials to produce the above articles?

There is usually one reason -- weak organization, a lack of elementary economic foresight, and bureaucratic laziness of services, small sections and departments which have the taks of ensuring supplies, concluding contracts, and organizing the work. Instead of such activities, they practice compiling telexes, writing letters of explanation and justification, and distorting the production structure.

The new approach requires a different policy which is totally in accordance with the market and consumer demand. It is no longer possible to organize normal production without researching the market trends, without making forecasts, and without uniformity in commercial, technological, and production activities. An enterprise which produces goods without having sensed the pulse of the market, the consumer's requirements, his interests, preferences, and criteria, and without then going again to the market in order to see how its product is assessed, is not worth a cent. Such a collective and its leadership are working working with their eyes closed, they are limited in their conceptions of their economic activity and as may be expected, always lag behind real life, the market, and modern production. [passage omitted]

PRODUCTION-SHARING [KOOPERATIVEA] AND LOCAL INDUSTRY possesses great reserves and, integrated in the general process of the production of goods and services, they can raise their organization and economic activity to a new level, produce complete products in the full sense of the world, and compete with many established companies.

Starting from this position, the work of a number of branches of industry must acquire a new direction -- raising the quality of their economic activity, modernization -- raising the quality of their economic activity, modernization, and profound changes in the actual structure of production. THE FOOD AND TOBACCO INDUSTRY POSSESSES IMMENSE CAPACITIES FOR PLAYING A LARGER AND LARGER PART AS A LARGE PRODUCER AND EXPORTER OF CANNED FOODS AND FOOD PRODUCTS OF THE HIGHEST QUALITY AND PROFITABLILITY, AND FOR SATURATING THE HOME MARKET WITH PREPARED AND SEMIPREPARED FOOD PRODUCTS BOTH FOR THE ENTIRE PUBLIC CATERING SYSTEM AND FOR THE POPULATION. Agriculture will find a continuation -- which is so necessary -- in industrial production, a uniform flow line, and will extend to the manufacture of an end product with the highest economic and social indices, representing a large part of the country's national income. As a state and a society, as producers, can we miss such a real opportunity and fail to meet such an objective requirement, for which we have all the conditions to achieve the level of the best models in the world economy? [passage omitted]

THE NEW APPROACH REQUIRES A RESTRUCTURING OF THE ACTUAL MANAGEMENT AND ORGANIZATION IN THE BASIC ECONOMIC STRUCTURES -- THE PLANTS, FACTORIES, AND ENTERPRISES, AND THIS IS TO EXTEND TO ALL THE ORGANS WHICH SHAPE ECONOMIC POLICY.

No significant results can be achieved unless there is a change to a new type of management, and unless the principles of the self governing systems are grasped and speedily applied. Self-government will stir the minds and economic initiative of the labor collectives, of this true and conscious MANAGER OF SOCIALIST PROPERTY. This manager is to have in its power the total organization of production, the rights and great responsibilities, investment activities, and relations with the market. The state will guarantee the basic material balances at the points of input and output of production, and will regulate the proportions in the structure of the goods funds, while first and foremost protecting the interests of the millions of consumers as regards products of the highest quality, most modern style, with good functional properties and reasonably priced. [passage omitted]

The movement for changes, especially in such a vitally important area as production and services, will be recompensed by yet greater material and intellectual values for the people, the new social climate, and sense of self-esteem. The concern for the nation's prosperity will promote active social behavior on the part of the workers in socialist construction, the scientific and technical reequipment of the whole of social production, and the accelerated promotion of every cause forming part of the country's present and future.

HRUSKOVIC ON NUCLEAR PLANTS' RELIABILITY

[CTK Report: "Builders' Meeting in Jaslovske Bohunice; Nuclear Power Plants -- a Firm Component of Czechoslovak Power Engineering"]

[Excerpts] Jaslovske Bohunice (Our correspoondent/CTK) -- With the successful putting into operation of the fourth, the last 440MW production block of the nuclear energy complex in Jaslovske Bohunice the construction of nuclear power plants in that locality has ended. On that occasion, on Monday [7 July], a festive meeting of the builders of the V-2 nuclear power plant was held in the Bohunice subsidiary of the Nuclear Power Plants enterprise, in which the course of construction was assessed and appreciation was expressed to the most successful collectives and individuals.

The meeting was attended by a party and state delegation, headed by Miloslav Hruskovic, candidate member of the Presidium of the CPCZ Central Committee and secretary of the CPSL Central Committee. The delegation further consisted of Ignac Janak, candidate member of the Presidium of the CPCZ Central Committee and leading secretary of the CPSL West Slovak Regional Committee; Vlastimil Ehrenberger, CSSR minister of fuels and power. Milan Kubat, CSSR minister of electrotechnical industry; Dusan Miklanek, Slovak minister of construction; and Ondrej Kvaka, deputy head of a CPCZ Central Committee department. Vladimir Monakhov, counsellor of the USSR Embassy to the CSSR, was also present. [passage omitted]

In the opening part of his speech, Miloslav Hruskoivic analyzed ways with which it is possible to ensure an increment in primary energy. In this connection he noted that there is only one truly long-term path to ensure it. In our naturalistic conditions, the orientation toward the utilization of nuclear energy continues to be such a path. However, the utilization of nuclear energy for the production of electricity alone would not be able to resolve the complex situation in the balance sheet of primary resources.

Therefore, it is also necessary to pay attention to the construction of heat feeders [tepelne napajece] from Jaslovske Bohunice to Trnava, Leopoldov, and other places, as well as from Mochovce and Dukovany. It is equally necessary to strive for the utilization of waste heat. He stressed that party and state agencies are paying exceptional attention to the reliability of the nuclear power plants in operation, as well as of those under construction. [passage omitted]

PAPER REPORTS TRIAL OF DOLLAR COUNTERFEITERS

AU111948 [Editorial Report] Prague RUDE PRAVO in Czech on 9 July on page 3 carries a 1,300-word article by Nada Adamickova entitled "Growing Rich From Human Gullibility." The article deals with a recent trial at the Prague City Court of a group of 20 illegal money changers who were dealing in counterfeit $100 bills. The gang was uncovered after a cheated citizen who bought U.S. $600 at the "fairly good black market rate of Kcs32 per U.S. dollar," discovered that the bills were forged and informed the police. The hint of this citizen -- who, as Adamickova implies, will also have to stand trial for violation of the foreign currency law -- led to the apprehension of 25-year old Ludek Skop and, ultimately, the whole group of about 20 suspects.

These people, all of them good friends of Skop, included Ladislav Perkaus and Josef Majer, the original owners of all the counterfeit dollar bills. Perkaus and Majer, who obtained the bills from "foreign tourists," then sold them to the other members of the group at a rate of Kcs20 per U.S. dollar. According to Adamickova, all members of the group were well aware that these were "left bucks" [levy baky] the slang term for counterfeit dollars.

The dealers reportedly spent their "working hours" in the lounge and coffee shop of the Alcron Hotel in downtown Prague where they "pursued their business." Most of them had professions "ensuring them the greatest possible liberty," such as "heater, cleaner, parking place attendant, and the like." Thanks to the income from their illegal deals, they could afford to "pay accomplices who did their work for them." Adamickova asks: "Does the ranking personnel of the organizations concerned know how their employees observe working hours? And if they do, are their control measures sufficiently effective?"

The interrogations revealed, Adamickova continues, that a "fairly large number of counterfeit U.S. $100 bills are circulatng in Prague." An expertize by specialists from the Czechoslovak State Bank confirmed that they were "successful forgeries," which a laymen cannot possibly tell apart from genuine dollar bills. The foreign counterfeiters reportedly used "modern printing equipment, chemicals, dyes, and paper," which accounts for the bills' "high quality".

In concluding, Adamickova warns that although Skop's group is not the only gang of currency dealers that "found itself on the defendants' bench" recently, there are other people who bank on people's gullibility and continue to engage in this illegal trade.

U.S. POLICY, BLAMED FOR DIFFERENCES WITH EUROPE

[Jirina Dupalova Commentary]

[Text] The claim that the Soviet Union wants to drive a wedge between the United States and West Europe, that it wants to undermine it and put it under its influence is the common denominator of all campaigns in the West against Soviet peace proposals. This is nonsense, which both Washington and the West European capitals know well. Despite social and class interests that link West Europe with its transatlantic partner there exist serious differences between them. These however are not the work of Moscow. Their causes lie elsewhere. Admiral James Eberle, a former NATO official and currently the director of the Royal Institute for Internatinal Affairs in London, declared about one of the most important ones: Reagan's program for feverish arms buildup, especially in space, divides most of the United States and West Europe, which does not want to become a sacrificial victim.

West Europe knows what war is about. It lived through two wars. It paid with millions of lives and suffered enormous material losses. For this reason it has a far more responsible attitude toward the issues of war and peace. If disappointment grows in it at the confrontational line of Washington's policy, then its growing interest in the relaxation of international tension, for which the Soviet Union is striving, is only completely natural.

One of the basic traditional orientations of its policy is the European aspect. Recent history has shown that it was not accidental in the past and is thus evenless accidental today. After all our common home, Europe, where mutual dependence and connection between the destinies of nations is manifested especially strongly, despite the fact that they proceed along different paths of social development, is overcrowded with the greatest number of the most destructive weapons of all kinds, and its stockpiling continues.

The densely populated continent has thus become literally the most explosive place in the world. Its security cannot be secured by military means, by a military force. This is an indisputable fact. This is the political axiom of the present.

The Soviet Union also points out that conditions have been created in Europe for overcoming the split between East and West, primarily in the issues concerning the safeguarding of security and the development of mutually advantageous cooperation. These are the reasons why much of the soviet peace proposals are directly aimed at Europe. Its realization would make it possible to untie the Gordian knot not only of European but also of world security. This is also why now, or to put it better, especially now, the role of that first step along the path of ensuring a world free of wars belongs to Europe. It would be a good thing if the other section of our common home realized this as much as possible.

HUSAK SENDS CONDOLENCE MESSAGE ON LE DUAN DEATH

[Text] Prague July 11 (CTK) -- Czechoslovak Communist Party General Secretary and President Gustav Husak has sent a message of condolences to the Central Committee of the Communist Party of Vietnam on the death of Vietnamese Communist Party General Secretary Le Duan.

On behalf of the Czechoslovak Communist Party and all people of Czechoslovakia he said that the name of Comrade Le Duan is linked with the heroic struggle of the Vietnamese people for freedom, independence and unification of the country, for peaceful life and socialist construction of their homeland.

In Czechoslovakia, Comrade Le Duan was known as a close collaborator of Ho Chi Minh, an outstanding party and state representative, patriot and internationalist, who has done much work for strengthening the cohesion and unity of the countries of the socialist community, for the victory of the ideas of socialism, peace and progress in the world, the message said.

Comrade Le Duan was a sincere friend of Czechoslovakia and its people, contributed to the expansion of friendship and allround cooperation between the communist parties of Czechoslovakia and Vietnam, the Czechoslovak Socialist Republic and the Socialist Republic of Vietnam, the message said.

VACLAVIK ORDERS MARKING OF CIVIL DEFENSE ANNIVERSARY

LD111332 Prague Domestic Service in Czech and Slovak 1300 GMT 11 Jul 86

[Text] Colonel General Milan Vaclavik, Czechoslovak minister of national defense, has issued an order on the 35th anniversary of civil defense [civilna obrana]. He emphasized that civil defense, under the leadership of the CPCZ, responsibly fulfills patriotic and international tasks. It secures the population's defense and protection, eliminates the consequences of natural catastrophes, and creates conditions for the fluent running of the national economy in the event of possible attack by the enemy. The creative utilization of experience and close cooperation with the civil defense of the Soviet Union and the other states of the Warsaw Pact significantly contributes to raising the standard of its readiness.

Minister Milan Vaclavik also recalled in the order the gradation of feverish armament by the world's reactionary forces. This demands a continual increase in combat readiness and the need to create all necessary conditions for preserving the vitality of the population and of the national economy in the event of a defense emergency.

SCHUERER, USSR DEPUTY CHAIRMAN HOLD TALKS

[Text] Berlin, 11 Jul (ADN) -- Friendly talks between Gerhard Schuerer, GDR Council of Ministers deputy chairman and State Planning Commission chairman and Genrikh Stroganov, USSR State Planning committee deputy chairman in Berlin on Friday centered on the fulfillment of the long-term agreement on tasks and science, production, and technology between the GDR and the USSR. The two sides discussed measures for the further consistent implementation of the program for this cooperation and the complex program for scientific-technical progress of the CEMA member countries until the year 2000.

These measures are aimed at further raising the GDR and USSR economies' productivity and efficency by means of comprehensive intensification, particularly through the application of key technologies, and the production of goods with the highest scientific-technical level. Special importance was attached here to the expansion of cooperation and specialization in production and the development of direct relations between the two countries' combines, enterprises, and scientific research institutions.

SINDERMANN, ITALY'S IOTTI EXCHANGE DINNER TOASTS

LD251415 East Berlin ADN International Service in German 2046 GMT 24 Jun 86

[Text] Rome, 24 Jun (ADN) -- The president of the Italian Chamber of Depution, Nildo Iotti, stressed the flourishing, mutually beneficial development of relations between Italy and the GDR in her toast during a dinner in honor of GDR People's Chamber President Horst Sindermann on Tuesday evening. Her visit to the GDR in March 1984 was very important in understanding the country and its prospects.

The latest experiences in international politics have made it clear that the destiny of all peoples is closely interwoven, she added. Europe has become the largest arsenal of nuclear and conventional weapons. The search for peace and security must no longer be based on wanting to be the strongest and developing over-more complex weapons systems.

The only possible strategy today can be gradual, balanced, and controlled disarmament. Italy is following with hope and satisfaction the negotiations in Geneva and the latest statements, which appear to be opening the path to concrete results. No country should adopt the role of observer on the issue of disarmament.

In his reply, People's Chamber President Horst Sindermann described the mutual desire as parliamentarians, to do everything to safeguard peace and a happy life for the two peoples as a joint starting point for the talks. He expressed the expectation that the dialogue between politicans of the GDR and Italy will help peaceful coexistence to make a break-through. A constructive rapprochement is especially needed in view of the present complex and dangerous international situation. The joint effort to reduce tensions, halt the arms race on earth, and prevent its extension to space has priority.

Horst Sindermann referred to Erich Honecker's statement that statesmanlike wisdom must today be linked with a new approach to international problems. This way of looking at matters has recently allowed progress in relations between the two parliaments and states and guaranteed a continuation of this gratifying development. He recalled, in conclusion, the GDR's commitment never again to allow war to emanate from German soil, and the latest proposals in this connection, for example for the creation of a corridor free of nuclear weapons and a zone free of chemical weapons in central Europe.

AXEN DICUSSES PEACEFUL COOPERATION WITH PCF

LD091916 East Berlin ADN International Service in German 1705 GMT 9 Jul 86

[Text] Berlin 9 Jul (ADN) -- SED Politburo member Hermann Axen, secretary of the SED Central Committee, and the members of the French Communist Party (PCF) delegation, led by Politburo member Rene le Guen, spoke out in favor of intensified peaceful cooperation by the European states in the political, economic and scientific-technological areas during a talk in Berlin on Wednesday.

The SED and the PCF support political dialogue and all negotiations which aim at reaching agreements that consolidate the security of all states in Europe, the two sides noted. They attach particular importance to the further positive development of relations between the GDR and France.

The interlocutors also agreed that, in view of the dangers conjured up by the most aggressive circles of imperialism, there is nothing more pressing than bringing about a change toward disarmament and detente through a broad coalition of all forces of peace, reason, and realism.

The Budapest appeal for the reduction of armed forces and conventional arms from the Atlantic to the Urals opens up, together with the comprehensive peace proposals of the Soviet Union and the other socialist stares, a great chance for concluding substantive agreements on arms limitation and disarmament with regard for the security interests of all sides. It is now important to move the United States to adopt a realistic negotiating position through the intensified activity of all those to whom the peaceful future of mankind is the most important matter. The interests of the peoples and states of Europe are irreconcilable with star wars plans, the concellation of existing arms limitation agreements, and imperialist interference in the internal affairs of the states.

Germann Axen outlined the aims and directions of the international policy of the SED and the GDR. The socialist German state is effectively contributing toward implementing the peace program agreed by the states of the Warsaw Pact in Budapest. Rene le Guen reported on the intensified commitment of the French communists in the worldwide movement for peace and disarmament.

Both politicians paid tribute to the fraternal relations between the SED and the PCF and discussed concrete steps for the expansion of their cooperation.

PAPER ON BERLIN COMMUNIST PARTIES'CONFERENCE

AU091428 East Berlin NEUES DEUTSCHLAND in German 5-6 Jul 86 p 6

[Editorial Article: "Ten Years of Berlin Conference"]

[Text] Ten years ago the document "For Peace, Security, Cooperation and Social Progress in Europe" was published. (Footnote 1) (Conference of the Communist and Workers Parties of Europe, Documents and Speeches, Berlin, June 1976). Adopted at the Berlin Conference of the leading representatives of 29 communist and workers parties on 29 and 30 June 1986, the document points out the joint views and aims of the communists of our continent concerning the most important and most topical questions of the struggle for peace and social progress at that time.

If you examine the document from today's point of view and take stock of the significance and effects of the Berlin Conference from topical points of view, you have the following considerations: the aims with which the Berlin Conferences participants addressed broad social and political forces in their appeal have lost none of their topicality: ending arms races of whatever kind, the reduction and ultimate elimination of means of mass destruction; cooperation, in particular between the states of the two systems in Europe, a deepening of detente, development of the Helsinki process instead of confrontation; separate confidence- and security-building measures; defense of democracy, the struggle for a democratic way out of the crisis of the capitalist countries, against authoritarian and neofascist tendencies, cooperation with the nonaligned movement, the progressive forces in the developing countries in the struggle to "implement new international political and economic relations" (footnote 2) (ibid., p 38), the application of resources released through armament limitation and disarmament "to overcome the economic backwardness, to aid and support the developing countries and environmental protection" (footnote 3) (ibid., p 24). Today all these problems are even more urgent, even more aggravated than they were a decade ago. Does that mean that the communists that gathered in Berlin had illusions regarding the possibilities of implementing the aims they were striving at?

Yet in 1976 they were able to point to significant progress and note that "the communist and workers parties of the European countries... together with the other democratic and peace-loving forces have played a decisive role in the political actions.. that made possible a change toward detente, strengthening security, and toward cooperation in Europe" (footnote 4) (ibid., p 25). By analyzing the new situation thus created and expressed in the European treaty system, in the conference, in the final document of Helsinki, in the elimination of the political-diplomatic blockade of the GDR, in the failing of the U.S. aggression in Vietnam, and other developments, they set far-reaching aims: the consolidation and expansion of the process of detente, the change towards reducing armaments. They expressed their commitment to the active struggle "to implement the policy of peaceful coexistence, to develop an active cooperation among all countries as the only alternative to a nuclear war" (footnote 5) (ibid., pp 21/22).

They let themselves be guided by the fact that further progress on the path covered in Europe would promote the democratic reshaping of the international relations in general and expand the possibilities for the democratic and social progress of the peoples.

However, because the most aggressive forces of monopolism embarked on a course of confrontation and intensive armament, the situation in the world, and in Europe, has been seriously aggravated, and the danger of war has increased and continues to increase.

In the document the Berlin Conference participants did not exclude the possibility of such a development that is unfavorable for peace and the interests of the peoples. They even pointed out the acute dangers and responded to them in their struggle, in their cooperation with broad forces.

The participants in the meeting stressed "that world peace has not yet been guaranteed, that detente has not yet been stabilized, that serious obstacles still have to be overcome on the road to lasting security and cooperation" (footnote 6) (ibid., p 22). They referred to the fact that in striving for a way out of the crisis, the reactionary forces of big capitalism try to shift the burden of it onto the working people, try to limit the democratic and social rights of the peoples and at the same time strive "to prevent the policy of detente and active cooperation, undermine the results of the Helsinki Conference, and again create an atmosphere of tension and confrontation in international relations." (footnote 7) (ibid., p 23).

Thus one can say: Realism, sobermindedness, the capacity to act with foresight marked the statement of the communists of Europe in the document of the Berlin Conference. In this connection one cannot but make another important statement: At the Berlin Conference not only the dangers for peace and the forces from which they emanate were shown, but also the forces that are able to ban these dangers and the policy which the communists consider necessary in order to bring these forces together.

The document states in this connection: The communist and workers parties "regard dialogue and cooperation between the communists and all other democratic and peace-loving forces as necessary. In this they proceed from what they have in common and favor eliminating the mistrust and the prejudices that can impair their cooperation (footnote 8) (ibid., p 25). In this spirit the participants of the conference were in favor of a constructive dialogue with the socialist and social democratic parties, between the trade unions the youth and women organizations, the religious forces "while fully preserving the independence of all these forces in order to achieve peaceful cooperation in the struggle for peace, security, and social progress" (footnote 9) (ibid., p 39).

Obviously it is justified to say that there is a link between these ideas in the document of the Berlin Conference and the struggle fo our party for a worldwide coalition of reason and realism, to avert a nuclear inferno, ideas the necessity and real possibilities of which were founded among other places, in the address of Erich Honecker, at the International Scientific Conference "Karl Marx and Our Time -- The Struggle for Peace and Social Progress" in April 1983. Today one can state: The dialogue, the coming together of forces that are extraordinarily different ideologically, politically and socially -- among others of communists and social democrats -- in the struggle to safeguard peace within the framework of the peace movement, a worldwide coalition of social forces and states no longer represent a vision but are a reality that is developing and becoming more and more influential. A considerable contribution to that was made last by not least by the Berlin Conference of 1976, and by our party through its policy of active political dialogue.

The experiences gained since the Berlin Conference confirm that cooperation, exchange of views and experiences, joint consultation and coordination between the communist parties do not impair their striving for braoder cooperation with forces beyond the communist movement. The Berlin Conference, like the Karl Marx Conference and multilatieral events of the communist parties, demonstrate that whenever and wherevere an objective need for an exchange of views and experiences matures and exists, the communists will also find the corresponding conditions in order to take into account this need and guarantee their cooperation. This applies to the new questions which developed in the middle of the seventies in view of the change from cold war to detente as well as to the problems caused today for the communist parties by the threat to mankind, either from the policy of confrontation and intensive armament of the aggressive imperialist forces or from the scientific-technological revolution.

"The deepening of the international cooperation of communists," Comrade Erich Honecker stated at the 11th SED Congress, "is today based on the independence of every party and its own responsibiltiy in working out and implementing its policy, in the creative search for solutions to its concrete tasks taking into account national and international conditions. Differences in the approach to this task and possible differences in opinion must not affect the joint struggle, the joint responsibility" (footnote 10) (Central Committee Report to the 11th SED Congress pp 90/91). The SED will also in the future actively contribute to strengthening the internationalist affinity of the communists and to seeking appropriate forms and ways to guarantee it.

HONECKER GREETS KPRP CC ON FOUNDING ANNIVERSARY

BK071248 Phnom Penh SPK in English 1115 GMT 7 Jul 86

[Text] Phnom Penh SPK July 7 -- On the occasion of the 35th Founding anniversary of the People's Revolutionary Party of Kampuchea [PRPK], the PRPK Central Committee has received from the Central Committee of the Socialist Unity Party of Germany (SED) a message of warmest greetings.

The message, signed by General Secretary Erich Honecker, says: "Descended from the Indochinese Communist Party, the People's Revolutionary Party of Kampuchea is now a political force in leading the People's Republic of Kampuchea. It organizes the Kampuchean people in their struggle for national defence and construction.

"With the resolutions of its Fifth Congress, the PRPK has opened a new stage of social development in Kampuchea, that is a Marxist-Leninist programme of action, which enable the party to consolidate itself organizationally and ideologically and to lead the people in the socialist construction.

"The Socialist Unity Party of Germany and the People's Revolutionary Party of Kampuchea as well as the people of the GDR and Kampuchea are bound together by our fraternal relations and mutual cooperation.

"We continue to assist the PRPK and the Kampuchean people in their national construction and defense and in the struggle to make the PRK recognized internationally," the message concludes.

KOLDITZ SIGNS COOPERATION AGREEMENT WITH NICARAGUA

LD021136 East Berlin ADN International Service in German 1508 GMT 1 Jul 86

[Text] Berlin, 1 Jul (ADN) -- Horst Sindermann, GDR People's Chamber President, SED Central Committee, Politiburo member has assessed the continually deepening fraternal relations between the SED and Nicaragua's Sandinist Liberation Front, between the states and peoples of the two countries, as convincing proof of the two sides' determination to do everything for the preservation and safeguarding of world peace. During a meeting with a delegation from the Sandinist Defense Committee in Berlin on Tuesday he underlined that the GDR strongly condemns the policy of arms escalation, confrontation, and interference by U.S. imperialism and its allies. It is more important than ever that all forces of realism and reason unite to reduce tensions in the world, implement effective measures in the sphere of nuclear and conventional disarmament, and eliminate the danger of a nuclear war. Mikhail Gorbachev's proposals for eliminating all nuclear weapons by the year 2000 and the Warsaw Pact Budapest Appeal indicated the relevant direction and goal.

Horst Sindermann assured the Nicaraguan guests of the GDR people's firm solidarity and expressed the certainty that the two states' trusting cooperation will continue to strengthen in the future.

Delegation leader Commandante Leticia Herrera, first vice president of the National Congress of Nicaragua and national coordinator of the Defense Committee, pointed out that the Warsaw Pact's unanimous condemnation of the U.S. policy of interference in his country's internal affairs is an important guarantee of preserving peace in Central America. Firmly at the side of the socialist countries, the Nicaraguan people will resolutely continue the struggle for social progress, for peace, and freedom. The 100 million dollar military aid from the United States for the gangs operating against Nicaragua will not change this fact. Despite this policy aimed against the country's independence, Nicaragua continues to strive for a political solution and will not allow itself to be blackmailed, Commandate Herrera said.

The Nicaraguan delegation also met on Tuesday with Prof Lothar Kolditz, President of the National Council of the GDR National Front. After the talk Werner Kirchhoff, National Council vice president, and Leticia Herrera signed an agreement on cooperation between the GDR National Front and the Sandinist Defense Committee of Nicaragua until 1990.

[Text] Berlin 10 Jul (ADN) -- Hermann Axen, member of the SED Politburo and secretary of the Central Committee, and Bilberto Vieira White, secretary general of the Central Committee of the Colombian Communist Party, spoke in favor of a constructive continuation of political, parliamentary, economic and cultural relations between the GDR and Colombia in Berlin today.

The most important present task is the struggle for the preservation and safeguarding of peace, they stressed. Everything had to be done to prevent a nuclear catastrophe.

They supported the comprehensive and far-reaching proposals of the Warsaw Pact states as contained in the Budapest Appeal of the recent meeting of the Political Consultative Committee. This was an important initiative which testified to the genuine concern of the socialist states for a permament world of peace, security and mutually advantageous cooperation.

The two politicians stated the firm solidarity of their parties with the just fight of the peoples of Central America, Chile and Paraguay. Both parties supported the constructive proposals of the government of Nicaragua and the efforts of the Contadora states for a just political solution of the conflict in Central America, which was being put under great strain by Washington's adventurist policy.

Gilberto Vieira White, who was reelected deputy of the House of Representatives in the recent parliamentary elections, spoke about the efforts of the Colombian communists, who are struggling within the "Patriotic Union" for a permanent democratic alternative in the interests of the working people.

LAZAR, USSR'S VORONIN DISCUSS COOPERATION

LD111703 Budapest MTI in English 1607 GMT 11 Jul 86

[Text] Budapest, July 11 (MTI) -- In Budapest Friday a closing session was held to evaluate the results of the visit to Hungary by Soviet Deputy Prime Minister Lev Voronin, president of the state materials and technology supply committee of the USSR, with the participation of Hungarian Deputy Prime Minister Jozsef Marjai, Bela Szikszai president of the National Materials and Price Office, Jakov Kiryushchenko, president of the materials and technical supply committee of the Socialist Republic of Lithuania and members of the delegation accompanying Lev Voronin.

They evaluated the briefing and exchange of experience on the main objectives of the current five year plans and the sytems of measures for implementation, as well as measures to update economic control and management and improve efficiency. They agreed that the intensive exchanges of ideas concerning economy with material, the planning of the supply of technology and the shaping of the socialist market held over the past few days were a contribution to the application of successful working methods. They considered cooperation between Hungary and the USSR in projects underway to reduce inputs by rationalization with energy, thrift with materials and the re-cycling of by-products and waste materials to be important and resolved upon practical steps.

During his stay Lev Voronin met with Gyorgy Lazar, chairman of the Council of Ministers and Ferenc Havasi, member of the Political Committee of the Hungarian Socialist Workers' Party, secretary of the Central Committee.

MTI DETAILS LAZAR-AUSTRIAN CHANCELLOR'S TALKS

LD111521 Budapest MTI in English 1340 GMT 11 Jul 86

[Text] Eisenstadt, July 11 (MTI) -- According to MTI's Information Hungarian Prime Minister Gyorgy Lazar, who is paying an unofficial working visit to Austria, and his host Chancellor Franz Vranitzky held cordial and friendly talks both tete-a-tete and with wider attendance on Friday. The parties spoke with appreciation of the development of Hungarian-Austrian relations, and emphasized mutual interest in cooperation. They agreed on common efforts to apply the new and advanced forms of economic cooperation in a wider range, for which they held the reciprocally beneficial cooperation in the construction of the Gabcikovo-Nagymaros water barrage system as a good example. The parties welcomed the expansion of two-way tourism and its part in strengthening ties between the two peoples.

Both sides stressed the fundamental importance of cutting nuclear and conventional weapons as soon as possible, and the need of maintaining dialogue that serves confidence-building. They appreciated the significance of the Helsinki process and established that it is a common interest of all participating states that the follow-up conference to start in Vienna next autumn should yield results promoting reciprocally advantageous cooperation between states with diverging social systems.

Gyorgy Lazar invited Franz Vranitzky to Hungary. The Austrian chancellor accepted the invitation with thanks.

The members of the two delegations held separate talks. Gyorgy Lazar and his party met Theodor Kery, head of Burgenland Province, and several other members of the provincial government.

Press Conference Held

LD111525 Budapest MTI in English 1447 GMT 11 Jul 86

[Text] Eisenstadt, July 11 (MTI) -- After their Friday talks Hungarian Prime Minister Gyorgy Lazar and Austrian Chancellor Franz Vranitzky met Hungarian and Austrian journalists.

Vranitzky spoke highly of the economic, political and cultural relations between the two countries. He shared the view of his Hungarian partner that all efforts be made for the success of the CSCE follow-up conference to start in Vienna next autumn, and particularly for the promotion of economic relations, belonging to the Second Basket. Vranitzky emphasized the need of deepening bilateral cultural cooperation, and increasing two-way trade which achieved a record in 1985 but has since temporarily dropped. The chancellor reinforced the intention of his government to participate in the construction of the Gabvikovo-Nagymaros water barrage system.

Gyorgy Lazar highly appreciated the good-neighbourly relations of the two countries, and expressed his commitment for fostering relations. He reconfirmed that he had agreed with his Austrian colleague on all major issues.

Replying to questions Vranitzky said that the firm peace will [as received] that can be experienced all over the world would surely encourage the work of the CSCE follow-up conference. The Soviet-American summit in Geneva, he said, proved the will of the two great powers to negotiate gives ground for hope in the detente process. The chancellor said that the establishment in Budapest of representation offices by Austrian banks and the Chamber of Commerce was an important condition of the development of bilateral commercial relations. The two countries' membership of GATT may contribute to averting the administrative obstacles in the field.

In addition to economic cooperation which is always a priority Gyorgy Lazar appreciated the traditionally good and permanently expanding cultural relations and the significance of direct relations between individuals. He promised the Hungary would make further efforts for a longer stay and greater benefits of Austrian tourists. The Hungarian prime minister added that ties between border zones adds to the development of bilateral relations.

PREMIER LAZAR BRIEFED ON POLISH CONGRESS

[Tadeusz Samitowski report from Budapest]

[Text] Premier Gyorgy Lazar received Jozef Koziol, deputy chairman of the Council of Ministers, who is having economic talks with Jozsef Marjai, deputy premier. The Polish guest briefed the head of the Hungarian Government on the course of the 10th Congress and tasks of our government resulting from the congress resolutions. Gyorgy Lazar described current economic issues of the Hungarian People's Republic.

The state of implementation of tasks resulting from a Polish-Hungarian summit meeting which took place on 28 March this year and from resolutions taken at the 28th session of the joint Polish-Hungarian mixed commission for scientific and technological cooperation, were discussed during talks of Jozef Koziol and Jozsef Marjai. It was decided that new agreements on cooperation and specialization in the electro-engineering, chemical, automobile, mining and power industries will be signed by the end of August. Thus, within the strategy we have adopted, economic integration with socialist states is developing.

Session Ends, Protocol Signed

LD111534 Budapest MTI in English 1500 GMT 11 Jul 86

[Text] Budapest, July 11 (MTI) -- The Budapest meeting of the co-chairmen of the Hungarian-Polish committee for economic, technical and scientific cooperation ended with the signing of a protocol at the parliament building on Friday.

At the talks chaired by Deputy Prime Ministers Jozsef Marjai and Jozef Koziol, co-chairmen of the committee, the parties set concrete tasks in several fields including mining, power industry, and the development and application of up-to-date technologies and new technical solutions. This year the competent national authorities of the two countries signed four specialization and cooperation agreements and preparations for a further nine agreements are under way. The co-chairmen instructed the competent organs to co-ordinate research and production, and took measures to sign agreements as soon as possible.

The sides discussed cooperation in car manufacturing, mining and power industry and, assessing bilateral trade, established that contracts worth 1,100 million roubles had been signed. They held it necessary to accelerate the signing of agreements, particularly in the group of machinery and equipment.

Jozef Koziol met Gyorgy Lazar, chairman of the Council of Ministers.

The Polish deputy prime minister met Jeno Vancsa, minister of agriculture and food.

LD102249 Warsaw Domestic Service in Polish 2000 GMT 10 Jul 86

[Text] Wojciech Jaruzelski, first secretary of the PZPR Central Committee, sent a telegram of condolences to the Central Committee of the Communist Party of Vietnam [CPV] on the death of Le Duan, CPV secretary general. The telegram emphasizes the service of the deceased in organizing the struggle of the Vietnamese nation for the liberation of the country and for socialism. Le Duan was a tireless spokesman for internationalist cooperation and friendship of fraternal parties and nations of socialist states. In Poland, he enjoyed respect because of his personal contribution toward strengthening the lasting ties of friendship linking the two parties and the peoples of both countries.

POLISH-SOVIET TEAMS DISCUSS ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT

Talks Open

LD080721 Warsaw PAP in English 0025 GMT 8 Jul 86

[Text] Warsaw, July 7 -- Polish and Soviet Government teams for the development of economic ties between both countries started plenary talks here today 7 July focusing on specifying main directions of expansion and consolidation of direct links between economic orgainzations and on starting further joint enterprises. A great importance is attached to naming new possibilities to develop ties in agriculture and the food industry, including storing, transport and sales, and to the expansion of exchange of consumer goods.

Vice-Premier, Chairman of the government Planning Commission Manfred Gorywoda received today Vice-Chairman of the State Planning Committee of the Soviet Union Vladimir Lakhtin. The two discussed the issues of the Polish-Soviet economic cooperation agreed during the coordination of plans for the years 1986-1990 and the course of the work on materialization and implementation of the general international agreement of last February 19, especially with regard to the creation of the new production potential, and completing the construction, reconstruction and modernization of industrial ventures with the credit contribution for the Soviet side.

Also today Vladimir Lakhtin was received by Vice-Premier, Co-Chairman of the Polish-Soviet Intergovernmental Commission for Economic, Scientific and Technological Coooperation Wladyslaw Gwiazda. The two sides discussed some aspects of the development of direct cooperation between producing enterprises and research institutes, and the organization of joint ventures.

Organizational Links Reviewed

[Text] In the capital a plenary meeting of the ruling groups of the Polish and USSR teams for the development of economic ties between the two states has taken place. They discussed problems of the further development of direct links between enterprises and industrial and scientific-research organizations. Links between those enterprises and organizations in both countries that have already begun direct cooperation will be identified. It was also acknowledged that opportunities exist to increase trade turnover of market goods between the trading organizations of both states.

Today Zbigniew Szalajda received Vladimir Lakhtin, deputy chairman of the USSR State Planning Committee, who is the head of the Soviet delegation. They discussed intensifying economic cooperation, including the start of production of a delivery vehicle.

Draft Agreement Studied

[Text] Warsaw, July 9: Talks continued today [9 July] between the governmental teams of Poland and the Soviet Union for issues of developing economic ties between both states. A key topic of meetings held in one of the groups was the discussion on a draft agreement on creating joint Polish-Soviet economic organizations on the territories of both countries. Both sides agreed that joint research, designing-construction and scientific-production organizations and joint industrial groups and enterprises would be formed. Both sides stated that there existed possibilities of enriching trade exchange through the use of the production and service offers of small business units. The sides envisage that small business will start and expand co-production and specialization ties with Soviet economic and commercial organizations.

Talks attended by Deputy Chairman of the State Planning Committee of the Soviet Union Vladimir Lakhtin, who heads the governmental team for developing the Soviet Union's economic ties with Poland, were also held today at the Ministry of Foreign Trade. The talks focused on the current goods exchange and further intensification of economic cooperation, including expansion of Poland's production potential with the assistance of the Soviet partner.

Messner Receives Lakhtin

LD102043 Warsaw Television Service in Polish 1730 GMT 10 Jul 86

[Text] Premier Zbigniew Messner received Vladimir Lakhtin, chairman of the USSR Government Team for the Development of Economic Commitments Between Poland and the Soviet Union, and deputy chairman of the State Planning Committee. The fulfillment of the general, intragovernmental agreement of February this year, making way for new production potential with credits from the Soviet Union, including the completion of construction, reconstruction, and modernization of production buildings on Polish territory, were assessed. It was stated that the results of work done to date allow for the considerable enrichment of economic cooperation. This particularly concerns commitments between enterprises and production organizations, scientific-technological, design, planning, and trade organizations. It was emphasized that the creation of joint Polish-Soviet production enterprises and scientific-technological collectives is a new and higher form of cooperation in the process of deepening economic integration between our states. Taking part in the talks were Manfred Gorywoda and Franciszek Kubiczek.

["Polish-Soviet Economic Ties to Expand" -- PAP Headline]

[Text] Warsaw, July 11 -- The talks, held in the past few days in economic ministries as part of the work of government teams to develop Polish-Soviet economic ties, were summed up today. Heads of government teams Franciszek Kubiczek and Vladimir P. Lakhtin stressed these talks had been fruitful.

As regards metallurgy and engineering industry, both sides agreed on the possibility to increase the number of factories that would conduct direct cooperation by over 30 new economic organizations from every country. Several joint design teams -- for instance, in the aircraft industry, and the computer and food industries -- will be set up. Cooperation in the automotive industry will also be developed. Economic ties in the light and chemical industries are to be considerably expanded. The possibility to jointly implement investment projects serving to meet development needs of the electronic industry is also envisaged. It is possible for the Soviet partner to cooperate in making use of idle production capacities in Polish agricultural and food industry. Both sides reviewed proposals to start investment projects on the basis of Soviet credits.

CSSR, PPR MINISTERS EXTEND COOPERATION PLAN

[Text] Warsaw July 13 (CTK correspondent) -- Czechoslovak Minister of Fuel and Power Vlastimil Ehrenberger and Polish Minister of Mining and Power Industry Czeslaw Piotrowski ended talks in Katowice today. The ministers agreed that cooperation in the 1981-1985 was positive in the sphere of mutual supplies of coal and power, mining machines and equipment, as well as in the sphere of specialization. In the 1986-1990, cooperation will be extended in all the traditional spheres as well as in nuclear power engineering. The ministers also agreed on the implementation of the program of economic, scientific and technical cooperation between their ministries up to the year 2000, and discussed coordination in coal mining in the Ostrava-Karvina Coal Mining District and the lower Silesian coal mining district up to the year 2010.

[Text] Warsaw, Jul 11 -- The Sejm Presidium with Sejm Speaker Roman Malinowski and government Presidium with Prime Minister Zbigniew Messner assembled today at a joint session. The heads of deputies' teams of the PUWP, the United Peasant and Democratic Parties took part. The debaters discussed the deepening of cooperation of the Sejm and government bodies when performing constitutional functions by them and while putting into effect a programme for Poland's development, mapped out at the 10th PUWP Congress. The debaters reviewed in an all-round way the planning of the Sejm and government work, streamlining legislative process and cooperation of government bodies with Sejm committees. The session paid a lot of attention to collaboration in pursuing a uniform and coherent socio-economic policy.

DISCUSSIONS WITH WORKERS ON CONGRESS CONTINUE

[Text] Warsaw, July 11 - The ongoing meetings of delegates to the 10th PUWP Congress and members of the newly elected central party authorities with working people and representatives of various social and professional milieus have a working character. The fact that the PUWP CC Political Bureau, jointly with the government Presidium, made a preliminary review of the concept and methodology of the realization of the congress resolution in various walks of life met with approval.

The achievements of the 10th PUWP Congress were presented to the social and political activists of the management of the Szczecin-Swinoujscie port by members of the local party organization, PUWP CC Secretary Kazimierz Cypryniak and member of the newly elected PUWP CC, a foreman at the general cargo trans-shipment enterprise, Kazimierz Cichecki. Most attention was given in the talk to conclusions stemming from the 10th PUWP Congress for working people of the seacoast, party organizations in strengthening ties with the working class.

Alfred Miodowicz met today with the crew of the "Adamow" power plant in Turek which is part of the "Patnow-Adamow-Konin" power plant complex supplying Poland with 10 percent of domestic power production. During talks with many representatives of the crew Miodowicz discussed party-trade union relations. The head of the national agreement of trade unions OPZZ recalled that they were of a partner-like character which meant that the trade union movement was developing independently and the party's participation manifested itself through the activity of PUWP members. Various socio-material issues were also discussed.

In the "Malapanew" steel mill a team is already being formed to elaborate the principles of and implement the attestation of work posts in the mill.

SIWICKI BRIEFS TROOPS ON CONGRESS RESULTS

AU091406 Warsaw ZOLNIERZ WOLNOSCI in Polish 5-6 Jul 86 p 2

[Report on speech made by Army General Florian Siwicki, PPR minister of national defense and newly elected PZPR Politburo member, to troops and employees of the 1st "Warsaw" Fighter Group of the National Air Defense on 4 July]

[Text] Even the most comprehensive and carefully prepared reports produced by the mass media cannot act as a substitute for direct contact with a participant in an event of whatever kind. This was the first and most frequently repeated thought of career and basic service troops, and civilian employees of the 1st "Warsaw" Fighter Group of the National Air Defense who met with Army General Florian Siwicki, minister of national defense and PZPR Politburo member. It was the party organization of this unit that nominated the general as PZPR Armed Forces representative to the 10th PZPR Congress; within a few hours of the end of the congress, the general was communicating to members of the organization his impression, observations, and views concerning the course of the party's highest forum, its outcome, and the atmosphere that accompanied it.

Those attending the meeting informed the minister of national defense about the implementation of tasks undertaken to mark the 10th Congress. During the frank and OPEN PARTY DISCUSSION -- FOR SUCH WAS THE mood of the meeting -- Army General Florian Siwicki drew particular attention to the importance of the 10th PZPR Congress and to what was unusual about its character, a point that has been generally noted. It was not an extraordinary congress, said the general, but compared to the previous congress it was not, to be sure, an ordinary congress. This was because the congress summed up an important period for our country, a period of social, economic, and intraparty change, and because it outlined a vision for Poland at the end of the centruy, a picture of a future which, if tasks are consistently executed, can satisfy the entire nation.

The minister of national defense stressed that the particular character of the congress found expression in the documents it adopted, in the PZPR Central Committee report delivered by Wojciech Jaruzelski, and in speeches made by delegates and guests. However, its character did not find expression in this alone. The accuracy of the observation that the congress had a special character was confirmed by the congress campaign that preceded it, by the individual interviews conducted with all PZPR members, which amounted to a general dialogue with the party and within the party. In addition, there was the general public discussion of the PZPR draft program and congress these, a discussion in which all party members and many nonparty people took part. Finally, its character also found expression in the conferences that took place at various levels, during which the suggestions, proposals, recommendations, and postulates voiced by delegates were objectively analyzed and arranged in order of priority.

The culminating point, the sum of all this great work was, of course, the congress itself. Exceptional interest attended the congress, both at home and abroad. One can already say that it has fulfilled society's expectations. What matters now is that decisions made at the congress be implemented faithfully and consistently. Discussing the task stemming from the congress documents, Army General Florian Siwicki stressed, inter alia, the need for a continual improvement in cadre policy. It is not enough to know that we have good and solidly formulated principles. Whether these principles are implemented consistently, faithfully, openly, and in a principled fashion is an open question. (paragraph continues)

In recommending its members for managerial and leadership posts, the party must check and assess their performance. And when the need arises, when performance is unsatisfactory, such recommendations should be immediately withdrawn.

The minister of national defense then went on to concentrate on those tasks that should directly or indirectly concern the Armed Forces. The starting point for reflection on this is transporting the content of the congress resolution to one's own area of activity. The primary and most pressing issue is concern for the maintenance of a high level of constant combat readiness -- great mental effort in lecture theaters, workshops, and laboratories, no sparing of energies and efforts on training and exercise grounds; and taking good care of equipment, maintaining its effectiveness and reliablity. These steps, combined with the strengthening of bonds of alliance, friendship, and comradeship-in-arms with the Soviet Armed Forces and those of other socialist states, and vigilant observance and understanding of the complicated international situation, will be the best contribution that our Armed Forces can make to the struggle for peace.

Army General Florian Siwicki ended his speech by stressing the great opportunities that exist for the Armed Forces in the area of educating the younger generation, and the need to take experience beyond the barracks' gates more has been done before. This is so because upbringing, the cultivation of model civic attitudes, is a matter of great national importance. Participants in the meeting assured General Siwicki that they would spare no efforts to execute the tasks placed before them by the 10th PZPR Congress correctly and honorably, as befits a soldier. During the meeting, which was also attended by Division General Longin Lozolicki, commander of the National Air Defense Force, the minister of national defense also answered questions concerning the congress.

IMPACT, CONSEQUENCES OF CONGRESS ASSESSED

[By Boleslaw Zamczewski]

[Text] Warsaw, July 13 -- The PUWP Tenth Congress has given a direction to our work. Time has come for determined and well organized action in which no-one can be an on-looker, but everyone must participate, since what is at stake is Poland's prosperity and its international position as desired by the ambitions and aspirations of the Poles. Concrete and well-considered guideline and decisions made by the congress as well as determination characterizing the startup of their implementation leave no doubt that the decisions taken by that top forum of the party will determine the life of the poles and set the tasks before every group, institution and organizations. The objectives adopted in congress resolutions must become reality. It was clearly pronounced by the communique from the latest meeting of the newly-elected CC Political Bureau, and such was the spirit of party leaders' first working meetings with workers. It has been the main theme of continuing conversations the congress delegates have had with their workmates, and was expressed by the congress resolution.

The latter offers a highly reassuring and optimistic reading which brings more than just hope: a deep conviction that we are effectively taking in our hands a final sort-out of the difficult matters, the making up for delays, as well as such organization of work, which can and must give still better results. Though it is not and cannot be a pack of easy promises and wishful thinking, it augurs the effort all of us want so badly as the shortest way to desired solutions and prosperity. This will certainly be a road of increased workload, effort and choices, but the best one of all possible, and one which will be effective and will guarantee onward movement.

KOR FOUNDER LIPINSKI DIES IN WARSAW 13 JUL

[Text] Warsaw, July 13 (AFP) -- Professor Edward Lipinski, 98, a veteran member of the Polish opposition movement died in a Warsaw clinic Sunday [13 July], Jacek Kuron a leader of the opposition Social Self Defence Committee (KOR) said here. Prof Lipiniski, an eminent economist, was known for his liberal social and economic opinions and his support for the banned Solidarity union.

The professor founded KOR with Mr Kuron and another opposition leader Adam Michnik, who is currently serving a jail term, in 1976 to defend strikers who were sentenced to heavy jail terms by Polish authorities. In 1981 the professor was a delegate of honour at the Solidarity conference in Gdansk, which was the last before martial law was declared a few months later and the union was banned. He started civil rights campaigning in 1904 demanding social justice and independence for Poland which was then divided between Russia, Prussia and Austria. After the Second World War Prof Lipinski joined the Polish Communist Party but left in 1975 in protest at human rights violations. Right up to his death Prof Lipinski demanded freedom for political prisoners in his country, now thought to number nearly 350.

EXECUTIVE POLITICAL COMMITTEE MEETS 11 JUL

[Text] Bucharest, AGERPRES, 11/07/1986 -- A meeting of the Executive Political Committee of the CC of the RCP was held on Friday, July 11, under the chairmanship of RCP General Secretary Nicolae Ceausescu.

During the meeting, the Executive Political Committee examined a report on the improvement of norms and normative rules concerning stocks and the liquidation of overstocks in 1986, and approved measures for the setting of rational stock norms and normative rules in the case of raw and subsidiary materials, unfinished production and finished products and their maintenance within strictly necessary limits, as well as steps to strengthen, upon that basis, self-administration and self-financing, to administer all material resources and the money in this country with high efficiency and a high sense of responsibility.

The measures agreed upon provide for a roughly 50-per cent cut in the total volume of stocks in industry.

Agreement was also reached on the elaboration of stock norms and normative rules, as well as measures to do away with overstocks in the home trade network with a view to avoiding the immobilization and depreciation of the commodities intended for the population's supply.

The Executive Political Committee also examined a report on the plan for the financing of economic and social activities on the basis of self-management and self-administration in July 1986.

The financing plan was worked out in harmony with the measures aimed at improving the organization of production and work, on the basis of the economic and financial normative rules that had been set. The basis indicators of the financing plan, which is set on the target under the national plan, are the production under domestic and export contracts, the marketable production sold and paid for, as well as the reduction of total production costs and of material spending.

Furthermore, with a view to improving the activity of following the realization of state incomes, intensifying control over the use of material resources and money, ensuring a corresponding monetary circulation and intergrally implementing the programme for self-management and self-sufficiency by territorial units, the Council of Ministers will work out the centralized financial plan of the services for July and August inst. and then on a three-month basis, with a breakdown by months, which will be submitted for approval.

Report on Ziyang Visit

AU111918 Bucharest AGERPRES in English 1754 GMT 11 Jul 86

[Text] Bucharest, AGERPRES, 11/07/1986 -- In its July 11 meeting, held under the chairmanship of party General Secretary Nicolae Ceausescu, the Executive Political Committee of the CC of the RCP heard a report on the official visit of friendship Zhao Ziyang, premier of the State Council of the People's Republic of China, paid to Romania over July 2-6.

The Executive Political Committee considered that the meeting and talks between Nicolae Ceausescu and Zhao Ziyang went down as a new, important moment in the development of the fine Romanian-Chinese relations, once again highlighting the deciding role of summit dialogue in the continuous strenghtening of friendship and collaboration between the two parties, countries and peoples.

Satisfaction was expressed at the joint determination expressed during the talks to develop still more the traditional links between the Socialist Republic of Romania and the People's Republic of China on all planes. Special emphasis was placed on the fact that during the talks significant conclusions had been reached on the growth of bilateral economic exchanges at a faster pace.

The understandings were brought to the fore which were reached in connection with the more marked rise in the volume of commerical exchanges, the identification of new areas and forms of cooperation -- between enterprises in the two countries included -- the stronger expansion of cooperation in and specialization of production on a long-term basis, the implementation through joint efforts of vast economic projects, the attainment being thus ensured of the levels agreed upon during the official visit President Nocolae Ceausescu paid to the People's Republic of China in October 1985, when the lasting foundations of the Romanian-Chinese collaboration in the current five-year plan period and beyond, until the year 2000, were laid.

THe Executive Political Committee also underscored the importance of the opinions Nicolae Ceausescu and Zhao Ziyang exchanged on current aspects of the international political life which highlighted Romania's and China's identical or very close stances on the fundamental issues of the comtemporary epoch. Appreciation was expressed for the fact that during the talks Romania's president and the Chinese premier had reiterated the two countries' will to cooperate ever more closely in the international arena in the fight for disarmamant and peace, for the constructive settlement of the major problems that face our epoch. Fully approving of the results of the visit and of the talks conducted on the occasion, the Executive Political Committee requested the government, the ministries and the other central bodies to take every measure with a view to fulfilling the understandings reached and attaining the envisaged targets in the field of collaboration, in the interests of the two countries and peoples, of the general cause of socialism and peace.

Cape Verde Ties Discussed

AU111850 Bucharest AGERPRES in English 1745 GMT 11 Jul 86

[Text] Bucharest AGERPRES 11/7/1986 -- During a meeting of the Executive Political Committee of the CC of the RCP held on July 11 under the chairmanship of the Party General Secretary Nicolae Ceausescu, an account was read of the official visit of friendship Aristides Maria Pereira, secretary-general of the African Party for the Independence of Cape Verde, president of the Republic of Cape Verde, paid to Romania over June 23-26.

Unanimously approving the results of the talks between Nicolae Ceausescu and Aristides Maria Pereira, the Executive Political Committee considered that the visit gave expression to the joint determination to further strengthen friendship and collaboration between Romania and Cape Verde, in the mutual interest, in the interests of international peace and understanding. In the context, stress was laid on the significance of the general long term. Agreement on cooperation between the Government of the Socialist Republic of Romania and the Goverment of the Republic of Cape Verde, and of the accord on collaboration between the Romanian Communist Party and the African Party for the Independence of Cape Verde signed during the visit, which provide for the broad development of bilateral collaboration and cooperation in various spheres of common interest.

The Executive Political Committee underlined the importance of the exchange of views between Nicolae Ceausescu and Aristides Maria Pereira on international issues, which brought to the fore the fact that Romania and the Republic of Verde had identical or very close points of view on the major problems facing present-day mankind, declared resolutely for the observance, in interstate relations, of the principles of fully equal rights, national independence and sovereignty, non-recourse to the use and threat of force, and for assistance to the African peoples in their fight for liberty and national independence, against imperialism, colonialism and neocolonialism, racism and apartheid, for the eradication of underdevelopment and the building of a new international economic order.

Unanimously approving the understandings and documents covenanted during the visit, the Executive Political Committee set measures for their translation into fact, for the expansion of friendly and cooperative ties between the Socialist Republic of Romania and the Republic of Cape Verde.

UCY ANALYZES IMPLEMENTATION OF CONGRESS AIMS

[Text] Bucharest, AGERPRES 12/7/1986 -- A plenary meeting of the CC of the UCY [Union of Communist Youth] was held on July 12. It analyzed the way in which UCY bodies and organizations commit the youths to translating into fact the documents adopted by the Thirteenth RCP Congress, the targets for an intensive development and modernization of agriculture as well as their tasks in implementing the resolutions of the Third Farmers' Congress regarding the accomplishment of a new agrarian revolution.

The plenary meeting also debated how UCY bodies and organizations work for the patriotic, revolutionary education of the youth, and the young people's training in defence of the homeland, organize cultural-educative, sport and tourist activities and the spending of leisure, as well as the tasks of youth organizations in unswervingly implementing the ideological programme of the party. A resolution was also ensorsed with regard to the organization and coordination of activities on patriotic work sites and camps, in central and local camps for the education and rest of children and students as well as of the other categories of young people during their summer holidays.

The plenum was addressed by Nicu Ceausescu, alternate member of the Executive Political Committee of the CC of the RCP, first secretary of the CC of the UCY. The participants in the plenary meeting addressed a telegram to RCP General Secretary and Romania's President Nicolae Ceausescu.

CHAMBER OF ECONOMY DISCUSSES BREAD PRICES

LD111326 Belgrade TANJUG Domestic Service in Serbo-Croatian 1205 GMT 11 Jul 86

[Text] Belgrade, 11 July (TANJUG) -- The Federal Executive Council had to restore bread prices because the agreement was not honored. When the Federal Executive Council decided that flour and bread prices should be independently formed in work organizations, it was suggested sociopolitical communities introduce subsidies and compensation for the basic type of flour and bread. No one has done so. Now complaints will be made that the Federal Executive Council is resorting to administrative behavior, while there will be no mention of the responsibility of those who allowed such increases in bread prices. This was said by Janez Zemljaric, vice president of the Federal Executive Council, in a talk today with businessmen at a session of the Assembly of the Yugoslav Chamber of Economy.

The assembly elected new members of the Executive Committee, president of the Yugoslav Chamber of Economy, and adopted decisions on business ties with foreign legal and physical entities. Milan Pavic was elected president of the Yugoslav Chamber of Economy.

Official Comments or Prices

AU111803 Belgrade Domestic Service in Serbo-Croatian 1300 GMT 11 Jul 86

[Text] How do those in charge of agricultural policy interpret the increase in flour and bread prices? Here is an interview granted by Sava Vujkov, president of the Federal Committee for Agriculture, a guest of our show, to our journalist Radomir Vitanovic:

[Begin recording] [Vitanovic] At the session of the Federal Committee for Agriculture today, the recent increases in flour and bread prices were also on the agenda. Comrade Vujkov, what have you decided?

[Vujkov] The Federal Committee for Agriculture at its session today assessed that the Federal Executive Council decision to return the flour and bread prices to the 25 June level was necessary and justified, for the following reasons: The associated labor organizations and other subjects participating in setting, forming, and controlling prices have not sufficently respected, in a self-disciplined and responsible way, the positions on implementing the anti-inflationary policy, and they did not respect to a sufficient degree the present economic moment and the situation of the working people and their standard of living.

A great number of organizations shifted the prices of both flour and bread to a level that is much higher than the increased price of wheat, probably endeavoring in this way to get some income which would not be exclusively a result of work.

[Vitanovic] The processing and milling of the wheat that is being harvested in our fields has not yet begun. This is one of the reasons that the Federal Executive Council adopted this decision.

[Vujkov] I want to say that (?a question of business ethics) arises when been associated labor organizations correct the prices of goods that they have not yet even offered on the market. A correction of the business ethics of associated labor organizations must be carried out in a positive manner. The Federal Executive Council will immediately examine the overall situation again and will adopt appropriate decisions. A shifting is prices of necessary, because the guaranteed prices and the purchasing prices of wheat have been adjusted. This is clear to all of us and it is also clear to every consumer. But the shifting must be within the limits of the wheat price shift and within the limits of the actual and real increases of the essential costs which influence this production.

The Federal Executive Council is working on new solutions, and I believe that it will bring forth new proposals in an efficient way and in good time. [end recording]

Prices Stay High

AU111534 Belgrade Domestic Service in Serbo-Croatian 1300 GMT 11 Jul 86

[Excerpts] Bread should have been sold today at the prices of 25 June. At least this is what yesterday's decree by the Federal Executive Council says. Nevertheless, bread was sold in many places at much higher prices, as decided by milling and bakery organizations a few days ago.

We asked Radoslav Hadziristic, director of the Belgrade Bakery Industry, why this has happened.

[Begin Hadziristic recording] Considering that the (?decree) arrived this morning, at 0300 or 0400, the organizational and technical, preparations demanded -- so as not to cause a disturbance in the market -- that this be postponed and that the prices not be lowered until tomorrow morning. [end recording] [passage omitted]

In opposition to yesterday's decision by the Federal Executive Council, bread continues to be sold at new prices in Belgrade shops today. What have the Belgrade bakers decided at an extraordinary meeting of the workers council? When will the bread prices returned to the old level of 25 June?

Dragana Cosic discusses this with Radoslav Hadziristic, director of the Belgrade Bakery Industry:

[Begin recording] [Cosic] The session of the workers council has just been concluded. What has been decided?

[Hadziristic] We did not decide anything today, since the decision had been adopted. There is no place for decisions by self-managing organs. We only informed the self-managing organs today about the course and the manner of implementation. We issued an order that supply be kept at a level that is necessary for such a city. [passage omitted] [end recording]

New Prices Urged

LD111350 Belgrade TANJUG Domestic Service in Serbo-Croatian 1317 GMT 11 Jul 86

[Excerpt] Belgrade, 11 Jul (TANJUG) -- Following yesterday's decision by the Federal Executive Council to restore flour and bread prices to the level of 25 June, today the Federal Committee for Agriculture demanded the urgent formation of new bread and flour prices, which should be within the framework of the agreed increases for this year and take into consideration economic interests of producers, as well as the needs to protect the consumer standards. Bosnia-Hercegovina Stand

LD111451 Belgrade TANJUG Domestic Service in Serbo-Croatian 1213 GMT 11 Jul 86

[Text] Saragevo, 11 Jul (TANJUG) -- The Executive Council of Bosnia-Hercegovina supported the orientation of the Federal Executive Council that until (?further notice) prices of flour and bread should not be increased and that this period should be used to assess more comprehensively the consequences of price increases on the citizens' living standard and the material position of the flour mill and baking industries. According to a report by the republican information committee, the council endorsed a more standardized formation of prices for the basic food articles in the country and the introduction of compensation, for these products.

At this session the Bosnia-Hercegovina Executive Council devoted most attention to the situation of debts and foreign borrowing from 1981 to 1985 and the realization of the monetary-credit and foreign exchange policies for the next 5 months of the current year.

It was established that in the past 5 years the principal on debts by organizations of associated labor and banks decreased by $233 million, while the claims of Bosnia-Hercegovina increased by $220 million. Besides this, the republic's average indebtness is above the country's average.

At the session it was assessed that in the first half of this year this republic's economy and banks repaid $173.8 million of foreign debts, out of which 90.8 million was the principal and 83 million the interest. In the second half maturing claims will amount to $176.2 million ($97.2 million of the principal and $79 million of the interest).

Discussing the realization of the credit monetary and foreign exchange policy, the council assessed that within the framework of the measures of the financial consolidation of the organizations of associated labor, (?and) and banks and the gradual unburdening of the economy, it will be necessary to adjust the growth of the envisaged amount of the money in circulation and the banks' dinar investments.

The Executive Council positively assessed tasks on organizing the floating and subscription of the loan for additional employment.

DENDA COMMENTS ON ZHAO ZIYANG VISIT, RELATIONS

AU100743 Belgrade Domestic Service in Serbo-Croatian 2000 GMT 9 Jul 86

[Milorad Denda commentary]

[Text] Zhao Ziyang, PRC premier, tomorrow concludes his 5-day official and friendly visit to our country. On this occasion, Milorad Denda speaks about relations between Yugoslavia and China:

Zhao Ziyang, premier of the PRC State Council, has been here in our country for 4 days and it is difficult to add anything essentially new to the well-known assessment that Yugoslav-Chinese relations are very good and permeated with trust and understanding. The visit gave not only political encouragement and stimuli, but also specific directions and signposts to the wish and readiness of the two countries to expand especially the economic relations.

Economic cooperation is in fact a field where -- making use of the very good climate in Yugoslav-Chinese relations -- much better results may be achieved. This has been confirmed this time again, but the fields and the ways of making significant advances have also been envisaged. There is agreement in the intention that these relations should be looked at from a long-term angle and developed in that way, too.

Although there have been no specific signatures or arrangements, steps have been made for a more modern economic cooperation of the two countries. This is how one should regard the readiness to sign an agreement on a long-term scientific and technological cooperation program, by which joint research in many fields would start in practice, the readiness to approach third markets and to embark on business in third markets, and to realize the projects and agreements that have been started in agriculture and industry -- in short, to increase the modest $190 million realized in economic cooperation last year.

For such business it is necessary in our country, too, to reach more organized agreements when one moves from political proclamations about readiness on to the concrete fields of figures, projects, and trade. During this visit again, all the incentive motives for cooperation clearly stood out in the atmosphere and in what has been said. The fact that in their development the two countries are searching in an original way, genuinely for answers to social and economic contradictions is seen as significant for the development of socialism in the world. In this way it becomes even more necessary to exchange experiences about develoment, problems, and successes.

In this connection the guest from China repeated the tributes to Yugoslavia and its pioneering undertaking of opening the process of different roads in socialist building, which has encouraged others to embark on reforms more boldly. The circumstance that the two countries share many identical, similar, or close views on problems, crises, and uncertainties of the present world is only a reason for being more strongly directed toward cooperation in the international field, too.

In the policy of independent and nonbloc China, there are many similarities with the positions of the Nonaligned Movement, whose role in the world is highly cherished by China, just as Yugoslavia cherishes such a positive attitude of China to the nonaligned policy. All these are reasons for regarding the past Yugoslav-Chinese talks in Belgrade as a significant contribution by nonaligned Yugoslavia and nonbloc China to the preservation of peace in the world.

HASANI RECEIVES ALGERIAN MINISTER ROUIGHI

[Text] Belgrade, 10 Jul (TANJUG) -- Sinan Hasani, president of the SFRY Presidency, today received Mohamed Rouighi, minister in the government of the Democratic and popular Republic of Algeria. In their talks, they expressed satisfaction with successful talks held during the recent visit of Branko Mikulic, FEC president, with the highest ranking Algerian leaders. It was established that the stances on economic cooperation between the two countries are being put in concrete terms now at a session of the Mixed Yugoslav-Algerian Commission for Economic Cooperation. Minister Mohamed Rouighi is a co-chairman of this commission and the head of the state delegation at the present session in Belgrade.

In the talks between Mikulic and Rouighi, stress was also laid on the interest of both sides that economic cooperation between the two countries be raised to the level of their exceptionally good political relations. They also exchanged views on the preparations for the eighth summit of nonaligned countries and stressed the readiness of Algeria and Yugoslavia to cooperate both on preparations and the conference itself.

President Hasani stressed that the Democrtic and Popular Republic of Algeria enjoys great prestige in Yugoslavia a friendly and nonaligned country.

Protocol Signed

LD112206 Belgrade TANJUG Domestic Service in Serbo-Croatian 1429 GMT 11 Jul 86

[Text] Belgrade, 11 Jul (TANJUG) -- The protocol contains specific measures for developing economic cooperation between Yugoslavia and Algeria, particularly in the sphere of science, technology, water management and agriculture.

In the coming period we must make efforts on both sides to see that what has been agreed is also realized. This was stated today at the signing of the joint protocol on the work of the mixed committee for economic and scientific-technical cooperation between Yugoslavia and Algeria by Andrej Ocvirk, head of our delegation and chairman of the Federal Committee for Energy and Industry.

The head of the Algerian delegation, Irrigation Minister Mohamed Rouighi, noted the importance of this document, which reaffirms the strengthening of bilateral cooperation between the two friendly countries. He expressed satisfaction with the fact that the specific measures have been agreed for expanding economic cooperation on the basis of the guidelines established during the recent visit to Algeria by Branko Mikulic, president of the FEC.

SPOKESMAN ON DIZDAREVIC, JANKOWITSCH MEETING

LD102244 Belgrade TANJUG in English 1412 GMT 10 Jul 86

[Text] Belgrade, July 10 (TANJUG) -- The meeting of Yugoslav Foreign Secretary Raif Dizdarevic and Austrian Foreign Minister Peter Jankowitsch has reaffirmed interest of the two countries in the development of goodneighbourly relations and promotion of allround cooperation between the, a Yugoslav Government spokesman told his regular press conference here today.

The visit took place in a friendly atmosphere. The two foreign ministers had an exhaustive and substantive discussion on all bilateral questions, including the implementation of Article 7 of the Austrian State Treaty. Among international subjects, special attention was paid to preparations for the Vienna meeting of the Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe and the eighth nonaligned summit in Harare -- the spokesman, Aleksandar Stanic, said.

Special emphasis was laid on the positive role and activity of the neutral and nonaligned countries of Europe in affirming the policy of peace, strengthening of security and cooperation on the continent, said Stanic.

The Yugoslav government spokesman said that the meeting of the two foreign ministers was also useful becuase of the exchange of views and the accords reached on some common actions, which would give a fresh impetus to the further advancement of friendly and goodneighbourly relations between Yugoslavia and Austria, and a contribution to the maintenance of peace and security in the region.

FOREIGN SECRETARY PAYS 2-DAY VISIT TO MALTA

LD111934 Belgrade Tanjug Domestic Service in Serbo-Croatian 1635 GMT 11 Jul 86

[Text] Valletta, 11 Jul (TANJUG) -- Raif Dizdarevic, federal secretary for foreign affairs, has spend 10 and 11 July on a working visit to the Republic of Malta. He and Maltese Foreign Minister Alex Sceberras Trigona conducted talks on bilateral relations and the international situation, particularly the aspects which are of interest to the two countries.

Bilateral cooperation was assessed as favorable. The regular contacts and consultations between the two countries have contributed to good political relations. Recently progress has also been made in economic relations. The volume of trade has increased, and efforts are also being make to find possibilities for long-term economic cooperation.

A joint enterprise has been formed which operates in Malta, and a consortium of Yugoslav economic organizations and interested Maltese companies are actively working on finding ways of expanding these forms of cooperation. A 4-year program of cultural cooperation is shortly to be signed in Belgrade, and other forms of bilateral cooperation between the two countries are being promoted.

The two ministers had a detailed exchange of views on international issues. In particular, the discussed the policy of nonalignment and the Nonaligned Movement, preparations for the summit in Harare, the activities of the nonaligned countries of the Mediterranean and the importance of the continuity of the CSCE process. The importance and need were underlined for joint, coordinated and constant activites by the nonaligned countries of the Mediterranean in order to preserve and guarantee peace, security and equitable cooperation in the region.

Federal Secretary Raif Dizdarevic was also received by Maltese Prime Minister Karmenu Mifsud Bonnici who engaged him in a lengthy friendly discussion. In these talks, too, particular attention was devoted to the Mediterranean and the activities of the nonaligned countries of the region which are particularly interested in peace and security there.

Federal Secretary Dizdarevic laid a wreath at the National Monument of the Republic of Malta, visited the joint Yugoslav-Maltese enterprise and also the graves of the partisans who were buried on Malta during World War II.

ALBANIAN CLAIMS TO SFRY TERRITORIES VIEWED

[By TANJUG commentator Milo Djukic]

[Text] Belgrade, 10 Jul (TANJUG) -- On two occasions in recent weeks ZERI I POPULLIT, the official organ of the People's Socialist Republic of Albania, dealt extensively with the 13th LCY Congress. The main purpose of the 5,000 words the paper wrote about the congress was, besides usual attacks, to reiterate that Albania "has never threatened" either Yugoslavia's territorial integrity or its sovereignty.

"Numerous speakers at the Yugoslav Congress kept repeating the same old song about Albania's alleged territorial claims on Yugoslavia. However, not one of them came up with any facts to confirm this. In any case, they could not do it since there are no facts, either direct or indirect, of this nature," says ZERI I POPULLIT and goes on to call Yugoslav claims "insinuations."

The authors of the articles published by ZERI I POPULLIT are well aware of all the arguments on which Yugoslavia's "insinuations" are based. They can be found in Albania's official documents from the time of World War II. While in its resolutions the AWP continued to denounce the idea of "Albania's expansion" as a "slogan construed by the fascist occupiers and Albanian traitors," in August 1943 Enver Hoxha entered into a secret agreement with Ballists which would provide for the formation of a "Committee for National Salvation of Albania." The ultimate goal of the agreement was the creation of a "greater Albania." In his pamphlet "The Titoists" (1982) Hoxha recalls his conversation with the representative of the BCP, Bulgaranov, in autumn 1943 about the "Albanian territories" in Yugoslavia which should be integrated into Albania after the war.

Claims on the SFRY's territories became even more arrogant after the 1948 Cominform resolution. IN his book "With Stalin" Hoxha writes how he told Djugashvili -- when seeking his support -- that "Kosovo and other regions in Yugoslavia...are Albanian territories, that they belong to Albania and should be returned to it." In other books of his reminiscences he mentions that this was also the subject of his talks with Khruschev, Mao Zedongs and others. On 20 October 1958 in the town of Tropoje the then Albanian Prime Minister Mehmet Shehu said: "We are not today calling for Kosovo's integration into Albania..." which implies, of course, that this will be called for "at a more favorable time." In his last public speech on 10 October 1982 E. Hoxha precisely outlines the "Albania border" deep inside the Yugoslav territory.

A great deal is known about Albania's official manifold support for subversive separatist groups from the ranks of Albanian nationalists who, both in their problems and through their actions, advocate the integration into Albania of Kosovo and other "Albanian" territories in the SFRY. At the same time state-run firms in Albania are printing and distributing worldwide geographical maps of "greater Albania;" postal stamps and cards are being issued showing the "Albanian" towns and regions in the SFRY; a photgraphic album has recently been published depicting and describing Kosovo as an integral part of Albania; school textbooks and curriculum refer to "Albania territories." Albania frequently receives as official guests the remnants of the Ballists who, even today, continue to support the idea of "greater Albania." Shaban Poluzha, a Ballist-fascist renegade and war criminal who in the spring of 1945 launched a struggle against Yugoslavia for the creation of "greater Albania" is being hailed in Tirana as a national hero.

More than enough evidence as to Albanian's territorial pretensions is being produced by the recently published "Albanian Encyclopaedia." The way it has been compiled and written point to the authors' intentions to use it "scientifically" to justify Albania's "right" to a large part of Yugoslavia's territory. Before it was published we all know which parts of Yugoslav territory Albania considers to be "Albanian." But now, the "Encyclopaedia" is discovering new facts. For instance: the tribes of Crnojevici and Balsici are of "Albanian origin" and by implication their medieval states were Albanian. In addition to Ulcinj, Bar, and Plav which, according to the "Encyclopaedia" were "occupied" by Montenegrins, the "Albanian whole" also included Rozaj, Podgorica [present-day Titograd], and Berane [Ivangrad].

Recent books and publications designate as "Albanian parats" the districts of Kursumlija, Vranje, Leskovac, Prokuplje, and Nis from where, according to various papers which aspire toward scientific recognition, the Albanians were "banished."

In fact, until recently it was only Sofia which laid claims to these parts as "purely Bulgarian regions." Tirana and Sofia were recently joined in their claims by Ethnos of Athens which claimed that Bitola and the whole region "from Ohrid to Skopje" belongs to Greece and that "the Greek people were either banished from there or Serbianized!

In view of all these aspirations it seems all Yugoslavia has to do now is to decide to which of these three states (Bulgaria, Albania, and Greece) and how much of its land it should apportion. And it is well-known that two of these states (Bulgaria and Greece) are bloc countries while the third one (Albania) is a "nonbloc" country if, of course, we disregard the fact that Albania continues to form a military alliance with Bulgaria. Tirana, in fact, has never abrogated its friendship and mutual assistance treaty with Bulgaria. This treaty also provides for coordinated military actions against third countries.

In any case, Tirana denies the Yugoslav-Albanian border the status of a state border. In some of the latest books and documents it is being described as an imposed, unjust, and temporary "political border." Its validity is also being negated by Albania's refusal to join the Helsinki Declaration about the inviolability of the borders of European states. There are plenty of reasons which made us wonder who is manipulating whom for the purpose of realizing their own plans: Is somebody trying to incorporate Albania into its own strategy? or is Albania attempting to secure reliable partners who will help it to realize its obvious territorial pretensions?

In fact, Albania itself refutes everything that its own organ, ZERI I POPULLIT, writes. There were, indeed, many reasons for the 13th LCY congress to make reference to Albania's territorial claims on Yugoslavia. The ZERI I POPULLIT articles are merely a trick to deceive those who cannot see or do not want to know anything beyond what is written in it.

SPOKESMAN CALLS FOR SANCTIONS AGAINST S. AFRICA

LD102241 Belgrade TANJUG in English 1408 GMT 10 Jul 86

["Pool" item]

[Text] Belgrade, July 10 (TANJUG) -- Yugoslavia will continue to give unqualified support to all efforts by the international community, including the application of sanctions, aimed at abolishing the system of apartheid in South Africa. At the same time, Yugoslavia will increase its material and any other aid to the liberation movements in southern Africa, a Yugoslav Government spokesman stated at his weekly press conference here today. The spokesman, Ambassador Aleksandr Stanic, described the declaration of the state of emergency in South Africa and the announcement of new draconic laws to protect the system of apartheid as another confirmation of the obvious weakness of the Pretoria regime in face of the large-scale and firm resistance by the majority black population.

Noting the growing awareness in the world of the need for stepping up pressure on South Africa to take measures leading to the abolition of racial discrimination, Stanic laid special emphasis on the assessment reached at the recent Paris conference on sanctions against South Africa, that comprehensive and mandatory sanctions against Pretoria are the most efficacious peaceful means to bring about major changes in that country.

Stanic also said that, unfortunately, the application of sanctions still lagged behind general condemnation by the international community. He said that the main reason behind this was the position of some Western countries which hamper the implementation of decisions on sanctions in all international forums, including the United Nations.

LECTURERS DISCIPLINED FOR NATIONALISTIC BEHAVIOR

LD082251 Belgrade TANJUG Domestic Service in Serbo-Croatian 1449 GMT 8 Jul 86

[Summary] Banjaluka, 8 Jul (TANJUG) -- Two lecturers at the Banjaluka Faculty of Economics, Dr Jovan Dusanic and Miodrag Zec, against whom ideopolitical party measures were taken earlier, have now been banned from teaching. The decision was made at a closed session of the faculty council last night. It was stressed that the two would not lose their posts, but they would only be able to conduct research. Dusanic and Sec, together with Ljubomir Zolotic, had faced party disciplinary action because of their nationalistic and other unacceptable behavior. Dusanic and Sec were expelled from the LC while Zolotic was given a final warning. The decision to ban Dusanic and Sec from teaching was proposed by the commission that examined their suitability for teaching along with the scientific-teaching council of the faculty. Both lecturers have the right to appeal this decision.

ALIA SPEAKS TO MANEUVER PARTICIPANTS ON FUTURE

AU141255 Tirana BASHKIMI in Albanian 9 Jul 86 p 1

[Report of speech by Ramiz Alia, AWP Central Committee first secretary, at military maneuvers in Durres District on 8 July: "From Comrade Ramiz Alia's Greeting to Participants in the Maneuvers"]

[Text] Comrade soldiers and volunteers, young people and cadets! Comrade commanders and commissars!

You have performed your maneuvers with complete success. This is a result of the spirit of mobilization, the seriousness and high sense of responsibility of those participating, and the multiform political and military measures undertaken by party organizations and army commanders, and by local organs in the training area. Allow me to thank you in the name of the AWP Central Committee and the Defense Council, and to wish you every further success in strengthening military preparedness.

The question of the defense of the fatherland and its freedom and independence has been and remains continually at the center of the party's attention. Under the care of the party and Comrade Enver Hoxha, our People's Army, inheriting and preserving the traditions of our heroic partisans and our National Liberation Army, has been strengthened in every way. It has grown in political consciousness, has matured from the military point of view, and is supplied with the necessary modern weapons and equipment to guarantee the defense of the fatherland and repulse any possible aggressor.

Addressing the international situation and the aggressive policies of U.S. imperialism and Soviet social imperialism, which constitute the greater danger to peace, freedom, and the independence of the peoples, Comrade Ramiz Alia stressed: Our people are a brave people, who have devoted all their strength to the construction of socialism. The freedom and independence of the fatherland are dear to them, so they are determined to defend the fatherland at all costs, since doing so they are defending not only the lands of their ancestors and all the good things handed down by preceding generations who themselves toiled and perished for Albania, but are, first and foremost, defending socialism and the happiness and wealth of the nation they have created with their own hands. They are defending peace and stability.

The defense of the socialist fatherland is a very broad concept, not limited to military preparations alone, but connected to the economy and its development, and to the moral-political unity of the people and their situation. It is because of the total health and vitality of these factors -- the economy and our unity -- that we can say with conviction that our defenses cannot be broken.

As you are aware, the AWP Central Committee 15th Plenum recently met and approved the plan directives for the social and economic development of the country for the next 5 years. The party Central Committee noted with satisfaction that our economy has been surging ahead this year, showing with particular clarity its fundamental characteristics of steadfastness, dynamism, and unbroken development.

The healthy state of the economy, continued Comrade Ramiz Alia, has been encouraged particularly by the increasing zeal and energy of the masses, their spirit of initiative and creativity, and by the constant wave of mass actions in every field. This mobilization of the masses and their creative spirit has found special expression and embodiment in the revolutionary movement of "Standard-Bearers in the Implementation of the Teachings of Comrade Enver Hoxha," which has been assuming ever larger proportions.

Now our working masses have the plan directives of the Eighth 5-Year Plan in their hands. This document reflects our party's policy for the socialist development of the country, and its program for the progress of our economy and culture based on our Marxist-Leninist theory and the teachings of Comrade Enver Hoxha. This magnificent program -- strengthening the economy; bringing greater development to industry and agriculture, to culture and education; and creating the conditions for improving the life of the people -- also further fortifies the defense of the fatherland. It is well-known that a strong economy is an unbreakable rear line in our defense, but a strong economy also creates more ways of better fulfilling the material requirements of defense.

Socialism is in a strong position in Albania, and our defense is unbreakable because our people are united like a steel first around our glorious party, the party which brought them freedom and a happy life, which has led them, and always will lead them, from our victory to the next. The moral-political unity of our people has never been as strong as today. Our people, workers, villagers, and intellectuals, young and old, have never been so united as today in their interests, opinions, and aspirations. Let us cherish this achievement in our hearts, and foster it, since this unity is a powerful driving force for victories now and in the future. Unity and the strength that comes from it are also decisive conditions for a powerful defense. People and not weapons wage and win war. So let us have people of steel, united with the will and determination to confront every difficulty, every weapon and tool of the enemy, however sophisticated they may be.

Then Comrade Ramiz Alia talked about the determined labor, steadfastness, and wonderful talents of our people in the construction of socialism and the defense of the country, maintaining our socialist fatherland as an indomitable citadel.

In conclusion he said: Dear comrades, 4 months still divide us from the great historical events of this year, the AWP Ninth Congress and the 45th anniversary of the foundation of the party. The AWP Central Committee 15th Plenum issued a call to make this period a time of general offensive for the fulfillment and overfulfillment of tasks. The people and party want to go to the platform of the Ninth Congress, as is now traditional, laden with achievements. So it is of the utmost importance that our achievements this year should be of the highest order. Let us apply our strength and put effort into our work with zeal and enthusiasim. Let us keep the military arm of our people, our heroic army, always in readiness as a sharp sword against every enemy. Let us maintain revolutionary vigilance and our military preparedness at a higher level.

Once again I greet you on the occasion of the successful execution of your maneuvers, and I wish all of you, comrades of the Army, commanding cadres, reservists, volunteers, and young people from school, new victories in the advancement of socialism and the defense of the fatherland.

Long live our people's army and all our Armed Forces!

Long live the Albanian Workers Party!

Glory to the name and achievement of Comrade Enver Hoxha!

ECONOMIC COOPERATION SESSION WITH GDR OPENS

AU141414 Sofia BTA in English 1345 GMT 14 Jul 86

[Text] Sofia, July 14 (BTA) -- The integration processes between Bulgaria and the G.D.R. are making progress, and techno-scientific cooperation, more specifically in the field of flexible computer-aided manufacturing systems, production modules and biotechnologies, has emerged as a principal area in them. This general assessment belongs to the deputy premiers of Bulgaria and the G.D.R. Mr. Kiril Zarev and Mr Horst Soelle, co-chairmen of the Bilateral Commission for Economic and Techno-Scientific Cooperation.

The 22nd session of the commission, which was opened here today, discusses questions concerning specialisation and cooperation in machine building, metallurgy, electronics, electrical engineering, the chemical industry and computer technology. An emphasis was also laid on the importance of team work in the field of high technologies, as well as on the expansion and promotion of direct links between economic organisations of the two countries.

The countertrade between Bulgaria and the G.D.R. is making vigorous headway. It is expected to grow by 10 per cent this year as compared with 1985. Machine tools, hoisting and hauling devices and computers make the bulk of Bulgarian exports, and the G.D.R. supplies this country with metal-working machines, printing equipment and farming machinery.

YOTOV ATTENDS EXTENDED CONTROL AUDIT PLENUM

AU091533 Sofia RABOTNICHESKO DELO in Bulgarian 5 Jul 86 pp 1, 6

[Text] An expanded plenum of the BCP Central Control and Audit Commission was held yesterday. The plenum was attended by chairmen of the okrug and other control and audit commissions, by chairmen of control and auditing organs from the Bulgarian National Agrarian Union [BZNS] and from mass organizations, and by high-ranking officials from the BCP Central Committee, the BCP Central Control and Audit Commission, the Academy of Social Sciences and Social Administration, and the state control organs.

Yordan Yotov, member of the BCP Central Committee Politburo and secretary of the BCP Central Committee, also participated in the plenum.

Nacho Papazov, chairman of the BCP Central Control and Audit Commisssion, read a report on the tasks of the commission emanating from the decisions of the 13th BCP Congress. He stressed the chief duty of the control and audit organs of the party, describing them as follows: to contribute to overcoming all barriers -- organizational-bureaucratic, psychological, and other barriers which are obstructing the application of the new approach in the implementation of scientific-technical policy; to contribute to the transformation of science into a direct production force, to the technological innovation of production, and to the perfection of the structural policy in the development of the national economy, to contribute to the expansion of socialist democracy and to the consolidation of the self-management organizations in the economic sector, to the optimal utilization of the existing material-technical basis and the existing manpower resources, to the through reorganization of the inner life and leading activities of the party, to the establishment of strict organization, order, discipline, and a sense of responsibility in all sectors and in all places.

The speaker emphasized the need for the control and audit organs to implement a qualitatively new type of control -- new as regards its essence as well as its style, methods, and forms of work -- guaranteeing the implementation of the congress decisions. Our control must be organized so as to reveal in a timely manner deviations from the norm, so as to follow the trend of development of such deviations, and so as to prevent them from intensifying and producing failures; our control organs must correctly unmask all unresolved problems and violations, in other words, we must have a modern, systematic, and preventive control system. The requirement of strictly observing the Leninist principles of objectivity, high principle-mindedness, responseness and a humane approach in control activities was stressed in the report. The principle of extensive publicity was pointed out as particularly important in the present stage of development. Nothing should be concealed from the party members and from the people. As was declared, control must enhance the role of man in the reorganization of consciousness and actions, it must contribute to transforming the party organizations and the workers colletives from objects to subjects of leadership and management in our accelerated development.

It was announced at the plenum that the Bureau of the BCP Central Control and Audit Commission has examined part of the petitions pertaining to the restoration of party membership, in accordance with the instructions of the 13th BCP Congress.

The tasks of the new type of control in the struggle against violators of the BCP Program and Statute, of party and state discipline, and of party morality were mapped out.

Statements were made by Aleksandur Bogdanov, chairman of the Sofia City Control and Audit Commission; Minko Minkov, deputy minister of the interior; Raycho Penchev, secretary of the Veliko Turnovo Okrug BCP Committee; Kostadin Ivanov, first deputy minister of finance; Maria Milenova, chairman of the Pernki Okrug Control and Audit Commission; Evtim Ovcharov, leader of a complex brigade in Vulchedrum village; and Dimitur Kasakov, chairman of the Plovdiv Okrug Control and Audit Commission.

The plenum adopted decisions and approved the plan on the work of the Central Control and Audit Commission for the 1986 period.

BILAK VISITS AUSTRIA FOR TALKS WITH OFFICIALS

Arrives, Meets Vranitsky

LD101512 Prague CTK in English 1437 GMT 10 Jul 86

[Text] Vienna July 10 (CTK correspondent) -- Czechoslovak Communist Party Presidium member and Central Committee secretary Vasil Bilak opened a working visit to Austria today and held talks with the country's officials.

His debate with Chancellor Franz Vranitzky focused on Czechoslovak-Austrian relations, with both officials agreeing there are numerous possibilities for their further development. Both sides confirmed their commitments to the expansion of bilateral contacts in political, economic, cultural and sports spheres.

Vasil Bilak, whose visit takes place at the invitation of Deputy Chairman of the Socialist Party of Austria (SPO) and Minister of Science and Research Heinz Fischer, also met with the Socialist Party's Chairman Fred Sinowatz and Central Secretary Fritz Marsch.

Earlier today, he held talks with Chairman of the Communist Party of Austria Franz Muhri on Czechoslovak-Austrian relations and further cooperation between the two countries' communist parties.

During his debate with Socialist Party Chairman Fred Sinowatz and Central Secretary [as received] Fritz Marsch, Vasil Bilak stressed Czechoslovakia would welcome concrete results at the current arms control negotiations and the Stockholm Conference.

Vasil Bilak, Czechoslovak Communist Party Presidum member and Central Committee secretary, also appreciated the role of neutral and non-aligend countries in efforts to preserve peace and increase international cooperation.

Both sides agreed it was necessary to return to the policy of detente and complex European cooperation and consistently strive for the liquidation of nuclear weapons and stressed the importance of the forthcoming follow-up meeting of the Helsinki 1975 Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe participants, due to be held in Vienna next autumn.

Holds Talks With Officials

LD111514 Prague Domestic Service in Czech and Slovak 1300 GMT 11 Jul 86

[Text] Vasil Bilak, Presidium member and secretary of the CPCZ Central Committee, held talks in Vienna today with Anton Benya, chairman of Austrian Parliament.

He met with Norbert Steger, vice chancellor and minister of economic affairs and discussed in particular economic cooperation between Czechoslovakia and Austria.

Vasil Bilak also held talks with Heinz Fischer, minister for science and research. In the talks the two politicians emphasized that there are positive prerequisites for further all-round development of relations between the two countries and also for a political dialogue which has been newly stimulated by the recent talks of the Presidents Gustav Husak and Rudolf Kirschlager in Bratislava.

Vasil Bilak also met in Vienna Peter Janowitsch, minister of foreign affairs. They discussed the development of the relations between the two countries and some topical issues of the situation in the world. They pointed to the exceptional importance of the endeavor for securing peace and disarmament. They emphasized that the policy of good neighborly relations between European states is an important part of European security and cooperation.

Vienna Television Interview

Vienna Television Service in German 1920 GMT 11 Jul 86

[Videotaped "exclusive" interview given by Vasil Bilak, member of the Presidium and secretary of the Czechoslovak Communist Party Central Committee, to Austrian television reporter Paul Lendvai in Vienna on 11 July, questions in German, Bilak's answers in Slovak, with superimposed German translation]

[Text] [Lendvail] Mr Bilak, you are responsible for ideology. Is it possible to speak about a renaissance of religion in Czechoslovakia today, in view of recent events such as the pilgrimage to Levoca?

[Bilak] The basic mistake, as I see it, is that there is a lack of objective information in Austria about the situation of Christians and the church in Czechoslovakia. I am really sorry about that. We have 18 different churches in Czechoslovakia. They all enjoy the same rights and develop freely. The socialist states defrays all the expense of the church. It covers the cost of the salaries of priests and of the maintenance of buildings. No one prevents anyone from going to church, or anything of that sort. No one prevents anyone from taking part in pilgrimages or fropm attending church services. The reports being published about Czechoslovakia are greatly distorted. You have just mentioned Levoca. Yes, I have read in Western materials that 150,000 people were there. Even if that were so, the fact is that no one drove them there and no one drove them away from there.

But I must tell you that according to information I have, which is quite objective because I have taken an interest in this issue -- the place of pilgrimage is in my native region -- the actual number was 66,000. They sang, they prayed, they went to confession, no one molested them. No one did them any harm and no one prevented them from doing anything.

[Lendvai] Of the 13 diocesan biships' sees, only 3 have a resident bishop. Is there a chance for an agreement between the government and the party and the Vatican on this issue?

[Bilak] We want to reach an agreement with the Vatican. The Vatican wishes the bishops to meet two basic conditions. They must be religious people of high moral standing and they must be obedient to the Vatican. We, on our part, expect yet one more condition, that they be tolerant vis-a-vis the Czechoslovak state. The other remaining disputed issue between us is that in our country there is also a secret church. The Vatican must take a clear position on this issue, it should not support this secret church. We are ready to conclude compromise solutions, provided that the other side will also respect our position.

[Lendvai] Will there be any specific talks?

[Bilak] They are on the horizon. But the documents that have been submitted must still be carefully studied on our side.

[Lendvai] Can secretary Bilak conceive, not now but in the future, of a visit to Czechoslovakia by the pope?

[Bilak] No one in our country has pondered this question yet.

[Lendvai] Is it possible, 18 years after the intervention of the Warsaw Pact member-states in Czechoslovakia, which you call fraternal assistance, to speak about genuine, profound reconciliation, last but not least if one considers the activities of the followers of Charter 77?

[Bilak] I am profoundly convinced -- and not only I but the entire nation and our Party -- that without what happened in August 1968 there would have been civil war in our country and the whole of central Europe would have been disrupted to an unimginable degree. That is why there is genuine internal reconciliation in Czechoslovakia, apart from some tiny groups that disagree. But show me a single country in the world in which all people are 100 percent in agreement. No mother will ever succeed in having all her children agree with all of the parents' decisions. That which is called great opposition is in reality utterly insignificant.

Joint Press Conference

LD112218 Prague Television Service in Czech and Slovak 1730 GMT 11 Jul 86

[Press conference given by CPCZ Central Committee Presidium member Vasil Bilak and Austrian Minister of Science and Research Heinz Fischer in Vienna on 11 July -- recorded]

[Text] [Journalist] [Name indistinct] for Czechoslovak Television. Looking at your visits which took place how would you evaluate the development of further relations?

[Bilak] I think that they will develop favorably; I evaluate, I personally evaluate the visit very positively.

I did not meet anywhere with the slightest provocation, some sort of question of some views, questions were put openly, they were answered openly. We must be able to understand one another, and they must understand us. Czechoslovakia itself has its own problems too and it wants to solve them itself with its own efforts, but we want to live together well, like good neighbors.

[Journalist, in German with superimposed Slovak transaltion] Mr Minister, Vasil Bilak's visit to Austria has ended, how do you evaluate its course and what has it contributed to relations between Czechoslovakia Austria?

[Fischer, in German with superimposed Slovak translation] I feel that in recent years the development of our relations is going in the right direction, not only in factual questions but also in the effort to reach a harmonious view on these questions and to reach positive steps and contracts even at the highest level. The meeting and talks of President Husak and Kirchschlaeger gave a good foundation for this development. The prime ministers of both governments will also meet, there will be talks between our foreign minister with CSSR Foreign Minister Chnoupek. The fact that Vasil Bilak visited Vienna, where he met with the head of government, the chairmen of three political parties, with the chairman of the Austrian Parliament, with the Minister of Foreign Affairs and the secretary of the Socialist Party fit well into this concept, this policy of cooperation and mutual understanding. We are very pleased with this visit.

NIER, FRC ENVOY DISCUSS CSCE REVIEW CONFERENCE

LD141820 East Berlin ADN International Service in German 1641 GMT 14 Jul 86

[Text] Berlin, 14 Jul (ADN) -- Kurt Nier, GDR deputy minister of foreign affairs, received Ambassador Dr Ekkehard Eickhoff, representative of the FRC Foreign Ministry, for a talk on Monday. He is in Berlin for consultations on issues of the Vienna CSCE review conference.

Kurt Nier welcomed that consultations between the Foreign Ministeries of the GDR and FRC were taking place. He assessed them as an expression of two states' interest in preserving and continuing the all-European process launched with the Helsinki Conference.

Explaining the GDR position on the main issues of the Vienna review conference of the CSCE participating states, Kurt Nier said that the Vienna East-West dialogue be used to activate detente in Europe. He underlined the GDR's willingness to agree at the Vienna meeting on concrete measures for strengthening security and expanding cooperation in all areas covered by the CSCE Final Act.

In view of the continuing arms race and the dangers emanating from it, progress in military detente in Europe is especially urgent. Special importance is attached to an agreement at the Stockholm Conference on military confidence and security building measures in view of the Vienna meeting.

In this regard, the responsibility of the two German states for a constructive course and positive results of the Vienna review conference was pointed out. The GDR and her alliance partners were prepared for this unreservedly, as was shown by the resolutions of the Budapest meeting of the Political Consultative Committee of the Warsaw Pact member states.

During the discussion, Ambassador Dr Eickhoff explained the FRG Government's standpoint concerning the results and prospects of the CSCE process, including the position on the Vienna meeting of the member states of the Helsinki Conference. He emphasized his government's interest in the continuation of the CSCE process and the expansion of the scope for shaping bilateral and multilateral relations as created within the CSCE framework.

ECONOMIC STATISTICS FOR FIRST HALF OF 1986

AU091239 East Berlin NEUES DEUTSCHLAND in German 5-6 Jul 86 p 1

[Text] Berlin (ADN) -- In the first 6 months of 1986 the GDR's working people achieved the highest performance increase to date through new initiatives to prepare and implement the 11th SED Congress resolutions.

The half-year balance sheet is marked by dynamic growth, high productivity, and the increased efficiency of the national economy. According to preliminary statistical data, produced national income increased by 4.3 percent in the first 6 months of 1986.

In the sphere of the industrial ministries, net production increased by 8.6 percent. The plan lead increased to M1.5 billion. Labor productivity increased by 8.6 percent. Costs per M100 of goods production and the costs of material were reduced by 2.1 percent respectively. Industrial goods production increased by 4.3 percent. The overfulfillment of the national economic plan increased to M2.4 billion.

The pace and the scope of the application of key technologies were considerably increased in the first half of the year.

Production of office and personal computers increased by 112 percent. With respect to semiconductor elements and electronic component parts a production increase of 15 percent was achieved, including a 30 percent increase for monolithic-integrated circuits and of 19 percent for optoelectronic component parts. The plan for production of special technological equipment for producing microelectronic component parts was surpased by 8 percent.

Compared to last year, production of industrial robots increased by 17.0 percent. Thus, 60,000 industrial robots are in operation in the national economy.

At present 16,000 CAD/CAM work units are being utilized, above all for more rational planning and design, as well as for flexible production control.

Domestic production of rationalization means in the field of the industrial ministries increased by 10 percent and was even more closely linked with the further development of technological processes.

The plan lead in the production of consumer goods was expanded to M1.3 billion. Retail trade turnover increased by 4.4 percent, including that of industrial goods with an increase of 6.1 percent. Enterprises of the local supply industry implemented 5 percent more services and repairs for the people.

In the first 6 months of 1986, 105,096 apartments were built and modernized; that means 5,896 apartments more than provided by the plan. In the capital, Berlin, 14,894 apartments were completed. The Kreis-administered construction sector increased repair services for apartment buildings by 10 percent compared to last year. Altogether, net production in the construction sector increased by 6.8 percent, and thus the plan lead increased to M230 million. Labor productivity was increased by 7.4 percent. Costs were decreased by 2.1 percent.

In agriculture, in the first half of 1986 the state procurement of slaughter animals increased by 2.5 percent, and that of milk by 5.1 percent compared to last year. With regard to eggs the plan was overfulfilled by 20 million eggs. The first harvest of green fodder has been concluded.

In the foodstuff industry and agricultural technology net production increased by 6.5 percent. Forestry made available 185,000 cubic meters of raw timber above the plan targets.

The national economic transportation tasks were implemented with a 5 percent decrease in specific transportation expenditure. In the post and telecommunications sector services increased by 2.9 percent in the first half of 1986 compared to last year.

In the "Return Funds to the State -- Contribute to the National Income" initiative material and financial funds worth altogether M4.6 billion were returned to the state bank by means of checks.

In the individual sectors of industry the following growth in net production and labor productivity for every working day as well as the following reduction in prime costs per M100 of goods production had been achieved by the end of June:

	Net Production	Labor Productivity	Reduction in Prime Costs
	in Percent
Coal and energy	6.0	5.0	2.9
Ore-mining, Metallurgy, and potash	9.9	10.2	2.1
Chemical industry	9.8	10.4	0.9

RADIO REPORT ON MANAGEMENT OF NEW APARTMENTS

DW141659 East Berlin Domestic Service in German 0900 GMT 13 Jul 86

[Dr Karl-Heinz Gerstner's Sunday economic review]

[Excerpt] [Passage omitted] If construction workers struggle for every additional apartment, it seems to be a natural duty of the working people who take over the new apartments as beneficiaries for the tenants -- the communal housing administration -- to do everything they can to guarantee the immediate takeover of the apartments and hand them over to the new tenants. I am saying that not without reason. There are frequently delays in the takeover of apartments which annoy the construction workers who try to work at maximum speed.

The point is not only the takeover process but also the subsequent management and efficient utilization of apartments. We now have about 7 million apartments. Utilizing that huge people's property in the best possible way and managing it well, is of utmost importance for resolving the housing problem. Is it possible to satisfy the people's housing needs with the existing million of apartments? I think it is. That is the important task of the communal housing administrations which run the apartments. Qualifying those enterprises better for the implementation of their tasks, is a central orientation that we have worked on for many years. The enterprises are undergoing a change from an administration to an efficient people's-owned service enterprise which not only manages but effectively runs and operates apartments. Therefore, they are now called housing management enterprises.

In Berlin a week ago, directors and enterprise trade union leaders of 200 housing management enterprises met to discuss the current urgent grown tasks of housing managememt. The necessary improvements must be made more rapidly, they are dictated by the speed of housing construction workers. That brings us to the question as to whether the present material and staffing conditions of housing management enterprises are sufficient everywhere. When a communal housing administration member in Berlin has to look after an average of 900 apartments, it is hard to imagine that he can do that effectively and satisfactorily.

There are large differences in the performance of housing management enterprises in the individual cities. The effective utilization of our large quantity of apartments is decided by the housing offices. In Berlin we started a year ago to combine housing offices and communal housing administrations -- in other words, housing policy and housing management -- under one roof. That has many advantages, because both fields are interconnected, and it helps citizens save a lot of time. Good construction work and good management belong together.

GREETING SENT TO MONGOLIA ON 65TH ANNIVERSARY

[Text] Budapest, July 10 (MTI) -- On the occasion of the 65th anniversary of the victory of the People's Revolution of Mongolia, Janos Kadar, general secretary of the Hungarian Socialist Workers Party; Pal Losonczi, president of the Presidential Council of the Hungarian People's Republic; and Gyorgy Lazar, chairman of the Council of Ministers, sent a telegram of greetings to Jambyn Batmonh, general secretary of the Central Committee of the People's Revolutionary Party of Mongolia, president of the Presidium of the People's Great Hural and to Dumaagiyn Sodnom, chairman of the Council of Ministers of the People's Republic of Mongolia.

The telegram pointed out that "our people look with respect on the Mongolian people in their achievements to overcome the burdened heritage of the past, and to transform society over the past six and a half decades. We highly value the active foreign policy of the People's Republic of Mongolia aimed at the consolidation of peace and the building of international security.

It is of genuine pleasure to us that the friendship and cooperation of our parties, countries and peoples are developing in a many-sided way in keeping with the ideals of Marxism-Leninism and internationalist solidarity, and that they are gaining new features and advancing in all walks of life.

On the occasion of the anniversary Istvan Sarlos, speaker of the Hungarian Parliament, sent a telegram of greetings to Bat-Ochirin Aitangerel, speaker of the People's Great Hural of the People's Republic of Mongolia. Telegrams of greetings to partner organizations in Mongolia were also sent by the Central Council of Hungarian Trade Unions, the National Council of the Patriotic People's Front, and the Central Committee of the Hungarian Communist Youth Union.

In the period January-May 1986 production of state and cooperative industrial enterprises exceeded that of last year by 1.2 percent and, if the food industry is excluded, by 1.5 percent. Among the main branches, production in the metallurgy, engineering, and building materials sectors increased, that of the chemical sector stayed at the level of last year, while production of all other sectors dropped somewhat. Domestic sales increased by 0.7 percent and export deliveries increased by 1.4 percent. The amount of goods delivered for the wholesale and retail trades exceeded last year's level by 1.5 percent, while sales for investment purposes increased significantly. Sales for production purposes remained at the same level as last year. Exports of manufactures increased both in ruble and non-ruble trade, while market outlets in non-ruble trade for food worsened considerably. The number of employees in the industrial sector dropped by 0.6 percent as against the first 5 months of last year. Per capita production increased by 1.9 percent and per-hour production increased by 3.5 percent.

In the construction sector of the building industry production exceeded the low level of last year by 6.3 percent, while still being significantly below the level of 2 years ago.

Sales of agricultural products dropped 4.5 percent below the January-May level of last year. Procurement of plant and market-garden produce increased with regard to cereals, industrial crops, potatoes, etc., and that of vegetables, fruit, and wine fell considerably. Compared with last year, almost 10 percent fewer pigs and 3 percent fewer cattle were sold for slaughter. An even greater drop was registered in sales of sheep for slaughter. At the same time, procurement of poultry increased by a significant 11.9 percent.

During the first 5 months retail trade turnover increased by 8.3 percent at current prices, and by 3.6 percent at comparable prices. The increase in turnover was above all characteristic of store sales of foodstuffs and the turnover of miscellaneous manufactures. (This increase reached 5.7 and 4.6 percent respectively at comparable prices.) In May a significant decrease occurred in sales of clothing; the sales volume was 1.2 percent lower than at the same time last year. The turnover volume in the catering sector was approximately the same as in the previous year. The growth rate of retail prices continued to drop.

A total of 48.3 billion forints, 1.2 percent more than a year before, was granted for investments by socialist bodies. The increase was primarily registered in council and especially in enterprise investments, while central investments dropped sharply.

KALB ANSWERS CRITICISM OF U.S. STANCE ON POLAND

LD150154 Warsaw PAP in English 2212 GMT 14 Jul 86

[Text] Washington, July 14 -- U.S. State Department deputy spokesman Bernard Kalb has indicated the U.S. did not plan to change its policy on Poland, criticized last week by President of the Congress of Polish Americans Alojzy Mazewski. Mazewski had accused the Reagan Administration at a news conference in Washington on July 9 of lacking a clear concept of policy in Poland.

Replying to the charge Kalb reiterated the administration's stand which consists in telling Poland what she should undertake to please the White House. He failed to address the question of the heavy losses which the U.S. restrictions have caused to Poland's economy, and assured that the U.S. was trying to provide direct humanitarian aid to the Polish nation. Referring to a charge that the administration had failed to warn "Solidarity" leaders in 1981 of impending martial law despite having known details of the planned operation from a high-placed military spy in Poland, Kalb merely repeated earlier U.S. claims of having had no definitive word of it.

PZPR MESSAGE GREETS 13TH LCY CONGRESS

AU301051 Warsaw TRYBUNA LUDU in Polish 26 Jun 86 p 7

["Message From the PZPR Central Committee to the 13th LCY Congress," signed "PAP"]

[Text] The PZPR Central Committee conveys to the delegates at the 13th LCY Congress warm internationalist greetings and wishes for fruitful talks. We wish to conve through you to all the Communists, working people, and peoples of the SFRY sincere greetings from Polish Communists and the Polish people.

The historic achievements in all spheres of socialist construction and the political transformations and revolutionary changes in the lives of the workers class, working people, and people of the SFRY are undeniable proof of socialism's creative possibilities and serve to consolidate the forces of peace and progress in the world.

The traditional relations of friendship between our peoples possess a rich history. They have been strengthened by the history of struggle for national and social liberation, especially the joint struggle against the forces of criminal fascism during World War II. The goal which binds us, in other words, the building of a system of social justice, is a strong basis for mutual respect, understanding, and friendly cooperation.

The close cooperation between our states and peoples is particularly important today, a time when development of the modern world is creating a new challenge and the socialist construction needs in our country demand creative searches for new solutions and greater efforts toward a further expansion of socialism's material base and a positive reply to the material and spiritual needs of the young generations who have been brought up in the new, socialist conditions. We wish to further consolidate our close relations and develop fruitful Polish-Yugoslav cooperation in all spheres.

Just like the LCY, in the international sphere the PZPR is in favor of peaceful coexistence between all peoples and states and the elimination of all the dangers to our peoples that stem from the forces of imperialism and neocolonialism.

Goodwill between all states and joint activity by all the world's forces of peace and progress is essential in order to eliminate nuclear and other mass-destruction weapons and create an effective system of international security.

We for our part are doing and will do everything to influence, together with our allies the Soviet Union and other socialist states, the development of the international situation toward a consolidation of peace and international cooperation.

Poland appreciates the activity of the Nonaligned Movement, in which Yugoslavia plays such an energetic and important role. We praise this movement's efforts in strengthening peace in the world and solving current problems.

At the 10th PZPR Congress, which is starting the day after the end of your congress, we will adopt a party program and lay down the paths for Poland's socioeconomic development until the beginning of the 21st century. We are convinced that the decisions of the 10th Congress will encounter active support from our entire party, workers class, and Polish society.

We wish you, dear comrades, great success in implementing the resolutions of the 13th LCY Congress, and we are convinced that the friendship and cooperation that joins our parties and states will continue to develop for the benefit of our peoples, peace, and socialism.

COUNCIL OF STATE SENDS AMNESTY LAW TO SEJM

LD141114 Warsaw Domestic Service in Polish 1005 GMT 14 Jul 86

[Text] Tasks resulting from documents adopted at the 10th PZPR Congress are the subject of discussions among members of the Council of State and chairmen of voivodship people's councils. Commencing the discussion, Kazimierz Barcikowski emphasized that the Council of State regarded the strengthening of people's councils and the entire territorial self-management as a particularly important task. The 10th Congress acknowledged as its main aim the decided increase in the efficiency of the functioning of people's councils in all spheres of activity. In conclusion, Kazimierz Barcikowski noted that work on the Amnesty Law was completed in the Council of State. The Sejm will take this matter up very soon. It is important that the law be passed before 22 July this year. The speaker indicated that the law is far-reaching and enables many people to return to normal life. Whether or not these people take advantage of this depends on them. Then, a discussion commenced.

A joint meeting of members of the Council of State, Chairman of the Council Wojciech Jaruzelski, and chairmen of the voivodship people's councils will take place today in the Sejm building.

COMMENTARY ADDRESSES EMPLOYMENT ISSUES

AU140757 Warsaw RZECZYWISTOSC in Poland 22 Jun 86 p 2

[Jerzy Pardus commentary: "The Economic Reform and Employment"]

[Text] One principle of the economic reform was to employ measures that would help increase productivity and achieve better production results with reduced employment, all the more so since the national economy's manpower dropped from 12 million in 1981 to 11.6 million in 1985, that is by 400,000. Let us add that manpower in nonproduction sectors such as education and health services continued to increase for social reasons and that this increase amounted to over 13 percent, while the decrease in material production amounted to 6.4 percent. For example, employment in education and upbringing increased 21 percent without meeting all the needs, and employment in health services and social welfare increased by 19 percent. These increases give no cause for concern because it is natural that increases in the postproduction and preproduction population must go hand in hand with increases in the number of those who care for it. It is another thing whether the population is aware of improvements in this care.

But what gives rise to concern is the fact that the number of workers decreased by 443,000 in 1980-84, while the number of nonproduction workers decreased by only 61,000. This means that the radio of production workers went down from 75.1 to 74.3 percent. Another cause for concern is the continuous increase in the number of administrative and office workers. In industry alone this increase amounted to about 9,000 workers -- from 5.8 to 6.4 percent. The analyses of the PZPR Central Committee Economic Department show that the excuse that this increase is a result of the growing tasks of office work (could this be another bout of paperwork?) does not stand up, because the ratio of such workers in enterprises that have identical production tasks differs from enterprise to enterprise. For example, in the Konin construction combine, which employs 1,600 workers, this ratio amounts to 4.7 percent, in the Szczecin construction combine to 8.1 percent, in the Krakow meat plant (1,400 workers) to 10.7 percent, and in the Ostroleka meat plant (1,500 workers) to as much as 17 percent.

It can therefore be asserted that the new institutional solutions, including the State Fund for Industrial Activization, have not produced the hoped for results. It is probable that the economic pressure exerted on enterprises was too feeble, that the scope of various concessions was too extensive, and that it was easy to sidestep the regulations. it is unfortunate that the law on the principle of wage systems in enterprises, which was passed in January 1984, did not improve the situation.

New institutional solutions have been introduced this year, including tax on wages in excess of norms, the verification of jobs, and so on, but the results of the first months of this year continue to greatly weaken one's optimism. This is because wages, or rather the rate of wage increases, continue to outstrip the rate of productivity increases. Enterprises continue to search for opportunities to increase production through increased manpower and not through improving work organization and productivity. It is true that enterprises perform under extremely difficult conditions because halted investments and import difficulties make it impossible to improve production technology and to introduce automation and robotization.

I do not think that we have already exhausted all the simple reserves of production, and even outside observers of enterprise performance can reach this conclusion. Absenteeism through illness is still high and it is common knowledge that certain physicians receive agreed remuneration for certificates authorizing one day's absence from work. [paragraph cotinues]

Only 70 percent of the working time is being worked, and bureaucratic arrangements are responsible for the fact that some workers are overworked, while some do nothing at all and read their dailies. For example, in the Pewex shop at Tawki Street people wait in long lines at the counter for tobacco goods, but other counters have no customers. Since the ladies at the other counters cannot leave them by regulation, they do nothing to help the busy ladies who serve masses of customers. We still have not been able to do away with this feudal system of separate "realms."

OPALKO COMMENTS ON WORK ETHICS, PARTY IDENTITY

AU140811 Warsaw ZYCIE PARTII in Polish 18 Jun 86 pp 5,7

[Interview with PZPR Politburo Member Stanislaw Opalko by Andrzej Wisniewski: "The Problem of Identity" -- date and place not given]

[Excerpts] [passage omitted] [Wisniewski] Much was said about the work ethic during the precongress discussion. What is the view of the work ethic of one who has spent most of his time in industrial work and among workers?

[Opalko] I think we should stress that the work ethic is a problem for all of us, not just workers and engineers. It is a fact that as a society we are without a work ethic. It is true that most of our people work hard and want to work effectively, but it is also true that each day over 1 million people absent themselves from work and every year some 2 million people change their jobs. What kind of work ethic is this?

[Wisniewski] Could it be that people simply look for better wages? Is this in conflict with the work ethic?

[Opalko] It is not, if one does not look for better wages at any price and if elementary discipline does not break down. However, let us look at the crux of the matter. There is little differentiation in our wages. The leveling down of wages in times of crisis is justified in order to protect those who earn the smallest wages, but it is a misfortune to persist in such a leveling down and to equate it with social justice. Keeping wages at about the same level is an anti-motivational measure and the main barrier to paying what people deserve to be paid for their abilities and effective performance. Equal wages discourage good workers. [passage omitted] The work ethic is no abstraction. It is an issue that depends in many way on various factors, among which economic factors are not the most important, albeit very important. You said that at precongress meetings people spoke a great deal about shortcomings in economic supplies. I will add that the main tenor of these meetings was: "We want to produce more goods, but we have no raw materials." This tenor shows that our people are aware of difficulties, but still succumb to the thinking that these difficulties should be overcome by the party and government leadership. This is a simplified mode of thinking. It is not only the "top" that is responsible for conditions. We are all responsible. As a society we have the problem of barriers in our own consciousness.

[Wisniewski] What is the crux of this problem?

[Opalka] In this connection I would mention primarily identity. In the party we often talk about identity, but no doubt we should do so even more often and more profoundly, especially following the experience of 1980 and after. At that time I found it difficult to get used to such violent aggression against and total condemnation of all of us, beginnig with the party leadership through to the secretaries of plant committees. [paragraph continues]

But what frightened me even more was that we in the party were and are not ready to defend out own ideals and principles. [passage omitted] It is possible to influence people with our arguments even in periods of great storms, but at that time even some party members succumbed to the persuasiveness of our political adversaries. Accusations were leveled against many innocent people, giving them almost no chance to defend themselves. We in the party did not know how to defend them. In the course of several months I did not encounter a single case in which the party opposed groundless accusations, although only very few people were really guilty. A tremendous majority of party members were being attacked only to compromise the party. This was actually an attack against socialism. Even those who regretted that the party was being attacked did not defend it. I do not say this of all of us, but the fact is that this applies to many of us. We had some 3 million members and yet we lacked the people who knew how to defend the party against some noisemakers, very few on occasions. The mood of the party began to change after the Ninth Congress, and martial law produced a more general consolidation of awareness. Today the atmosphere in the party is quite different, but we should not forget our experience of those days. We must be better prepared to defend our own identity and to be active not only in combating bad things, but also in defending the values of our system. [passage omitted]

PORT OFFICIAL VIEWS SITUATION IN COAL SHIPPING

LD141720 Szczecin Domestic Service in Polish 1515 GMT 14 Jul 86

[Interview with Bogdan Walczak, official from the department of the main dispatcher at the Szczecin-Swinoujscie Port, by unidentified reporter; date and place not given -- recorded]

[Text] [Reporter] During the first 6 months of this year, the port workers of Szczecin and Swinoujscie transshipped over 9 million metric tons of goods. This was a very good result. It bears witness to the fact that transshipments in the port are going at a good pace. Unfortunately, the first days of July and so of the second half-year, have shown that matters are ever more difficult in the port.

[Walczak] The second half-year did not begin very well for us. Above all, badly in the coal freight category. Until now, the export of coal was a firm fixture and an important one. In July, over 14 days we transshipped less coal for export than ore for import. This rarely happens in the port; I do not remember such a situation.

[Reporter] After these 2 weeks, you are 120,000 metric tons behind plan. That is a lot.

[Walczak] In fact, not recoverable. With such a volume of output, that is not recoverable this month. All the more, as we know very well that, for instance, this entire week will be very bad.

[Reporter] Apparently, the situation with small loads is bad.

[Walczak] A whole series of things have failed us. Among other things, we expected a considerable arrival of goods in transit [from the] GDR. Up to now, they have not been coming.

[Reporter] So, how should one look at the fulfillment of this month? Two weeks have passed. Will the July plan be fulfilled?

[Walczak] I doubt it. Two weeks are left. For this week, we know everything, what volume will come to the port, so it is not possible that we will fulfill the plan, a plan which, despite everything, was not so high -- barely 500,000 metric tons.

COMPARISON OF CLOSING PRESS CONFERENCE

Warsaw TRYBUNA LUDU in Polish on 7 July on pages 3, 4, and 5 carries a 12,000-word PAP version on W. Jaruzelski's 4 July Warsaw press conference for foreign and domestic journalists. The TRYBUNA LUDU report has been compared with the Warsaw Television Service Polish versions subheaded "Leaders Answer Questions" published in the 7 July Eastern Europe DAILY REPORT, pages G23 and G28, revealing the following varations:

Page 25, paragraph one, last line reads in TRYBUNA LUDU: Please present your questions.

Pavel Kopecky, CSSR radio: Several foreign delegations attended the 10th Congress. What is your appraisal of their contributions to the congress? How does the party view the high evaluation by M. Gorbachev of its activities between the congresses?

Jaruzelski: I have partially answered this question in my introduction, but I would like to further stress that we regard the foreign delegations' contributions to our congress as very important. The very presence of so many representatives from other parties was very important. These contributions were of great substance. M. Gorbachev's speeches at the congress and on other occasions were especially valuable. It is a fact that important statements were made and some of them were quite new. This helped to greatly enrich the congress. Other delegates also made their speeches to the congress. All delegates met with workers in plants and institutions in an atmosphere of friendship and internationalism. I view this as a particularly valuable contribution toward mutual understanding and as support for the correctness of our common road.

I would like to thank once again the foreign delegations for their active and creative participation in our congress.

Rolf Sedenberg, Swedish Television: Are you pleased with what you have achieved so far?

Jaruzelski: Your question is rather puzzling and mysterious. After all, human beings do score various achievements. I think you want to know whether I regard the 10th Congress as successful and as up to the expectations of my comrades and myself. My answer is definitely yes. In a way, our expectations have been more than fulfilled in other ways than just the formal course of the congress. What I like most is the people's response to it. This is a result that has outstripped our hopes both in regard to the extent of our people's interest in the congress and their support for us. I am greatly pleased with this. I say this realizing the enormous political and moral obligations that this support imposes on us. We must honor these obligations to positively satisfy all those who trust us. I tried to express this idea in my concluding congress speech.

Alma Kadragic, ABC News-TV: People coming to Poland from abroad are immediately aware of many uniformed figures around them. Certain uniformed officials treat foreigners as virtual criminals who try to smuggle something into Poland. Is it really necessary to treat foreigners with such suspicion?

Jaruzelski: I find it difficult to answer this question because I know of no specific examples of such treatment. People wear various uniforms in Poland. In Western countries I encountered many figures in uniforms and in civilian clothes doing the same jobs as our officials. We know they are not always paragons of politeness.

One should realize the burden of responsibilities the state services had to bear to ensure that the important congress days were not disturbed. We have reason to assume that certain forces want this congress to fail or to be disturbed one way or another. [paragraph continues]

Unfortunately, some Western publications had this in mind. They presented a false image of our life and of congress affairs. However, if you have been slighted or annoyed in any way I apologize to you and ask you to give me detailed information. We will take the necessary action.

[Kevin Ruane, BBC... (adding passage)

Page G26, paragraph five, last line reads in TRYBUNA LUDU:... of socioeconomic development? What will be the meaning of the proposal that communist and workers parties should soon meet?

[Jaruzelski] Perhaps in... (adding question)

Page G26, paragraph six, last line read in TRUBUNA LUDU:... of socialist Poland.

As for a meeting of the communist parties, the proposal in question was not a definite proposal. It amounted to a conclusion that such a meeting is necessary to discuss the defense and consolidation of peace, which is a cause dear to all of us. We think that communists should display special initiative in this connection and that is why we put forward this idea. During the congress and at meetings with foreign delegations many of our guests stressed the desirability of such a meeting. We will be able to say more about it when definite plans are available.

Renate Marsch-Potocka, DPA: In your congress report you spoke of amnesty for some noncriminal offenses. What kind of offenses? Which noncriminal offenses do you think should not be amnestied? Will this amnesty be announced on 22 July?

Jaruzelski: Such decisions are usually made by the supreme legislative body -- the Sejm. I have put forward a certain idea, which has to be further analyzed. The Sejm may give it the final shape. Our intention is to create a new opportunity for all those who want to take it loyally.

I repeat once again: Only those who want to be our enemies are our enemies. We want to create the opportunity in question, but we will not deprive socialist Poland of the guarantee of work in peace. Our work needs peace; that is why nothing will be amnestied that would undermine this peace and play a destructive role.

Kay Withers, THE BALTIMORE SUN: In connection with M. Gorbachev's congress speech and its passage on some kind of mistrust between the Polish and Russian peoples before the revolution I would like to know whether this reference means that a new era of approach toward Polish-Soviet problems has begun -- than an open approach to the issues of contemporary history is in the making.

Jaruzelski: This is a question of interpreting the extremely important historical process of our people's mutual relations. After all, this very complicated process developed over centuries. I will not expatiate on it because it is common knowledge.

The second stage of these relations was initiated by the 40 years of our socialist period, which is rooted in the fine feats of the common struggle of Polish and Russian revolutionaries and our common battles against the Hitlerite aggressor. Poland's liberation by the Soviet Army and the Polish People's Armed Forces represents an alliance of imperishable value. [paragraph continues]

All this and the extremely important present Polish-Soviet alliance, which is of great value for the interests of our state and people, for the permanence of our borders, and for our economic cooperation, gives a different meaning to our historical problems. What counts and what is most important is what is victorious.

From this viewpoint we are pleased with the determining factors of the mutual relations between our two peoples. After all, we continue and will continue to speak on an ever increasing scale about all the issues that pose questions and doubts for some sections of the public. Let me add that these doubts are shared primarily by those who want to share them at any price.

I think that Polish-Soviet relations have already reached a very high stage of development, and we are sincerely pleased with it.

[Jaruzelski] I repeat once again that I would not like to discuss such details of amnesty as you suggest. These are individual matters, which are often very complicated and which must ripen in the course of analyses made by the appropriate bodies that will evaluate every specific case. This will certainly be reflected in Sejm decisions. The supreme intention of such decisions is to create a humanitarian opportunity for the people who went through various events and situations. We must guarantee the interests and peace and constructive development of our socialist state. It would be illogical to take harmful measures when beginning a new stage in socialist construction and its intensification announced at the 10th Congress. Let me add that we are for expanding the platform of agreement as I clearly stressed in my report. We will search for various ways to achieve this. At the same time, we must guarantee state security because this is the basis and guarantee of all development.

[Stanislaw Glabinski, INTERPRESS] The congress documents, discussions, and press conference by Minister Marian Orzechowski are a forecast of considerably broader and more energetic activity by Poland in the foreign policy sphere. [paragraph continues]

Apart from personal matters, which are not worth asking about because they are already well known, a great deal was remarked at journalists meetings and in the corridors of meeting places about whether Poland intends to present a new peace initiative and a new proposal on healing the international order in the near future. And, another question: Is the new party leadership aware of the deep state of disintegration in which book publishing, such an important sphere of cultural life, has found itself? Is there some program for radical changes in this sphere?

Jaruzelski: People's Poland has always been energetic in foreign policy. We have presented many initiatives that are still highly regarded in the world today. They are generally known, so I will not discuss them further. We also have a share in the many peaceful proposals worked out jointly by the countries of the Warsaw Pact. I will mention at least the latest Budapest initiatives, which include the exceptionally important proposal of reducing conventional weapons in Europe. Poland possesses a strong conventional army and I have no doubt that our energetic and constructive approach toward this issue will be a significant factor during negotiations. In addition, we have put forth many initiatives during UN meetings. These initiatives are constantly valid, and some of them are assuming increasing importance. Poland wishes to continue this traditionally energetic role in international politics, for which the prerequisites are increasing. This is understandable because the stronger we are internally, the more audible and credible our voice will be. The increasingly better relations with the socialist community and the Soviet Union strengthen our own possibilities, as it were. We are becoming a stronger partner, and thus we have a greater possibility of exerting broader influence on international affairs.

Central Committee Secretary Andrzej Wasilewski will answer the second question. I only wish to stress that the report delivered on the first day of the congress says that a rise in national income and an improvement in management efficiency will determine the development rate for all spheres of social life in Poland. Thus, that fragment of the national income due to be allocated to national culture also depends on the total size of this income. Outlay on culture will therefore be increased, though for obvious reasons this cannot take place at the cost of other vitally important spheres of social life that also require greater spending. A successful development of our economy will therefore serve our culture, including books.

Andrzej Wasilewski, Central Committee secretary: Having fulfilled the duties of a publisher for many years, I can confirm the criticism concerning Polish books. These are matters that are very close to me, and therefore I speak about them with a feeling of personal involvement. Thanks to the National Culture Council's report on the state of culture which presents the situation in culture in a critical tone and unconventional way, we fully realize what has to be done in general, including in order to improve the book situation. Enhanced studies and analyses of the existing state of affairs have also been done. We have worked out a program concerning the development of the material base governing book production. The first investments in this sphere will commence this year.

It is envisaged, and the 10th Congress confirms this, that by 1990 there will be an output of eight books for every Pole, which meets the production figures in the most developed countries of the West. We realize that quantities alone will not suffice in order to achieve a tangible improvement in bookshops. The work of publishing houses themselves should also improve in such a way that the production of just any books should cease to be profitable and that those publishers that have not spared paper up to now and produced books that went largely unsold should be deprived of further chances for development by means of suitable economic mechanisms. However, those publishers who produce books that are necessary, valuable, in demand by readers, and compatible with society's cultural education needs should receive such development chances. It semes that mechanisms like this are completely possible to set in motion. [paragraph continues]

The program foresees them, and their introduction depends on an energy of implementation, in other words the slogan which the 10th Congress employed. Funds for culture must therefore be increased, but at the same time they must be used better, more efficiently, and more intelligently. I myself am convinced that this abnormal situation will disappear in a few years' time.

Page G30, last paragraph, line six reads in TRYBUNA LUDU: This lies in our interest. (rephrasing)

Page G31, first paragraph, last line reads in TRYBUNA LUDU: That is all a general can say about it.

Guilo Gelibter, ANSA: Almost all the workers elected to the Politburo at the Ninth Congress have now been replaced by generals who helped implement martial law in Poland. Is this a way of improving democracy in the party?

Jaruzelski: I would like to ask whether the person asking the question was present when I replied to the previous question. Perhaps he was present physically but not mentally for various reasons. I do not want to repeat myself in order not to try the patience of all the ladies and gentlemen here, whose time I respect very much.

This question contains a deep misunderstanding. Generals have not replaced workers in the Politburo. It is the workers who have replaced workers. Four workers have left the party leadership and four workers have joined it. The generals who were in the party leadership remain in it. Nothing qualitatively new has happened. The only qualitative change is that before there was only one woman in the party leadership; now there are two. I think the beautiful ladies present here are pleased with this.

Adam Bronikowski, television news: I have two questions for the premier. The first concerns the verification of jobs, a matter which was given a great deal of attention by the congress reports and discussion. This is not our first time to try to rationalize employment, and I must say in general we never managed it. Perhaps this resulted from certain principles of our system. What are the chances that this rationalization of employment, this elimination of an apparent shortage of labor can finally be solved. Another issue is housing construction. It was said at the congress that the present methods will not change the present housing situation. What does the government intend to do to improve this situation?

[Messner] You have... (adding passage)

As far as housing construction is concerned, this is a difficult problem under our economic conditions. We are not hiding the fact that we view housing construction with concern from the point of view of society's expectations and needs. I spoke about this in my report, revealing the size of the waiting list for cooperative apartments. Here it is worth stressing that those on the list are people of various kinds -- those whose needs are indeed immediate because they live in the most difficult conditions, and those who want an apartment for their children. We do not see anything wrong with this. The housing problem must be solved primarily by removing its causes. What are the chief obstacles to the development of housing construction? They can be divided into subjective and objective ones. The subjective ones involve work organization, austerity, and waste.

The size of needs, punctuality of investments, extent of expectations -- all this causes the housing market to be dominated by contractors and not investors. This means that it is the contractors who dictate terms. This is because of the economic unbalance of which we have spoken on more than one occasion.

We wish to remove the objective reasons in the following way. First, we have begun an effort to eliminate bottlenecks, one of which applies to the shortage of general materials, in other words not only bricks and cement, but also materials necessary to finish apartments and provide central heating for one of the obstacles is a limited opportunity for introducing heating to new apartments. The second bottleneck involves greater building output. It so happens that general construction teams -- in other words, those employed in building apartments -- are employed on a seasonal basis. In summer, the best season, some of these transfer to their second employment -- agriculture. Therefore, the problem is the stability of work forces. I would like to point out as far as the cadres of enterprises involved in industrial construction are concerned, these are very stable and disciplined. Their work quality and performance are also better.

There is still a third problem that we are dealing with intensively. I have in mind the liberation of reserves inherent in existing housing, in other words repairs, conservation, modernization, and alterations. This issue will be the subject of government decisions in September. There are many other matters connected with financing housing construction, credits, and society's greater participation in housing development.

Jackson Diehl: THE WASHINGTON POST: I would like to ask several questions concerning relations between the state and the church. What is the position of the authorities on the proposal made by the church authorities that political prisoner status be introduced? And what is the authorities' position on the Church Agricultural Foundation? Will it be recognized, and what are its prospects? Does the general intend to visit the pope at the Vatican or will the pope visit the general in Poland?

Jaruzelski: I have not had time to familiarize myself more closely with what you have called the church proposals. I believe your question concerns the most recent communique released by the episcopate. We normally familiarize ourselves closely with all the more important statements made by the church so that relations between the church and the state can develop constructively. The supreme interests of the nation and the state require this. I will not describe these relations. I had yet another opportunity do so in the Central Committee report. The commentary contained in the report is official, operative, and lasting.

As for noncriminal offenders, we have also had an opportunity to express our position on this subject on more than one occasion. They are people who have been sentenced for breaking the law. Such punishments are applied in all civilized countries against people who do not observe the law, including the country that you represent. The difference is that there a great deal of hypocrisy surrounds these matters. For example, we know very well that even priests are arrested and tried in the United States. I can provide similar examples for other Western countries. As a rule, such actions are related to political activities that violate the law in a given country. Those are the categories in which we ought to discuss the subject and not in terms that artificially raise the subject to a status that it does not deserve.

We do not want to have noncriminal prisoners. It is not something that we need. What is more, having such prisoners is a burden for us. However, if we have such prisoners than it is because they themselves have wished it by their actions that run counter to the law. In Poland there is broad scope for active and varied activity in which one can satisfy one's civic and patriotic aspirations, but this activity is based on the law and the Constitution.

Our position on the Agricultural Foundation -- this is a lengthy subject because it has had a lengthy history. The question remains open, it is being discussed. There are certain contentious points but they do not concern the idea itself, the principle behind the foundation.

We have approved of it by adopting the law on foundations, by undertaking talks and drawing up a draft statute for the foundation. The discussion that is taking place concerns certain elements of this statute. Were it not for certain differences of opinion, one could safely talk about establishing the foundation.

One of the controversial points stems from the authorities' belief that it is necessary for matters concerning what resources are distributed, where resources are distributed, and in what order they are distributed to be set out and decided in conjunction with the government, with the Ministry of Agriculture to be more precise. After all, we do not have a broad, long-term plan for investment in agriculture, a program for its development. One cannot, therefore, treat the resources of the church's agricultural foundation as existing in isolation, as not coming under overall strictures. These matters must be coordinated in a logical and organic manner, thus requiring the approval of the relevant state authorities. This is one of the points on which there is disagreement. Let us hope that it is overcome as quickly as possible.

Do I intend to visit the Vatican? In order to visit the Vatican one has to be in Rome, in Italy, first of all. So far, nothing concrete has been agreed about my visit to beautiful Italy. It is an open question. As far as a visit to Poland by John Paul II is concerned, this too remains an open question, no official discussions have been made so far. There have already been two papal visits to Poland, and there will undoubtedly be a third. Let us state what is an agreed conclusion, that a possible visit by the pope should serve our nation, state, and peace in the best possible way. I think that this is the pope's intention, just as it is ours.

Jirzi Ottava, CSSR TV: The voice of peace sounded from the podium of the 10th PZPR Congress yesterday; it was addressed to the nations of Europe and to the entire world. What concrete steps would have to be taken for the introduction of a comprehensive international security system to commence?

Jaruzelski: This is a question of a very fundamental kind. I do not think I am fully able to answer this question in a way that would have more universal significance. This is a problem that concerns all states -- the great powers, first and foremost, and the entire world.

I believe that the recent proposals made by the Soviet Union and the socialist states provide a path and offer of this kind. The proposals envisage the elimination of the most dangerous elements in the current situation. This concerns, above all, the limiting and reduction of nuclear weapons, an end to nuclear weapons, testing, as a long-term task, and the general gradual attainment of the goal of eliminating nuclear weapons. This matter also concerns something that we consider particularly important for Poland and Europe -- the proposal on achieving a substantial reduction in conventinal weapons. Each of these moves, regardless of its military and material significance, would be of great psychological, political, and moral significance. It is a question of taking a first step.

I understand the question in the following way: something must begin to happen, one has to begin somewhere. Unfortunately, at the present time nothing concrete is taking place. These propopsals are, unfortunately, suspended in a vacuum for the present time. Neither are the negotiations taking place at various forums -- Geneva, Vienna, and Stockholm -- moving matters forward. We are very interested in the Stockholm talks, inter alia. These talks were to produce the basic seeds from which confidence would grow. The readiness of our side to submit to arms control and disarmament is in this sense a very important step forward.

It is a question of world opinion -- and the present company does in an important sense represent world opinion -- of approaching these proposals with greater understanding. The proposals arise from the deepest conviction that they will be of benefit to Europe and the world, and they are -- I have stressed this on more than one occasion -- both bold and honest. I have noticed that in this context my military rank -- this has been voiced -- seems to rather shock people, but I also express these views as a general. By their honesty, by creating equal opportunities for all, by ensuring equal security, the purity and authenticity of the intentions that have motiviated these proposals is evident.

Marek Hauszyld; EXPRESS WIECZORNY: During the precongress discussion and at the congress itself there was frequent mention of continuing the line adopted at the Ninth Congress. What form should its continuation take and what will be its distinctive features? With reference to the statement made by Mikhail gorbachev during his meeting with the work force of "Swierczewski" plant in Warsaw, I would also like to ask when the first secretary intends to visit the Soviet Union?

Jaruzelski: The entire 10th Congress was imbued with the spirit of the resolutions adopted at the Ninth Congress. All those aspects of the congress that dealt with socialist renewal had their origin in the Ninth Extraodinary Congress after all. These resolutions will continue to be implemented under new conditions and in accordance with new needs. We are and will be faithful to this line.

As for the invitation to visit the Soviet Union, I accepted it with great pleasure. The date will be established later. Right now, I cannot say when it will take place.

Jaruzelski: The most complicated barrier, and the one that has an objective effect, is that which stems from the difficult living conditions that continue to persist, from all kinds of difficulties, such as thoses encountered in the market, in the services sphere, and in relations between people. This undoubtedly makes it hard for people to voice approval of the actions that we have undertaken, actions whose effectiveness is insufficiently tangible for it to be possible to fully judge our goodwill and to accept our agruments. That is why we dealt with these matters in a very fundamental way at the 10th Congress. Charges in the system of management, greater efficiency, and their effects on the market and on other areas of public life are a basic factor. This factor should contribute to an improvement in the situation, to understanding our policies and thus, to enlarging the sphere of understanding for all communities and social groups.

The poor functioning of certain organs of government, party echelons, or the state and administrative authorities constitutes one such barrier. Every such negative fact has numerous reverberations. People do not judge the authorities on the basis of the best and most just programs but on the basis of what they encounter in their immediate environment, of what affects their lives.

SCINTEIA ON DEVELOPMENT OF PRC COOPERATION

[Al Campeanu article "An Important Event in the Development of Romanian-Chinese Cooperation"]

[Text] The official friendly visit paid to our country by Comrade Zhao Ziyang, member of the Standing Committee of the CPC Central Committee Politburo and premier of the PRC State Council, at the invitation of Comrade Nicolae Ceausescu, RCP secretary general and president of the SR of Romania, and Comrade Constantin Dascalescu, member of the Political Executive Committee of the RCP Central Committee and prime minister of the government, went down, through the talks conducted and understandings concluded, as a new and important moment in the development of relations of friendship and cooperation between our countries and peoples.

The talks conducted by Comrade Nicolae Ceausescu and Comrade Zhao Ziyang vigorously stressed the continuity and, at the same time, the particular importance of the Romanian-Chinese summit dialogue which is playing a decisive role in ensuring the upward evolution of bilateral relations, in developing friendly cooperation in the process of building the new socialist system in the two countries, and in the struggle for peace, progress, and understanding in the world.

This joint concern was stressed by the warm exchange of messages that took place during te visit between Comrade Nicolae Ceausescu and Comrades Hu Yaobang, general secretary of the CPC Central Committee, Deng Xiaoping, chairman of the Central Consultative Commission of the CPC, and Li Xiannian, PRC president.

Held in a warm atmosphere of friendship, understanding, and mutual esteem, the talks were an opportunity to examine the development of bilateral relations, particuarly the way in which the summit decisions and understandings of October last year in Beijing are being implemented; the talks also stressed the particular satisfaction of both countries with the fact that traditional relations of close friendship, cooperation, and solidarity between the RCP and CPC, between Romania and the PRC, and between the peoples of the two countries are developing successfully.

Summarizing the development of mutual relations, Comrade Nicolae Ceausescu stressed: "I would like to express our party's and people's satisfaction with the positive relations between the RCP and the CPC and between Romania and China. We assess your visit, together with the other Chinese friends, as proof of these positive relations and also as an expression of our common desire to lend them new scope in all areas."

In the same spirit, referring to the talks conducted, Comrade Zhao Ziyang stated: "I believe that these talks are of great value and thus I place even greater confidence in the further, many-sided, constant, and stable development of relations of friendship and cooperation between our parties, countries, and peoples."

Both sides are convinced that the upward evolution of Romanian-Chinese cooperation constitutes a great achievement of both peoples and of their communist parties and is an important contribution to the implementations of their programs aimed at the many-sided progress of their countries and peoples on the road to socialism. As was stressed during the current talks, too, our mutual relations are lastingly based on the principles of national independence and sovereignty, full equality of rights, noninterference in domestic affairs, mutual advantage, and comradely assistance, as sure guarantee for the present and future development of fruitful friendly cooperation.

Proceeding from such favorable preconditions, Comrade Nicolae Ceausescu's talks with Comrade Zhao Ziyang stressed the conviction that all necessary conditions exist so that, through joint and firm action by both sides, Romanian-Chinese relations will be further expanded and diversified at a political, economic, scientific-technical and technological potential of the two countries, thus creating real possibilities for expanding these relations. And precisely in the spirit of this requirement, the talks held between the prime minister of the Romanian Government and the premier of PRC State Council stressed the need to identify new ways and means to ensure the implementation to the letter of long-term accords between our countries by more rapidly increasing the exchanges of material goods and by more vigorously expanding production sharing and specialization, including the construction of economic projects, with a view to fulfilling the cooperation tasks envisaged for the current 5-year plan.

An important place within the talks between Comrade Nicolae Ceausescu and the premier of the PRC State Council was held by the exchange of views on the development of the international situation,the two sides stressing their identical or very close positions on major problems confronting mankind. Proceeding from the serious and complex situation, the two sides stressed the need to take very firm action to halt the dangerous trend of events toward confrontation and war and to promote a policy of detente, understanding, and cooperation among nations. The dialogue stressed the fact of particular importance that both Romania and the PRC pay priority attention to achieving disarmament, primarily nuclear disarmament, and to ensuring peace -- a basic problem of our time. Within this framework, the sides reasserted Romania's and China's conviction that, despite the current serious situation, the peoples and progressive forces everywhere are able -- through joint action -- to bar the road to war and to guarantee the triumph of reason in international relations.

In the same constructive spirit, the talks stressed the need to intensify efforts to halt the policy of violating peoples' independence and sovereignty, to ensure the peaceful solution, through negotiations, of differences between states, and to eliminate sources of tension in all areas in the world. On this occasion,the sides also stressed the importance of the participation by small and medium-sized countries and the nonaligned and developing countries in resolving the serious problems of the world in the interest of all peoples. More than ever before, it is necessary -- as was stressed during the talks -- to seek a global solution to the economic problems confronting the developing countries in order to eliminate underdevelopment, achieve a new world economic order, and to ensure progress for the whole of mankind.

Through its fruitful results, through the talks conducted, and through the common major conclusions that were reached, the official friendly visit paid by the premier of the PRC State Council goes down as an important political event in the upward evolution of relations of friendship, cooperation, and solidarity between Romania and China, public opinion in our country being fully convinced that these relations will continue to develop vigorously in our mutual interest and to the benefit of the general cause of socialism, peace, and international cooperation.

SCINTEIA ARTICLE ON U.S. INDEPENDENCE DAY

AU071426 Bucharest SCINTEIA in Romanian 4 Jul 86 p 5

[Untitled SCINTEIA editoral article marking U.S. Independence Day]

[Text] Throughout the United States the 4th of July is being celebrated through numerous official and folk events. It is an opportunity to recall the events which took place 210 years ago and which have gone down in history as an expression of peoples' right to self-determination and to a free and independent life.

The signing in Philadelphia on 4 July 1776 of the Declaration of Independence sanctioned the breakout from ties of submission by the 13 English colonies on the western shore of the Atlantic toward the mother country, thus opening the road to the assertion of the American people as free and independent nation and to the formation and development of the United States.

The Declaration of Independence, as well as the war waged by the pioneers of the American Revolution, found response in the Romanian principalities as well where our people were also struggling against foreign domination. Later, a short time after the establishment of the modern Romanian state, consular relations were set up between our country and the United States and after Romania's state independence was won, diplomatic relations were also established. These relations with longstanding traditions are favorably developing today, particularly in economic, scientific-technological, cultural, and in other areas. Once again this demonstrates that it is possible for countries with different social systems and of different sizes to cooperate fruitfully when their relations are based on strict respect for the principles of full equality of rights, national independence and sovereignty, noninterference in domestic affairs, and mutual advantage.

A decisive role in developing Romanian-American relations has been played by summit contacts and meetings in Bucharest and Washington, and by understandings concluded and documents signed on those occasions, including the "Joint Declaration of the Presidents of Romania and the United States" and the "Joint Declaration on Economic, Industrial, and Technological Cooperation" which outlines the political and legal framework for a favorable development of mutually advantageous cooperation.

As the recent meeting of the Romanian-American Joint Commission for Economic Cooperation, which took place in spirit of summit understandings and on the basis of accords concluded between the two countries, emphasized, possibilities exists to further develop trade and economic cooperation between Romanian enterprises and U.S. companies. A particular contribution to rapidly expanding economic exchanges between the two countries could be made by the conclusion of long-term agreements, by expanding cooperation forms, and by creating new joint production companies with a broader activity. The norms of truly free international trade in both directions require the renunciation of any kind of restrictions, conditions, and obstacles.

In the current serious conditions of the international situation, socialist Romania believes that it is more than ever before necessary for all states to cooperate, proceeding from the need to stop the dangerous trend of events and to act toward resuming the process of detente, resolving all differences between states by negotiations alone, and toward halting the arms race and proceeding to disarmament.

The expansion of Romanian-American relations of cooperation in all areas is fully in keeping with the interests of both countries and peoples, and with the general cause of peace, understanding, and international cooperation.

CONDOLENCES PRESENTED ON LE DUAN'S DEATH

["A Great Son of the Vietnamese People" -- AGERPRES headline]

[Text] Bucharest, AGERPRES 12/7/1986 -- The Romanian press of July 12 pays respectful homage to Le Duan, publishing, along with the condolatory telegram addressed by the Romanian party and state leader Nicolae Ceausescu to the Vietnamese party and state leadership, articles featuring the personality and revolutionary activity of the general secretary of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of Vietnam, and his photo. In the homage-paying article entitled "A Great Son of the Vietnamese People", SCIENTEIA writes:

Communists, the Romanian people received with sorrow the news about the passing away of Comrade Le Duan, general secretary of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of Vietnam, a heavy loss for the Vietnamese people. A tested revolutionary campaigner, Comrade Le Duan dedicated a lifetime to the long struggle full of sacrifices waged by the popular mass, by the Vietnamese people against colonial domination and imperialist aggression, for winning independence, for social liberation and the building of the new, socialist sytem in Vietnam.

Remarking that Le Duan's life and revolutionary activity are closely related to decisive event in the history of the Communist Party of Vietnam, of the Vietnamese nation along more than half a century, SCINTEIA extensively presents the outstanding contribution made by the general secretary of the CC of the Communist Party of Vietnam to the elaboration and implementation of the party policy dedicated to revolutionary transformations in the south, to preparing the conditions for the building of the tehnical-material base of socialism all over the country.

Under the leadership of the Communist Party of Vietnam, at the head with Comrade Le Duan, SCINTEIA goes on, the Vietnamese people scored important achievements in eradicating the tough consequences of the war, in turning the good account the soil and subsoil riches through the development of a national industry, the growth of agriculture, the expansion of education, in the thriving of culture and science.

Romanian Communists and people fully share the sorrow of communists and people in Vietnam in connection with the passing away of Comrade Le Duan. As is known, the Romanian people and the Vietnamese people have established along the years relations of close friendship and collaboration in the struggle for national and social liberation, for the building of the new system in the two countries. The Romanian people have always been on the side of the Vietnamese people, have backed their right cause, giving them, in the period of the fight against imperialist aggression unreserved support in all domains.

In the new conditions created after Vietnam's full liberation and the achievement of national unity -- events of outstanding importance greeted by Socialist Romania with profound satisfaction -- the Romanian-Vietnamese relations of friendship and collaboration have recorded an upward course.

The collaboration between the Romanian Communist Party and the Communist Party of Vietnam, between Romania and Vietnam has been powerfully encouraged by the understandings reached during meetings in Bucharest and Hanoi between Nicolae Ceausescu and Le Duan, that opened up new development prospects.

Communists in Romania, the Romanian people are confident that the relations of friendship and collaboration between the RCP and the CP of Vietnam, between Romania and the SR of Vietnam will keep expanding in the future, to mutual benefit, in the interests of the cause of socialism and peace in the world.

The Romanian people express their confidence that the working people in Vietnam will spare no effort in the struggle for the translation into life of the revolutionary ideals for which Le Duan steadily campaigned, for implementing the policy of the Communist Party of Vietnam devoted to socialist construction, for ensuring also in that part of the world a climate of security that should give the Vietnamese people, the other peoples in the region the possibility to dedicate all efforts to their economic and social progress, to live in qkuiet and peace, in a climate of understanding and collaboration, SCINTEIA concludes.

CEAUSESCU MESSAGE TO PYONGYANG YOUTH MEETING

AU091936 Bucharest AGERPRES in English 1853 GMT 9 Jul 86

[Text] Bucharest, AGERPRES 9/7/1986 -- In his message addressed to the participants in the friendly get-together between representatives of young people of Romania and the DPR of Korea, taking place in Pyongyang, President Nicolae Ceausescu appreciates that the organization of this friendly get-together is a fine opportunity for a broad and fruitful exchange of esperience and for a better mutual acquaintance, for the strengthening of the friendship and collaboration between the two countries' young people in their struggle for the successful construction of socialism in their countries, for progress and peace in the world.

We greatly value the good relations of collaboration and solidarity that have been established and develop steadily between the Romanian people and the people in the Democratic People's Republic of Korea in the work and efforts for the construction of the new system, for the free and independent assertion of our countries toward economic and social progress, shows the Romanian president in his message. Nicolae Ceausescu stresses then that the mutual visits, the meetings and talks he had in Bucharest and Pyongyang with President Kim Il-song gave every time a powerful impetus to the Romanian-Korean relations lastingly relying upon the principles of full equality, non-interference and sovereignty, mutual esteem and regard.

In his message President Nicolae Ceausescu expressed his confidence that the youth organizations in Romania and the Democratic People's Republic of Korea, the young generation in the two countries will fully contribute to the multilateral development of these traditional relations, to the continuous strengthening and deepening of the Romanian-Korean friendship, collaboration and solidarity. This accords with the interests and aspirations after progress of both countries and peoples and also serves the cause of peace, collaboration and understanding among all nations of the world, the Romanian head of state stresses.

Referring to the current international situation that keeps very grave and complex, President Nicolae Ceausescu considers that it is more necessary today than ever that everything be done for the rallying of the efforts of all peoples, of the advanced, progressive forces everywhere -- among which the young people hold a special place -- in order to halt the dangerous course of events toward confrontation and war, for the resuption of the policy of detente, understanding, collaboration and peace.

Addressing the young people in the two countries, the Romanian president urges them to be in the first ranks of the Romanian and Korean peoples' struggle for the powerful affirmation of the policy of peace and disarmament, for the settlement of the grave and complex issues of our era, for a better and more just world, free of weapons and war, for a free and happy future.

The message highlights the outstanding importance in this respect of the strengthening of the Romanian and Korean youth's collaboration with the youth in the other socialist countries, with the young generation the world over in attaining mankind's noble aspirations after peace, security and detente, collaboration and social progress.

I am firmly convinced that the young people in our countries will collaborate ever more actively, making an important contribution to the common cause of Romanian-Korean friendship and collaboration, of socialism, independence and peace in the world, stresses President Nicolae Ceausescu in his message, reiterating Romania's support and solidarity with the friend by Korean people's struggle and efforts for the accomplishment of their fundamental aspirations after the fatherland's peaceful, democratic and independent reunification.

Delegation Meets WPK Secretary

AU141950 Bucharest AGERPRES in English 1832 GMT 14 Jul 86

[Text] Pyongyang (AGERPRES) 14/07/1986 -- The leadership of the Romanian youth delegation who attended the events arranged as part of the friendly meeting between youth representatives of the Socialist Republic of Romania and the Democratic People's Republic of Korea met, on Monday, July 14, in Pyongyang, with Hwang Chang-yop, secretary of the CC of the Worker's Party of Korea.

During the interview stress was laid on the fine ties between the two countries' youth organizations, all while it was underscored that the friendly meeting between Romanian and Korean youth representatives was indicative of the steadily upward course of the relations of friendship, collaboration and solidarity on a youth line, which are sent on the traditional links between the RCP and the Workers' Party of Korea, between the two peoples and countries, in keeping with the understandings convenanted during the summit dialogues between the RCP general secretary, Romania's president, Nicolae Ceausescu; and the general secretary of the CC of the Workers' Party of Korea, president of the DPR of Korea, Kim Il-song.

That first friendly meeting between Romanian and Korean youth representatives was assessed as an active contribution to the expansion and deepening of the close, cooperative ties between the youth organizations, which also opens up further prospects for the development and continual strengthening of the relations of friendship and solidarity between the youths of Romania and the DPR of Korea.

CHANGES IN WORK FORCE STRUCTURE NOTED

AU150943 Bucharest AGERPRES in English 0930 GMT 15 Jul 86

[Text] Bucharest AGERPRES 15/7/1986 -- Romania's rapid industrialization has been behind the full and efficient employment of its work force which numbered 10.6 million at the end of 1985. If we include the young population of working age (students), the number rises to 11.5 million, from 8.6 million in 1950. This brings the working population to 88 percent or so of the country's total.

More than 5.5 million jobs were created in postwar Romania, 80 percent of which in the last twenty years, which fully absorbed the population's natural rise and provided for the employment of a good number of former housewives and other nonworking people.

The progress in industrialization, the modernization of agriculture, the cultural revolution have all combined to make deep changes in the socioprofessional structure of the population. As a result, the number of working people had increased more than [illegible].6 times -- by nearly 5.5 million -- over 1950-1985 to bring its share over 72 percent of the total, from a low 25 percent. That process was parallelled by a drop in the number of agricultural workers to 24 percent in 1950 from a high 72 percent in 1950.

The number of skilled workers grew steadily to 57 percent of the total in 1985 from just 14.6 percent in 1950. The steepest rise was in industry: industrial workers topped 3.1 million in 1985, up from 640,000 in 1950 to account for a five-fold increase, the biggest figures being reported in key industries. In the past twenty years the number of working women rose faster than that of men, with women contributing 52 percent to the total growth of the working population.

VENEZUELAN FOREIGN MINISTER ARRIVES FOR VISIT

LD112024 Belgrade TANJUG Domestic Service in Serbo-Croatian 1839 GMT 11 Jul 86

[Text] Belgrade, 11 Jul (TANJUG) -- Dr Simon Alberto Consalvi, minister of foreign affairs of the Republic of Venezuela, arrived in Belgrade this evening. He was met at Surcin Airport by Budimir Loncar, deputy federal secretary for foreign affairs, and other officials of the Federal Secretariat for Foreign Affairs. Also there to meet him were Dr German Lairet, Venezuelan ambassador in Belgrade, and members of the embassy.

The Venezuelan foreign minister will meet on 13 July with Raif Dizdarevic, federal secretary for foreign affairs, and will begin talks on bilateral cooperation, in particular economic relations, and some topical issues of international affairs. It is expected that the two ministers will discuss the developments in Latin America and the forthcoming activities of the nonaligned countries in their preparations for the eighth summit in Harare.

Minister Consalvi will be paying his official and friendly visit to our country 13-16 July.

Talks With Dizdarevic

LD131512 Belgrade TANJUG Domestic Service in Serbo-Croatian 1234 GMT 13 Jul 86

[Text] Belgrade, 13 Jun (TANJUG) -- Yugoslav-Venezuelan cooperation and some aspects of international economic relations were the chief topics in the first round of talks between Federal Secretary for Foreign Affairs Raif Dizdarevic and Venezuelan Foreign Minister Dr Simon Alberto Conslavi which took place in Belgrade today. During very open and friendly talks, both sides noted that bilateral relations are good and are developing on the basis of traditional friendship but that the possibilities, especially for economic cooperation, have not even been remotely exploited and that it will be necessary to invest fresh efforts to improve this aspect of their relations and achieve the desired level. Agreement was expressed in this connection that the establishment of a joint committee for economic cooperation could significantly stimulate the development of economic relations.

As for trade relations, it was stressed that with the investment of further efforts the necessary trade balance - Yugoslavia has had a trade surplus in recent years -- could be realized. Both sides noted the benefit of compensation agreements which had expanded the field of economic cooperation between the two countries and thus also established a basis for the initiation of higher forms of economic cooperation such as industrial cooperation, joint ventures, or joint participation on this markets. In this respect Yugoslav work organizations, with more initiatives, can play an important role in the expansion of economic relations between Yugoslavia and Venezuela.

In considering economic relations stress was placed on the importance of this form of cooperation which is in keeping with the two countries' strategic orientation regarding the special attention they devote to strengthening relations between developing countries, which they are.

A good portion of today's meeting between the Yugoslav and Venezuelan foreign minister was devoted to a consideration of the debt problem. In this connection, it was noted that this is one of the most important economic-financial problems confronting both countries, as well as the developing countries, especially those in Latin America.

This is simultaneously a political problem which requires supplementary efforts by the debot countries in their talks with the creditors. The importance of the forthcoming gathering of the nonaligned in Harare which is to deal with the debt problem, was noted, as was North-South cooperation and South-South cooperation.

There was also discussion during the talks of other aspects of bilateral relations. Both ministers noted the importance of cultural cooperation and made the assurance that a 3-year agreement on Yugoslav-Venezuelan cultural and educational cooperation will be signed shortly.

The Dizdarevic-Conslavi talks will be continued on Tuesday when an exchange of views on their international topics is expected.

DIZDAREVIC ADDRESSES ASSEMBLY ON NONALIGNED AGENDA

LD150820 Belgrade TANJUG in English 1510 GMT 14 Jul 86

[Text] Belgrade, July 14 (TANJUG) -- Economic cooperation among the non-aligned and developing countries is not enough and, thus, the Non-Aligned Movement must define concrete measures and actions at its forthcoming Harare summit for its advancement, it was evaluated here today at a joint session of the Assembly of Yugoslavia's Committees for Foreign Affairs and for Foreign Economic Relations.

Reminding that the developing countries have repaid some 600 billion dollars in debt installments in the past five years to Western banks and lost some 65 billion dollars on account of falls in prices for raw matrials last year, Assembly delegates voiced their hopes for the non-aligned to be united in Harare about concrete actions for solving such problems.

Raif Dizdarevic, Yugoslav federal secretary for foreign affairs, spoke before the two committees on preparations for the Harare summit.

The main subjects for the Harare summit to pen on September 1 will be, in addition to actions for solving the developing countries' economic problems, to secure peace in the world and to do away with crisis hot spots, Dizdarevic said. To be asked for at the summit are an all-encompassing ban on nuclear tests, reductions in strategic nuclear and conventional armaments, and elimination of chemical weapons and all other weapons for mass annihilation, Dizdarevic pointed out.

Pointing to the seriousness of the situation in the Mediterranean, Dizdarevic evaluated that a conflict of wider dimensions could easily flare up in the Mediterranean. Underway are talks on organizing a ministerial conference of non-aligned Mediterranean countries that should be held by this year's end, he informed the Assembly delegates.

ELECTRIC POWER INDUSTRY ANNOUNCES PRICE INCREASES

LD141302 Belgrade TANJUG Domestic Service in Serbo-Croation 0810 GMT 14 Jul 86

[By Ivo Popomic]

[Summary] Titograd, 14 Jul (TANJUG) -- The same day that the FEC decided to rescind astronomic increases in bread prices, the Yugoslav electric power industry decided to increase the price of electricity by over 40 percent.

This -- the third price increase this year -- is bound to push up prices generally and came as an unpleasant surprise to consumers especially since the hydrological situation for the generation of hydro-electric power has not been better in the last 20 years and in many countries the fall in the oil price has led to a decrease in electricity costs.

The Yugoslav electric power industry is taking advantage of its monopoly position to further increase the already high incomes of its workers, despite LCY Intentions to implement constitutional principles, according to which workers should have control over all the income. As it stands, these price increases mean that in winter the average household in Montenegro will spend half its average income on electricity and if new price rises occur at the beginning of October as announced, not only will unpaid bills mount up but anti-inflation measures will be largely ineffectual.

MAMULA ATTENDS MEETING OF ARMS INDUSTRY WORKERS

LD142215 Belgrade TANJUG Domestic Service in Serbo-Croatian 1347 GMT 14 Jul 86

[Text] Trstenik, 14 Jul (TANJUG) -- Fleet Admiral Branko Mamula, federal secretary for national defense; and Radovan Makic, member of the Federal Executive Council and chairman of the Commission for Defense Appropriations and Social Self-Protection, and their aids today attended a meeting with representatives of the work organizations which are members of the community of the armament and military equipment industry. The meeting took place in the Prva Petoletka Hydraulics an pneumatics industry [as received] in Trstenik.

During the meeting, which was organized by the Federal Secretariat for National Defense, the community of armament and military equipment industry, and the Prva Petoletka, topical issues concerning the work of the community members were discussed. Particular attention was focused on research and development activities, the fulfilment of contractual obligations to equip our armed forces with weapons systems and military equipment, export of military hardware, equipment, and consultancy service, and on some issues of the armament and military equipment industry's sociopolitical position.

Taking part in the discussion, Adm Mamula stressed, among other things, that in regard to the way in which our armed forces are equipped we must not lag behind the armies in those countries which are at the same level of development as we are. He also emphasized that our programs and commitments must not exceed our overall material potential. We must continue to supply our army with home-manufactured weapons systems and military equipment. In manufacturing these, we must continue to rely on the country's overall scientific and research potential, where we have already made significant breakthroughs. Emphasizing the great importance of research and development-conducive work, the federal secretary for national defense said that although major results had been achieved in this sphere, we must make even greater moves toward improving the know-how in the areas of technology systematically and in an organized way.

It was agreed at the meeting that in realizing the production and sales plans and implementing economic stabilization measures, all subjects must invest even more effort particularly in the area of cooperation and integration of production forces on the entire Yugoslav territory.

In this connection Radovan Makic, member of the Federal Executive Council, stressed the need for increased effort on the part of everyone in order to facilitate a more consistent implementation of Federal Executive Council measures in specific purpose industries.

Topical issues of interest to the members of the community of the armament and military equipment industry were put forward by the community's chairman, Velimir Radivojevic.

As the part of the visit to the Prva Petoletka work organization the participants in the meeting toured the collective's production plants where they were briefed on work results and further development plans.

INFORMATION COMMISSION SUPPORTS TANJUG PROGRAM

LD111956 Belgrade TANJUG Domestic Service 1519 GMT 11 Jul 86

[Excerpt] Belgrade, 11 Jul (TANJUG) -- The SFRY Assembly Information Commission (presided over by Sandor Dobo) today gave its support to the program of information tasks of TANJUG of interest to the federation in 1987 and to proposals for solving the material problems of the agency. The fact was stressed that the lack of resources is seriously threatening TANJUG's activity and it was agreed that this topic, the said proposals and the program, would be discussed at the September sessions of the assembly chambers.

The commission considers that it is essential to secure the funds which TANJUG is lacking for the realization of this year's socially approved work program and also the funds for the first phase of the realization of the program of recovery and technology expansion. Money should also be secured for the second phase of the modernization from the budget of the federation. [passage omitted]

ALBANIAN SENTENCED FOR 'HOSTILE PROPAGANDA'

AU151009 Pristina RILINDJA in Albanian 11 Jul 86 p 9

[V.B. Report: "From Orahovac Court for Misdemeanors -- For Hostile Propaganda -- 60 Days Jail"]

[Text] Orahovac, 10 July -- Recently, at the Orahovac Court for Misdemeanors, Azem Krasnici (36) from the village of Ostrozub, commune of Malisevo, driver at the Associated Labor Organization "Orahovac" at Orahovac, was sentenced to 60 days imprisonment for hostile propaganda.

As the president of the court, Muharem Bytyci, announced, the organs of the Secretariat of Internal Affairs, during checks made on 30 June, came upon the initials of hostile character "K.R." written on the steering wheel of the tractor he was driving.

This person was then sent at once to suffer his sentence.

TANJUG CITES INCREASED EMIGRATION FROM PRISTINA

LD111234 Belgrade TANJUG Domestic Service in Serbo-Croatian 1116 GMT 11 Jul 86

[Text] Pristina, 11 Jul (TANJUG) -- In the first half of this year, 477 member of the Serbian and Montenegrin nations emigrated from Pristina, which is considerably more than in the same period last year.

Most people emigrated from the town and local community of Kosovo Poje, although there was emigration from other areas as well. This was said today at a session of the Assembly of the Pristina Municipality, at which a 6-month report on the emigration of Serbs and Montenegrins and their return was discussed.

One of the most frequently mentioned causes for the emigration of Serbians and Montenegrins is their minority feeling and a political atmosphere created with the escalation of the Albanian nationalists and irredentists since 1981. At the session a demand was made for resolute implementation of all adopted measures on Kosovo, in particular the conclusions of the SFRY Presidency and the LCY Central Committee Presidium, as well as that those who do not implement them should be brought to account. At today's session delegates adopted a program implementing additional measures made by the Assembly of the Socialist Autonomous Province of Kosovo for halting the emigration of the Serbians and Montenegrins from this municipality.

FUND STARTED BY INTELLECTUALS TO AID DISSIDENTS

AU150741 Paris AFP in English 0733 GMT 15 Jul 86

[Text] Belgrade, July 15 (AFP) -- A fund has been started by over 200 Yugoslav authors, professors and journalists to aid people losing their jobs for their political opinions.

Reliable sources said 12 factory workers had also joined the fund, the first such cooperation across different professional categories in Yugoslavia.

The idea steemed from the sacking last May of Dusan Bogavec, 54, a journalist on the magazine KOMUNIST, who fell into disgrace five years ago for his articles about the Albanian minority in the Kosovo Province.

The fund was announced in an open letter to all newspapers, radio and television offices, warning tha the Bogavec affairs was aimed at crushing any freedom of expression in Yugoslavia.

DRAFT DIRECTIVES FOR EIGHTH 5-YEAR PLAN

AU140601 Tirana BASHKIMI in Albanian 4 Jul 86 pp 1-3

["Draft Directives of the Ninth AWP Congress on the Eighth 5-Year Plan (1986-90) for the Development of the Economy and Culture in the People's Socialist Republic of Albania"]

[Text] The Seventh 5-Year Plan will remain in the history of the country's socioeconomic development as the first plan relying entirely on our own forces, with no credit or aid from outside. Our country made strides in its general progress on the road of socialism. The productive forces were raised to a higher level of development, socialist production relations were improved, the wellbeing of the people was maintained and increased, the country's defense potential was further strengthened, and socialist Albania's international position became stronger.

Compared with the Sixth 5-year Plan period, the social product during the Seventh 5-Year Plan period increased over 18 percent, the national income over 16 percent, capital investment 14 percent, and the consumption fund increased by nearly 15 percent. On the basis of a better utilization of production capacities and of the development of the technical-scientific revolution, the process of socialist industrialization was further deepened and industrial production increased 26 percent. The multi-branched structure of industry and its role in the general progress of the economy were consolidated.

During the Seventh 5-Year Plan period, for the 5 years taken together, the extraction of natural and accompanying gas [gazit shoquerues] increased 38 percent over the sixth 5-year period, coal extraction increased by 48 percent, the extraction of cooper ore by 37 percent, the extraction of ferro-nickel ore more than doubled, 46 percent more electricity was generated, 44 percent more steel sheeting was produced, the production of copper blister increased 25 percent, and the production of copper wires and cables was nearly double that of the sixth 5-year period. The industrial production of the engineering branch was nearly 50 percent higher than during the sixth 5-year period, and the production of machinery and equipment increased 54 percent. There was also a rapid increase in the production of other important industrial products like sulphuric acid, glass packaging, and in the production of certain construction materials, in textiles and linen products with a polyester-cotton mixture, in polyester-wool textiles, in knitwear, footwear, and so forth.

Our socialist agriculture achieved new progress on the road of its intensification, thus developing further in all its branches as a complex agriculture equipped with the necessary material and technical base, and despite the poor climatic conditions over a number of years, it achieved an increase of 13 percent more agricultural products. Compared with the sixth 5-year period, 267,000 tons more bread grains, 15,000 tons more cotton, 177,000 tons more sugarbeet, 44,000 tons more sunflower, 14,000 tons more cotton, 247,000 tons more vegetables, 46,000 tons more meat, 243 million more eggs, and so forth, were produced during the seventh 5-year period. The major proportion of the increased agricultural production was secured through higher yields of field crops and the increased productivity of livestock.

The material-technical base was further consolidated through new investments, thus opening up prospects for the future. About 5,500 larger and smaller projects were built and commissioned during the seventh 5-year period. The "Enver Hoxha" Hydroelectric Power Plant in Koman started operation, the Shkoder-Han i Hoti and the Fier-Vlore railroads were commissioned, new mines and enrichment plans were commissioned, and dozens of factories and production lines were added to the light and foodstuffs industry, as well as a number of livestock complexes. [paragraph continues]

The irrigation capacity was increased by 31,000 hectares. Many kilometers of new roads were constructed, as well as a considerable number of sociocultural projects and 80,000 apartments and houses in the cities and countryside. All of these ensured the uninterrupted extension of socialist reproduction.

The preservation and further elevation of the material and cultural wellbeing of the population constitutes a considerable victory. All social and cultural sectors were further developed. The number of pupils and students during the 1985-86 schoolyear reached 744,000. The number of beds in medical institutions was increased and the mortality of infants under 1 year old was reduced by 40 percent compared with 1980. Our country's population reached the 3-million mark. Science and the technical-scientific revolution increased their role in the development of production forces and resolved a considerable number of problems pertaining to the present and the future with a higher degree of efficiency.

These great achievements took place under conditions of a bitter class struggle within the country and in the international arena. As always, our party and people emerged victorious and stronger in this struggle. Under the leadership of the Central Committee led by Comrade Enver Hoxha, the hostile, treacherous, and putschist activity of the poly-agent of international imperialism and revisionism, Mehmet Shehu, and his band, was completely defeated. The difficulties of the capitalist encirclement and the pressure exerted on our economy by the economic and currency crisis of the bourgeois and revisionist countries were overcome.

During the last 5-year period, and particularly in 1982, 1984, and 1985, our country was also compelled to meet and overcome the difficulties and considerable damage caused by natural calamities like the prolonged drought, earthquakes, floods, last year's bitter winter, and so forth. The great political and ideological maturity, the massive heroism, the socialist solidarity, and the undaunted determination of our people to further the country's socialist construction shone more strongly than ever in the struggle against these great difficulties. The unbreakable unity of the people around the AWP -- which is and will always remain the decisive factor in meeting every encirclement and blockade, in overcoming all obstacles and difficulties, and in ensuring the continued progress of our economic and social development -- was further steeled.

Comrade Enver Hoxha, our great and glorious leader, the dearest son of the people, distinguished Marxist-Leninist, and architect of Socialist Albania, was separated from us in April 1985. The party and the people turned this great loss and profound grief into great strength, closing their ranks, and increasing their mobilization at work. The broad revolutionary movement that became widespread throughout the country and encompassed young and old to become "Standard-bearer of the implementation of Comrade Enver Hoxha's teachings" stimulated the eruption of new energies and became a great and influential material force in meeting and overcoming the extraordinary difficulties of 1985.

The successes and victories attained during the seventh 5-year period are a vital testimony to the correctness of the party's line and the principle of self-reliance, as well as of the vitality of the socialist economy and the superiority of our socialist order. They are a result of the AWP's wise leadership and the mobilization and constant efforts of the working masses in the cities and the countryside to implement the party's directives and orientations and Comrade Enver Hoxha's teachings. However, despite the great struggle and the persistent efforts of the party and the masses, as well as of the state and economic organs, the planned targets in some sectors of the economy and culture were not met owing, primarily, to the difficulties that arose, as well as to some shortcomings in organization and management, bureaucratic attitudes, and technocratic and liberal manifestations. [paragraph continues]

Tasks in the oil and gas sector, with regard to some agricultural and livestock products, and so forth, were not fulfilled as a result, and this had a negative influence on the country's rate of development and on supplying the population in accordance with planned levels. The resolute struggle of the party and the working masses against these shortcomings and weaknesses therefore constitutes a permanent task in order to increasingly more widely open the way to the utilization of the great possibilities and reserves available to our socialist economy for the country's rapid progress during the eighth 5-year period.

II. On the Plan for the Country's Economic and Social Development During the Eighth 5-Year Period (1986-90)

On the basis of our party's correct Marxist-Leninist line, of the immortal teachings and deeds of our beloved leader, Comrade Enver Hoxha, and on the basis of the aspiration of the broad working masses to advance resolutely on the road of the country's socialist construction, the AWP Central Committee poses the following fundamental task concerning the Eighth 5-Year Plan:

"To further comprehensively consolidate and improve our socialist order and to gradually raise the material and cultural standard of the people, relying entirely on our own forces, through: the development of our multibranched industry and the complex intensification of agriculture, the constant deepening of the technical-scientific revolution and raising of the efficiency of our social production, the constant improvement of social and economic relations in a Marxist-Leninist way, the further development of the ideological and cultural revolution, and the constant strengthening of the country's defense potential."

To achieve this task:

-- The priority development of industry is to continue -- primarily, the development of the power industry, the mineral extractive and processing industry, and the engineering and chemical industries -- in order to more rapidly increase the production of the means of production, as well as the development of the production of mass consumer commodities, relying primarily on the country's own raw materials.

-- The development and intensification of agriculture is to ensure the stability and the increase in the production of agricultural and livestock products at a pace that is higher than that of the increase in the population, keeping at the center of our attention the increase in the production of bread grains and of livestock products. Structural improvements are to be made in the branches and sub-branches of agriculture to improve the diet of the population.

-- The development of industry, agriculture, and other branches of material production is to be accompanied by the elevation of the efficiency of the economy, the increased social productivity of labor, and an increase in the sources of accumulation. In order to increase the social product and the national income at a rapid pace, two roads are to be followed, the intensive and the extensive one, giving priority to the former. The complete utilization of production capacities, the implementation of the achievements of contemporary science, know-how, and technology will constitute the major actions in the securing and rational utilization of natural resources, existing basic funds, capital investments, and labor resources with a high degree of efficiency. Implementing everywhere a strict regimen of thrift in the utilization of accumulation resources, priority is to be given to the productive sphere, without in any way reducing the concern for the development of the nonproductive sphere.

-- The volume and efficiency of foreign trade is to be increased by increasing the range of commodities for export and by improving their quality, by expanding markets, and through a better utilization of circumstances in foreign markets.

-- The improvement of various facets of production relations during the eighth 5-year period will serve to open up broader avenues to the development of productive forces. It is particularly necessary to aim at the further consolidation of social property over the means of production and the improvement in the relations of the exchange and distribution of the social and personal product in accordance with work and its quality. The instruments and methods of management are to be further extended and developed, always in a socialist way and primarily in the main branches of material production. Other aspects of the organization and planned management of the economy are also to be perfected.

-- The elevation of the material and cultural standard of the working masses must always be in accordance with the material possibilities created by the economy. A rapid pace is to be ensured in narrowing the differences in the per capita income between rural and urban areas, as well as between districts, and other differences that exist in the field of the per capita consumption of major products, and in the development of education, the health service, and other vital services.

-- The deepening of the ideological and cultural revolution is to serve to temper and to train our new man, that he may respond to the great tasks confronting our socialist society at the present stage of its development, as well as in the future. Our new man must always be a worthy revolutionary activist, a resolute fighter for the cause of socialism and communism, and he must be as well trained as is possible from an ideological, political, cultural, and professional viewpoint.

-- In conformity with these major objectives, the more general indexes for the development of the economy and culture in the Eighth 5-Year Plan (1986-90) will be as follows:

	Percentage increase in 1990 compared with 1985
-- The overall social product	30-32
-- The national income	34-36
-- The overall financial income	37-39
-- Exports	43-45
-- The social labor productivity	8-10
--- Basic investments (during the eighth 5-year period as against the seventh 5-year period and for the 5 years taken together)	10-12
-- The real income per capita of the population	7-9

1. The Development of Industry

Industry is to develop during the eighth 5-year period at a more rapid pace through the utilization, primarily, of existing productive capacities, their reconstruction and modernization, and through the construction of new projects, relying entirely on the energy and raw material resources of the country and their more complete utilization. The volume of the general industrial production in 1990, compared with 1985, is to grow 29-31 percent, of which the production of the means of production is to increase 31-33 percent and the production of consumer commodities 24-26 percent.

Geological surveys and their efficiency are to be raised in order to discover new sources of oil, gas, coal, chromium, and other valuable minerals; to increase industrial and forecast reserves, primarily reserves with a high content of valuable materials; and to secure the rapid development of the heavy extractive and processing industry. The efficiency of geological work is to be raised through a better utilization of the material-technical base, as well as the use of contemporary scientific methods.

The development of the energy sector is to be given priority in order to procede and support the country's entire economic and social development and to consolidate the active balance of our energy resources. Compared with 1985, oil extraction in 1990 is to be increased 33-35 percent, while the extraction of gas is to be increased 2.5 times. The major proportion of oil extraction during the 5-year period is to be secured from the fields under current exploitation. The attention of the working people in this sector must therefore be centered on further elevation of the oil-extracting coefficient through a more widespread and highly efficient utilization of secondary intensification methods, the application of new technologies, the extension of fields, an increased density of wells in known fields, and the activation of wells in the still fund [venies ne pune te puseve te fondit te ndalur]. Particular care is to be shown to the discovery and activation of new fields, and the raising of the efficiency of drilling operations, the standard of studies, and the technical and scientific discipline. The contours of existing natural gas fields are to be extended and the coefficient of the assimilation of accompanying gas [gazit shoqerues] is to be increased. This must be given the same appreciation as is given to oil and is to be considered as an important raw material of the chemical industry.

The oil and lubricating oil refineries are to be utilized as efficiently as is possible and the quality of oil by-products is to be improved in order to increase exports and reduce imports.

Coal extraction is to be increased by 42-44 percent and its utilization is to be extended everywhere in order to replace liquid fuels. Its quality is to be maintained and improved during extraction, selection, enrichment, and transportation. The increase in coal extraction is to be achieved primarily through a more complete utilization of existing mines.

The production of electricity in 1990, compared with 1985, is to grow 71-73 percent, mainly through the hydroelectric power stations. In addition to the full-capacity utilization of the larger hydroelectric power plants, including the "Enver Hoxha" plant at Koman, the smaller plants are also to be better utilized and efforts are to be made for a better utilization of thermoelectric plants. Particular attention is to be paid to the thrifty use of electricty and efforts are to be made to find new ways and means of extending the use of electricity within the country, as well as to secure more income through its export.

The extractive industry is to be further developed through investments in order to commission new extractive capacities more rapidly and efficiently, as well as to expand existing capacities. Compared with 1985, the extraction of chromium in 1990 is to increase 33-35 percent, the extraction of copper by 39-41 percent, and the extraction of ferronickel by 27-29 percent. Care is to be shown for the extraction of new minerals like phosphorite, quartz, olivinite, rock salt, dolomite, magnesite, marble, bauxite, and so forth, in accordance with the demands of the economy and export.

The improvement of the quality of extracted minerals must remain one of the most important tasks of the working people in the mining industry. [paragraph continues]

In addition to the utilization of mineral fields with a high content of valuable components, attention must also be paid to the beneficial utilization of poorer minerals, primarily through the improvement of the coefficient of recuperation in their enrichment and by expanding mineral enrichment factories.

In the ferrous and nonferrous metallurgy sector, the level of mineral processing is to be further raised to secure as many other valuable components as is possible. Compared with 1985, the production of steel sheets in 1990 is to increase 30-32 percent, the production of copper blister 34 percent, and so forth. The range of steels is to be increased and their quality raised; the range of copper products is to be raised, for domestic consumption as well as for exports; and a perceptible improvement in technical-economic, and financial indexes is to be made.

Chemical industry production in 1990 is to be increased by 46-48 percent, compared with 1985. Production capacities are to be increased to better meet the demands of agriculture for chemical fertilizers and pesticides, and the production of calcinated soda, caustic soda, PVC, sulphuric acid, detergents, and so forth, is to be increased. Efforts will be made to produce new chemicals.

The role of the engineering industry is to be raised to a higher level, as a powerful mainstay for technical-scientific progress. Extensively using domestic steels, the engineering industry is to meet the growing needs of the economy for machinery, equipment, and complete production lines, particularly for extensions, reconstructions, and new projects. Organization and management is to be further improved through a development of cooperation, concentration, specialization, and the timely and high-quality preparation of projects.

The construction materials industry is to develop in accordance with the needs of the economy and of the people, and the quality and structure of products is to be improved through the large-scale production of light materials, and their cost is to be reduced. Existing brickyards are to be reconstructed on the basis of new technologies in order to eliminate losses and to increase the production of light bricks.

The timber and paper industry is to achieve a more complete utilization of timber and is to progress more rapidly in replacing timber with other more abundant materials. The quality and variety of paper is to be improved and thinner paper is to be produced in order to save timber and chemicals.

The production of mass consumer goods will be further developed during the eighth 5-year period in order to increasingly better meet the growing needs of the population and to overcome the relative lag existing in this field. All branches of the processing industry should make the production of consumer goods, in accordance with the required quantity, variety, and quality, their particular task. The production of furniture and household equipment, metallic, chemical, glass, ceramic products, and so forth is to be increased at a rapid pace, and technological waste is to be used more extensively to produce small and very small items.

The production of light industry in 190 is to increase 31-33 percent, compared with 1985. Existing production capacities are to be better utilized and to be extended on the basis of more advanced knowedge and technology to improve the structure, variety, and quality of products. The use of synthetic and natural raw materials is to be increasingly better coordinated and new and better quality products are to be produced in the textile, footwear, and other industries; the range of textiles is to be increased. Products of the rubber and plastic industries are to be further developed to meet the needs of the people for consumer goods and the needs of the economy for plastic packaging, spare parts, and so forth.

The foodstuffs industry is to increase its products by 27-29 percent in 1990, compared with 1985. Particular attention is to be paid to the timely collection and processing of agricultural and livestock products and to a better utilization of by-products for use in production and as livestock fodder. Efforts are to be made to improve the quality and packaging of food products.

2. The Development of Agriculture

The role of agriculture in the country's independent development is to be further raised in order to increasingly better meet the growing needs of the population, industry, and exports. This is to be achieved through the implementation of methods to develop intensification, as well as by extensively utilizing existing reserves in agriculture. To this end, the efficiency of the technical-material base is to be raised, the achievements of science, advanced experience, and new technologies are to be generalized in order to increase soil fertility and productivity in the livestock sector. Compared with the seventh 5-year period, the average annual agricultural production during the eighth 5-year period is to increase 34-36 percent.

The main task in the agricultural sector will be to more rapidly increase the production of grains and livestock products. The average annual grain production is to increase 20-22 percent. A change must take place particularly in increasing corn production, achieving a productivity increase of no less than 38 percent.

In the livestock sector, milk production in 1990, compared with 1985, is to increase 77-79 percent, meat production 52-54 percent, egg production 54-56 percent, and wool production 57-59 percent. Priority is to be given to the numerical increase of all kinds of livestock and poultry and to their breed improvement, better harmonizing the intensive and extensive ways in increasing livestock products. A radical change is to be made in meat production in livestock complexes and other fattening stations by increasing the weight of livestock. Efforts are to continue to further consolidate achievements in livestock-oriented agricultural cooperatives and further measures will be adopted to extend them.

Particular importance is to be attached to securing the fodder base for livestock. The major directions in which this is to be done are to increase yields of main fodder crops by no less than 62 percent and that of secondary fodder crops by 46 percent. Silage is to be doubled, particularly with regard to corn, and the quality of silage is to be improved through the implementation of contemporary enrichment and conservation technologies. The acreage planted with leguminous crops is to be increased 2.5-3 times; the same applies to forage crops sown in orchards and olive groves. All agricultural by-products, as well as by-products of the food industry and public catering waste are to be collected, processed, and used to feed livestock. The radical improvement of natural and other pastures is to become an important source in raising the number of livestock and in increasing livestock products.

More attention must be paid to increasing the production of industrial crops. On the basis of increased acreage and yields, the average annual tobacco production is to be increased 90-92 percent. The increased production of cotton, sugarbeet, and rice is to be achieved mainly on the basis of increased yields.

The production of potatoes, vegetables, and beans is to be increased in order to improve the diet of the population. The use of secondary crops and planting in orchards is to be doubled.

In the horticultural sector, the production of fruit is to increase 30-32 percent, the production of grapes by 42-44 percent, the production of citrus fruit by 40-42 percent, and the production of olives by 51-53 percent, compared with the Seventh 5-Year Plan and for the 5 years taken together.

Forestry acreage is to be further increased to meet the country's timber needs and to achieve a better proportion between growth and cutting. Measures are to be adopted to achieve a better utilization of by-products and to replace timber with other materials.

The material and technical base of agriculture is to be further strengthened to assure the attainment of objectives. All measures are to be adopted to raise the efficiency of objectives. All measures are to be adopted to raise the efficiency of investments effected for the desalination of coastal land, to more rapidly improve soil with a high level of acidity, and to improve the soil in hilly and mountainous areas. In addition to measures to preserve current acreage, 20,000 hectares of new land will be reclaimed during the eighth 5-year period.

Irrigation capacity is to be increased by 60,000 hectares and measures will be adopted for the maintenance of present capacities. Drainage is to be improved and the drainage network will be increased. Investments in the horticultural sector are to be effected primarily for the intensification of services in fruit plantations and particularly in olive groves. Gaps in the plantations are to be filled everywhere and the number of live trees under irrigation is to be increased.

The further development and intensification of agriculture is to be based on a better and more highly efficient utilization of chemical and organic fertilizers, agricultural machinery and equipment, and the rest of the material base, which will be further consolidated during the eighth 5-year period. Agricultural manpoer is to be used rationally and with a higher degree of efficiency. Attention is to be paid to the development of cooperatives in hilly and mountainous areas, particularly in the country's northeastern districts.

3. On Investment and Construction

In the course of the eighth 5-year period, 24-25 billion leks will be invested for the country's socioeconomic development. Investments and capital construction will be primarily effected for the development of the material production branches. The development of industry and agriculture will account for respectively 41-42 and 31-32 percent of the total volume of investments. The projects to be constructed and the order will be determined on the basis of need and profitability.

There are about 370 important production projects like the "Enver Hoxha" Hydroelectric Power Plant at Koman; the dam of the hydroelectric power complex at Banje, which will secure a quantity of water for the irrigation of 60,000 hectares in the country's lowland areas; plants for the production of nickel, cobalt, ferrochrome, lubricating oils, urea, sulphuric acid, and the doubling of the production of phosphatic fertilizers, and so forth. Some dozens of new mines and factories for the extraction and enrichment of chromium, copper, ferronickel, and coal will be built, in addition to the extension and reconstruction of existing ones. Other projects include the Klos-Bulqize viaduct, the chromium selection plant, and the Milot-Rreshen-Klos railroad, which will be completed.

Extensions will be made in the engineering, timber, and construction materials industry. Dozens of factories and new production lines will be expanded reconstructed, and constructed in the light and foodstuffs industry. [paragraph continues]

A number of important irrigation projects will also be built like the Panahor reservoir, the Boville reservoir, and so forth, and the Cukas, Peqin-Kavaje, and other canals will be reconstructed. A number of schools, medical institutions, and cultural institutions will be built.

The responsibility of investors and designers must be raised, inducing them to design projects in accordance with a strict regimen of thrift, without affecting their functional aspects or working conditions.

The use of advanced methods in calculating construction costs is to be widely extended, as will the use of local and lighter materials in construction. Measures are to be adopted to considerably reduce construction costs, ensuring that these represent as low a proportion of the cost of investment in productive projects as possible. Construction schedules are to be shortened, primarily with regard to production projects, concentrating manpower and assets and using them more rationally. Designs, cost estimates, and construction sites are to be secured on time, considerable improvements are to be made in the quality of construction and installation work, and land is to be used sparingly. Tasks should be determined to raise the degreeof mechanization in construction work.

4. The Development of Transportation, Posts, and Telecommunications

The total volume of commodity transportation in 1990, compared with 1985, is to increase 30-32 percent, while the volume of commodity transportation under the Ministry of Communications is to increase 34-36 percent. Priority is to be given to railroad and coastal maritime transportation, which are to increase respectively by 47-49 percent and 100 percent, while road transportation is to increase 18-20 percent.

The transportation sector should better meet the needs of the economy. Further measures are to be developed to limit parallel movements in commodity transportation, their regionalization and distribution, and to eliminate cross transportation. Transportation of commodities by cable car and simple means is to be expanded. Measures are to be adopted to constantly improve transportation indexes. Mechanization is to be increased in railroad stations and ports.

Postal and telecommunication services are to be further developed in accordance with the needs of the economy, also stipulating measures and tasks to further improve their quality.

5. On Foreign Trade

Compared with the seventh 5-year period, the volume of foreign trade during the eighth 5-year period is to increase 33-35 percent, while the increase of exports alone will be 43-45 percent.

All opportunities to increase exports and to improve their structure must be used. The constant improvement in the quality, packaging, and the labeling of export commodities is an important direction in this context. New and increasingly more profitable markets are to be found for our trade.

Measures are to be adopted to reduce imports and to always import the more essential commodities, improving their structure and ordering them on time. Increased efforts are to be made in every direction to replace imported commodities with domestic ones and to use imported commodities in accordance with a strict regimen of thrift.

The main task of foreign trade personnel is to sell export goods profitably and in good time, and to study markets and trends more thoroughly.

6. On the Rise of the Material and Cultural Standard of the Working Masses

The material and cultural standard of the urban and rural working masses is to be safeguarded and further elevated relying on the possibilities to be created by the development of th eeconomy during the eighth 5-year period. Real per capita income in 1990 will increase 7-9 percent over 1985, the increase being 4-6 percent in the cities and 10-12 percent in the countryside. Differences between the cities and the countryside are to be further narrowed.

Compared with 1985, retail trade in the state and cooperative sector will grow 23-25 percent. The structure and quality of mass consumer commodities in the trade network is to be improved, a regular supply is to be ensured, and per capita consumption is to be increased.

The state and economic organs are to increase their care in meeting the population's demands for consumer goods in quantity, quality, and variety, and in a steady manner in the cities and countryside; the cultural standard of trade services is to be further raised and the material-technical base of the trade sector is to be further consolidated.

The further elevation of quality and of the cultural standard of services will be a major direction of work in the communal service sector, as well as an increase in the volume and variety of services. Repair work and communal work to order for the population will rise 43-45 percent in 1990, compared with 1985. The communal services carried out by the agricultural cooperatives are to be doubled.

Measures will be adopted during the eighth 5-year period to improve the housing conditions of the population. Some 85,000 apartments and houses will be built for this purpose.

The improvements in the quantity, quality, and variety of products and services should serve to better meet the purchasing power of the population with commodities and services, to strengthen monetary circulation, and to increase the purchasing power of the currency.

In the health sector, particular attention will be paid to the further qualitative improvement of medical services and to better resolving the important problems of preventive and recovery medicine, in the cities and in the countryside. The measures to improve hygiene conditions at work and elsewhere, to protect the environment against pollution, to reduce the incidence of sickness, and to protect the health of mothers and children will be further deepened. Attention is to be paid to the further elevation of the health culture of the population, and particularly, to the health education of the younger generation.

The development of education is to respond to a higher degree to the growing demands of socialist construction and is to assume more of a mass character, leading to the general elevation of the educational and cultural standard of the broad working masses.

Preschool education is to be further consolidated, particularly in the countryside. Further improvements are to be made in the extension and content of the educational material in the 8-year schools to ensure a moral, natural transition from one form to the next. Measures are to be adopted to visibly improve the efficiency of the work done in the secondary schools, particularly in the countryside, and by 1990 the proportion of pupils coming into the secondary schools from the 8-year schools is to reach 70 percent.

The higher schools should further raise the quality of training of students and should further deepen their work concerning the extension, specialization, and integration of scientific work with that of other institutions and of the state and economic organs. Post-university qualification and specialization is to be placed on sounder scientific bases.

The qualitative standard of cultural and artistic activity is to be raised and further extended in order to serve the revolutionary tempering and education of our new man. The aim must be to ensure stability and variety in this activity, as well as its productivity and efficiency.

The great problems confronting society, the struggle of the masses in building socialism, and the progressive men of our time are to be reflected in literary and artistic creativity.

Particular attention is to be paid to the development and dissemination of culture in the countryside. Initiatives are to be stimulated in order to enrich the material base and the establishment of cultural centers.

In physical culture and sports, more rapid progress is to be made in the direction of making these a massive phenomenon and in raising their qualitative standard through the application of more advanced norms and the training of sportsmen with new methods. Major attention is to be paid to physical education in the schools and to the training of teams from early youth.

7. On the Development of Science and the Application of Advanced Knowledge in Production

Scientific work is to be further extended and deepened to achieve a qualitative growth in studies and designs, to achieve a higher degree of fruitfulness, and to become a great direct productive force, and with the aim of tackling the economic problems in breadth and width.

The major scientific forces are to be centered primarily on the application of contemporary scientific achievements, on the perfecting of existing technologies, and on the introduction of knowledge and technology, in conformity with our country's conditions. The development of science and knowledge is to be closely linked to and is to better serve the various branches of the economy and culture. Scientific work is to particularly influence the growth of production efficiency in the major sectors of the economy, on the basis of a better knowledge and utilization of the country's natural resources. It must serve the implementation of the tasks of the eighth 5-year period and open up new avenues for the country's future development.

The social sciences are to profoundly and more completely reflect the history and culture of the people, to generalize the experience of the revolution and of socialist construction, to competently tackle current problems in particular, and to throw light on the future.

Economic thinking is to tackle its tasks precisely, in order to present timely, optimal, and feasible solutions to a considerable number of problems concerning the rational utilization of society's potential, and to precede with socioeconomic processes. An increase in the advisory and operative force of economic thinking and logic is required everywhere.

The assistance of the basic sciences, which are essential to the development of applied sciences and technical progress, is to be increased. [paragraph continues]

It is necessary to aim for a broader, more complex participation by the various sciences, applying advanced study and research methods, better attracting the broad mass of production specialists in study and design work, and better utilizing the existing material-technical base.

8. On Raising the Efficiency of the Economy and Increasing Financial Resources

The efficiency of the economy is to be raised everywhere, and an increase in financial resources is to be ensured through the implementation of comprehensive measures to strengthen the regimen of thrift in material production and other social activities.

The constant reduction of production and distribution expenditure is to be ensured and viablity [rentabiliteti] is to be increased in every cell and unit of the economy. The planning and checking of live and materialized labor expenditures is to be perfected. Measures are to be implemented everywhere to achieve considerable savings in the utilization of raw and other materials through the reduction of norms. This is to be achieved through structural improvements in production, the implementation of the achievements of science and technology, and the broad dissemination of advanced experience. This is to ensure the increase in the coefficients of the valuable utilization of raw industrial and agricultural materials, the lightening of products and constructions, the reduction of waste, the widespread utilization of technological waste, and so forth.

Compared with 1985, social labor productivity in 1990 is to increase 8-10 percent, ensuring 43 percent of the increase in the social product. The full employment of new manpower is to be harmonized with the tasks concerning increased productivity in industry, construction, and other branches of the economy.

All material, organizational, technical, and social factors are to be activated to raise the social productivity of labor. For this purpose, in addition to the full utilization of existing production capacities, measures are to be adopted to improve the knowledge and technology of production and to raise the degree of mechanization. Priority is to be given to those branches where live labor occupies a relatively high proportion and to those districts where manpower resources are insufficient.

In order to achieve a considerble change in the quality of productts, construction, and services, a scientific production discipline is to be applied everywhere and control is to be strengthened at all stages of the production process on the basis of the demands of technical standards and conditions, increasing and extending their demands for increasingly higher quality. The improvement of quality is to be considered as the most important method of raising the efficiency of the social product. The internal and external trade organs are to increase their role in and influence on production in order to prevent the production of commodities of unsuitable quality and slow-moving commodities.

Economic and financial management is to be perfected in every call and financial control through banks is to be tightened to ensure that every enterprise and agricultural cooperative should secure its own accumulation and accumulation for society through its income. Measures to eliminate losses are to be developed, these being a negative phenomenon with consequences concerning the growth rate of accumulation.

A socialist attitude toward social property is to be strengthened through greater educational and persuasive work with the working people and the further strengthening of measures for its administration and protection in every call and at every level.

The preventive role of financial control for the administration of socialist property; the elimination of damage, misuse, and waste; and careful expenditure, particularly in the nonproductive sphere, is to be increased.

The efficiency of the organizational and managerial work of the state and economic organs is to be raised, struggling persistently against manifestations of empiricism, unilateralism, and globalism, and the material and financial aspects of production are to be better coordinated. The method and style of work is to be further revolutionized to better respond to the fervor and enthusiasm of the working people, relying more broadly on the line of the masses and on support for revolutionary initiatives and in the innovative movement. Socialist competition is to be further vitalized to increase production and its efficiency.

On this basis, the total national income in 1990, compared with 1985, is to increase 37-39 percent and the overall state financial expenditure is to be increased 31-33 percent.

9. The Further Improvement of Socialist Production Relations

The active role of socialist production relations in the country's overall socioeconomic development on the road of socialism and in strengthening the education of our new man with the norms of communist morality is to be increased.

The social nature of socialist property is to be raised to a higher level in its two forms, state and cooperative property, by increasing the level of the concentration, specialization, and cooperation of production and through the constant strengthening of group property in the countryside, primarily through the resources of the agricultural cooperatives themselves, as well as with the assistance of the socialist state. The priority intensification area is to be further consolidated and extended with the participation of the state in order to increase production and the efficiency of investments.

The initiative to keep small herds of livestock at brigade level is to be broadly implemented and suported and other internal reserves are to be better utilized to supply the cooperativist peasantry with livestock and agricultural produce, with the aim of ensuring that every district, economic unit, and village should meet its own needs through these products.

Measures are also to be implemented to improve distribution relations, particularly those forms of labor remuneration in accordance with the quantity, quality, and material production expenditure. Forms of remuneration are to be used, which stimulate the constant increase of the social product, particularly in the main branches of the economy and with regard to export products, and the creative and innovative thinking that furthers technical and scientific progress in production is to be stimulated materially.

Exchange relations are to be further improved and economic links between the cities and the countryside, between working class and the cooperativist peasantry, are to be strengthened. For this purpose, the economic instruments in the relations between the state and the agricultural cooperatives are to be used always correctly and efficiently, and the direct collection of agricultural products from the field is to be further extended.

The organization and planned management of the economy is to be raised to a higher scientific level, particularly in enterprises and agricultural cooperatives, these being the basic cells of our economy. [paragraph continues]

In the field of planning, measures are to be adopted to extend the independent operation of agricultural units. Economic methods are to be used more efficiently in the planned management of the economy, appreciating and using more widely the economic categories of socialism, costs, viability [rentabiliteti], finances, credits, the net centralized state income, the net income in enterprises, and so forth.

The AWP Central Committee calls on the workers class; the cooperativist peasantry; the people's intelligentsia; the communists, cadres, and specialists; all party and mass organizations; and all state and economic organs, to consider the discussion of the draft directives for the drafting of the Eighth 5-Year Plan as a great popular action with a profound political, ideological, economic, and social substance. This discussion, based on the teachings of the party and of Comrade Enver Hoxha, should serve to uncover and place in the service of the economy new reserves and possibilities, which are constantly created by our socialist economy, in order to improve production levels, the pace and proportions of economic development, and the economic and financial indicators, and to strengthen our entire socialist socioeconomic system.

The broad and active participation of the working masses of the cities and of the countryside in the discussion of the draft directives should serve to raise their enthusiasm and the degree of their mobilization, to undertake revolutionary initiatives and actions for the fulfillment and overfulfillment of the 1986 plan.

The AWP Central Committee expresses its full confidence that the working masses, under the leadership of the party led by Comrade Ramiz Alia, will crown this great popular action with success in order to go to the Ninth AWP Congress and the 45th anniversary of the founding of the AWP with new victories and achievements, furthering the cause of the revolution and socialist construction in Albania with unprecedented fervor.

DYULGEROV SPEAKS AT SOVIET FRIENDSHIP RALLY

AU151324 Sofia TRUD in Bulgarian 9 Jul 86 pp 1, 2

[Speech by Petur Dyulgerov, candidate member of the BCP Central Committee Politburo and chairman of the Bulgarian Trade Unions Central Council, at a Bulgarian-Soviet friendship rally in Plovdiv on 8 July in honor of the visiting delegation of the USSR All-Union Central Council of Trade Unions, headed by Stephan Shalayev, chairman of the Central Council]

[Text] Dear Comrade Shalayev, dear Soviet guests, citizens of Plovdiv,

We have gathered at this friendship rally to celebrate the glorious and eternal, unextinguishable Bulgarian-Soviet friendship. Our meetings with Russian and Soviet people have always been festive occasions, filled with deep emotion for us. This is so because such meetings are celebrations of our peoples' close family ties and our international fraternity. Today's meeting again can be so described. We are meeting here, on the hill of victory, where the legendary "Alyosha" monument stands on eternal guard, watching over our country.

Dear Comrade Shalayev, dear Soviet guests, on behalf of the working people in Bulgaria I welcome you most sincerely in the ancient and eternally young city of Plovdiv. The visit of the Soviet Trade Union delegation is a splended occasion for us to express once more our feelings of pride at having such glorious friends and brothers, as you, our pride at marching side by side with you along the common communist path. You are the representatives and emissaries of millions of Soviet working people, you represent the great country, which was entrusted by history with the difficult task of being the first builder of the new world of socialism and of bearing the greatest responsibility for the future of this new socialist world. There is no other nation in this world that has contributed so much to the progress of mankind, at the cost of unprecedented sacrifices.

The development of Bulgarian-Soviet friendship is the general line of the BCP, the core of its April policy. This policy line is being consistently implemented, it is conducted in a firm and unswerving manner. This is a fruitful policy for our society, a policy that is a valuable asset of the workers class, of the working people, of the entire Bulgarian nation. Wherever you go in our country, you will come across the constructive and innovative strength of Bulgarian-Soviet cooperation. There is no industrial center or large enterprise in our country that has been created without Soviet participation, or Soviet assistance. Everything that determines the image of contemporary Bulgaria is connected with the Soviet Union, it is the result of scientific-technical and economic cooperation between our two countries. The most progressive areas of the economy -- such as machine building, the power supply, the chemical, and metallurgical industries -- are considered as the most important in this connection. The production branches that are most strongly linked with the stimulation of scientific-technical progress, such as electronics, nuclear energy, automated conveyor belt lines, and systems, play a leading role in this respect.

Since the middle of the seventies our cooperation entered the stage of all-round drawing together. The current period is an epoch in which economic and intellectual life in both countries are developing at the same pace; they belong to one and the same organism, and are subject to one and the same blood circulation. Cooperation encompasses all spheres of life, it is becoming increasingly dynamic, it directly involved millions of working people. [paragraph continues]

The forms of joint work are further developing and becoming more and more varied. Here are the scales and rates of speed of our economic relations: the trade between the two countries during the Sixth 5-Year Plan period amounted to 13.5 billion leva, during the Seventh 5-Year Plan period it increased to 29 billion leva, and during the Eighth 5-Year Plan period it attained 50 billion leva, while an increase to 70 billion leva is envisaged for the period of the Ninth 5-Year Plan. Some 56 percent of our exports are delivered to the Soviet Union and this places our small country, Bulgaria, third among the USSR's trade partners. We obtain overwhelming party of the machines, raw materials, and scientific-technical assistance for Bulgaria is growing. Our integration in science and technical progress is expanding.

The Long-Term Program on the Development of Economic and Scientific-Technical Cooperation Up to 2000, which was signed by the Comrades Todor Zhivkov and Mikhail Gorbachev in 1985, opens vast opportunities for our further, comprehensive drawing together. Through the implementation of this program we are accomplishing a transition to new forms of integration. Soviet-Bulgarian scientific-production trusts of a new type have already been established and are in operation. These are enterprises with tremendous opportunities for scientific-research, drafting-designing and marketing activities.

Tremendous work is being accomplished both in our country and in the Soviet Union today as regards the implementation of the decisions adopted at the 13th BCP Congress and at the 27th CPSU Congress. Thorough changes are being implemented. The goal of such changes is to accelerate socioeconomic development, to achieve new rates by expanding the scientific-technical revolution and perfecting the methods of administration and management. The development of socialist integration is a powerful accelerator of these processes because the tasks we are assigning ourselves can be successively and promptly resolved only with the joint efforts of the scientific-technical and economic potential of the socialist countries.

It is truly a period of far-reaching changes, this epoch in which we live, comrades. We are facing the historic necessity of achieving a qualitatively new state of society. This is, above all, connected with the drastic reorganization of the material-technical base of socialism, with its technological rearmament. As Comrade Todor Zhivkov says, as a country, and as a nation we must powerfully master the scientific-technical revolution, because the logic of our era is unmistakable and inexorable, socialism has no future without all this.

That is why our party has made the scientific-technical revolution a strategy of development. Only on this basis will we be able to build up a highly effective economy, only on this basis will we be able to achieve our social goals, to march side by side with the developed countries, to actively participate in the international divison of labor, and more fully to satisfy the people's needs. Only on this basis will the tremendous economic, social, and human advantages of socialism appear and its attraction for the working people throughout the world increase.

This is the present task that has been assigned to everyone. The mastering and application of the greatest achievements of science and technical progress are becoming the basic criterion for the way in which the leaders, specialists, and workers are understanding their duties, for the way in which they contribute to the progress of their individual enterprises and of society as a whole, as well as for their own advancement. Any other criterion is inappalicable and unsuitable, it is outdated and belongs to the past. Everywhere in our country work is expanding on a large scale for the practical implementation of the scientific-technical policy conducted by the party. Numerous scientific and production collectives are involved in this great initiative. New forms of linking science to production are emerging and the initiative as well as the creative spirit of the working people are expanding. [paragraph continues]

The experience of the Plovdiv citizens is a good example in this respect. The initiatives that are being implemented in your okrug present orginal and effective solutions. On the basis of the "Technology-90" program developed in this okrug, you are now engaged in the innovation of production in all economic organizations and enterprises. The scientific-production collectives that have been established, the technological centers created for the development and transfer of advanced technologies, for the prompt application of scientific achievements, as well as the efficient forms for mass-technical creativity are strong incentives for practical work for the technological innovation of production. The things that are being accomplished in Plovdiv okrug demonstrate the businesslike approach of the leading and management organs, and of all working people, as regards the implementation of the decisions adopted by the 13th BCP Congress.

The new methods of administration and managment are playing a role of the utmost importance in the reorganization which we are engaged in. An extensive reform is taking place in our country in the management and operation of the national economy. The essence and goal of this reorganization is the effort to involve millions of working people, who, motivated by their own interests, must become directly engaged in the efficient utilization of technical equipment, materials, and manpower, in the use of all available resources. They must engage in the application of innovations, in the management of production and social development. This is a reform which replaced the former methods of management and administration by economic methods and means, a reform which places the relations in the social production process upon other scales.

From the economic point of view this is a change that gives more independence to the economic organizations and enterprises and makes the workers collectives truly responsible for the results of their activities, which stimulates them for better achievements. From the political point of view this is a change which contributes to the democratization of economic management and creates prerequisites for a transition to the working people's self-management.

These, comrades, are the glorious tasks we have to resolve. This is the difficult reorganization we are engaged in. However, no one should think that this will be accomplished easily and promptly. It is true that we do not have much time, but it commits us even more to act with great energy, resolve, and consistency. The difficulties are great, they are difficulties of all kinds, and can be found everywhere. They exist in the management organs, many of which have merged with outdated methods of work, they pertain to the search for the most efficient mechanisms in motivating the interests of the working people and in expanding the initiatives of millions of workers. The difficulties also pertain to the insufficient training of the collectives and of the working people as regards their ability to assume the responsibilities of self-management.

The role and obligations of the trade unions are very important as regards the implementation of the aforementioned changes. Scientific-technical revolution, and self-management, will both become reality only under one condition -- when the workers collectives most actively get involved and directly participate in them. This, precisely, is the basic task of the Bulgarian trade unions -- to train the working people, to involve them in active work for the technological reorganization of production, for the consistent application of new management and administrative methods.

In these new political and socioeconomic conditions, which are now being created both in Bulgaria and in the Soviet Union, the requirements as regards our cooperation with the Soviet trade unions are strongly increasing and changing. We must use all opportunities which this cooperation makes available to us for the solution of topical development problems.

We are unmistakably aware of the fact that Bulgarian-Soviet trade union cooperation must be filled with qualitatively new substance, in order to make it actively contribute to the implementation of revolutionary ideas and to the implementation of our parties' decisions. the main thing is to make everything that is new in scientific-technical progress, in management methods, and in social activities, in ideological and professional training, accessible to the working people. We must now attach primary importance to the work of joint enterprises and joint collectives of scientists and specialists, we must further develop the direct links between enterprises and scientific-technical organizations. An exceptionally important element in our cooperation is the duty to fulfill our contractual commitments at a regular pace, as regards deliveries based on production-sharing, to improve the quality of the production delivered to the Soviet union, so that it may conform to world standards, and to create models of advanced achievements.

Comrades, under the circumstances of this complicated contemporary world, there is one problem that prevails over all other problems -- namely the problem of the preservation and consolidation of peace. Peace, actually, becomes the synonym of life, because war in our present epoch means the annihilation of the earth, it means the destruction of mankind. This threat is real and close. The imperialists are quite consciously and openly pushing mankind and the world toward annihilation. This becomes quite obvious through the unprecedented inflation of military expenditures, through the programs for the militarization of outer space, through the policy of confrontation conducted by the United States and by their allies, a policy of exacerbating the international atmosphere, a policy of neoglobalism.

The Soviet Union and the socialist community countries are devoting tremendous efforts to accomplish a drastic change in this development of the international situation. They are conducting an active peace policy, which is in conformity with the aspirations of peoples throughout the world. The Soviet program for the liquidation of nuclear weapons by the end of the century, the proposals to eliminate medium-range missiles in Europe and to eliminate the danger of chemical weapons, the efforts to avert the militarization of outer space, and to reduce armaments in Europe, the unilateral moratorium on nuclear tests -- all these efforts are realistic and reliable methods for the rescue of mankind from the nightmare of war. This policy of peace enjoys the ardent support of nations and of working people, they consider it their salvation and their future. They react to the warmongering policy of imperialism with mass resistance, which involves all countries and continents, which is becoming a powerful movement of our epoch. The Bulgarian working people represent an activa and effective force of peace. Their will embodies the peace-loving poolicy of our country, which is contributing to the consolidation of the power of the socialist community, to understanding and security in Europe and throughout the world, to good-neighborly relations and cooperation in the Balkan. We stand side by side with our Soviet brothers in the frontranks of the antiwar struggle and we strongly believe that with the common efforts of the socialist countries, of the democratic and progressive movements, with the efforts of all nations, peace will be preserved.

Long live the glorious Soviet Union -- the chief mainstay of peace, democracy, and socialism throughout the world!

Let the invigorating Bulgarian-Soviet friendship live for ever!

Long live peace!

ECONOMIC TALKS WITH GDR END, PROTOCOL SIGNED

LD151828 East Berlin ADN International Service in German 1110 GMT 15 Jul 86

[Text] Sofia, 15 Jul (ADN) -- The GDR and Bulgaria will continue to deepen their economic and scientific-technological cooperation. A corresponding protocol was signed by the leaders of the delegations to the 22nd conference of the GDR-Bulgaria joint economic committee, Deputy Premiers Horst Soelle and Kiril Zarev, which ended its 2-day meeting in Sofia on Tuesday.

During his stay in Sofia, Horst Soelle was received by the Bulgarian Communist Party Central Committee Politburo member and Bulgarian Prime Minister Georgi Atanasov, for a friendly talk. During the talk, both interlocutors praised the high level of bilateral relations. They held an exchange of views on the future development of economic and scientific-technical cooperation between both countries.

This focused on the level achieved in and the tasks for the further implementation of the "Main Aims For the Expansion and Deepening of Economic and Scientific-Technological Cooperation and For the Further Development of Socialist Economic Integration Between the GDR and the People's Republic of Bulgaria in the Period up to 1990 and Prospects Beyond Then" signed by the general secretary of the SED Central Committee and chairman of the GDR State Council, Erich Honecker, and by the general secretary of the BCP Central Committee and chairman of the Bulgarian State Council, Todor Zhivkov, in June 1983 as well as the agreement between the prime ministers of both states of October 1985. It was noted in agreement that further progress was made in the implementation of these fundamental tasks.

Further conditions for the expansion of economic and scientific-technological relations between the GDR and Bulgaria were created with the coordination of the national economic plans and the conclusion of the trade agreement for the period 1986 to 1990.

The economic committee discussed the further tasks with the aim of primarily supporting the comprehensive intensification of the national economies of both countries.

There was detailed discussion of the key tasks in bilateral scientific-technological cooperation. Measures were taken in accordance with the comprehensive program of scientific-technological progress of the CEMA member states up to the year 2000 to intensify further the cooperation in the field of the key technologies, for example in biotechnology, in robot equipment and in flexible manufacturing systems.

Both sides agreed to speed up the work existing and conclude new specialization and cooperation agreements. This affects areas of machine tool and processing machinery construction, areas of electrical engineering and electronics, metallurgical as well as open cast mining and cement plant.

The economic committee noted the further stable and dynamic development in bilateral trade relations. The value of reciprocal goods supplies exceeded R1 billion in 1985 for the first time. A further increase in trade turnover was agreed for 1986. In this connection the economic committee also discussed questions of cooperation in the fields of internal trade and consumer goods trade.

SFRY ECONOMIC EXHIBITION ENDS, CONTRACT SIGNED

AU151348 Sofia BTA in English 1622 GMT 11 Jul 86

[Text] Sofia, July 11 (BTA) -- The economic exhibition of Bosnia and Hercegovina, at which 27 firms from that Yugoslav Republic were represented, was closed here yesterday. The participating companies are operating in the fields of mechanical engineering, electronics, the chemical, automotive, and light industries.

The chairman of the chamber of the economy of this Republic assessed highly the business talks held during the exhibition and the agreements reached.

A contract was signed between the Bratstvo Company and the Bulgarian Investmash on the joint production of chain tractors. Other contracts were signed in the fields of electronics, mining and electrical technology.

The Yugoslav economist noted the need to develop modern forms of economic operation through the use of joint marketing, industrial and techno-scientific cooperation.

The two countries' business circles share the view that events such as this exhibition help promote the trade between Bulgaria and Yugoslavia. The trade exchange between the two countries is expected to reach 2 billion 3000 million dollars which is 53 per cent more than the figures for the preceding period.

FOREIGN MINISTRY CONSULTATIONS HELD IN VIENNA

AU151942 Sofia BTA in English 1824 GMT 15 Jul 86

[Text] Vienna, July 15 (BTA) -- Political consultations between the Foreign Ministries of Bulgaria and Austria were held here on July 14 and 15, 1986. The two ministries were represented by Mr Lyuben Gotsev, deputy minister of foreign affairs of Bulgaria, and Mr Heribert Tschofen, head of the Political Department of the Austrian Foreign Ministry.

The participants in the talks noted with satisfaction that the Bulgaro-Austrian relations are developing in the traditional spirit of friendship and cooperation and they they correspond to the interests of the two countries and are to the benefit of peace in Europe and world-wide. It was stressed that the high level meetings between the two states also played an important role in this respect.

Emphasis was put on the great significance of the constructive proposals of the Warsaw Treaty member-states for the strengthening of peace and security on the continent.

Mr Lyuben Gotsev briefed his guest on Bulgaria's foreign policy directed at strengthening the positive trends of development of the relations between the Balkan states and emphasized upon the importance of the initiatives to turn the Balkans into a zone free of nuclear and chemical weapons.

The consultations took place in a spirit of friendship and constructiveness, characteristic also of the relations between the two states.

BCP CC CONDOLENCES ON DEATH OF LE DUAN

AU141256 Sofia RABOTNICHESKO DELO in Bulgarian 11 Jul 86 pp 1, 7

[Text] The BCP Central Committee has sent the following message to the Central Committee of the Communist Party of Vietnam [CPV].

Dear Comrades, on behalf of the Bulgarian communists and the entire Bulgarian people we express to the CPV Central Committee, the Permanent Committee of the National Assembly, the Government of the SRV, and the fraternal Vietnamese people most sincere condolences on the heavy loss -- the death of Le Duan, general secretary of the CPV Central Committee.

The Bulgrarian Communists and the entire working people of the People's Republic of Bulgaria know Comrade Le Duan as a fierce patriot and revolutionary, and a noted constructor of socialism on Vietnamese soil.

Le Duan's life was most closely connected with the struggle of the Vietnamese people for national and social liberation, and for the victory of socialism in Vietnam. Combat collaborator of Ho Chi Minh, Le Duan has a significant share in the historic victories of the Vietnamese people against the French colonizers and the American aggressors.

Under the leadership of the CPV Central Committee led by Le Duan the Vietnamese people, actively supported by the USSR and the fraternal socialist countries, achieved remarkable successes in constructing the material-technical basis of socialism in Vietnam, and in defending the country against the attacks of imperialism.

Le Duan made a great personal contribution in developing and conducting the CPV course, which corresponds to the aspirations of the Vietnamese people for a peaceful and happy life, and for freedom and independence. This course is expressed in the friendship with the USSR and the countries of the socialist community, in the striving to develop mutual understanding and cooperation among the peoples in the Asia-Pacific region, and in Vietnam's active participation in the movement of the nonaligned countries.

His merits for strengthening the unity of the fraternal socialist countries, and developing friendship and cooperation between the CPV and the BCP and between the SRV and the People's Republic of Bulgaria are remarkable. With his long-lasting revolutionary activity, devoted to constructing a peaceful, united and independent Vietnam, the glorious son of the heroic Vietnamese people and noted figure of the international communist and workers movement, Le Duan, won the respect of his people and all peoples struggling for peace, justice, democracy, and social progress.

Joining the Vietnamese people in their sorrow caused by the heavy loss, we again express our readiness to strengthen Bulgarian-Vietnamese friendship also in future. Please convey our deepest condolences also to the family and relatives of the deceased.

JOINT CZECHOSLOVAK-VENEZUELAN COMMUNIQUE ISSUED

AU151133 Prague RUDE PRAVO in Czech 11 Jul 86 p 2

[Text] Prague (CTK) -- The following Czechoslovak-Venezuelan Communique was adopted in conclusion of the official visit paid to CSSR by Simon Alberto Consalvi, minister of foreign affairs of the Republic of Venezuela:

Simon Alberto Consalvi, minister of foreign affairs of the Republic of Venezuela, paid an official visit to the CSSR on 6-10 July 1986 at the invitation of Bohuslav Chnoupek, minister of foreign affairs.

During his stay, Venezuela's minister of foreign affairs was received by CSSR President Gustav Husak and by Premier Lubomir Strougal.

The talks between the two ministers were held in a cordial and friendly atmosphere. The ministers discussed the issues of Czechoslovak-Venezuelan relations and exchanged views on the problems of the current international situation.

The two ministers appreciated with gratification the favorable development of bilateral relations, which have become further consolidated and dynamized especially following the conclusion of the trade agreement between the CSSR and the Republic of Venezuela which was signed on 30 January 1986 in Caracas.

They expressed their conviction that economic and technological cooperation and the trade between the two countries will continue to develop successfully on the basis of an even balance and mutual benefit. In this connection they came to an agreement on the need to speedily convene a session of the mixed commission.

The also exchanged views on the further development of cultural contacts between the two countries, above all by making use of the agreement on cultural cooperation which was signed on 25 October 1983.

The two ministers expressed the conviction that all states should adhere to the principles and aims of the UN Charter; and stressed the need to consolidate the United Nations so that it would consistently fulfill its role for the benefits of peace, solidarity, and cooperation between nations.

The two ministers stressed their governments' resolve to contribute to detente in the world, and to resolving the existing conflicts exclusively by means of dialogue and negotiations. They reaffirmed their conviction that all regional or world problems can be resolved by peaceful means.

They expressed their serious concern over the tense international situation and spoke in favor of halting the armament race, particularly in nuclear armament. They underscored the importance of effective negotiations, aimed at achieving disarmament agreements which would ensure a more secure and stable world. In this respect they pointed out the essential need for an agreement banning all nuclear tests, as well as for an agreement on the use of outer space exclusively for peaceful purposes. They also spoke in favor of the esential need to liquidate chemical arms. They stated that armaments races require immense resources which could be used, among other things, also for financing economic and social plans of the developing countries.

In this connection Bohuslav Chnoupek supplied detailed information on the joint initiatives of the Warsaw Pact states, particularly on the results of the Budapest session of the Warsaw Pact states' Political Consultative Committee.

The ministers confirmed that their countries unambiguously reject all forms of colonialism and racial discrimination and condemn the practices of apartheid. They again expressed solidarity with the people of Namibia, and their support for the fight which it is conducting for achieving independence. They underscored the essential need for unpostponable, joint, and effective actions of the international community in order to force the Republic of South Africa to end its illegal occupation of Namibia.

The two sides condemned terrorism in all its forms and manifestations and agreed on the essential need for international cooperation aimed at its elimination.

The Venezuelan minister of foreign affairs supplied information on the activity of the Contardora and the auxiliary groups with regard to the situation in Central America. The two ministers agreed that it is necessary to overcome the Central American crisis exclusively by peaceful means. In this context Minister Chnoupek expressed high appreciation of Venezuela's activity in the Contadora Group and again expressed the Czechoslovak government's support for the positive steps undertaken by this group for a peaceful solution and understanding in Central American.

In appraising the international situation, the two ministers pointed out with concern the serious problem of foreign debts, the falling prices of most raw materials, and the policy of protectionism. They confirmed their resolve to grant full support to the efforts aimed at achieving international economic relations based on justice, equality, and cooperation among the peoples.

They assessed the possibilities of further expanding the mutual dialogue and relations between Czechoslovakia and Venezuela; and in this connection they agreed to carry out periodical consultations on the level of deputy ministers of foreign affairs.

Simon Alberto Consalvi, minister of foreign affairs of the Republic of Venezuela, expressed thanks for the friendly and cordial reception accorded to him during his stay in the country and invited Czechoslovakia's minister of foreign affairs to visit Venezuela. The invitation was gratefully accepted.

CONTINUED REPORTAGE ON CUBAN DELEGATION'S VISIT

Talks with Obzina

LD151213 Prague CTK in English 1708 GMT 14 Jul 86

[Text] Prague, July 14 (CTK) -- Czechoslovak Deputy Premier and Chairman of the State Commission for Scientific-Technical and Investment Development Jaromir Obzina recieved here today a delegation of the Cuban Communist Party Central Committee headed by its Secretary Jaime Crombet.

They exchanged experiments from and views on a wide range of problems concerning cooperation in science, technology and the economy and spoke about the main lines of development of science and technology in their countries, focusing on the promotion of contacts in these spheres and development of new forms of economic cooperation.

The Cuban party delegation was also recieved today by Czechoslovak Foreign Trade Minister Bohumil Urban who briefed the guests on the organization and management of Czechoslovak foreign trade and its tasks in the 1986-1990 period. The guests were especially interested in Czechoslovak experiences in the application of economic tools of management in external economic relations.

Received by Sramek

LD151857 Prague International Service in Czech and Slovak 1600 GMT 15 Jul 86

[Text] In Prague today Frantisek Sramek, deputy Czech premier and chairman of the Czech Commission for Scientific-Technical and Investment Development, received Jaime Crombet, secretary of the Cuban Communist Party Central Committee.

The two representatives briefed each other on implementation of the conclusions of the Cuban and Czechoslovak party congresses. They underlined the importance of applying science and technology in the fulfillment of economic tasks in their respective countries, and they also discussed the work of the Czechoslovak-Cuban Friendship Committee.

EDITORAL STRESSES NEED FOR IMPROVED QUALITY

[Editorial: "Concentrating on Quality Indexes"]

[Text] As was reported in the press, last week the CPCZ Central Committee Presidium and the CSSR Government assessed the draft 5-year plans for the development of the national economy and scientific-technical development for the years 1986-90, as well as the draft state executive plans for next year. After the draft plans are complemented on the basis of suggestions, the entire set of plans will be submitted for discussion to the Federal Assembly. The draft plans express the demands of the 17th CPCZ Congress for an acceleration of the CSSR's social and economic development.

Although the precise texts of the above plans will not be known until the autumn, none of the enterprises or organizations may, or can, wait for this. This year's tasks in the production sphere are well known; and the entire course of the 17th CPCZ Congress has clearly shown what our national economy can expect in the Eighth 5-Year Plan. It is necessary to establish the prerequisites that are necessary for this from the very beginning.

However, the course of the fulfillment of this year's tasks to date indicates that so far not all requirements of the plan are being fulfilled and ensured with sufficient attention and effort. On the one hand we are on the whole successfully achieving the quantitative indexes; but on the other hand we are devoting far less attention to ensuring the qualitative indexes, such as for instance the growth of labor productivity and the reduction of production consumption, although their significance is undoubtedly fundamental for realizing the long-term strategy of social and economic development. Moreover, they represent the basic condition for achieving a radical change in the intensification of the national economy toward a more dynamic and efficient creation of resources.

A struggle is currently taking place between the old and the new way of thinking and approaching the solution of long-term and also topical problems, a struggle in which the inertia of the preceding long period continues to prevail in a considerable number of enterprises, but also in higher economic units, and both in management and in planning. In the ensuing clash it is impossible to reach a compromise and it is therefore unacceptable to expect the old method of production management to ensure the desirable creation of means which are essential for further improving the people's living standards, for realizing our intentions in the modernization of the production-technical base, and for resolving both the external economic relations, as well as those which are essential for consolidating the country's defense ability.

It is possible to realize the intentions of the 17th Congress solely by enforcing new approaches to the growth of the creation of our national income, the rate of which is set at 3.5 percent. This presumes that we will also ensure in new ways the increase of labor productivity and the decrease of production consumption. This requires that we energetically support the scientific-technical development and the speedy implementation of its knowledge in practice.

Does the current practice in our enterprises and organizations correspond to this?

One can name a number of them to show where this is being successfully accomplished, or at least purposefully and honestly attempted. But the tasks following the draft of the Eighth 5-Year Plan are so urgent that it is essential to link the entire production sphere without exception with the intensification process. And we must stress again that it is supremely urgent to do this without any procrastination or marking time. One thing is certain above all else: The plans cannot be, and therefore will not be, any less demanding; no part of the current demands may be dropped; one must rather count on their becoming even more progressive.

In order to create the desirable prerequisites one must carry out significant structural changes -- interbranch ones, but also intrabranch and intasector ones. What is the aim of the structural changes in favor of the processing branches mentioned above? They are primarily aimed at gradually cutting down the production's demands on materials, raw materials, energy, and investments; at strengthening the export abilities of our economy; and at better satisfying the needs of the domestic market in terms of quality. It is already sufficiently known that on the one hand we have a demand for a striking growth of the share of engineering in industrial production, while at the same time the electrical engineering industry is charged with ensuring the highest dynamics; and on the other hand we have a gradually decreasing share of fuel and energy branches, of metallurgy, of the chemical industry, and of the production of building materials.

The intra-enterprise structural changes, for instance in fuels and energy, are counting on a growing production of electric power from nuclear resources; metallurgy is counting on an increasing share of high-grade steel; and chemistry on the development of its small-volume and sophisticated components and of pharmaceutical production. However, the current approach to ensuring the above tasks is not quite satisfactory. Thus, for instance, the metallurgical production is counting on a negligible decrease of overall production and on an insignificant increase of top-quality production, although a more marked progress in the two productions would undoubtedly lead to final products of a higher quality. These examples, and there are others, can prove that we are not so much concerned with the economy of a single branch as with a far more significant impact on improving the quality of production in the processing branches.

The intensification of the national economy must be understood not only from the viewpoint of quality indexes, but also from the viewpoint of qualitative ones, and that in first place. In brief, intensification does not mean producing more at any price; it means producing more efficiently, profitably, thriftily, and in better quality. The thing is that a high quality and a smaller quantity of production should satisfy the present and future needs of society in a better and more comprehensive manner. This applies to all branches of national economy without exception.

This can be achieved only by means of a high quality of all work, of all activity. This is one of the essential conditions for accelerating socioeconomic development. The realization of this conduction totally depends on the people; even the best material-technical prerequisites cannot yield the desired results without the well-considered, rational, and innovationist activity of the people.

That is why one so often speaks of the need for a new way of thinking and of how essential it is to have new approaches. The need to speed up socioeconomic development forces us to search for new ways of uncovering reserves. The intensification factors exist not only in places where there is new machinery or technology, but in every workplace. One of the factors of the new ways of thinking and of new approaches is precisely the ability to find these factors and to make use of them. And if it becomes obvious in the fulfillment of the tasks of this year's plan that work is not succeeding in some place, then this is due -- apart from other things -- to the fact that the economic managers have not rid themselves of old approaches to the solution of problems and are still ruled by inertia; and to the fact that they believe that nothing can be improved without submitting new demands for imports or investments.

In discussing the draft Eighth 5-Year Plan, the CPCZ Central Committee Presidium and the CSSR Government stressed that one of the decisive prerequisites for achieving the set goals is to improve management and organizational work, to thoroughly acquaint oneself with the demanding tasks of the plan, and to discuss their realization with all working people. At the same time they underscored the essential need to concentrate attention on the fulfillment of this year's tasks, particularly in the quality indexes.

As the saying goes, all's well that ends well. However, in order that the Eighth 5-Year Plan may end well, a great deal depends on how it begins this year. None of the tasks may remain unfulfilled; none of the possibilities may remain unused. All the efforts of the economic managers must be aimed at this; it is toward this that we must orient the broad development of the working people's activity and initiative, aimed particularly at achieving high efficiency and thrift.

REPORT ON CPCZ CONTROL, AUDIT COMMISSION MEETING

[CTK report: "CPCZ's Central Control and Audit Commission Meetings; Implementing More Effective Methods of Work"]

[Text] The third session of the CPCZ's Control and Audit Commission was held in Prague yesterday [1 July]. The meeting was presided over by the commission's chairman, Jaroslav Hajn.

The commission discussed a report on a review of how communist ranking personnel and the party organization at the CSSR Ministry of Electrotechnical Industry have been fulfilling the resolutions of the 8th and the 10th sessions of the CPCZ Central Committee, particularly from the viewpoint of scientific-technical development and capital construction.

From the report it arose that the volume of the sector's production substantially increased in the Seventh 5-Year Plan. The production of computer, control, investment, and consumer electronics increased in particular. This has created conditions for a more extensive utilization of electronics and microelectronics in the national economy.

At the same time, the check revealed the need to improve the work on the concept of the electrotechnical industry's development, to more markedly concentrate means and resources on resolving tasks connected with technical development, and on modernizing and restructuring the production base. This requires a considerable improvement in the planning, management, and control activity of the ministry's ranking personnel, a more exacting assessment of proposed solutions, deeper coordination between individual sectors and branches, increased responsibility, and a comprehensive and specific evaluation of the results that are being achieved, including drawing conclusions from the nonfulfillment of tasks.

In the party organization it also is necessary to implement more effective methods and forms of work; and by a critical and specific assessment of results that are being achieved in the fulfillment of party and economic tasks at meetings of the all-plant committee, and membership and committee meetings of the CPCZ primary organization, to help to improve the activity of the ministry's apparatus.

The further dynamic development of the electronics industry requires much more flexibility in creating the necessary conditions also in other branches that ensure, in particular, the required materials and components for production, technical and investment development, or are to participate in the solution of the electronic industry's development.

The commission further dealt with an analysis of appeals against party punishment, dealt with by the CPCZ's Control and Audit Commissions in 1985, reviewed selected sectors of the CPCZ press enterprises' management, and reviewed how letters were dealt with by the editorial office of the ZIVOT STRANY periodical.

REPORT ON CSSR CIVIL DEFENSE ANNIVERSARY

Official on Radiation Shelters

AU141314 Bratislava PRAVDA in Slovak 12 Jul 86 p 2

[Interview given by Colonel Jozef Kovacik, chief of staff of the Civil Defense of the Slovak Socialist Republic, to Bratislava PRAVDA Staff Journalist Bernard Rostecky "On the Occasion of the 35th Anniversary of the Founding of CSSR Civil Defense": "The Civil Defense Creed: To Guard Peaceful Mornings;" place and date of interview not given]

[Excerpts] [Passage omitted] [Rostecky] Civil defense represents a highly organized system, which continuously develops in accordance with latest knowledge. To get a better idea of civil defense, could you briefly sketch its development?

[Kovacik] At the time of its founding, civil defense was built with a view to protection against conventional weapons and poisonous combat devices. It ensured protection against massive aerial bombardment. Emphasis was put on important cities and factories. Gradually, a transition was made from the local, fixed-point approach to the real solution of the protection of the entire CSSR territory against all types of weapons, with emphasis being placed on mass destruction weapons. [passage omitted]

Making use of the experiences of the USSR civil defense, we have succeeded in building in our country a modern system of civil defense that is ready to discharge its duties not only in the event of threat but also under conditions of peace, in eliminating the consequences of natural disasters and large-scale operational accidents. Great demands are currently being placed on protection of the population, on increasing the power of the national economy to withstand adversity, on scientific and research institutes. This means, in practical terms, that we must seek and create alternative sources of nutrition, solve the question of supplying water and energy of all types, and the like. These demanding tasks are being fulfilled by our research institutes -- the Research Institute of Civil Defense and a number of research institutes of the Czechoslovak and Slovak Academies of Sciences and individual ministries. [passage omitted]

[Rostecky] Which tasks arise for the CSSR Civil Defense and the civil defense staff in the Slovak Socialist Republic from the resolutions of the 17th CPCZ Congress and the CPSL Congress?

[Kovacik] The relevance of the tasks being ensured and dealt with by the CSSR Civil Defense stems from the deliberations of the 17th CPCZ Congress and the CPSL Congress. On the basis of a scientific analysis of the international military-political situation and the trends of its development in the eighties, the congress showed that the further building of a developed socialist society must be combined not only with a consistent peace policy but, at the same time, with constantly paying heed to reinforcing the defense of our socialist homeland. In the spirit of the Leninist principle of unity between building and defending socialism, the activity of civil defense must develop at the level of requirements commensurate with the conditions of contemporary warfare. The crucial role in ensuring a reliable defense of our state defense activities, consolidating the moral and political unity of the people, enhancing their attitude to ensuring the defense capability of the state, and on consistently applying class principles and internationalist approaches in dealing with all questions connected with defense. We also consistently implement the resolution of the CPCZ Central Committee Presidium of 1981 "On Comprehensively Perfecting the System of CSSR Civil Defense." We continue to regard finding safe shelters for the population as the main method of its protection now and in the future. [paragraph continues]

In coordination with state and economic agencies of the Slovak Socialist Republic, regions, districts, and localities, we therefore consistently carry out the construction of mostly multi-purpose shelters for the population, according to set principles and in accordance with resources allocated for individual years of the Eighth 5-Year Plan. Measures connected with this are being implemented in a differentiated manner, according to the assumed degree of endangerment of individual localities in the Slovak Socialist Republic. We are already establishing suitable conditions for protecting the entire population of the Slovak Socialist Republic in anti-radiation shelters. These shelters are being built from local resources by the population, in the form of self-help. [passage omitted]

[Text] Colonel General Milan Vaclavik, minister of national defense, received civil defense representatives today in Prague on the occasion of the 35th anniversary of the establishment of our civil defense service. Lieutenant Colonel Josef Marusak, deputy minister of national defense and the chief of Civil Defense, gave a report on topical tasks of civil defense units and staffs. Minister Milan Vaclavik then stressed that the complicated military and political situation calls for a continuous improvement in the preparedness of the Armed Forces and the creation of conditions for the realization of essential measures to protect the lives of the population. He highly praised the results achieved in combat and political preparation and in the people's readiness.

BRATISLAVA PRAVDA VIEWS MITTERRAND-GORBACHEV TALKS

LD111046 Prague CTK in English 0732 GMT 11 Jul 86

[Text] Bratislava July 11 (CTK) -- "The talks between the highest representatives of the Soviet Union and France in Moscow can be characterized as a very fruitful and constructive political dialogue which will undoubtedly have a positive influence not only on the atmosphere of bilateral relations of the two states but on the overall improvement of the international situation".

This point was stressed by the Slovak daily PRAVDA today.

It pointed out that "the talks confirmed that the two countries have identical goals in many foreign-political questions. It is necessary to appreciate France's stand on the question of the SALT II treaty which is in sharp contrast to the decision of the U.S. Administration to scrap this treaty on the limitation of strategic aggressive weapons. Of great importance is an agreement of the two countries on cooperation at the Geneva conference on disarmament in working out documents on the liquidation of chemical arsenals in Europe".

"Though there are still many questions to be replied, the visit of French President Francois Mitterrand to the Soviet Union fulfilled its purpose. It contributed to the continuation and activation of a dialogue between the countries having different social systems in Europe in the spirit of the conclusions of the Helsinki Final Act. It has become an impulse which should not be an exception in the present tense international situation", the daily stressed in conclusion.

MISSION IN BONN PROTESTS DETENTION OF CITIZEN

LD151838 East Berlin ADN International Service in German 1747 GMT 15 Jul 86

[Text] Berlin, 15 Jul (ADN) -- Lothar Glienke, acting head of the GDR's permanent mission in the FRG, lodged a strong protest today at the FRG Federal Chancellor's Office about a provocatory act by the FRG secret service (BND) against Professor Herbert Meissner, deputy secretary general of the GDR Academy of Sciences. During a business trip to West Berlin, Professor Meissner was arrested under false charges, taken forcibly to Munich and held and interrogated there by the FRG's BND. The BND confiscated his diplomatic passport and personal papers. Professor Meissner was to be forced into betraying the GDR by means of pressure and blackmail measures. However, he was able to escape from his guards and went to the GDR permanent mission in Bonn in order to secure his personal safety.

The GDR permanent mission has demanded that the Federal Chancellor's Office should immediately guarantee the return of Professor Meissner to the GDR and that his passport and personal papers should be returned.

SOVIET AMBASSADOR VISITS MACHINE TOOL COMBINE

LD152226 East Berlin Voice of GDR Domestic Service in German 1505 GMT 15 Jul 86

[Excerpt] This morning a very special factory floor meeting took place at the parent enterprise of the "7 October" machine tool combine in Berlin. Soviet Ambassador to the GDR Vyacheslav Kochemasov conveyed a letter from Mikhail Gorbachev, general secretary of the CPSU Central Committee, to the apprentices of the enterprise vocation school. Heidrun Buschel reports:

The Soviet ambassador was received by apprentices and teachers in the training workshop, where export machinery for grinding gear-wheels is produced and future skilled workers start on their path through the enterprise. First, Director-General of the combine Heinz (Warzich) recalled Mikhail Gorbachev's cordial meetings during the 11th SED Congress with workers at the "7 October" parent enterprise and the fact that the general secretary was particuarly interested in the training of future skilled workers. The apprentices presented him with their commitments in the vocational training competition and today Ambassador Kochemasov duly brought them the reply.

[Begin Kochemasov recording in Russian with superimposed German translation] Dear friends, I learned with interest of the great and resolute work carried out by your vocational training school in training the next generation of builders of socialism and in fulfilling production targets. It is very important that this work is (?similar to), the ideas and decisions of the recent congresses of our two fraternal parties. I am glad that these ideas and tasks have become points of orientation in your life and in your work. The participation of the school's collective in social life undoubtedly results in the education of young people as active builders and defenders of their socialist fatherland, in the spirit of the internationalist and militant traditions of the working class. The fact that you devote much attention to the strengthening of solidarity and friendship with the Soviet Union and cultivate many-sided contacts with Soviet people also produces a feeling of deep satisfaction. The new generation must carry on the work of the older comrades and strengthen this friendship, which represents a great achievement of the communists of the USSR and the GDR and the peoples of our countries. [Text] A central course for agricultural youth secretaries of the FDJ began in Schwerin today. Werner Felfe, member of the Politburo and SED Central Committee secretary, spoke in his introduction about the tasks set by the 11th SED Party Congress for agriculture to supply the population and industry in a stable and increasingly improved way. It is necessary to this end to make this area increasingly a branch of applied science. The use of key technologies, of biotechnology and microelectronics, offer a wide field for work, particularly to young people. Werner Feife thanked the FDJ for taking on 189 agricultural producer partnerships. More than 3,000 young people are thus making a contribution to exploiting reserves. The same aim is pursued by the numerous initiatives in livestock management and in foodstuffs, in the construction of rationalization means and in the "Healthy Forest" action. Werner Felfe then talked about the development of more beautiful villages and said that more than 4,200 apartments for young families are to be renovated with the help of the FDJ.

HONECKER SENDS CONDOLENCES ON LE DUAN DEATH

[Message from Erich Honecker, SED Central Committee general secretary and GDR State Council chairman, to the Central Committee of the Communist Party of Vietnam]

[Text] Central Committee of the Communist Party of Vietnam [CPV] Hanoi

Dear comrades!

The SED Central Committee, the communists, and the entire people of the GDR convey to the Central Committee and the members of the CPV, the fraternal Vietnamese people their sincere sympathy on the death of Comrade Le Duan, CPV Central Committee general secretary.

We mourn with the Vietnamese people an outstanding party functionary, an ardent patriot, a proven Marxist-Leninist and internationalist who faithfully continued the cause of Ho Chi Minh and who is highly respected and valued in the first German worker-peasant state.

The life of Le Duan was filled with untiring work and devotation to the cause of socialism. Even in the years of his childhood and youth he actively participated in the revolutionary movement. He became a member and functionary of the CPV at an early stage. Neither imprisonment nor exile could break him. His rich knowledge, his great experiences, his close ties with the workers and peasants of Vietnam made him a highly regarded leader of our fraternal Vietnamese party and a respected functionary of the international commucnist and workers movement.

The victory of the Vietnamese people in the heroic struggle against the American aggressors is inseparably linked with the work of Le Duan at the head of the CPV.

Comrade Le Duan contributed considerably to the course of socialist construction under the conditions of peace and the unity of the country founded by the Fourth CPV Congress. Since then the fraternal Vietnamese people have achieved significant results in building the socialist social order and in the struggle for peace and security under the leadership of the party.

With each step forward, socialist Vietnam could count on our country's fraternal aid and support. In accordance with the treaty on friendship and cooperation, the GDR will continue the tested course of close cooperation of our states, united in the socialist community, also in the future.

Till the last hour of his militant life Comrade Le Duan worked for his party, his people, for our joint cause. The communists and the people of the GDR will always honor the memory of their loyal friend and comrade.

SINDERMANN RECEIVES CHURCH LEADER

LD151849 East Berlin ADN International Service in German 1551 GMT 15 Jul 86

[Text] Berlin, 15 Jul (ADN) -- The constructive and committed contribution by Christians throughout the whole world in the struggle to preserve peace was praised by GDR People's Chamber President Horst Sindermann. In a talk with Dr Emilio Castro, general secretary of the World Council of Churches, in Berlin today, Horst Sindermann emphasized that the danger of the destruction of our planet by a nuclear inferno makes new thinking necessary. Cooperation between peoples through a policy of dialogue and the settlement of all disputes by negotiation must take the place of arms drive and confrontation.

There was agreement between Christians and Marxists that the spread of the arms race into space, as planned by the SDI program in particular, must be energetically opposed. The most urgent task of the present is to stop all nuclear weapons tests with the purpose of developing ever new weapons with even greater destructive power. Reagan commands that the United States should join the moratorium introduced by the Soviet Union in this respect.

The talk focussed on the opportunity for and the necessity of cooperation between all political and social forces of goodwill, irrespective of their ideology and religion.

Dr Castro, who is in the GDR for a conference of the World Council of Churches, spoke about the council's work plans, above all the implementation of the ecumenical study and action program "Peace, Justice, and the Preservation of the Whole of Creation". This program was based on the conviction that under present-day conditions the preservation of peace is indivisibly linked with the problems of social justice and preservation of the natural environment of mankind.

PPF'S KALLAI ADDRESS AT LEKAI FUNERAL

AU141335 Budapest MAGYAR NEMZET in Hungarian 9 Jul 86 p 3

[MTI report on speech by Gyula Kallai, chairman of the PPF National Council, at the funeral of late Cardinal Laszlo Lekai, in Esztergom on 8 July: "Gyula Kallai's Farewell Speech"]

[Text] Gyula Kallai, chairman of the PPF National Council, addressed the participants at the funeral and said the following:

"We are bidding farewell with deep sorrow, sincere respect and with reverence to Cardinal Laszlo Lekai, archbishop of Esztergom and chairman of the Hungarian Catholic Episcopate. Like every farewell, this is very difficult. This is proven by this funeral, organized in this huge square where thousands of people have gathered to express their condolences. We have come here too, the representatives of our state and public organizations, to express our condolences and our sympathies at Laszlo Lekai's coffin on behalf of the Presidential Council and Government of the Hungarian People's Republic, the PPF National Council, and on behalf of our entire nation.

"With the death of Laszlo Lekai, an outstanding leader of the Hungarian Roman Catholic Church has made his exit from among the living. In his person, we are bidding farewell to a pontiff who represented the interests of his church, his people, and his nation all his life. He endeavored to enhance the prestige of Hungarian Catholicism and the good reputation of our country both at home and abroad. He not only preached but also practiced this service. True Christian humanism emanated from his person and in all his appearances he spoke of man's joys and problems. As a man of high erudition living in the reality of today's Hungarian society, this was the starting point of all his actions.

"He had a hard life. He had learned the meaning and content of one of our most beautiful words already in his youth, or even in his childhood -- work. His parents were workers and later, in remembrance of his roots in his high clerical position, he immortalized the emblem of his father's potter's trade in his mottos as cardinal. In addition to his family symbol, he also formulated another beautiful truth of universal validity. He believed that 'the pruned tree would bloom'. This allegory refers not only to the past of churches but also to the stormy past of our people and our nation.

"The storms of centuries have often maltreated our country and nation and evil hands have sometimes attacked even their vital roots. Nevertheless, we had enough strength to make the flourish again. More than that: this allegory contains another great lesson too. This revival was always the richest when we cared for and cherished our pruned trees with joint forces and with common will. Using Cardinal Laszlo Lekai's example, the same occured also in our most recent history.

"Laszlo Lekai headed his ideological community, the largest religious community in Hungary, the Roman Catholic Church, for 10 years. This is not a very long time but from the viewpoint of creative work it is equivalent to several decades. He deeply understood and accepted the social and political efforts of the Hungarian people and actively contributed to their implementation. During these years, he became inseparable with his people and his religious community and he also proved to be not only an outstanding church leader but also an outstanding secular and public leader, a true patriot. That is why the entire working Hungarian people, irrespective of ideological conviction, bow with respect and reverence in front of his coffin.

"The life and activity of our great departed is full of parables that give us food for thought. He often used the word: 'reality'. This world had a particular ring. In his concept, this word meant that one had to deal also with the affairs of this world and understand the world we were living in. Hundreds of millions of people on five continents are striving for peace and to create a happier and more beautiful world, and one cannot disregard this desire of mankind. He professed that the sons and daughters of his church were also men of flesh and blood with earthly needs, desires and wishes just like all other people. At long last they want to emerge from the centuries of misery and spiritual darkness. They want to earn their everyday bread and butter and to be able to enjoy the beauty of life, to be able to live a life worthy of a human being with other people in brotherly love, peace, and happiness. He also recognized that, as in many other countries in the world, in Hungary too this desire of mankind was being realized for the first time by the socialist social systems, and his place, as leader of the Roman Catholic Church in Hungary together with his flock of believers, was among these systems.

"Laszlo Lekai had a great role in that the relations between state and church in Hungary have been unclouded for a long time now. Our Constitution guarantees every Hungarian citizen freedom of religion. Our state fulfill its task: It guarantees its citizens' freedom of conscience and protects them from disturbances and at the same time demands of everyone -- both believers and nonbelievers -- that they respect our laws. This mutuality expresses the interests of both the state and the church. The fact that such a commendable cooperation and partnership could be established between the state and the churches is due not only to our efforts and our firm activity. The heads of the Hungarian churches, who made a considerable contribution with their own activity to the development of these good relations, also played a role of historical importance in this.

"Laszlo Lekai also supported the rapprochement between various churches. Two years ago, under Cardinal Lekai's chairmanship, there was for the first time in the history of our country a meeting in which the representatives of churches and denominations in Hungary participated. In the course of his 10 years as primate and chairman of the Hungarian Catholic Episcopate, he created an epochal life's work for both his church and our nation. He outlined and laid the foundations of the road on which his church and its believers can and must advance in the future too.

"It is not my task to praise Laszlo Lekai's church policy activity as priest and pontiff. However, I am all the more obliged to mention a few words about his activity in public life. He was a member of the Presidium of the PPF National Council. Both he and we regarded his participation in the highest bodies of our movement as a great honor. He considered it important to express his opinion concerning the issues on the agenda of these bodies, and to say what he considered bad and good. No matter what the issue was under discussion, there were always plenty of worthy observations and useful proposals from the gold mine of his huge knowledge and rich experience. It is understandable from his life's mission that he dealt first of all with our people's moral problems. During the PPF congresses and the PPF National Council meetings, he called our attention to the lessons of our history and to the need to preserve and increase the moral values of our people; he also called our attention to the weakening of human relations, the alarming signs of disease in family life, the issues of population increase and the material and moral issues of youth, and the problem of caring for the old and the sick. All this was epitomized in an impressive moral unity by his care and active readiness for the peaceful present and future of mankind.

"Now, we bid him a painful farewell. He was still present a few weeks ago at the latest meeting of our Presidium and we were able to shake hands. Who would have thought at that time that that would be our last meeting. I think that already we all miss his friendly smile, engaging manner, his convincing and intelligent words, and the humanism emanating from his every movement. This is the way we who have known him and were able to work with him for many years will remember him. We will make sure that those who are able to recall his noble figure only from the pages of history will remember him that way too.

"On behalf of the Presidential Council and the Government of the Hungarian People's Republic, the PPF movement, and on behalf of our entire people, I sincerely hope that Laszlo Lekai will rest in peace after the conclusion of a life rich in work and struggle, and will continue to live in the memory of our nation!"

MITTERRAND-GORBACHEV MEETING 'DIALOGUE OF HOPE'

LD111042 Warsaw PAP in English 0955 GMT 11 Jul 86

[Text] Warsaw, July 11: Today's TRYBUNA LUDU called the Moscow talks between Mitterrand and Gorbachev as a "dialogue of hope", stating: "Generally, the French response extends support to Soviet disarmament and political efforts aimed at improving international relations. There are no differences between the Soviet Union and France on the issues of consolidating friendly relations in the field of political, economic, scientific and technological cooperation. The Soviet-French dialogue has confirmed that relations between the two states are based on strong historical and geopolitical grounds.

"In Moscow, Mitterrand avoided political statements which could have suggested his role as a mediator in Soviet-American deliberations on the superpowers' second summit. However, his point of view on the entirety of East-West relations leaves no doubt that he is for the summit, which will bring success and will not be just a shield for the American policy of arms race, also in outer space."

SOVIET BALTIC FLEET DELEGATION ARRIVES IN GDANSK

[Report by Andrzej Trojanowski]

[Excerpts] A delegation from the Soviet Baltic Fleet arrived in Gdynia today for a 4-day visit. A welcoming ceremony took place on the Pomorz wharf near the Blyskawica Kuseum ship. [passage omitted] The delegation is headed by the Soviet Baltic Fleet Commander, Vice Admiral Vitaliy Ivanov. [passage omitted] Navy Commander, Rear Admiral Piotr Kolodziejczyk welcomed the Soviet delegation.

[Begin Kolodziejcyk recording] The command of the Soviet Baltic Fleet is paying its first official visit to our Navy on Polish territory. However, this is not our first contact, for we already have many contacts, working contacts behind us. Joint action and fraternity have been raised to an appropriate level and have been appropriately deepened. The first half of the year has yielded very good results. This is certainly connected with the 27th CPSU Congress and the 10th PZPR Congress. I once again would like to welcome, very warmly and cordially, the Soviet Baltic Fleet delegation led by Admiral Ivanov on our Polish land. [end recording]

The Soviet guests met with the voivodship authorities and employees of the USSR Consulate General in Gdansk today. The delegation members also visited the heroes of Westerplatte Naval Academy in Gdynia, as well as premises of the Flota military sport club. The schedule of the 4-day visit also includes the laying of wreaths beneath the Westerplatte Monument, the cemetery-mausoleum of Soviet soldiers in Gdansk, and, moreover, a visit at the Nauta Repair Yard in Gdynia.

Also diplomats from socialist and other foreign countries signed the book of condolences.

CUBAN YOUTH BRIGADE CONCLUDES MONTH-LONG VISIT

LD151239 Warsaw PAP in English 1851 GMT 14 Jul 86

[Text] Warsaw, July 14: The 3rd Carlos Roloff-Mialowski Brigade of Cuban youth ended their visit to Poland after nearly a month of meetings with their Polish peers, learning the country, its tradition, and history. Today, they met with representatives of the Polish-Cuban Friendship Society.

"The stays of the 3rd Cuban Brigade in Poland and of the 4th Polish Brigade in Cuba mark another stage in the materialization of the initiative of our states' leaders, Fidel Castro and Wojciech Jaruzelski," commander of the Cuban Brigade Elda Garcia Garcia told PAP.

"We are impressed by Warsaw and its historical monuments restored to their previous beauty. We saw tremendous care for the national culture in all Polish provinces. It was a month of intensive work for us, of many meetings at which we were warmly and cordially welcomed. We are leaving many friends here," Elda Garcia Garcia said.

POLITBURO DISCUSSES IMPLEMENTING PARTY TASKS

LD110859 Warsaw PAP in English 0110 GMT 11 Jul 86

[Text] Warsaw, July 10 -- At its first session on July 9 following the 10th PUWP Congress the PUWP CC Political Bureau discussed the key conclusions stemming from the Central Committee report, the discussions, resolutions and programme of the PUWP and the final address of the PUWP CC first secretary. The weight and urgency of the tasks arising from these documents call for their immediate implementation.

One of the key conditions for the successful realization of the goals set forward by the congress is the popularization of its substance and decisions, reaching specific milieus with them, winning over working people to actively join well organized conscientious work for the good of Poland and all Poles. All that is undertaken by the party should be comprehensive and should win the support of the working class and milions of working people.

Along with the government Presidium the Political Bureau made a preliminary review of the concept and methodology of the implementation of the resolution in various fields of life. The Political Bureau decided to compile, with the participation of experts and specialists from numerous milieus and socio-economic walks of life, a uniform timetable for the realization of the 10th Congress' decisions. Significant motions voiced during the pre-congress campaign will also be reviewed.

Special attention was paid to the careful and thorough elaboration of the draft plan, announced in the report and adopted by the congress, to review organization structures and work posts in the whole state through the use of the attestation method. This extensive undertaking cannot be a one-time, spectacular campaign.

A party-government commission will be founded for reviewing and modernizing economic and state organizational structures and work posts. It will be composed of outstanding theorists and practitioners, political activists and representatives of socio-professional associations. It will programme and coordinate further work.

The Political Bureau stated that the tasks arising from the resolutions of the 10th PUWP Congress significantly upgraded the criteria in relation to managerial cadres on all levels and lifted the degree of professional and socio-moral responsibility. The tasks require increased efforts, innovatgion in work methods, especially in organizing the activities of workers' teams.

Those who find out that the new tasks and harsher requirements are beyond their possibilities should, on their own initiative, give a chance to those whose activity, energy and traits of character create a guarantee of shouldering heavier duties, a chance for bright, dynamic people who have not always been noticed thus far.

The political Bureau underscored the need for the party's special concern for the development and higher quality of ideological work. The principle of openness of public life will be strengthened. Concrete and constructive criticism of negative phenomena in all fields of life and of subjectively conditioned negligence should be strengthened in propaganda. At the same time organizational innovation, outstanding individual achievements and people of good work should be propagated to a greater degree than before.

The increase in democracy in all of social life and difficult and responsible congress tasks call for greater discipline of implementation. Party members should lead the way in this respect.

The progressing political stability and processes of agreement, measurable and noticeable economic achievements, though not sufficient and not satisfactory, constitute positive premises for the acceleration of Poland's development rate. Being convinced that the good of the motherland is the highest common value the Political Bureau and government presidium call on all citizens to contribute, according to their best knowledge, abilities and will to act, to the common good while implementing the vision of the 10th PUWP Congress of a thrifty, modern and law abiding Poland.

The Political Bureau approved the programmatic and organizational provisions of the 2nd CC Plenum to be held this month and to discuss the party's tasks in popularizing and putting to effect the resolutions of the 10th PUWP Congress.

POLITBURO EXAMINES DOCUMENTS FOR SECOND PLENUM

LD152218 Warsaw PAP in English 2047 GMT 15 Jul 86

[Text] Warsaw, July 15: The PUWP CC Political Bureau met here today to discuss documents for the second plenum of the CC, to be held July 24. The Political Bureau analysed concepts of implementation of the 10th Congress resolutions and tasks to be undertaken in the near future, presented by secretaries of the CC responsible for respective fields of activity, and decided to work out a complex plan of implementation of congress resolutions. The plan will be presented at the third plenum of the CC. The Political Bureau recommended that CC departments, ministries and central institutions conduct a detailed analysis of proposals and motions presented during the pre-congress campaign and during the 10th Congress discussion and next inform movers on positions taken on those issues.

STATE COUNCIL ACTS ON PZPR CONGRESS DECISIONS

LD101835 Warsaw Domestic Service in Polish 1700 GMT 10 Jul 86

[Text] In our news summary we mentioned the session of the State Council; here are more details on the subject.

The impact of the 10th PZPR Congress decisions have been discussed by the State Council. The decisions were adopted, and a schedule setting forth the methods and deadlines for the implementation of appropriate tasks was accepted. The State Council deems it particularly important to strengthen the people's councils and the whole system of local self-government. Provision is made, inter alia, for a substantial expansion in the range and scope of public consultation of planned solutions that are of real importance to the population. The jurisdiction of the councils at all levels, as well as their independence in the sphere of local planning and financial management, will be increased.

Consideration was given to the establishment, under the State Council and in accord with the PRON of a public consultative council. This would serve to broaden area accord, exchange of views, and coordination and formation of opinion in matters of substantial public importance.

The State Council recommended that the people's councils consider the tasks defined by the 10th PZPR Congress and determine practical ways in which to implement them in the specific conditions of the voivodship, city, district, and parish.

An appraisal was made of the work of controllers in the Workers' and Peasants' Inspectorate. The need for constant concern for their public prestige and for a climate favoring their work, especially at the work place, was pointed out.

Guided by humanitarian considerations, the State Council resolved to present to the Sejm an initiative on the endorsement of a bill on special procedures concerning certain types of criminals. The bill, which was initiated by PRON, is designed to make it possible for the perpetrators of certain crimes against the interests of the state, as well as less serious common civil offences, to return to normal life and work.

PLANNING COMMISSION EVALUATES CENTRAL ANNUAL PLAN

LD152248 Warsaw PAP in English 2113 GMT 15 Jul 86

[Text] Warsaw, July 15: Implementation of the National Socio-Economic Plan (NPSG) for 1983-1985, evaluation and proposals concerning the economic reform and assumptions of the central annual plan for 1987 came under discussion at a plenary meeting of the government Planning Commission here today [15 July] with the participation of economic and socio-political activists and scientists.

The discussion focused on defining the most proper way of implementing decisions of the 10th PUWP Congress, which assume introduction of the "second stage of the reform", namely, the acceleration of the process of achieving the economic equilibrium, boosting the effectiveness of economic-financial mechanisms and increasing their pro-effective impact. Summing up the debate, Deputy Premier and Chairman of the commission Manfred Gorywoda said that results of the discussions will be helpful to transform into practice the curently worked out task of introducing the second stage of the economic reform.

The necessity of introducing economic pressure, of which a necessary condition is the achievement of the equilibrium, results from the fact that the strategy of the NPSQ for 1986-1990 is based on a firm growth of effectiveness. Proper prices, permitting economic calculation which in turn would provide objective criteria for giving priority to those effective and executing demands of enterprises' self-financing are necessary, said Deputy Premier Gorywoda.

VOIVODSHIP LEADERS MEET TO DISCUSS CONGRESS

LD151246 Warsaw PAP in English 2116 GMT 14 Jul 86

[Text] Warsaw, July 14: Heads of Poland's 49 voivodship (regional) people's councils gathered here today for a conference on ways to strengthen the councils which are constitutionally proclaimed as local organs of state authority and basic self-government organs of the working people. The conference, attended by members of the Council of State, was chaired by President of the Council of State Wojciech Jaruzelski who also took a stand on the issues raised in the debate.

Vice-President of the Council of State Kazimierz Barcikowski discussing the council's plans for implementing the decisions of the Tenth Congress of the PUWP concluded earlier this month, said the main issue would be greater effectiveness in every field. Speakers at the working conference noted they were happy the party congress had put so much emphasis on the need of broader base of national agreement in Poland as a bedrock of economic initiative, and large-scale sorting out of things in Poland.

SEJM LOOKS AT PACT, POLISH PEACE INITIATIVES

LD152151 Warsaw PAP in English 1537 GMT 15 Jul 86

[Text] Warsaw, July 15: The Sejm Foreign Affairs Committee met here today to discuss the peace initiatives advanced at the latest meeting of the Political Consultative Committee of the Warsaw Treaty member-states in Budapest and the ways of implementing the declaration on security and cooperation in Europe which was adopted recently by the 10th PUWP Congress. The commission stated, among other things, that the proposals to reduce armed forces and conventional weaponary in Europe contained in the Budapest message constituted an important element of the comprehensive programme of freeing the continent from mass-destruction weapons. The realization of those proposals would contribute to improvement in the political climate and to return to detente as well as to mutually advantegeous cooperation between states. These efforts are supported by the proposals contained in the declaration on security and cooperation in Europé adopted by the 10th PUWP Congress and referred to in the PUWP Central Committee report delivered by Wojciech Jaruzelski at the congress forum, and in the resolution adopted by the congress.

The commission fully supported the programme of reducing armed forces and conventional weaponry in Europe contained in the Budapest message, accentuating that Poland would do everything possible to realize these proposals as this fully corresponded to the Polish reason of state and lay in the most vital interest of the Polish nation and state.

FURTHER REPORTAGE ON JARUZELSKI FACTORY SPEECH

AU091003 Warsaw TRYBUNA LUDU in Polish 2 Jul 86 p 7

[Report on speech by PZPR First Secretary Wojciech Jaruzelski, at the 1 July meeting with the workers at the Swierczewski Precision Tools Plant in Warsaw]

[Text] Dear Mikhail Sergeyevich Gorbachev! Dear Comrades! I have been provided with extensive materials for a speech to you, but having heard the profound and heartfelt speech made by our esteemed and dear guest, I decided not to use the text of my written speech, which is a good speech. I want my words to be regarded as part of the talks we are having here with the Swierczewski plant workers, together with our guest and the entire Soviet delegation.

Yesterday the congress delegates were greatly pleased to acknowledge the announcement that Comrade Gorbachev would visit your plant in Wola. Today I wish to thank you for your warm, friendly welcome and for the talks we had with you at your benches.

Neither party members nor nonparty workers are indifferent to our congress' work; this is the conclusion we gathered fro talking to you. We are pleased and obliged.

The 10th Congress is not a closed party meeting. It is a creative conclusion of the great precongress discussion and it is taking place before the eyes of all workers and people. The congress has confirmed our great wish that it should be a forum for the entire party and workers class and a meeting of the best forces of the Polish people. We must ponder on what Poland will be in 5, 10, and 15 years. The support of the workers class and active work to implement congress resolutions will determine the success and results of our plan; this will prejudge the further development of our socialist homeland.

Socialism, W. Jaruzelski continued, is invincible as a social formation; this is the law of history. However, we are not indifferent to the cost of achieving the higher and higher stages of socialism. Our task is to cut the length of these stages and their cost to a minimum.

We have learned a great deal and we know by experience the meaning of lost time and unnecessary costs. We have had severe lessons. However, it is the wisdom of the party, the workers class, and the people to draw the necessary conclusions from such lessons. We have drawn them and we must implement them most thoroughly in the conviction that we can and must solve our problems more effectively.

In your plant we have seen how many valuable solutions you have implemented and how far you look forward to the future. Looking forward to the future is more than just modernizing current production. It is primarily a way of thinking, a sense of responsibility as masters of the factory, and a search for new forms of work. Our guest has stressed precisely this issue in such a resolute manner. The establishment and successful performance of partnership brigades is a prominent demonstration of the fact that the Swierczewski work force is looking forward to the future and continues to create better forms of the performance of the socialist enterprise, forms that are consistent with the working people's interests.

As you know from the congress reports and discussions, we are facing the enormous task of carrying out a radical structural-organizational reform, which will be closely geared to the economic reform. At the same time, we must carry out measures to improve to the maximum the organization of our cadres. The meaning of these measures is best illustrated by the sayings that the right men should be in the right places and the best men should blaze the trail. We will see that this is so. The process of reogranization and of overcoming old habits, liabilities, and red tape is a great and difficult process. We have every hope that primarily the workers class, the working people, the best engineers and economists, and all the people who boldy face the future will be our allies. After all, it is beneath the dignity of working man to perform below his potential.

Our past is fine and bitter at the same time, W. Jaruzelski continued, and we must not forget it. However, what we must do is think about the future all the time. This is one of our most important duties. This is especially a duty for the young generation, which is continuing to build Poland's future and its own.

When we speak about the past and the future, the importance of our friendship and cooperation with the Soviet Union becomes clear. The 10th Congress is not only a manifestation of this friendship and cooperation, but also a confirmation of their importance and prospects.

The 10th Congress has become even more well-known to the world because it is from here, from Poland, from Warsaw, that the voice of the leader of a great socialist power has resounded in the name of peace and in defense of peace. This was not just a propaganda appeal. This voice is backed by justice and strength. It brings a businesslike offer and a challenge of great political significance. It also contains great moral value. No honest person may remain indifferent to it. No Pole -- the son or daugher of a nation that has suffered so much and such great losses, and who knows what war means and understandss what peace is -- remains and can remain indifferent to it. Listening to Comrade Gorbachev's words, we affirm our solidarity with him with all our hearts and the entire considerable strength of our people's fatherland.

The statue of General Karol Swierczewski, a son of workers' Wola, a son of Warsaw, is a beautiful symbol. We cast our minds back to the tragic years of war, to the Soviet Army's mission of liberation, and to the struggle of the Polish People's Army jointly with the Sovit Army. [paragraph continues]

Life returned to the city thanks to Soviet aid. The first light shone again in Warsaw, and the first trams began running. Older people will remember the burnt walls with their inscriptions saying "No Mines." Comrade Gorbachev's father was a sapper who traveled a long, heroic battle trail. He was seriously wounded and convalesced in Krakow. What an explicit symbol.

Our friendship, W. Jaruzelski said, does not only consist of feelings. It possesses strong, material pillers, which are being built stronger and stronger from one year to the next. We will endeavor to make them even stronger. We will consolidate our integrity and expand our CEMA cooperation. A lot still remains to be done, but we are heading in this direction. I am convinced that we will reach new shores during joint activity between enterprises and workers' collectives, such as that joining "Swierczewski" to the Soviet "Kalibr." We expect more and more Polish and Soviet plants, workers, and scientific teams to undertake such cooperation. We particularly depend on contacts and cooperation among the young generation, on mutual acquaintance, and on the formation of joint working brigades.

We are continuing to cultivate Polish-Soviet comradeship-in-arms. I think it can be expanded into a Polish-Soviet socialist comradeship-in-work. May this develop.

We want a great Poland, W. Jaruzelski continued, but we do not construe this in a simplified way. A country that is small but well organized, dynamically developing, and cultural can be a great country. And a country that is great but torn apart by differences and behind the rest could become a small country. We have a chance of being a great country. But we are not concerned with size, which our history has known and which contained such smallness that it ended up with Poland being wiped off the map of Europe and, later on, pseudoimperial greed and simultaneous isolation which ended in the tragedy of 1939. We want a great, socialist, and dynamically developing Poland; a country where people live increasingly better, more wisely, and more nobly; from which a lot may be learned; and which values historical glory but realizes at the same time what it is today. Such a great Poland can only exist in alliance with the Soviet Union, only in fraternal cooperation with the socialist community. This is the Poland we desire and wish to build; I am convinced this will find expression in the 10th Congress resolution.

CEAUSESCU DISCUSSES MIDEAST ISSUES WITH JUNBLATT

AU151405 Bucharest Domestic Service in Romanian 1300 GMT 15 Jul 86

[Text] Comrade Nicolae Ceausescu, RCP secretary general and president of the Socialist Republic of Romania, today received Walid Junblatt, chairman of the Progressive Socialist Party of Lebanon, who is on a visit to our country at the invitation of the RCP Central Committee. The chairman of the Progressive Socialist Party of Lebanon expressed thanks for being received and for the opportunity to visit Romania and once again meet with the RCP secretary general, and for being able to exchange views on questions of common interest. During the meeting, the two sides stressed the positive relations that have been established and are developing between the RCP and the Progressive Socialist Party of Lebanon and expressed their desire to continue to act to strengthen these relations. At the same time, they also stressed the broad opportunities to expand cooperation at an economic level between Romania and Lebanon in the interest and to the benefit of the two peoples, and the cause of peace, understanding, and cooperation among nations.

The two sides also discussed aspects of the international political situation paying particular attention to the situation in the Middle East. On this occasion, too, Comrade Nicolae Ceausescu reasserted the constructive, principled position held by Romania regarding the comprehensive poolitical settlement of the Middle East situation; regarding the establishment of a just and lasting peace in that area on the basis of Israel's withdrawal from the Arab territories occupied in the wake of the 1967 war; regarding the settlement of the Palestinian people's problem by recognition of their national rights, including their right to self-determination and creating their own independent state; and regarding the security and integrity of all states in that area. In this context, the two sides stressed the need to organize a UN-sponsored international conference with the participation of all states concerned, including the PLO. In connection with the situation in Lebanon, the two sides stressed the importance of strengthening cooperation among all political and social forces in that country and the achievement, through negotiations, of a broad national reconciliation in order to ensure the independence, sovereignty, peace, calm, and unity of Lebanon. The meeting, which took place in an atmosphere of warm friendship, was attended by Miu Dobrescu, member of the Political Executive Committee of the RCP Central Committee; Ion Stoian, candidate member of the Political Executive Committee and secretary of the party Central Committee; and Sharif Fayyad, member of the Politburo of the Progressive Socialist Party of Lebanon.

FURTHER REPORTAGE ON ZHAO ZIYANG VISIT

Joint Communique

AU061428 Bucharest AGERPRES in English 0806 GMT 6 Jul 86

["Communique" on PRC Premier Zhao Ziyang's official visit to Romania from 2-6 July]

[Text] Bucharest AGERPRES 6 Jul 86 -- A communique on the official visit of friendship Zhao Ziyang, premier of the State Council of the People's Republic of China, paid to Romania, released in Bucharest on Sunday July 6, points out that during the talks which the RCP general secretary and President of the Socialist Republic of Romania, Nicolae Ceausescu, conducted with the distinguished guest, information was exchanged on current concerns for socialist construction in Romania and China, the stage of bilateral links was examined, with particular stress on the way in whcih the decisions and understandings reached during the Beijing summit of October 1985 are implemented, and opinions were exchanged on the major problems of the international life.

On the occasion, it was noted with satisfaction that the traditional relations of close friendship, collaboration and solidarity between the Romanian Communist Party and the Chinese Communist Party, between the Socialist Republic of Romania and the People's Republic of China, between the peoples of the two countries developed successfully, on the basis of a strict observance of the principles of national independence and sovereignty, full equality of rights, noninterference in internal affairs, mutual advantage and comradely mutual assistance. In that framework, emphasis was placed on the deciding role of the Romanian-Chinese summit meetings and talks, which gave further decisive impact to the powerful development of cooperation between the two parties, countries and peoples, both bilaterally and in the international life.

The belief was expressed that broad possibilities existed for the further expansion and diversification of the Romanian-Chinese links on the political, economic, technical, scientific and cultural planes, as well as in other areas of mutual interest, and so was the determination to work most firmly along that line for the benefit of the Romanian and Chinese peoples, of the cause of peace, socialism and collaboration throughout the world.

President Nicolae Ceausescu and Premier Zhao Ziyang noted with satisfaction that the assessments contained in the communique released at the end of the summit visit paid to the People's Republic of China in October 1985 had proved fully valid, the fact being also highlighted that the Socialist Republic of Romania and the People's Republic of China shared identical or very close stances on the major problems confronting contemporary mankind.

Both cointries consider that the fundamental problems of the contemporary epoch are the safeguarding of world peace, the fight against aggression and war, a passage to disarmament, to nuclear disarmament in the first place, and end to the emplacement of intermediate-range nuclear missiles in Europe and the withdrawal of the ones in place, the renunciation of all nuclear missiles and weapons in the other parts of the world, a halt to outer space militarization. Romania and China consider that although the threat of a new world conflagration still exists, the forces of peace have asserted themselves ever more in the international arena and that, consequently, the peoples, the progressive forces everywhere can prevent the outbreak of a new war and ensure the safeguarding of peace in the world through joint actions, the communique further reads.

Emphasis was placed on Romania's and China's firm determination to work, alongside the peoples in other countries of the world, for an immediate end to the arms race and the achievement of a passage to palpable measures of general disarmament, of nuclear disarmament in the first place, to further make sustained efforts for the elimination from the international life of the policy of violating he national independence and sovereignty of other states, of interference in their domestic affairs, of recourse to the use and threat of force against other countries.

The imperative need was underscored for intensified political and diplomatic efforts to peacefully settle interstate disputes, to eliminate the hotbeds of tension from all the regions of the world, in the interest of international peace, stability and detente.

The communique reiterates Romania's and China's stands on the imperative of a passage to a global resolution of the economic problems that face the developing countries, of the foreign debt issue included, of eradicating underdevelopment and establishing a new international economic order. The active support was reiterated Romania and China grant to the strengthening of solidarity and the intensification of cooperation among the developing countries, and the need was underscored for those countries and for the developed states, too, to make concerted, sustained efforts for the developing countries' economic recovery, for a steady, harmonious and healthy growth of world economy.

Romania and China, the communique points out next, attach great importance to the participation of small and medium-sized, non-aligned and developing countries in the international life, to their growing role in the resolution of the serious problems of the contemporary world. The hope was expressed that the future non-aligned summit to be held in Zimbabwe this year would contribute to strengthening those states' unity and solidarity, to enhancing their role in the resolution of the complex problems of the international life.

Satisfaction was expressed at the close cooperation between Romania and China internationally and the determination was set forth to expand their cooperation at the UN and in other international organizations, for a growing role of the United Nations in solving the cardinal issues of the present-day world.

In connection with the official talks conducted between the Romanian prime minister and the premier of the State Council of the People's Republic of China, the communique points out that they focused on an analysis of the stage of bilateral links, more particularly, in the economic realm. Tasks were set for the relevant economic ministries and organizations to identify new ways and means providing for a strong, further growth of commercial exchanges and economic cooperation on stable, long-term, mutually advantageous terms.

At the end of the visit, the Romanian prime minister and the premier of the State Council of the People's Republic of China expressed their deep satisfaction at the productive results of the talks conducted in Romania, considering them to be a new and significant contribution to the strengthening and expansion of the links of friendship, collaboration and solidarity between the two parties, countries and peoples.

On behalf of Comrades Hu Yaobang, general secretary of the Central Committee of the Chinese Communist Party and Li Xiannian, president of the People's Republic of China, as well as on his own behalf, Comrade Zhao Ziyang, premier of the State Council of the People's Republic of China, invited Comrade Nicolae Ceausescu, general secretary of the Romanian Communist Party, president of the Socialist Republic of Romania, and Comrade Elena Ceausescu to pay a new official visit of friendship to the People's Republic of China at a convenient time. Furthermore, the premier of the State Council of the People's Republic of China invited Comrade Constantin Dascalescu, prime minister of the Socialist Republic of Romania, to pay an official visit to the People's Republic of China. The invitations were accepted with pleasure. The dates of the visits will be set later on, through diplomatic channels.

Zhao Message

AU141000 Bucharest SCINTEIA in Romanian 8 Jul 86 p 3

[Text] To Comrade Nicolae Ceausescu, RCP secretary general and president of the SR of Romania and to Comrade Constantin Dascalescu, prime minister of the Government of the SR of Romania.

Now, in concluding my official visit of friendship to your country, I would like to express once again heartfelt thanks to you, to the RCP, the Government, and the Romanian people for the enthusiastic and hospitable welcome you extended to me.

Thanks to the cordial reception extended to me by Comrade Nicolae Ceausescu, my visit has been completely successful. I express my great satisfaction with the frank, friendly, and fruitful talks we held. This visit greatly strengthened my belief that the relations of friendship and many-sided cooperation existing between our parties, countries, and the Chinese and Romanian people will certainly register a consistent, steady, and many-sided development.

I wish the SR of Romania prosperity and flourishing and to the Romanian people I wish much health!

May the friendship, solidarity, and cooperation between China and Romania develop constantly!

[Signed] Zhao Ziyang, member of the Standing Committee of the CPC Central Committee Political Bureau and Premier of the PRC State Council.

[Text] Bucharest, AGERPRES 15/7/1986 -- RCP General Secretary Nicolae Ceausescu sent the following telegram to Truong Chinh, general secretary of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of Vietnam.

Dear Comrade Truong Chinh, On your election to the office of general secretary of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of Vietnam, I warmly congratulate you and address you best wishes of success in the highly responsible office you were entrusted with by the party. I express my belief that the relations of friendship and collaboration between the RCP and the Communist Party of Vietnam, between the Socialist Republic of Romania and the Socialist Republic of Vietnam will further develop in the future, to the benefit and in the interests of the Romanian and Vietnamese peoples, of the cause of socialism and peace the world over.

LEADERS SEND CABLES TO MONGOLIAN OFFICIALS

AU101852 Bucharest AGERPRES in English 1715 GMT 10 Jul 86

[Text] Bucharest AGERPRES 10/7/1986 -- RCP General Secretary and Romania's President Nicolae Ceausescu addressed a congratulatory telegram to Jambyn Batmonh, general secretary of the CC of the Mongolian People's Revolutionary Party [MPRP], chairman of the Presidium of the People's Great Hural of the Mongolian People's Republic, which reads:

On behalf of the CC of the RCP, of the State Council of the Socialist Republic of Romania, of the Romanian people and on my own behalf, I take special pleasure in addressing you, the CC of the MPRP, the Presidium of the People's Great Hural and the Mongolian people warmest congratulations as well as cordial comradely greetings on the national day of the Mongolian people -- the 65th anniversary of the victorious people's revolution. An event of exceptional significance in the history of your country, the victory of the revolution and the instauration of people's power crowned the Mongolian people's fight against exploitation and oppression, for liberty and social progress. In the 65 years of free life, the working people led by the MPRP made deep-going revolutionary changes in all the spheres of the economic and social life, and scored outstanding achievements in building the technical-material base of socialism and in raising the people's welfare, materially and spiritually.

I wish to reiterate on this occasion, too, my firm belief that, taking joint action, in keeping with the treaty of friendship and collaboration between the Socialist Republic of Romania and the Mongolian People's Republic, the ties of friendship and manysided cooperation between our parties and countries will steadily intensify and diversify, in the interests of the Romanian and Mongolian peoples, of the general cause of socialism, peace and collaboration throughout the world.

On the great anniversary of the victorious people's revolution, I address you, the communist and friendly Mongolian people best wishes of success in implementing the resolutions of the 19th MPRP Congress, in the socialist construction of the homeland.

On the same occasion, Romanian Prime Minister Constantin Dascalescu sent a telegram to Dumaagiyn Sodnom, chairman of the Council of Ministers of the Mongolian People's Republic, whereby he addresses him warmest congratulations and wishes of fresh successes in the activity devoted to his country's progress and prosperity. The telegram expresses the conviction that the governments of the two countries will make further efforts toward continually developing Romanian-Mongolian manysided cooperation, in the spirit of the fine relations of friendship and overall esteem between the Romanian people and the Mongolian people, between Romania and Mongolia. On the 65th anniversary of the victorious Mongolian people's revolution -- the national day of the Mongolian People's Republic -- the chairman of the Grand National Assembly, Nicolae Giosan, and the minister of foreign affairs, Ilie Vaduva, sent telegrams of congratulations to their Mongolian counterparts. On the same occasion, mass and public organizations and central institutions of Romania addressed congratulatory telegrams to similar organizations and institutions in the Mongolian People's Republic.

["Romania Declares for the liquidation of the Chemical Weapons" -- AGERPRES headline]

[Text] Bucharest, AGERPRES, 11/7/1986 -- The steady preoccupation of Romania and of numerous other states of the world for the banning of the chemical weapons, for their definitive and complete liquidation starts both from the tragic experience of the past and from present realities, from the fact that by corruption of its humanist purposes chemistry has been more and more intensely used to create weapons and kill as many combatants and non-combatants of the enemy, writes daily SCINTEIA in a commentary devoted to Romania's constructive demarches and initiatives for the liquidation of the chemical weapons.

The newspaper warns about the development and sophistication of the chemical weapons cautioning that:

The "frontier" of perilousness between the nuclear arsenals and the chemical ones is less and less conspicuous. Given this ever bigger danger the actions and stands have been intensified of late for banning the chemical weapons, for the liquidation of the existing arsenals. In full harmony with these preoccupations, with the exigencies of general peace and security, Romania, President Nicolae Ceausescu have worked for the complete banning and destruction of the chemical weapons, a fact reiterated also in the latest speeches of the RCP general secretary. Romania has supported the proposal for the conclusion of an international convention on banning chemical weapons and destroying the stockpiles in existence, a proposal that has been for years on the agenda of the Geneva disarmament conference. Along the years Romania advanced to the Geneva negotiation forum a string of concrete, constructive proposals received with interest by the other participating states. As seen by Romania what is important now is to pass to concrete actions, to prove the necessary political will for concluding the negotiations and achieved the above-mentioned convention to soonest.

According to Romania of outstanding importance would be no doubt the materialization of the proposals pursuing the creation of zones free of chemical weapons just like in the case of the nuclear weapons, in Europe and in other parts of the world.

Greatly important in this respect is the declaration and appeal of late last year by Romania's President Nicolae Ceausescu and Todor Zhivkov, president of the State Council of the People's Republic of Bulgaria, regarding the realization in the Balkans of a zone free of chemical weapons. It is a realistic and profoundly constructive initiative in full harmony with the major requirements of peace and security in the Balkans, and in general all over Europe and the world.

In this connection worth remembering is also the proposal of the Governments of the GDR and Czechoslovakia addressed to the government of the Federal Republic of Germany to start negotiations on the creation of a chemical weapon free zone that should encompass the territories of the three states.

Socialist Romania is firmly convinced, as emphasized again these days by the party's general secretary, president of the republic, that under the current international circumstances any step toward halting or curbing the escalation of arming, toward elimination from various regions of the world of various categories of mass destruction weapons among which the chemical weapons hold an important place, can only contribute to the restoration of international confidence, to opening ways to the endorsement efficient measures also as regards other categories of weapons, nuclear above all, and speed up the attainment on the final goal, that of general and complete disarmament.

FURTHER REPORTAGE ON VENEZUELA'S CONSALVI'S VISIT

Dizdarevic Hosts Dinner

LD151304 Belgrade TANJUG Domestic Service in Serbo-Croatian 1938 GMT 14 Jul 86

[Text] Belgrade 14 Jul (TANJUG) -- Raif Dizdarevic, federal secretary for foreign affairs, this evening gave a dinner in the Palace of the Federation in honor of Venezuelan Foreign Minister Simon Alberto Consalvi.

During the course of the dinner, which was held in a very cordial and warm atmosphere, the two ministers exchanged appropriate toasts in which they both made reference to the development of friendly relations and bilateral cooperation and placed particular emphasis on the need further to promote economic links along the lines of cooperation between developing countries. The toasts also referred to some aspects of the current international development.

The talks between the two foreign ministers will continue in Belgrade tomorrow. The Venezuelan foreign minister will also be received by Sinan Hasani, president of the SFRY Presidency.

Received by Hasani

[Text] Belgrade 15 Jul (TANJUG) -- Sinan Hasani, the president of the SFRY Presidency, received Dr Simon Alberto Consalvi, the Venezuelan minister of foreign affairs, in the Palace of the Federation today.

In cordial and friendly talks, in which Raif Dizdarevic, the federal secretary for foreign affairs also took part, there was discussion of improving various aspects of Yugoslav-Venezuelan cooperation, particularly in the field of the economy and culture which contribute to the better acquaintance and understanding between the friendly peoples of the two countries. It was stressed that bilateral cooperation should be developed in all fields and it was jointly assessed that there is both the possibility and need to achieve this. Ways of strengthening economic cooperation by increasing trade and particularly by developing higher forms of cooperation in this field on a long-term basis were noted.

In the section of the talks on international topics, consideration was given, above all, to the situation in Central America and the preparations for the forthcoming summit of the nonaligned nations in Harare, to which both sides attach great importance and which is expected to give an important impetus to the further activity of the nonaligned countries in solving the main problems of international relations.

Further Talks With Dizdarevic

[Text] Belgrade, July 15 (TANJUG) -- The activities by the Contadora Group and the support group are the only option for a lasting, stable and overall peace in Latin America, Yugoslav Foreign Secretary Raif Dizdarevic and Venezuelan Foreign Minister Dr Simon Consalvi assessed in their talks here today. Dizdareavic and Consalvi, currently on an official visit to Yugoslavia, stressed that the two groups offered a solution to the Latin American problem with full respect for independence, sovereignty, non-interference in internal affairs of other countries, and the right of every country to its own development. These principles are identical to those set out in the U.N. Charter, and to the principles and goals of the Nonaligned Movement, they said.

The Yugoslav side again expressed support to democratization processes and the solving of problems of authentic striving of Central American countries on these principles. Pointing out the significance of the Nonaligned Movement's support to the peace initiatives by the Contadora Group, the foreign ministers of Yugoslavia and Venezuela said they were convinced that it would be reaffirmed at the nonaligned summit in Harare. Dizdarevic and Consalvi also expressed solidarity with the Nicaraguan people's struggle of preserving its independence and sovereignty.

They also stressed the role of the Nonaligned Movement as a non-bloc factor, and said it was necessary to strengthen its unity and action ability in order to contribute to the solving of crucial problems facing the present-day world. The two ministers said they believed that the Harare summit would reaffirm the Nonaligned Movement's strategic commitments - struggle for ending the arms race and for disarmament, strengthening mutual confidence, detente and more just solving of international economic problems, especially the developing countries' debts.

[Excerpt] Zagreb, 14 Jul (TANJUG) -- Peter Colotka, premier of the Slovak SR Government CPCZ Central Committee Presidium member, arrives in Zagreb today on a 2-day official and friendly visit to the SR of Croatia, at the invitation of the Croatian Assembly's Executive Council.

The Czechoslovak guest was welcomed at Zagreb airport by Ante Milovic, Croatian Executive Council president; Ivica Trnokop, the republic's Foreign Relations Committee president, and Zlatan Markotic, Zagreb City Assembly Executive Council president. [passage omitted]

Meets With Markovic

LD152023 Belgrade TANJUG Domestic Service in Serbo-Croatian 1526 GMT 15 Jul 86

[Text] Zagreb, 15 Jul (TANJUG) -- Peter Colotka, Premier of the Government of the SR of Slovakia and member of the Presidium of the Czechoslovak Communist Party Central Committee, who is playing a friendly visit to the SR of Croatia, today had talks with Ante Markovic, president of the Presidency of the SR of Croatia.

In the talks both sides expressed satisfaction at the current level of development of cooperation between the SR's of Croatia and Slovakia which play a substantial role in the overall Yugoslav-Czechoslovak cooperation. In this context the two sides stressed that there exist possibilities for further expanding of the cooperation, in particular, in the sphere of industrial cooperation and specialization and joint ventures on Third world markets.

The present level of overall Yugoslav-Czechoslovak cooperation makes it possible for cooperation in the economic sphere to be raised to an even higher level. Both sides expressed an interest in seeing this achieved. Stress was also placed on the positive experience which work organizations from th two countries have had in these area.

The plans up to 1990 envisage the value of trade between Czechoslovaki and Yugoslavia to amount to 7.5 billion dollars. Croatia's share in the overall Yugoslav trade with Czechoslovakia amounts to 20 percent.

Slovak premier and member of the Presidium of the Czechoslovak Communist Party Central Committee, Peter Colotka, also had talks with Ante Milovic, president of the Executive Council of the Croatian Assembly. The talks focused on the specific possibilities for expanding economic and other forms of cooperation. In this context particular stress was placed on the possibility for consolidating cooperation in building industry, agriculture, food processing industry, electronics, electrical engineering, ferrous metallurgy, oil industry, machine-building industry, energy industry and other areas.

Particular emphasis was placed on the results achieved so far in cooperation between Rade Koncar, Provomajska, Djuro Djakovic, Nikola Tesla and other collectives from the republic with their partners in Czechoslovakia. The possibility was also discussed for Yugoslav work collectivies to take part in some new projects in Czechoslovakia. Reference was also made to the import of goods from Czechoslovakia.

The talks in Zagreb were attended by the ambassador of the Czechoslovak Socialist Republic in Yugoslavia, Bohumil Simacek, and the consul general in Zagreb, Jan Surkos.

In the course of their visit to Zagreb, the guests from Czechoslovakia toured Rade Koncar Composite organization of associated labor which accounts for 40 percent in the overall manfacturing cooperation with Czechoslovak partners. Representatives of Rade Koncar drew attention to the specific programs which will create further scope for expanding partnership and undertaking joint ventures in on third markets. This afternoon the Czech delegation visited Kumrovec, Comrade Tito's birthplace.

LCY CENTRAL COMMITTEE SESSION HELD 15 JUL

[Text] Belgrade, 15 Jul (TANJUG) -- The LCY Central Committee Presidium, at its session today which has presided over by Milanko Renovica, considered the organization of work on drafting proposals for changes in some of the provisions of the SFRY Constitution. It was deemed necessary to immediately undertake specific activities in formulating the changes on the basis of the proposals contained in the Critical Analysis of the Functioning of the Political System and those put forward during public debate on the document. It was also stressed that all organs and bodies of the Federation, the republics, and the provinces should take part in this work in accordance with the duties within their purview and responsibility and that a broad-based sociopolitical action should also be organized. The Presidium pointed out that all the changed in the Constitution should be conducive to a more consistent realization of, and improvement in, the production relations of self-management and the federal system and to a more efficient resolution of all social problems and the implementation of the stand adopted at 13th LCY Congress.

It was also agreed that work on the changes should be coordinated with the work on drafting changes to other normative acts, primarily to the Law on Associated Labor. It was pointed out, however, that the overall activity should not be limited to normative changes alone but that a clearly-defined and determined ideopolitical action is needed designed to changed the behavior and heighten the level of responsibility of every individual, by those occupying social positions and by all self-management, state, and other organs of society. Within the framework of preparations for the second session of the LCY Central Committee -- to be held on 30 July -- the Presidium formulated draft orientation programs.

MESIHOVIC TOURS INTERNAL AFFAIRS SECRETARIAT

LD1606C5 Belgrade TANJUG Domestic Service in Serbo-Croatian 1745 GMT 15 Jul 86

[Text] Sarajevo, 15 Jul (TANJUG) -- Munir Mesihovic, president of the Presidency of the SR of Bosnia-Hercegovina, and Gojko Ubiparip, president of the Council for the Protection of the Constitutional Order and member of the Bosnia-Hercegovina Presidency, today visited the Republic's Secretariat for Internal Affairs. They were informed about the current security situation in the SR of Bosnia-Hercegovina and the future tasks facing the internal affairs organs and security services by Dusko Zgonjanin, the Republic's secretary for internal affairs.

It was stressed in the course of the conversation with top officials in the security service that the security situation in the SR of Bosnia-Hercegovina is stable due to the activity by all organized socialist forces of society and the efforts by the working people and citizens to resolve the problems emerging in our socioeconomic development. The successful fulfilment of the tasks by the interal affairs organs and security services and the entire system of social self-protection have contributed to this. The need was stressed for all the factors of social self-protection to take an even more involved, meaningful, and decisive part in this, the announcement by the Bosnia-Hercegovina Presidency's information office states.

FURTHER REPORTAGE ON 13TH LCY CONGRESS

Radovic Address

AU110932 Belgrade BORBA in Serbo-Croatian 26 Jun 86 p 4

[Report on the opening speech by Miljan Radovic at the first session of the Commission for Ideological Questions in Education, Upbringing, Science, and Culture of the 13th LCY Congress in Belgrade on 25 June]

[Excerpts] The socialist self-managing transformation of science, education, and culture has been carried out under very complex socioeconomic and ideolopolitical conditions. Social practice has once again shown how much the development and state of these activities directly depend on the socioeconmic position of the entire self-managing transformation of our society -- this was pointed out by Miljan Radovic, member of the LCY Central Committee Presidium, in his opening speech in the Commission for Ideological Questions in Education, Upbringing, Science, and Culture.

Science -- Lever for Development

The realization of the Long-Term Economic Stabilization Program necessary to bring us out of our social and economic crisis depends, he said, to a great extent on whether subjective forces have learned that education, science, technology, and data processing are the basis of the world's scientific and technological revolution and powerful factors in the speeding up of production forces and socialist self-management. The sluggish implementation of the Stabilization Program shows that the LC and our society hav not fully realize that. [passage omitted]

Speaking about various discussions about our social position and the material position of science, and about the aims and tasks of the scientific and technological development of the country that have been conducted since the 12th Congress, Radovic pointed out that the premise has been accepted that increasingly favorable social and material conditions be created and exemptions and incentives be introduced for a faster development of scientific research activities of special social importance. A significant contribution to these discussions and positions has also been made in the LCY Central Committee, Radovic pointed out. The LCY Central Committee Presidium on two occasions discussed the social position and significance of science and adopted an Ideopolitical Foundation for the preparation of the 13th LCY Congress documents in the field of scientific and technological development of the country.

Since the strategy of the technological development of the SFRY is a condition for a further development of the country, it was necessary to ensure that it be agreed and adopted much earlier. It should also express the necessarily changed attitude toward knowledge, which must be increasingly our chief comparative advantage. [passage omitted] Special measures should be taken to ensure the continuation of the financing and work on the joint Yugoslav scientific macro-projects that have been agreed upon, and one should ensure a more equal relationship among fundamental, development, and applied research. [passage omitted]

Education Reform Is Justified

In the preparations for the party congresses and conferences and the discussions at them, as well as in the public discussion of the documents for the 13th LCY Congress, the realization of the socialist self-managing transformation of education and upbringing to date was critically analyzed. [paragraph continues]

Positive elements, as well as the difficulties, omissions, and even failures in its realization were pointed out in the discussions, Miljan Radovic pointed out.

On the basis of what has been perceived in this way, it is an unequivocal view that the LC has no reason to drop its basic ideological tenets in the socialist self-managing transformation of education and upbringing. However, the LC must work in a more organized way, and react in time, more resolutely, and more critically to the shortcomings and failures in the realization of the transformation of education and upbringing.

Speaking more specifically about the several segments of the education and upbringing system, Radovic particularly referred to vocational training:

The educational training as a whole is still burdened by a fragmentation in programs and organization, and by its not being economical. The network of the school centers, higher schools and faculties is excessively large. The poor quality and the low efficiency of the entire vocational training is causing more and more concern. In some republics and provinces, up to a third of those enrolled in secondary vocational training never complete the training started. The situation is even more unfavorable in college studies. So for example, in 1985 in Yugoslavia only 13.6 percent of students graduated on time. The stuides at universities last on average 6.7 and in higher schools 4.9 years. In one generation of higher education students only 27 percent or 90,000 have to repeat a year or leave the studies. [passage omitted]

Criticism of Inertia

Speaking about problems in culture Radovic said:

The information relating to results and the trends of activities in culture points toward the complexity of the situation and contradictions that culture is facing today. On the one hand we have the revival of amateurism in certain areas, the increased interest of artists in current happenings not only in culture but also in society, more and more dynamic currents in the area of creative work, the more significant and noted results of our artists and musicians, writers, and film creators. On the other hand we have the more and more difficult material position of culture, the reduced volume of production, the worsening of the socioeconomic position of those employed in this field and of those who work as free artists, the spreading of trash literature and of bourgeois taste, the increase of restrictive measures at the expense of culture, and attempts to found a way out through short term administrative solutions. [passage omitted]

Emphasizing then the need for the further self-managing transformation of culture, Radovic said:

When we say that the results we have achieved in this process are only half results then we are primarly criticizing inertia and stagnation in the self-managing transformation of culture. New steps in this process will made through raising the quality of decisionmaking and accords in the self-managing interest communities for culture and in the cultural institutions; through a more objective evaluation of cultural work and of the results of this work; through an improvement of the self-managing organization in the direct exchange of labor in culture; and through a fuller cooperation of the working people and citizens in planning cultural needs and programs, and in realizing and evaluating these programs, considering that this cooperation may be confirmed only if it serves the development of culture and does not cause a fall in the quality of work and programs.

It is particularly important that the social interest and influence in culture be implemented through a comprehensive percention of the opportunities and requirement of our society and that they contribute to the processes of democratization in creativity and culture.

One of the basic tasks in the self-managing transformation of culture involves the emancipation from the traditional narrowing down of culture exclusively to artistic activities or exculsively to the so-called acme of creativity. The new aspects of creative manifestation, ennobling of labor, a humanization of the relations in society, the care for and protection of nature, the development of the cultural components of the labor process and social life, the raising of health and physical culture, the numerous new aspects of cultural activities by young people, and so forth, are the best examples of the spread of culture to all the spheres of human life.

Where We are Lagging

Radovic then remarked that we are less and less prepared to resist in a more determined way trash, petty bourgeois tastes and a consumer frame of mind, cheap effects, and mythomania. "For a true culture, the development of critical awareness is very important; without it, culture will be less and less culture and creativity and more and more an industry of products and contents that deaden and efface."

In his opinion, social criticism from Marxist positions is lagging; this is criticism which will find in its system of values a place for both social and ethnical aspects of a subject that it evaluates. Critical words confirm their power not when they judge or reject a work of art or science, but when they advance our understanding and reception of its values, and when they advance arguments to differentiate between the old and the new, and what is progressive from what is backward.

In this period between the congresses, Radovic concluded, the processes of democratization of creativity have strengthened again, but this has not always run without the resistance of the conservative forces and of the opponents of our society. There have been all sorts of pressure by these forces and there have been attempts to compromise our cultural policy, cultural worker, and culture in general. There have been excesses and misunderstandings, and there have also been attempts to find refuge in the sphere of creativity and culture by those who sow nationalistic discord and hatred, who plant call for 'reconciliation' as a cover for their revanchist intentions, who calculatedly counterfeit history in order to attempt subsequently to deprive of every sense not only the matters that have been won but also those for which we struggle.

Krunic Speaks

AU101107 Belgrade BORBA in Serbo-Croatian 26 Jun 86 pp 2-3

[Report on opening speech by Bosko Krunic at the first session of the commission for the Development of the Political System of Socialist Self-Management of the 13th LCY Congress in Belgrade on 25 June]

[Excerpts] The entire period between the 12th and the 13th Congresses was marked by a grave, sometimes dramatic, confrontation with the economic crisis which laid bare all the shortcomings and aggravated many open questions of our development. This was a proper test of the political system too, and it displayed both its merits and its shortcomings, Bosko Krunic pointed out in the introductory speech in the Commission for the Development of the Political System of Socialist Self-Management. [paragraph continues]

The most significant step in the efforts for the further building and improvement of the political system in the past period was the Critical Analysis and the public discussion of it. Great significance attaches to the fact that working people and citizens, virtually all the sociopolitical organizations, the science and professional associations, and public media massively participated in the discussion.

Such a great interest is obviously not only an expression of dissatisfaction with our society's situation, particularly with our economic situation, but also of dissatisfaction with the distribution of social power and influence, with the use of social wealth and with a series of deformations in our political system. This is also an expression of the worry and responsibility of the people trying to come out of the crisis and remove amassed problems, the worry for self-management and their own future; an expression of the great part of the workers class and working people identifying themselves with the concept and vision of our socialist self-managing democracy.

The conflict between self-management and statism is beginning to look more like a class conflict, Krunic said. This conflict has a tendency to continuously grow because efforts for the implementation of constitutional principles, and particularly of the tasks of the Long Term Economic Stabilization program which would cut short the socioeconomic roots of statism and the control over surplus value, have encountered bitter resistance from those advocating technobureaucratic and state-owned monoply. This is why at this congress we must be decisive in our demand for defeating the dominant position of the bureaucracy in the distribution of social power and social wealth. Bureaucracy is perpetuating and enhancing itself in the conditions of statism and links itself to and accepts all kinds of ideologies -- separatist, unitarian, bureaucratic, nationalist, -- which help it preserve and strengthen its monopoly.

From this point of view we ought to also look for the dangers of republican, provincial and federal statism.

What We Are Looking For and What We Want

Having said that the basic criterion of assessing whether our self-managing system is up to the level of its historical task must be based on the results of its economic efficiency in the conditions of commodity production, on how politically democratic it is, and on how much social security it provides for its people, Krunic stressed that everything that we are looking for and that we want -- beginning with the Constitution and the Long-Term Stabilization Program and up to the Critical Analysis -- derives from this basic criterion. Along this line, work is now going on about changes in the constitutions, the Associated Labor Law, and other documents regulating the system.

Advocating a more resolute opposition to the attempts to revise the foundations of the system whether from statist or from bourgois-liberal positions, the introductory speaker remarked that during the discussions about the Critical Analysis, there have not been enough polemics with views that oppose the LC positions. Polemics with the party positions were conducted even by some in the LC ranks, which also led to the deepening of some existing divisions, Krunic stressed and added:

Here I do not have in mind the different positions which concern certain institutional and legal solutions, about which a struggle of opinions should indeed be waged, but the continuity of the very idea of our system. Some people now want to present the insistence on this continuity as conservativism of the LC, as dogmatism, and as defense of every institutional provision. [paragraph continues]

The unity of the LC cannot rest on pragmatism and on a policy of daily calculations, but only on the same program goals with which all of us can and must identify and for which we will struggle. These goals are contained in the LCY program, the Constitution, the Long-Term Program, and the congress documents. We cannot each in his way decide what the goals of our movement are and what they should be; these goals cannot be pulled down through the theses that the Constitution opposes the LCY program and that it causes all the trouble, that the Long-Term Program is opposed to the Constitution, and particularly the Critical Analysis and the like. There has not yet been enough open, public, and well-argued confrontation with such theses. [passage omitted]

The opening speaker further asked that the old assessments about the functioning of the political system which have been uttered from the 11th LCY Congress onward should no longer be repeated but that activities should be organized from the basic organizations of associated labor up to the communes and the federation on specific amendments to the constitution, to the laws governing the system, to regulations, and to self-managing acts. [passage omitted] One should much more resolutely oppose the increasingly pronounced tendencies of negating and even abolishing the basic organizations of associated labor. The distortions that arose in practice, such as barriers erected, autarky, and the transformation of the associated labor organizations into a playground of group property interests cannot be identified with their constitutional design.

Critically referring to the occurrences when associated labor organizations fence themselves off within work organizations, he pointed out that this is basically a departure from constitutional principles, and that it harms both the interests of associated workers and the development of modern production forces. [passage omitted] The absence of self-managing authority in the collective abolishes the very foundation of the delegate system. [passage omitted]

Speaking about criticism at the expense of the delegate system, Krunic further stressed that one cannot accept the longings for the old mandates of deputies and the bourgeois democratic system of elections. Despite many shortcomings both in the election system and in cadre policy, one cannot accept the request that the role of the delegations be changed from the ground up. One must, however, insist on a further development of institutional solutions, also advocated by the Critical Analysis, as regards the election procedure; links, mutual coordination of delegations; and overcoming disintegration in the delegate machinery; as regards responsibility, and as regards building and advancing the specific role of every assembly chamber, starting with the criteria for setting them up and ranging up to the content and methods of work in them, especially concerning the associated labor chambers and the sociopolitical chambers.

Central Problem -- Statism

In this connection the opening speaker stressed two points: the delegate assemblies should be much more efficient in exercising control and supervision over the implementation of decisions, but likewise the present overemphasized and overblown conventional state function of all sociopolitical communities should be combatted, so that these communities would develop more consistently as self-managing communities. The commune, too, must develop on this basis, and all this should combat statism which in many respects has led to the present divisions and disintegration. However, a solution for combatting the republican and provincial statism, which is now most pronounced, Krunic pointed out, cannot be sought in a strengthening of federal centralism, in a "strong federation," or rather statism in the federation. The LCY precept is clear: to stand firmly on the constitutional principles of our federalism, but to change everything that hampers their realization, including some constitutional and other normatic provisions, and consistently prevent the roots of unconstitutional practice. [paragraph continues]

In this respect we must proceed from the premise that the central problem in the building of relations in the federation has for some time been unconquered statism and growing bureaucratization, instead of the self-managing delegate method of accords and agreements. [passage omitted]

From this point of view, Krunic went on to say, it is necessary that we search for solutions for a more direct presence and influence of workers associated in self-managing and of all working people in the overall process of delegate decision making in the SFRY Assembly and in other federal organs. [passage omitted]

In some discussions linked to the relations in the federation, one could see the view according to which many causes of our difficulties and the overall crisis consist of the fact that our community is multinational and that republics and provinces exist in the federation. Frequently these discussions hark back to the Anti-Fascist Council of National Liberation of Yugoslavia [AVNOY] and to the question of whether we have abandoned it or not. However, the basic thing that can be derived precisely from these AVNOY principles and the AVNOY spirit is that none of the peoples of Yugoslavia joined Yugoslavia in order to live in it with less freedom, less equality, and less socialism than it would enjoy living by itself. [passage omitted]

Kosovo Our Common Care

Speaking about relations within the SR of Serbia, and particularly about the achievement of unity and togetherness as being essential for the stability and unity of Yugoslavia, Krunic among other things said that the sorting out of the situation in Kosovo is of paramount importance for the improvement of national equality, and the curbing of nationalist narrow-mindedness and intolerance. This is a matter for the LCY as a whole, particularly when we are talking about undertaking measures that would strengthen the province's economy. Our main task must be to secure national equality and trust and to create conditions for the free life of all, particularly of the citizens of the Serb and Montenegrin nationality who now feel threatened in this unbalanced situation. [passage omitted]

Continuing his speech, Krunic spoke about the need to struggle for constitutionality and legality as one of the most important tasks of sociopolitical organizations and the entire self-managing and delegate mechanism. [passage omitted] The opening speaker also spoke about the debureaucratization of the LC as one of basis messages expressed in all just ended party gatherings and in the general party debate held on the occasion of the 13th LCY Central Committee session. In connection with this he stressed among other things that we must stop many individuals' leisurely membership in the LC and in other sociopolitical organizations and their organs characterized by the lack of involvement and obligation required by an ideopolitical struggle for the historically new form of relations as is self-management. At the end his speech Bosko Krunic pointed out that in the process of the democratization of political life changes will also be necessary in the work of the SAWPY, the Trade Union, and the Socialist Youth Association.

POLISH DELEGATE COMMENTS ON STOCKHOLM TALKS

LD162012 Warsaw PAP in English 1813 GMT 16 Jul 86

[By PAP correspondent Tomasz Walat]

[Text] Stockholm, July 16 -- A clear, though still insufficient, in the opinion of some observers, progress has been made in recent days in the debates of the Stockholm Conference on Confidence and Security Building Measures and Disarmament in Europe.

The head of the Polish delegation, Ambassador Woldzimierz Konarski, said at a press conference held here today that socialist states, with a view to facilitating the solution of issues unsettled so far, have proposed that the matter of informing about large, independent military airforce exercises be moved to the next stage of the conference, similarily to the statement of January 15, this year, made by Mikhail Gorbachev concerning the navy.

Socialist states are also ready to accept the postulate that the informing procedure cover other kinds of military activity (troop movements and redeplcyments, and so on) interlocked with activities of ground forces. This is also one of the difficult issues of the conference.

The head of the Polish delegation said that one should now act rapidly to solve the remaining controversial issues in order to work out the final document before the agreed date of adjourning the debates -- September 19, this year. In order to achieve this end it is necessary to continue the process of mutual concessions on the part of all participating states, he said.

Further significant steps taking into account the security interests of the CSCE are very much called for in order to end the current session with significant success. Unofficial talks indicate that the new initiative of socialist states is deemed as an important step in this direction, said Konarski.

OTECHESTVEN FRONT INTERVIEWS ROMANIA'S GIOSAN

AU161254 Sofia OTECHESTVEN FRONT in Bulgarian 11 Jul 86 pp 1, 3

[Interview given by Nicolae Giosan, chairman of the Grand National Assembly of the Socialist Republic of Romania and candidate member of the RCP Central Commitee Political Executive Committee, to Angel Andreevski, "representative of the OTECHESTVEN FRONT's Editorial Board"; date, place not given]

[Text] A Romanian parliamentary delegation, led by Nicolae Giosan, chairman of the Grand National Assembly and candidate member of the RCP Central Committee Political Executive Committee, visited Bulgaria at the invitation of the National Assembly. A representative of the Editorial Board met with Nicolae Giosan, leader of the delegation, and had a talk with him.

[Andreevski] Please tell our Bulgarian readers about the most important tasks being implemented at the moment by the Grand National Assembly.

[Giosan] The recent June session discussed and adopted the Uniform Plan on the Socioeconomic Development of the SR of Romania. During the 1986-90 5-Year-Plan Period, the Plan on Developing Agriculture and the Food Industry for the same period, and other documents of great importance for the development of our country along the road of socialism and communism.

As these documents envisage and as Nicolae Ceausescu, RCP general secretary and president of the SR of Romania points out, during the current stage we shall secure the transition toward intensely developing industry, agriculture, and other branches, reduce the use of materials and labor power, and increase the productivity of labor and economic efficiency in all areas, while stressing the quality indexes of production. The Romanian people are fully enaged in implementing the scientific-technical revolution in all areas of life, striving toward the final result -- modernizing and elevating the entire socioeconomic activity to a new stage. We shall continue to develop education and culture and reach a new quality of our entire people's labor and life.

[Andreevski] How do you evaluate the current cooperation with the Bulgarian Parliament and what are the prospects of its further expansion? In what directions will it develop?

[Giosan] I am especially pleased to say that during the years of socialism fruitful cooperation has develcped between the supreme legislative organs of Romania and Bulgaria. This was sensed with a special force during the last two decades, when this cooperatin was placed on the lastig foundations of the agreements reached between the first leaders of our parties and states, Comrades Nicolae Ceausescu and Todor Zhivkov. Mutual visits took place on parliamentary level of the commissions on foreign policy and our interparlimentary groups, which made a substantial contribution to expanding Romanian-Bulgarian relations and strengthening the mutual coming together and acquaintance through their dialogues, which took place in an atmosphere of understanding and fraternal cooperation.

Together with my colleague, Comnrade Stanko Todorov, we are working to strengthen Romanian-Bulgarian parliamentary cooperation, and for this purpose we agreed to develop and expand the contacts between a greater number of permanent commissions of the Grand National Assembly and the National Assembly, to encompass other areas of cooperation, especially the economic and public culture areas. I am convinced that this will benefit our neighboring and friendly countries and peoples, as well as the cause of peace and socialism.

[Andreevski] How do you see the role of the parliaments in consolidating the spirit of Helsinki in international relations, securing peace on the old continent and throughout the world, and turning the Balkans into a zone free of nuclear and chemical weapons?

[Giosan] The Grand National Assembly places at the basis of its international activity the concept of Comrade Nicolae Ceausescu, leader of our party and state, according to which all parliaments and parliamentarians are acquiring a greater role in developing the atmosphere of peace, understanding, detente, and cooperation on the European Continent and throughout the world. This is namely the spirit which the Final Act of Helsinki gives to developing political life in Europe and the world, and which at present must encourage a successful completion of the Stockholm Conference, devoted to strengthening confidence and cooperation, and facilitating disarmament on our continent, as well as the Vienna talks on reducing arms and armed forces in central Europe.

The parliaments and parliamentarians have the noble goal of uniting their efforts to halt the arms race, progress toward disarmament, finally stop the nuclear experiments, reduce and completely eliminate nuclear weapons, and secure lasting peace in Europe and on the entire planet. The struggle to create zones free of nuclear weapons and without foreign bases in the Balkans, central and northern Europe, and other continents, acquires great significance in the achievement of these goals.

Socialist Romania's parliament and parliamentarians wish to cooperate even more closely with the parliament of socialist Bulgaria, our Bulgarian colleagues, and all parliaments and parliamentarians of the Balkan peninsula, with a view to turning this region of the Old Continent into a zone of peaceful coexistence, good-neighborliness, and broad and fruitful cooperation among all Balkan states.

LUKANOV CONVEYS ZHIVKOV MESSAGE TO CEAUSESCU

AU161805 Sofia BTA in English 1732 GMT 16 Jul 86

[Text] Bucharest, July 16 (BTA corr.) -- Mr. Andrey Lukanov, alternate member of the Politburo of the CC of the BCP and deputy chairman of the Council of Ministers of Bulgaria, paid a short businesslike visit to Bucharest.

He was received by Mr. Nicolae Ceausescu, secretary general of the Romanian Communist Party and president of Romania.

Mr. Andrey Lukanov conveyed greetings and a verbal message from Mr. Todor Zhivkov, secretary general [of the BCP Central Committee] and president of the State Council of Bulgaria. The two sides discussed issues in connection with the further widening and deepening of the Bulgaro-Romanian economic cooperation.

LEBANESE CONSULTATION'S END; AL-TURK STATEMENT

AU161529 Sofia BTA in English 1440 GMT 16 Jul 86

[Text] Sofia, July 16 (BTA) -- Political consultations were held here between the Ministries of Foreign Affairs of Bulgaria and Lebanon from July 14 through 16. They were held by Bulgaria's deputy foreign minister Mr. Ivan Ganev and by Mr. Fu'ad al-Turk, secretary general of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of Lebanon. The Lebanese guest was received by Mr. Khristov, minister of trade, by Prof. Ilcho Dimitrov, minister of national education, and by Mr. Mariy Ivanov, first deputy minister of foreign affairs.

The two sides noted with satisfaction that Bulgaro-Lebanese relations are developing in the traditional spirit of friendship and mutually advantageous cooperation and that they conform with the interests of the two countries and of the preservation of peace in the world.

Mr. Fu'ad al-Turk expressed the gratitude of Lebanon for the aid and support rendered by the Bulgarian Government and people to the Lebanese people in the difficult times it is now experiencing as a result of the continuing Israeli aggression of the occupation of Lebanese territories. He expressed Lebanon's support for the proposals of the countries of the socialist community directed towards the consolidation of peace and security in the world.

Mr. Ivan Ganev informed Mr. Fu'ad al-Turk of Bulgaria's development at the present stage and of the guidelines of her foreign policy. Special emphasis was laid on Bulgaria's constructive policy in the Balkans and on the great importance of the initiatives for turning the Balkans into a zone free of nuclear and chemical weapons. Bulgaria's deputy foreign minister expresed the solidarity of the Bulgarian people with the struggle of the ARab peoples for the triumph of the just Arab cause over the forces of imperialism and Zionism and especially with the struggle of the Arab people of Palestine for self-determination and for the foundation of an independent state. He also said that Bulgaria is for the preservation of the unity, territorial integrity and sovereignty of Lebanon, for the establishment of peace and security in that country and for the stopping of Israeli's aggressive actions against that country.

The consultations were held in the friendly and constructive spirit which characterizes the relations between the two countries.

Before leaving this country Mr. Fu'ad al-Turk made the following statement to a BTA reporter:

"I am leaving Bulgaria satisfied with my visit, which was positive and constructive. It is my opinion that it will contribute to the promotion of the friendly relations between the two countries. In future too, we will do all that is possible for their strengthening. The Bulgarian side has stressed its support for Lebanon's efforts for freeing itself from the Israeli occupation."

Mr. Fu'ad al-Turk said the following on the situation in the Middle East:

"We accept the proposal of the USSR for convening an international conference on the Middle East issue. It is our opinion that this is the best way to reaching a solution to this problem. This conference should be attended by all interested countries including the Soviet Union and the Palestine Liberation Organization -- the only legal representative of the Palestine people.

"We are also of the opinion that the Lebanese issue should be separated from the Middle East one. The settling of these Lebanese crises should start from southern Lebanon with the immediate and unconditional withdrawal of the Israeli troops from it."

STEFANAK ARTICLE ON FOREIGN POLICY TASKS

AU160601 Prague RUDE PRAVO in Czech 10 Jul 86 p 3

[Article by Michal Stefanak, head of the CPCZ Central Committee Department of International Policy: "Socialism, Social Progress, Peace; On the Tasks of Czechoslovak Foreign Policy After the 17th CPCZ Congress"]

[Text] The period following the 17th CPCZ Congress is characterized by the increased activity of our entire party and socialist in working out and implementing the congress conclusions in everyday work. This also applies to the broad foreign-political activities of our party and our state. The adoption of corresponding specific tasks in this sphere is based on well-substantiated reasons. Never in the past has the interlinkage or external and internal factors of our country's development been as tight as it is now -- both within the framework of the socialist community, and within the framework of worldwide development.

The mutual interdependance of countries and peoples in deepening. Their common interests are being enforced in the world arena. However, at the same time we see the effects of conflicts and contradictory tendencies. The deep social, economic, and scientific-technical conflicts in the individual countries and in the world are affecting not only the states' domestic policies, but also the overall development of the international situation.

Fight for Peace

The demand for the successful defense of peace is coming to the fore with even greater urgency. Everything else would become senseless, if this demand were not fulfilled. But the laws governing social progress demand more and more urgently that the efforts of the entire international community be united not only in the issues of war and peace, but also in resolving other global problems of mankind, such as -- and particularly -- the rapidly progressing pollution of living environments, the essential need to ensure sufficient natural resources for economic development, the elimination of poverty, hunger, and illiteracy, and so forth. The solution of these issues transcends state borders. In many ways it affects the very foundations of the existence of human civilization.

Today, when we have already stepped over the threshold of the nuclear and space age, we must adopt a new way of thinking which corresponds to the present times; and we must also be capable of adopting corresponding practical measures. In this respect the 27th Congress of the faternal CPSU has also been an inspiring force for the entire sphere of our foreign policy. The historical merit of the congress of Soviet communists is that it uncovered the causes of the deteriorating international situation on the basis of an analysis of social phenomena and trends in the contemporary world, and demarcated realistic roads to overcome them. It has formulated anew the Leninist strategy of peace and security.

Our own 17th CPCZ Congress has fully backed this principled, peace line of the USSR, since t also corresponds to the vital interests of our peoples. It is fully in harmony with the basic task of Czechoslovak foreign policy which -, as Comrade Gustave Husak stressed in the political report submitted by the CPCZ Central Committee to the 17th Congress, continues to lie in "the establishment of favorable external conditions for building the developed socialist society." This line corresponds to the demands and requirements of the times, to the longings and interests of nations throughout the world. We can implement it soley by proceeding jointly with the Soviet Union and the other socialist countries, in collaboration with all peace, antiwar, and democratic forces in the world.

Against the adventurous policy of confrontation and feverish armament foisted on the world by the most reactionary circles of U.S. imperialism and their closest allies, the social countries have erected their clearcut and attractive concept for a world without wars, a world of cooperation. The proposals currently being submitted by the Soviet Union and other Warsaw Pact member countries in international negotiations represent the broadest, comprehensive set of initiatives in the entire history of diplomacy. They are aimed at creating a comprehensive system of international security which would encompass the military, political, economic and humanitarian spheres. They are a practical program, the realization of which would mean the enforcement of the Leninist concept of peaceful coexistence in the practice of international relations.

We assess the current international situation in a realistic way. We know that the program of peace, security, and cooperation which has been formulated will be neither an easy nor a short-term affair. However, it is worth fighting for. There is no other way if the peoples want to live in lasting peace and friendship. Enforcement of this program will demand a joint effort by all states. It is also becoming the long-term task of our own foreign policy. We must exert every effort to accomplish it.

We will continue to devote extraodinary attention to the basic issues of the present, above all to averting the threat of a nuclear war, and to the entire broad scope of disarmament problems.

To Eliminate Arms of Mass Destruction

The Soviet draft program for the total elimination of nuclear and other weapons of mass destruction by the end of this century, the "star peace" program, as well as the USSR's course on the issue of banning nuclear arms tests, enjoy our full support. The same applies to other proposals, the realization of which would contribute toward fettering feverish armament. The proposals submitted by the Soviet Union and by other socialist countries today substantially cover all disarmament spheres, affecting the entire gamut from arms of mass destruction up to conventional armament, and resolving issues in both a worldwide and a regional context. The proposals neglect virtually none of the important problems, including the issue of inspection.

The principled peace line of the socialist countries was reaffirmed by the recent Budapest session of the Warsaw Pact's Political Consultative Committee, which adopted the Appeal of NATO Member States and to All European Countries on Reducing Armed Forces and Conventional Armament in Europe.

All these proposals and initiatives areopening broad scopes for even more active and effective operations of our foreign policy. They enhance the demands placed on the coordinated course of Czechoslovak diplomacy with that of our allies and on its involvement in all international forums -- during multilateral negotiations within the UN system, and at the conferences in Geneva, Stockholm, and Vienna.

Our contribution to the great common cause of peace and cooperation also lies in our own activity along the lines of bilateral and multilateral countries. The joint CSSR-GDR proposal to set up a zone free of chemical arms incentral Europe and the appeal for its expansion, as well as the bilateral CPCZ-SPD negotiations on environmental problems are two examples of this course of ours. They must be followed by other examples.

It is necessary to make use of all our possibilities to aid the normalization of international relations. From the geographical and political viewpoint it is only logical that we orient our main attention toward the European Continent. [paragraph continues]

The process of European security and cooperation which was begun in Helsinki is establishing -- both for us and for our neighbors in our, so-to-say, common home -- a good framework for collectively assessing and resolving the broadest possible circle of issues of mutual coexistence. With this aim in mind we also approach the preparations for the third follow-up CSCE meeting, which will be opened this autumn in Vienna.

Developing Cooperation With the Fraternal Countries

Alliance, friendship, and cooperation with the fraternal socialist countries, and above all with the Soviet Union, are of basic significance for the establishment of favorable conditions for speeding up the economic and social development of our society.

In many respects the future development, peace, and social progress of the world depend on the strength of the socialist community. Today the socialist countries are the only existing force which has at its disposal the necessary material means to successfully defend peace. Moreover, it is as we stressed at the 17th Congress: "None of the issues of world politics today can be resolved without the socialist community. And from this follows our co-responsibility for further dynamic growth, for the successes of socialism in the peaceful competition with capitalism."

The increasing interlinkage of external and internal factors is fully reflected in the individual socialist countries, but also within the framework of the entire community. The exacting tasks following from the programs of accelerated economic and social development are in our policy interconnected with the program of peace, security, and cooperation. The essential need to improve substantially the utlization of the advantage of socialism as a social system and also its economic and technical invincibility are making it more urgent than ever to assert new and more effective forms of cooperation in our mutual relations with the socialist countries in the political, economic, scientific-technical, and other spheres.

The unpostponable task of improving the entire mechanism of the fraternal countries' cooperation within the framework of the Warsaw Pact Organization and CEMA and the task of continuing to raise the efficiency of this mechanism have been put on the agenda of the day. At the same time the broad exchange of experience acquired in socialist construction by the individual countries and their comprehensive cooperation, coordination, and mutual collaboration in international issues, including issues of defense and security, are becoming increasingly significant.

The entire system of mutual contacts has been verified in practice. Practice has confirmed the usefulness of multilateral conferences, consultations, and friendly working visits on the highest level, as well as of the conferences of the fraternal parties' secretaries for ideological, international, economic, and political-organizational issues, and also of the contacts of our party and state agencies, organizations, and instituions.

We will also continue to support and expand such forms of contact in the future. We will strive to develop them dynamically and flexibly, so as to make them informal. They must contribute to the utmost toward accelerating the process of socialist economic integration, toward coordinating the national economic plans, toward eliminating all bureaucratic obstacles to the development of cooperation and specialization of production, and toward enforcing new and progressive forms of cooperation, such as the establishment of joint enterprises, scientific research associations, and so forth. We expect the establishment of direct relations between economic organizations in research, development, production, and sales to yield positive results. We have set ourselves impressive tasks, with a view to the year 2000. We are striving to carry out a rapid transition to the comprehensive intensification of production. [paragraph continued]

We want to achieve constant high labor productivity, and to raise the quality of products to correspond to the top world standards. We intend constantly to improve the population's living standards. For this purpose we have worked out and adopted certain long-term conceptual documents. Specifically, they include the comprehensive program of scientific-technical progress of the CEMA member countries up to the year 2000; the long-term program of economic and scientific-technical cooperation with the Soviet Union; and similar programs included with other socialist countries. Nevertheless, the realization of these, literally strategic, plans will not be feasible without an active, creative, and innovationist approach on the part of the entire economic and management sphere. This was also unambiguously stated at the congress.

Developing Countries

The countries which have liberated themselves from colonial oppression form the second significant group of states with which we are to develop active contacts, as the congress instructed us. These are states which are sincerely interested not only in consolidating their national and economic independence, but also in the defense of world peace and in practical measures leading to disarmament. These states are aware that increasingly high expenditures for military budgets on a worldwide scale are draining away the resources for resolving such important global problems of mankind as overcoming the developing countries' profound backwardness, the elimination of famines, chronic undernourishment, epidemics, illiteracy, and problems with the growing foreign debt, and other weighty obstacles to development. By their course, particularly on the territory of the Nonaligned Movement and within the framework of the so-called Delhi six, these countries are greatly strengthening the potential of peace forces in the world.

Our policy vis-a-vis the developing countries will continue to proceed from traditional solidarity. We want to deepen and develop equal relations with them in the interest of consolidating their political and economic independence. We will develop particularly close relations with countries that have embarked upon the path of socialist and progressive social changes. We presume that our cooperation with the developing countries will also include granting more extensive technical assistance, assistance in training cadres, and similar matters. In the political sphere we are ready to help with a just settlement of the situation in hotbeds of tension, and by averting new crises and conflicts. We will resolutely oppose the imperialist policy of state terrorism, aggression, and dictate, and the political and economic blackmailing of the developing countries.

The processes occurring in the so-called Third World lead logically to the growth of the importance and weight of the developing countries in international politics and in the world economy. Therefore, we see a long-term perspective in our relations with these states. A positive thing is that this perspective is not burdened by military-ideological aspects, as is the case in relations with a number of Western states.

Relations Toward Developed Capitalist States

Since the beginning of the 1980's the imperialist policy of the ruling U.S. circles and their proponents in NATO has, considerably complicated our relations with the developed capitalist systems, particularly with those on the territory of which the American first-strike missiles are being deployed. In this situation, the congresses of the fraternal parties, as well as consultations on the highest level, adopted decisions which combine the principledness of our common peace foreign policy with a flexible course toward these countries.

We proceed from the conviction that mankind has no other sensible alternative than the peaceful coexistence of states with different social systems. In this spirit we, together with our allies, are offering, the establishment of direct relations between the Warsaw Pact, NATO and between CEMA and the EEC in the economic sphere. These and other proposals and initiatives, especially in the sphere of disarmament and the development of the process of Europe-wide security, create a suitable framework for resolving all fundamental issues in relations between East and West.

Building a developed socialist society requires the mobilization of all resources by the socialist state. We do not hide the fact that the feverish arms buildup also demands of us that we expend more resources for defense. But we are expending them only to the degree to which the extent of arms buildup has been forced upon us.

The peace policy of the socialist countries is not a cyclical [konjunkturalni] affair. It is an enduring program on which the entire international community, including our ideological opponents, can count, and from which to proceed in relations toward us. Equally, our programs of economic and social development are also not fortuitous. They are long-term, future-oriented plans for development, which also open up scope for Western companies to have solid cooperation. In this respect, the advanced capitalist states have a reliable trade and economic partner in the CSSR.

We are sincerely interested in stable, mutually advantageous economic and scientific-technical cooperation with all who want it. We resolutely condemn economic sanctions, reject trade, technological, and financial embargoes, against those and other discriminatory practices, which are poisoning the overall international atmosphere, we and our allies counterpose the concept of international economic security. We also approach other spheres of our relations with the Western countries in a similar manner.

We will cooperate with those who approach mutual relations with us realistically. We will conduct a dialogue with all those who honestly strive for it. As was said at the 17th Congress: "We are for an open, honest, and fruitful dialogue, which would contribute to creating mutual trust and to consolidating international security in the spirit if the Final Act of the Helsinki Conference."

The CPCZ and the International Communist Movement

Our party's relations with the international communist and workers movement, of which the CPCZ is an integral part, are important. This movement is today engaged in roughly 100 countries and associates more than 80 million communists. As we stressed at the congress, we also regard it as our duty in the future to support all initiatives aimed at strengthening class solidarity and equal cooperation among the fraternal parties in the struggle for common objectives, peace, and socialism. In the interest of a common course, we consider it necessary to develop bilateral relations as well as multilateral forms of cooperation on the regional as well as on a broader scale.

Together with the other fraternal parties in the socialist countries, we will strive for the expansion of relations with socialist as well as social democratic parties. Despite the ideological differences we have an active dialogue with these parties is of help when it comes to a meaningful and systematic exchange of views as well as to the preparation of parallel or common actions in the struggle for peace and the improvement of the international situation. The CPCZ's recent contacts with the West German SPD and the Greek Panhellenic Socialist Movement can serve as an example of such a course.

Foreign contacts by the legislative bodies, social organizations, particularly of women and youth, participation by our collectives and prominent personalities from various fields of science, and the country's economic and social life in international nongovernmental organizations, various forms of partnership contacts and other things will have an indispensable place in our state's relations. They all contribute to enriching the life of our society and to its dynamic development. They help to develop contacts among people in the interest of understanding, friendship, and cooperation among nations.

The entire National Front is committed to the struggle for peace and social progress. It expands its contacts with the peace, antiwar, and democratic movements in the world. An important role here is played by the Czechoslovak Peace Committee, the Czechoslovak Committee for European Security and Cooperation, the Czechoslovak Society for International Relations, the Czechoslovak Solidarity Committee, and other organizations and institutions belong to the Czechoslovak public.

At the congress we affirmed that we will continue to creat prerequisites for the Czechoslovak peace movement to take an even more active part in the struggle of the world peace and antiwar forces.

WHAT IS IMPORTANT NOW, IN THE PERIOD AFTER THE 17TH CPCZ CONGRESS, IS FOR ALL RESPONSIBLE PARTY AND STATE AGENCIES TO FULFILL THE CREDO FORMULATED AT THE CONGRESS FOR THE SPHERE OF INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS: "IN OUR FOREIGN POLITICAL ACTIVITY WE ALWAYS WILL KEEP IN MIND THE FUNDAMENTAL INTERESTS OF THE CZECHOSLOVAK PEOPLE, THE SOCIALIST COMMUNITY, AND EVERYTHING THAT CONTRIBUTES TO SOCIAL PROGRESS AND PEACE IN THE WORLD. THIS LINE STEMS FROM THE VERY ESSENCE OF THE SOCIALIST SYSTEM. SOCIALISM, SOCIAL PROGRESS, AND PEACE ARE INDIVISIBLE." OUR IDEAL IS A WORLD WITHOUT WEAPONS AND WARS. EDITOR COMMENTS ON NUCLEAR POWER CONSTRUCTION

[Commentary by RUDE PRAVO Editor Milosav Vltavsky]

[Text] The recent meetingof builders of the Jaslovske Bohunice Nuclear Power Station to mark the completion of its construction was the culminatin of the many years of effort of thousands of workers. Since March 1986 our energy industry has had at its own disposal the projected output of two large thermal power stations. The experience gained from operating them shows that this method of producing electricity is advantageous in all ways. Relatively high investment expenditure is balanced by running reliability and the removal of such detrimental elements from the air as sulfur dioxide and ash. The Ecologically favorable results, together with the decreasing supplies of conventional fuels have contributed to the fast development of nuclear energy everywhere in the world, where the economy is sufficiently developed to be able to secure the construction.

In Czechoslovaki, after completing Jaslovske Bohunice, we have three large power stations under construction. This in itself shows that we have approached the vital structural change truly magnanimously. It will enable the production of 30 percent of electricity by the end of the Eighty 5-Year Plan from nuclear sources. With every reduction of specific consumption this figure can continue to increase and it is also planned that in the next decade the speed of construction and making the capacities operational will increase. This will be made possible by the selected concept of 1000 mw units which will begin to be put into operation in South Bohemia's Temelin from 1992.

The construction of the Temelin Power Station is the best prepared so far even though it is far from in an ideal state.

It is clear from the completed actions of the social program that the construction has the necessary order. The completed work, which has cost 600 million, kcs enabled the construction of housing, food centers, andother buildings vital for the work collective who will number thousands. The sufficient number of workers involved is intended to create the conditions in which people have time to completely concentrate on the perfect quality of their work. At nuclear power stations the quality of work done is and always will be a fundamental question which will decide on the perfection of the power station and its reliability. Haste cannot be permitted at all. Everything which has been done so far on the construction of our power stations has always been of the necessary quality. This must also be exceptionally praised because quality has the most significant influence on the output and safety of operation. This will be of primary importance in the future.

In a world where nuclear reactors are multiplying in an almost geometric series, reliability of production is naturally vital. Everything from research to authorization of the production blocks as fit for production must be subordinate to it. Our power industry envisions that by the end of the present century electricity will be supplied by not only all four Temelin blocks but also by two more which we will build in an as yet unspecified area. By the beginning if the new century, nuclear energy will take over the dominant role as our energy fuel. The need for electricity as a basic source of energy will also continue to rise because it must gradually replace the solid fuels used today for heating apartments and public buildings. It follows from all this that in order to realize the requirements of the 17th CPCZ Congress to build nuclear energy as a basic prerequisite of further economic and social development of our society, we have a thought-out and dignified approach. And this orientation is already bringing good results today.

HUSAK CONGRATULATES NEW SRV PARTY LEADER

[CTK report: "G. Husak's Congratulations"]

[Text] Prague (CTK) -- Gustav Husak, general secretary of the CPCZ Central Committee, sent the following telegram of congratulations to Truong Chinh, general secretary of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of Vietnam [CPV:]

Esteemed Comrade,

In the name of the CPCZ Central Committee, all Czechoslovak communists, and in my own name I congratulate you sincerely on your election as general secretary of the CPV Central Committee. The fact that the highest party post has been entrusted to you is an expression of the deep trust and respect which you enjoy among the communists and people of fraternal Vietnam.

We regard highly the CPV' principled policy mobilizing the broad masses of working people for building and defending their socialist homeland. We follow very attentively the efforts that you devote to the preparations of the sixth congress of your party.

We are convinced that relations between our parties and peoples, based on the firm principles of Marxism-Leninism and soxialist internationalism, will continue to successfully develop to the benefit of the two countries' peoples, in the interest or unity and cohesion of the socialist community and the international communist and workers movement.

We believe that the heroic Vietnamese people, led by their Communist Party, will achieve new successes, in close cooperation with the Soviet Union and other fraternal countries, in building socialism and in our joint struggle for peace and social progress in the world.

Dear Comrade Truong Chinh, accept the most cordial wishes of good health, great vigor, and many successes in your highly demanding and responsible work.

JAKES TOURS SOUTHERN BOHEMIA, MEETS OFFICIALS

LD162038 Prague Domestic Service in Czech 1430 GMT 16 Jul 86

[Text] Milos Jakes, Presidium member and secretary of the CPCZ Central Committee, visited southern Bohemia today.

The representatives of the South Bohemian Regional Party Committee in Ceske Budejovice informed him about the working out and gradual fulfilment of the conclusions of the 17th Congress.

Then Comrade Jakes visited the Koh-i-noor Enterprise and familiarized himself with the production of a new type of micrographites that the enterprise in Ceske Budejovice produces as the only one in the CEMA countries. He also visited the Chelcice United Farming Cooperative in the Strakonice area and agricultural workers in Vodnany where he inquired about the course of the harvest.

DELEGATION DEPARTS FOR NICARAGUA, CUBA

TRADE EXCHANGE DISCUSSED WITH USSR OFFICIALS

DW162006 East Berlin Television Service in German 1730 GMT 16 Jul 86

[Text] In Berlin today, Werner Krolikowski, first deputy Council of Ministers chairman and SED Central Committee Politburo member, and Viktor Ivanov, USSR deputy foreign trade minister, discussed foreign trade problems between the GDR and the USSR. The interlocutors stressed that the basis for the development of cooperation were the agreements reached between Erich Honecker and Mikhail Gorbachev. Deliveries in good quaility, in the proper variety, and according to schedule are of large importance for the supply of the economy and people in both countries. Werner Krolikowski and Viktor Ivanov informed each other about the workers' initiatives for the implementation of the resolutions by both party congresses and about their performance in socialist competition.

PRC STUDY DELEGATION CONCLUDES 2-WEEK VISIT

[Text] Berlin (ADN) -- On Thursday [10 July] in Berlin Song Rufen, head of the study delegation of the Legislative Work Commission of the Standing Committee of the PRC National People's Congress, stressed the usefulness of the numerous friendly talks in th GDR. At a concluding meeting with Wolfgang Weichelt, chairman of the Constitution and Law Committee of the People's Chamber, both sides expressed their satisfaction with the results of the 2-week visit.

The Chinese politician praised the traditionally deep friendship between both countries and peoples. He expressed recognition for the great achievements of the GDR's working people in building socialism. The study of the well developed legal system has provided the guests with numerous valuable experiences, stated Song Rufen, deputy chairman of the Legislative Work Commission. Of particular interest was the democratice preparation of the laws in the GDR and the regular review of their observance and efficiency in practice carried out by the working groups of the Constitution and Law Committee.

On Thursday the delegation ended its visit to the GDR and left for home.

GDR PROTESTS AIRSPACE VIOLATION BY FRG AIRCRAFT

LD161636 East Berlin ADN International Service in German 1612 GMT 16 Jul 86

[Text] Berlin, 16 Jul (ADN) -- A glider from the FRG, registration mark d-1488, violated GDR airspace and landed in the vicinity of Frankenheim, Meiningen Kreis, (Suhl Bezirk), on 15 July. The pilot, according to his own details, is Hardy Ruhkamp, an FRG citizen. He was handed over to the responsible investigating organs to clarify the causes of the airspace violation.

The GDR's Permanent Mission in the FRG has protested again to the FRG Federal Chancellery about the violation of GDR airspace and has expressed the expectation that steps will be taken by responsible bodies of the FRG to exclude future violations of GDR airspace.

HORST DOHLUS ADDRESSES PEOPLE'S CHAMBER

AU141217 East Berlin NEUES DEUTSCHLAND in German 18 Jun 86 pp 6-7

[Address given by Horst Dohlus, Politburo member and secretary of the SED Central Committee, at second meeting of GDR People's Chamber in Berlin on 17 June]

[Text] Esteemed deputies, at the beginning of this address allow me to fulfill an honorable assignment which -- we are confident of that -- is a matter close to the hearts of all deputies of the People's Chamber.

Thousands of friends and comrades, citizens from all classes and strata of the people have turned to us with the request to express the most cordial congratulations from the rostrum of the People's Chamber to Comrade Erich Honecker on his renewed election as chairman of the GDR State Council.

These congratulations are combined with cordial wishes for good health, creative vigor, and the further successful work of the tested workers' leader and statesman for the benefit of the people.

Esteemed deputies, the SED parliamentary group fully agrees with the statement of the chairman of the GDR Council of Ministers, Comrade Willi Stoph.

With their decision for the election appeal and for the candidates of the National Front the citizens of our country have unanimously shown their determination to jointly implement the demanding tasks set by the 11th SED Congress as a working program of the entire people. They have decided that the election appeal of the National Front now becomes the government program.

Together we stick to the fact that the safeguarding of peace, the further strengthening of our worker-peasant state, the course of the main task in its unity of economic and social policy will continue to determine the work of our party and our entire people.

As outlined at the 11th Party Congress, we will continue this tested course through to the year 2000. All the people agree with that.

Our people have the firm and solid conditions required to master the new social tasks. We are tackling them on the basis of a stable foundation, that was set up jointly by all classes and strata, through the industriousness of our people.

These are achievements of which our people are proud and which are highly respected throughout the world. We will constantly augment them and will never allow them to be denigrated of talked to death.

The golden asset of our socialist development is above all the people themselves, their awareness of political responsibility in our time, their high level of education and knowledge, their comprehensive social activity. This is the most valuable asset of our successful balance sheet and the decisive guarantee for progress in the new phase of development.

Esteemed deputies, the foreign political course presented in the government statement is most deeply in line with the policy of peace and social progress which our party implements in the tested, close cooperation with the parties and mass organizations united in the democratic bloc.

The five main directions for the GDR foreign policy presented by Comrade Erich Honecker at the 11th Party Congress expressly stress: it remains our supreme maxim to do everything possible to safeguard peace, end the arms race on earth and prevent its expansion into space.

In view of the dangerous aggravation of the international situation caused by imperialism, our party has regarded and regards it as the decisive task to make an efficient contribution to lessening the danger of war, to implementing the concerted socialist peace policy, to ensuring the universal strengthening of real socialism.

It remains our desire to work with all our strength to create a worldwide coalition of reason and realism, to advance the policy of active dialogue and constructive cooperation to lessen the danger of war together with all forces in the world ready for an understanding and wanting peace, because the international situation is still tense and complicated.

Against the declared will of the peoples, the Reagan administration continues the course of intensive armament and confrontation together with its closest allies in NATO. The work to implement the star wars plans is intensified and the nuclear arms tests are being continued despite the Soviet Union's proposals.

An extremely dangerous step by the United States is the announced breaking with the SALT II treaty. This is an attempt to abandon the military strategic balance and open the doors to the arms race. The production of new extremely dangerous chemical mass destruction means is also intended to serve this purpose.

This aggressive policy aggravates the international situation. But it is doomed to fail, because the forces of peace and reason are stronger than those of the warmongers. It is high time that the United States stops its nuclear arms tests, in agreement with the joint declaration signed at the Geneva summit, and prepare for constructive negotiations with the Soviet Union.

The proposals that are on the table for that again demonstrate how the socialist policy of peace defends the security and the life of all peoples of our world.

This is demonstrated by the program to create a system of international security adopted by the 27th CPSU Congress and by the Soviet proposal to radically reduce the conventional armaments and armed forces from the Atlantic to the Urals submitted by the CPSU Central Committee general secretary, Comrade Mikhail Gorbachev, at the 11th SED Congress.

This is also demonstrated by the appeal of the Warsaw Pact states to the NATO states to reduce the armed forces and conventional armaments in Europe. For today resolute actions and concrete measures are more necessary than ever to end the arms race, to start a real disarmament, and to eliminate the danger of war. The words from Budapest are words of reason and responsibility for the fate of mankind.

As Comrade Erich Honecker stressed at the second Central Committee meeting, we are firmly convinced that the Budapest meeting of the Political Consultative Committee will give an essential new impetus for the improvement of the international situation and for rejecting the imperialist policy of threat and confrontation. This significant meeting of the Warsaw Pact states has indicates a realistic and constructive way for all forces that are interested in peace and security. The implementation of our ideas and initiatives will contribute to further mobilizing the peace forces and to their cooperation.

Again the socialist community of fraternally allied states is proving to be the main force of peace and progress in the world.

The expansion of cooperation with the fraternal socialist states, and above all the constant strengthening of friendship and universal cooperation with the Soviet Union, is the prerequisite for the further successful advance of our republic on the way of shaping the developed socialist society. Our states are doing everything necessary to guarantee the defense strength of our alliance and this is also linked with a constructive peace policy pointing out to mankind the real road to a world without wars and without arms.

Esteemed deputies, in the relations between the GDR and the FRG safeguarding peace has always been and is the decisive question. Both German states have a special responsibility in this respect -- when one regards the lessons of history alone. In this connection the inviolability of the borders and respect for the territorial integrity and sovereignty of all states in Europe in their present borders are a basic condition for peace.

We maintain the principle and again reaffirm it: Never again must war emanate from German soil, but only peace.

The situation on our continent could be essentially changed for the better, if the FRG really took the path of detente and establishing good-neighborly relations. No chance for improving the international situation must be wasted. No additional burdens for the situation in Europe must emanate from the relations between the GDR and the FRG.

For us, the constructive approach, the continued readiness for dialogue and for equal cooperation in accordance with the norms of international law are not questions of tactics or the policy of the day. They stem from the basic line of a reliable, constantly calculable peace policy of the socialist German state.

As always, we are in solidarity with all those struggling for social progress and national self-determination.

Everyone who wants to make the world more secure against violence and nuclear destruction will always have a reliable partner in the GDR. This is also demonstrated by the personal commitment that is highly appreciated by our people and internationally, and we cordially thank him for it.

Esteemed deputies, the development of the GDR as an internationally respected, politically stable, and economically efficient states is directly linked with the further strengthening of socialism.

As is in line with socialism, the tasks set by the Council of Ministers are determined by the unity of economic and social policy.

In this way the GDR has guaranteed continuous economic growth for over 1 and 1/2 decades, something only a few countries in the world have been able to achieve, and it constantly uses it for the benefit of the people and for social progress. The GDR's successes are a historic testimony to the things real socialism can achieve.

In industry and agriculture, in science, education, and culture, as well as in all other social fields we are making good progress in our efforts to make the year of the 11th SED Congress the year with the highest achievements to date.

In the cities and rural areas the working people's initiatives under the slogan "My work place -- the place where I fight for peace" are directed in the socialist competition toward considerably overfulfilling the key targets of the national economic plan and achieving an accountable concrete surplus of products and performances for the national economy, for the people, and for export -- and this is particularly important.

Everyone daily feels that good work directly enriches and beautifies life. And it will remain like that in the future, for this is the meaning of our policy marked by closeness to the people.

Esteemed deputies, since the 10th SED Congress we have been working for a change toward comprehensive intensification and have introduced a far-reaching innovation process of production. Now we are about to put the intensively expanded reproduction onto a lasting foundation and to organically link the advantages of socialism on a new step with the achievements of the scientific-technological revolution, which in turn has entered into a new phase. The party's economic strategy, which already takes into account the year 2000, is a reliable compass for that.

In accordance with that we concentrate our strength on those areas that are crucial in determining the pace of development and the performance capacity of a national economy. Microelectronics, computing technology, and computer-aided design, planning and controlling of the production penetrate all fields of the national economy to an ever greater extent. Our country has good prerequisites for developing these sectors rapidly.

The directive of the 11th SED Congress for the 5-year plan for the development of the national economy in the 1986-90 period sets far-reaching tasks also for utilizing flexible, automated manufacturing systems, new processing methods and materials, biotechnologies, nuclear energy, and laser technology.

And the growth rate in labor productivity depends in particular on mastering these key technologies. Here we proceed from the fact that gaining time in these sectors means gaining strength for socialism, that progress in these sectors determines the pace of the social progress. This insight stimulates above all the high quality of the competition targets in the combines, of the "11th SED Congress FDJ drive," and the resolution adopted by the FDGB on organizing the socialist competition.

The creative initiatives of the young people of our country, of the youth brigades and youth research collectives are thus given a wide field for action.

It is most closely in line with the tasks of the 11th Party Congress and thus with the interests of the working people, if the government statement makes the struggle for top performance a major concern of the work of the Council of Ministers.

The Council of Ministers must solve significant tasks to secure the most efficient use of all energy resources, raw materials and materials. Simply the task of saving an energy equivalent of 80 million metric tons of brown coal in 1990 compared to 1985, requires a whole national economic program and the close cooperation of all economic sectors.

In general it is in line with our national economic possibilities and necessities to achieve a far higher refinement rate for raw materials and energy resources through qualified work and scientific-technological top performances. Closely linked with that is the demand of the products of the highest quality, without which top performances are unthinkable today.

The material-technological base of the GDR will be strengthened above all as a result of the modernization of the basic assets. The share of investments for rationalization must continue to increase. This presupposes the decisive qualitative and quantitative strengthening of the domestic production of rationalization means by combines, for here is the starting point for the broad application of the key modern technologies in such a way that they have a clear effect on the production process.

Of course, the accelerated development of the productive forces results in far-reaching changes in the work process. But one thing is not changed: Man is the center of socialist rationalization. The progress of modern productive forces calls for a creative climate and conditions that encourage performance in all of social life, including cultural and leisure activities.

Independent of the acceleration of the scientific-technological revolution -- our country's working people will not know unemployment or fear for their livelihood.

All the leaders in the state and the economy have the job of discussing in time and thoroughly the questions connected with the socialist intensification with the working people and of determining the measures required in mutual agreement. This includes all aspects of the working people's working and living conditions, in particular in the transition to shift work as well as the necessary qualification and constant advanced education.

The SED parliamentary group stresses the priority given in the government statement to housing construction as the centerpiece of our sociopolitical program.

We are approaching quite close to one of the great aims of the revolutionary workers movement. The over 1 million apartments that have to be built or modernized according to the directive of the 11th SED Congress for working out the 5-year plan will make it possible to solve the housing question as a social problem in the GDR. Every citizen will then have the appropriate living space as one of the elementary preconditions for the purposeful life of every individual and every family.

An essential task for further increasing the people's material and cultural living standard is to make the adequate production of a sufficient quantity of consumer goods of high quality the cause of the entire national economy to an even greater extent.

This is necessary for the further increase of the material and cultural living standard of the people as well as for implementing the socialist performance principle, which has to be taken into account in an even better way through products that are highly attractive, of good quality, and reliable. For our people the best is just good enough and all products for the people and for the export should be of the same stamp.

With the efficient capacities of the combines, the skilled workers, and the masterly traditions of our small business enterprises, we have all the conditions we need for this.

Esteemed deputies, also in agriculture, an efficient part of our national economy, the main thing is to achieve further essential progress in intensifying production. For a high level of production we need to be economical in the use of material, energy, and basic assets. The even more comprehensive use of science and technology will result in an even better utilization of the forces of nature. For this the highest yield and highest performance concepts, linking science and the farmers' experiences, are an efficient instrument.

Significant reserves are to be developed through eliminating unjustified differences in performance.

The cooperation between the LPGs and the state farms engaged in plant and animal production is to be further deepened, above all as a result of the cooperation councils carrying out their management functions better and better. In further shaping the intracooperative democracy, the influence of the general assemblies on all principal decisions is to be further increased.

The village will continue to develop as a charming center of agricultural production and rural living with a settled youth in which the essential difference between city and rural areas will be overcome.

The further processing and refinement of agricultural products in the agricultural enterprises and institutions of the Peasants Mutual Aid Association are increasing in importance. Because of its significant contribution to supplying the people, the individual production of the cooperative peasants and workers as well as of the small gardeners, settlers, and small livestock breeders is to be further effectively supported.

Esteemed deputies, the constant deepening and expansion of the scientific and economic relations of the national economy of the GDR and the USSR are of particular importance for continuing the unity of the economic and social policy. With the long-term program concluded for that through to the year 2000, its basic prospects have been outlined, which are to an ever greater extent marked by the requirements of intensification. The development and utilization of key modern technologies are becoming increasingly important.

The comprehensive program of the scientific-technological progress of the CEMA countries, for the active implementation of which we are working, will contribute to achieving a further gain in peace.

The SED parliamentary group stresses the important place which the further steps toward improving management, planning, and economic cost accounting will occupy in the work of the Council of Ministers. Democratic centralism is an unavoidable principle of the management of the economy here and in all other social spheres. In the future too, all basic economic processes will be firmly in the hands of the state.

It is one of our historical experiences that by means of strict central management and planning we can guarantee the joint aim of the work and a relationship of input and economic and social output that is favorable for the entire society. Because of the socialist planned economy we have succeeded in solving difficult questions in the interest of the people through all phases of the GDR's development.

The government's work, the way of working of the ministries, the National Planning Commission, as well as other state organs will be even more strongly concentrated on the growing national economic responsibility of the combines in the future. This means above all to set clear economic guidelines in the plan for the work of the combines and to create the national economic conditions for efficient production.

The main point is to improve the material-technological correlated targeting in the unity of utility value and value through modern computing technology. The plan discipline must be increased further, in particular regarding the fulfillment of the state plan positions to ensure that one element of the chain of national economic reproduction does not affect many others.

The central state management and planning is all the more efficient the better it is linked with the creative activity of the working people, with the combines enterprises, cooperatives', and local state organs' own responsibility. This includes the socialist competition, the comprehensive plan discussion, the broad application of tested methods of socialist management economy and exact performance comparisons of the economic units and regions as firm elements of the democratic participation of the working people.

In accordance with the resolutions of the 11th Party Congress, the Council of Ministers must improve the complex management of processes that are decisive for the national economy, increase the long-term character of its work, organize an even more efficient control of the adopted tasks and make the experiences of the best common knowledge. This fully applies in these days and weeks for the discussion on the directive of the 11th Party Congress on the 5-year plan.

Esteemed deputies, the experiences of our path say that in further developing the advantages and driving powers of the socialist society, the socialist state plays a decisive role.

It is and will remain the basic question of the socialist revolution that there cannot be socialism without a strong and well-functioning state power led by a Marxist-Leninist party.

An important cornerstone of socialist state power remains the close cooperation of all parties and mass organizations in the democratic block, in the GDR National Front, and in the people's representations that has ripened over 4 decades and is based on growing trust. The SED pays great attention to the development of trustful coexistence in strengthening our state.

The policy of alliance is one of the most significant historic achievements of our party. The political-moral unity of our people will continue to strengthen on this basis. Citizens of 11 classes and strata, communists, members of the friendly parties and nonpartisans unite their forces to further increase the overall well-being, irrespective of ideology and religious denomination.

In our country the working people are highly prepared to work to solve the state and social tasks and assume responsibility. It is the supreme principle of the work of state leadership to promote this readiness and the initiatives through the further development of socialist democracy. In our socialist communal policy it can be felt most directly, as the citizen directly feels the unity of economic and social policy and can influence decisions. With the law on the local people's representation the joint work of the local state organs, enterprises, institutions, and citizens in the region is purposefully promoted and expanded according to the prospects in the interest of a constant increase in performance and universal well-being.

All deputies bear a high responsibility in this connection. Equipped with the mandate of the people, everyone has the task of taking effectively into account the high political activity, the personal commitment of the citizens, and their creative work and to work as a true representative of the people's interests every day.

Whether minister or mayor, deputy to the People's Chamber or representative of a community, general director or skilled worker -- all who bear responsibility in our state have the civic duty to safeguard the rights of the citizens, respect their thoughts and experiences, represent their justified interests, and ensure that all the things that need improvement are put in order. The concerns of the citizens must never be dealt with in an indifferent or irresponsible way.

All proposals and statements of the citizens must be carefully exmained and are to be used for economic and social progress. All clever ideas, creative initiatives, and the whole readiness of the citizens to participate represent an important fund for our successful advance.

Esteemed deputies, with the positive balance sheet of the achievements, the outstanding election result and with our strong worker-peasant power, we have favorable prerequisities and conditions to successfully implement the resolutions of the 11th SED Congress. Millions of hands are working everywhere in our country to achieve this, because the citizens feel the corrections of the policy marked by closeness to the masses in all sectors of life and are certain of the reliability of the resolutions taken.

In this optimistic atmosphere, esteemed deputies, we will direct all our strength and deeds at further strengthening our GDR, at strengthening socialism and safeguarding peace.

HONECKER MESSAGE TO SRV'S TRUONG CHINH

AU161000 East Berlin NEUES DEUTSCHLAND in German 15 Jul 86 p 1

[Text] General secretary of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of Vietnam [CPV]

Comrade Truong Chinh

Hanoi

Dear Comrade Truong Chinh!

On your election as CPV Central Committee general secretary, I convey to you most cordial congratulations and fraternal greetings on behalf of the SED Central Committee and on my own behalf.

These are combined with the firm conviction that, under the leadership of their communist party, the Vietnamese people will further successfully advance in building socialism and in securing the happy future of the country. On the basis of the treaty of friendship and cooperation, the GDR will always be firmly at the side of the fraternal Vietnamese people.

Convinced that in the future the fraternal relations between our parties, states, and people will also universally develop and deepen in the spirit of Marxism-Leninism and proletarian internationalism, I wish you, dear Comrade Truong Chinh, every success, health, and creative vigor in your responsible work at the head of the CPV.

With socialist greetings
SED Central Committee

MESSAGE TO MONGOLIAN LEADERS ON ANNIVERSARY

AU161138 East Berlin NEUES DEUTSCHLAND in German 11 Jul 86 pp 1-2

[Text] Erich Honecker, SED Central Committee general secretary and GDR State Council chairman, and Willi Stoph, chairman of the GDR council of Ministers, have sent the following telegram to Jambyn Batmonh, general secretary of the Central Committee of the Mongolian People's Revolutionary Party [MPRP] and chairman of the Presidium of the People's Great Hural of the Mongolian People's Republic [MPR], and to Dumaagiyn Sodnom, chairman of the MPR Council of Ministers.

Dear Comrades, on the occasion of the 65th anniversary of the Mongolian people's revolution, we convey to you, the MPRP Central Committee, the Presidium of the People's Great Hural, the Council of Ministers, and the fraternal people of the MPR most cordial congratulations and fraternal militant greetings on behalf of the SED Central Committee, the State Council, the Council of Ministers, and the people of the GDR, as well as on our own behalf.

The Mongolian people gained victory in the antifeudal, anti-imperialist people's revolution 65 years ago through their heroic liberation struggle under the MPRP's leadership. In the new phase of mankind's history introduced by the Great October Socialist Revolution, clear prospects for fundamental social reshaping, for the path from feudal backwardness to social progress opened up for the Mongolian people.

In the past 65 years the MPR has developed into a socialist agricultural-industrial state with a flourishing culture and increasing welfare for its citizens. This was impressively demonstrated by the positive results presented by the Mongolian Communists at the 19th MPRP Congress.

Closely united with the Soviet Union and the other fraternal socialist states, the MPR consistently works to implement the most urgent task of the present, the safeguarding of peace. In this spirit the MPR most clearly raises its voice on the Asian continent and develops significant activities to strengthen security, to develop mutual understanding and cooperation among the states of the region.

We note with pleasure that the close relations of fraternal friendship and universal cooperation between our fraternal parties, states, and peoples are constantly developing and deepening on the stable foundation of the principles of Marxism-Leninism and proletarian internationalism.

We wish you, dear comrades, all communists, and the entire fraternal people of the MPR great successes in fulfilling the resolutions of the 19th MPRP Congress aimed at the well-being of the people and the strengthening of socialism and peace.

PERSONAL INCOME, EXPENDITURES SURVEYED

AU160928 Budapest NEPSZABADSAG in Hungarian 12 Jul 86 p 5

[Interview given by Dr Istvan Baranyai, head of a department of the Central Statistical Office, to Gabor Istvan Benedek: "How Do The Workers and Intellectuals' Families Live?" First three paragraphs are paper's introduction; place and date not given]

[Text] How rich are we? How much do we spend on food, culture, clothes, cars, housing, and on making our home attractive? The Central Statistical Office has just finished summing up the data of a representative survey conducted last year on household expenses in Hungary. The manuscript of the report, containing thousands of statistics, had not yet reached the printers when we asked Dr Istvan Baranyai, head of a department at the Central Statistical Office, for details.

First, he provides us some general data. Prior to 1983, the Central Statistical Office examined the income, the structure of expenses, and the housing conditions of the families annually. The survey covered 7,500-8,000 households. Since 1983, the survey has been conducted every 2 years, summing up the data every odd year while the number of households in the survey has risen to 12,000. A household is not the same as a family; the concept has more an economic content than a legal one, as it is a community of persons who -- irrespective of their kinship -- represent a uniform income and consuming community.)

On Food And Beverages

The survey covered all the towns with a population larger than 25,000; among the smaller settlements, the survey covered smaller and larger towns, various types of towns and villages proportionally. Then, within these settlements, the survey chose residential districts and households at random. With the exception of private contractors, the survey covered all strata of the population. In the course of grouping and processing the data, the survey took into consideration the comples changes that have taken place in Hungarian society.

[Benedek] It is not an easy task to collect hundreds of statistics from 12,000 households one by one. How reliable are these partial data, which are meant to reflect the overall situation?

[Baranyai] The supply of information is voluntary and indeed, it represented a considerable burden for the people who helped us in this vast; important, and indispensable work. I use this opportunity to thank our partners and to continue to assure them that the information they give us is dealth with confidentially, without mentioning names and addresses; our publications are not personal; they reflect strata and group averages. At the same time, however, I must also mention the fact that every fifth household originally chosen for the survey refused to cooperate. Many people closed their doors, particularly in Budapest and the larger cities. It is most difficult to win the confidence of people living in inadequately ordered circumstances and of people with high incomes.

Apart from the majority of data supplied by the households surveyed, which adequately reflect the financial situation of certain strata, there have been quite a few people who deliberated suppressed certain data or forgot to mention certain data. [paragraph continues]

The suppression of data caused particular problems mainly in collecting precise statistics on supplementary incomes and on the purchase of alcoholic beverages. There have been cases in which people willingly "forgot" to mention a smaller part of their income and mentioned only half of a third of their actual consumption of alcoholic beverages. Of course, such incomes do not always make it to the family budget since they are spent "on the way", in the bars. We spend more on coffee, tobacco, candy, newspapers, flowers, and cosmetics than we later remember. Today, we buy so many items that it is indeed very difficult to remember every single item purchases and to record it daily. But this is the same on an international level.

[Benedek] I know that it is not nice to ask any of our acquaintances how much he earns, how much he can spend, and how much he actually spends, but perhaps the statistical office should not be shy.

[Baranyai] The consumption expenses on goods and services per capita of workers families (including the children and no difference between workers families living in towns or villages) stood at 43,000 forints last year. Cooperative peasants reported 39,100 forints and the white-collar families 57,300 forints expenses. Pensioners mentioned 39,700 Forints. I stress again that the expenses not mentioned due to oversight, or deliberately in some cases (with the exception the pensioners who answer the questions more carefully), push the sums up to a certain extent.

Particularly informative are the statistics on the expenses of each strata on food. The peasant families "eat up" 35.3 percent of their expenses; it is true, however, that this percentage of more than one-third also includes their own vegetables, garden fruit and household animals. The workers households buy food for 32.70 of each 100 forints spent, while white-collar households spend only 26.10 forints on food. Pensioners spend 41.2 percent of their expenses on food; small pensioners spend even more; 48 percent. On alcoholic beverages, coffee, and tobacco -- I stress, only officially -- the workers spend 3,780 forints and white-collar workers 3,640 forints.

[Benedek] What do the figures show: What kind of goods did we accumulate within the confines of our homes last year?

[Baranyai] If we quote the old saying that men are judged according to the clothes they wear, workers and peasants spent approximately the same amount of money on clothing, 4,400 forints per person, and white-collar workers 5,700 forints. More difference is noticeable in the case of expensive durable consumer goods. We think here of cars, household appliances, radios, television sets, furniture, and so on. While workers spent 3,670 forints on such items, the white-collar workers spent 6,120 forints. We have recorded a considerable difference also in the expense on heating, electricity consumption, gas consumption, kitchen and room equipment, detergents, medicine, books, newspapers, and sport articles. Workers spent 7,580 forints on the above mentioned items and white-collar workers 11,390 forints. There is a considerable difference also in the so-called services chapter. While workers spent 5,570 forints on rent, common expenses in the case of cooperative housing, painting, various machines, repairs of vehicles, cleaners, hairdressers, holidays, vacations, movies, concerts, post, and lawyers, white-collar workers spent 9,860 forints on the same items.

[Benedek] The average and statistical standardization conceal conceptual details. Who are the people who belong to the white-collar occupations?

[Baranyai] On one hand, the leaders, those who guide the state, economic, and public life; they are at the top of this group of people finanicially. On the other hand, graduate professional who do not occupy management jobs and people with high school or lesser education who fill various white-collar positions also belong to this category. We are talking here about a considerable number of people, therefore we separate the graduate professionals with management positions from those employed in non-management positions; their income perceptibly exceeds the average of the white-collar workers by 7-10 percent. A good example of this is provided by the private car statistics. We find a car in 36 out of 100 households in Hungary. With workers families, this porportion is about average (37 cars), while 63 percent of the white-collar workers possess a car. Within this last figure, however, 75 perecent of the intelligentsia households "support" a car. We must mention this separately, as this is a new phenomenon in Hungarian society, that the number of cars in families of pensioners is increasing. The families purchase the car in their "active" period and do not part with it later. By the way, today every fourth household in Hungary is a "pensioner household".

Houses and Country Cottages

[Benedek] We can talk about the housing issue in many respects. What is the picture as regards the size of the dwellings of certain strata of society that emerges from last year's data?

[Baranyai] Some 36 percent of the workers, 48 percent of the white-collar workers, and 16 percent of the pensioners live in three or more rooms. Some 49 percent of the workers, 44 percent of the white-collar workers, and 50 percent of the pensioners live in 2-room apartments. We find 15 percent of the workers, 8 percent of the white-collar workers, and 34 percent of the pensioners in 1-room apartments. Out of every 100 workers families, 74 live in apartments with bathroom and flushing toilets, while the percentage in the case of white-collar workers and pensioners is 93 and 50 percent respectively. At the same time, workers households dwelling, the peasant households spend 8.1 percent, white-collar households spend 9 percent, and pensioners spend 15.1 percent. It is perhaps worth mentioning that 6 percent of the workers families and 17.8 percent of the white-collar workers own country cottages and weekend houses. However, the dynamics of acquiring housing has slowed down. The creation of a new home requires considerable effort on the part of the families and the parents are increasingly contributing to solving the housing problems of the young people.

[Benedek] Although per capita income is larger in absolute terms in the families of white-collar workers than in the case of workers households -- the difference is 12,200 forints a year, that is, a little more than 1,000 forints per month -- it seems from the detailed data that the families of white-collar workers posses more valuable items, purchase more, and are clearly more prosperous. How do you explain this?

[Baranyai] Partly by the above mentioned higher income and partly by the structure of purchase and consumption. By a more rational and careful distribution of kitchen money one can save a considerable amount of expenses. Considerable amounts of money can also be saved on beverages.

Taking everything in consideration: those in white-collar households who are actively working earn an average of 28 percent more during their main activity than workers. In addition, the difference between the pensions of those in this group and the pensioners in the workers households is 17 percent to the benefit to the benefit of the white-collar pensioners. This differnce is incresed by the fact that, while 100 active earners in white-collar positions must take care of 63 dependents -- mostly children -- workers families must take care of more dependents: 67. Another factor is that there is a perceptibly greater loss of income due to illness in the circle of the workers compared to the white-collar workers. This income surplus noticed with the white-collar workers can only be partially compensated for by the fact that the "income deriving from the sale of goods from small scale agricultural activity" and the food produced for their own consumption are larger in the case of workers than white-collar workers since a larger proportion of workers live in villages.

Neither is it accidental from the viewpoint of purchasing and accumulating goods how one acquires that "extra" income. Income from sources beyond the main activity or main job is frequent among both white-collar workers and workers. But we must not forget that, in spite of this, there a lot of areas of intellectual and manual activity where there are no or only limited possibilities for "side work." A pharmacist, a council clerk or child-welfare officer, or a small town teacher, for example, can get some extra work only by accident.

Young People Starting On their Careers

[Benedek] White-collar workers starting their career and young professionals in white-collar jobs are in a difficult financial situation. Do the statistics refer to this situation?

[Baranyai] Of course. The pay of the graduate professionals matches that of skilled workers at the age of 28-30, but since skilled workers become wage earners much earlier than professionals, their "overall" income is tangibly higher than that of the graduate professionals even at the age of 30. However, the statistics also mention the fact that once they pass this age, the wages of the professionals generally increase faster.

[Benedek] Can we draw the conclusion then that talented and ambitious young people who do not continue their studies or stop them because of financial considerations are wrong in their decisions?

[Baranyai] The more sources that are available for young people who wish to work, earn, and prosper the better. There is an increase in possibilities in today's Hungary although we are witnessing a regrouping of financial sources. This process is often taking place in a distorted way. Thus there are considerable differences in among wages of various white-collar positions and this fact greatly influences young people in choosing their profession. Some areas are not attractive and this can lead to social problems in the long run. There is a considerable numbe rof graduate professionals who leave their original career. It is also true, of course, that, compared to the seventies, everyone has a more difficult life and this is also reflected in our data. Compared with 1978, last year the real value of average wages deriving from the main activity was 8 percent lower. Pensioners, too, are in a considerably more difficult situation. Some people responded to the changes by restructing their consumption. Therefore, many people are forced to spend the greater part of their income on food and only a smaller part on clothes and the purchase of durable goods while, within their purchases, quantitative needs increasingly substitute for qualitative consumption. However, for the talented, ambitious young people, it continues to be worth studying. A diploma multiplies individual possibilities.

At the same time, consumption plays a particular role in people's lives. If we have become accustomed to a certain level, we find it difficult to give up its advantages. That is why many people take extra work in their free time. We see that an increasing number of people nowadays are looking for new sources of income. Statistics also recorded this process. Until we find the most profitable answer to the challengers of the world, the income and consumption expenses of households and families will motivate our everyday life with many contradictions and tensions. But we should not see only the negative aspect in this but encouragement too: each strata will find it imaginatively for the available goods.

MAGYAR HIRLAP COMMENTS ON ECONOMIC REPORT

AU161435 Budapest MAGYAR HIRLAP in Hungarian 10 Jul 86 p 5

[Article by "Vanicsek": "Report of KSH (Central Statistical Office) -- Production Is Accelerating"]

[Text] Some favorable processes have begun in the economy and indications are that they will last over a long period. A few days ago the Central Statistical Office sent our editorial office its resume of the results of the first 5 months.

It is striking that there is a 5.3 percent increase in the engineering sector, though we cannot disregard the fact that the corresponding results of last year were rather low and only the last-minute rush at the end of the year brought an improvement in the sector's results. The salient boom in the metallurgy sector also deserves attention. (Though in this case we must remember that the State Planning Commission did not decide about the sector's situation in this way.) It is expected that the economic boom in the building materials industry will also decline. As can be seen from our chart, all the other sectors continue to be stagnant.

The most interesting question is how the situation developed in the agricultural and foreign trade sectors following the nuclear reactor accident in April. According to the data, there was not sudden drop in the procurement of agricultural (including horticultural and animal husbandry) products, because there had already been a 5 percent decline in the previous months. It appears from the information that the Chernobyl nuclear accident did not cause a fundamental change in the structure of foreign trade either, though the growth of our convertible exports was slower that the already declining basis in the same period last year. It is clear that we cannot attribute to this unpleasant episode the frightening discrepancy between the rapidly growing imports and the very slightly growing non-ruble export sectors.

LEADERS' MESSAGE ON MONGOLIAN NATIONAL DAY

AU161057 Budapest NEPSZABADSAG in Hungarian 11 Jul 86 p 3

[Text] On the occasion of the 65th anniversary of the victory of the people's revolution of Mongolia, Janos Kadar, general secretary of the MSZMP; Pal Losonczi, president of the Presidential Council of the Hungarian People's Republic; and Gyorgy Lazar, chairman of the Council of Ministers, sent the following greetings telegram to Ulaanbaatar to Jambyn Batmonh, general secretary of the Mongolian People's Revolutionary Party [MPRP] Central Committee and chairman of the Presidium of the People's Great Hural; and to Dumaagiyn Sodnom, chairman of the Council of Ministers of the Mongolian People's Republic [MPR]

Dear Comrades!

On the occasion of the 65th anniversary of the victory of the people's revolution of Mongolia, on behalf of the MSZMP Central Committee, the Presidentail Council and Council of Ministers of the Hungarian People's Republic and on behalf of the entire Hungarian people, we sent our comradely greetings and good wishes to you and the friendly people of the MPR.

Our people regard with respect the results of the Mongolian people in the construction of their society in the past 6 and 1/2 decades. We highly appreciate the active foreign policy of the MPR for consolidating peace and strengthening international security. We are sincerely pleased that the friendship and cooperation of our parties, countries, and peoples are developing in the spirit of the principles of Marxism-Leninsm and the solidarity of internationalism in a many-sided way, and are showing new signs of improvement in all areas of life. On the occasion of your national day, we wish you and the friendly Mongolian people further successes in socialist construction work, in fulfilling the resolutions of the MPRP's 19th Congress, and in the service of the cause of peace.

On the occasion of the anniversary, Istvan Sarlos, chairman of the National Assembly, sent a greetings telegram to Bat-Ochiryn Altangerel, chairman of the MPR People's Great Hura. The National Council of Trade Unions, the National Council of the PPF, the KISZ Central Committee, the National Peace Council, the National Council of Hungarian Women, and the Hungarian Red Cross have also sent greetings to their counterparts.

LEADERS HAIL MONGOLIAN NATIONAL DAY, OFFICIALS

AU141222 Warsaw TRYBUNA LUDU in Polish 12-13 Jul 86 pp 1, 7

[Greetings message from State Council Chairman Wojciech Jaruzelski and Premier Zbigniew Messner to Mongolian counterparts on Mongolian national day]

[Text] To Comrade Jambyn Batmonh, MPRP Central Committee general secretary and chairman of the Presidium of the MPR Great People's Hural, and Comrade Dumaagiyn Sodnom, chairman of the MPR Council of Ministers, in Ulaanbaatar:

On your national day, the anniversary of the victory of the people's revolution, we send you, dear comrades, as well as the MPRP Central Committee, Great People's Hural Presidium, MPR Council of Ministers, and the entire Mongolian people sincere greetings and best wishes on behalf of the PZPR Central Committee, State Council, Council of Ministers, and in our own name.

The anti-imperialist and antifeudal people's revolution put an end to the social pressure in your country 65 years ago. The Mongolian people embarked on the road to national rebirth and profound social transformations. Under the leadership of its vanguard MPRP, it is successfully building socialism and consolidating the country's independence.

The international prestige of your state, an important component of the socialist community, is growing. The MPR's foreign policy and its activity aimed at perpetuating peace, security, and international cooperation in Asia and the entire world enjoy respect.

We are deeply satisfied that Polish-Mongolian relations are developing favorably; cooperation between both countries in all spheres is increasing and traditional friendship between both peoples based on the principles of Marxism-Leninism and socialist internationalism is consolidating itself. We are genuinely convinced that relations between our parties and states will continue to develop and strengthen in the interest of both peoples and the entire socialist community.

We wish you, dear comrades, and through you the fraternal Mongolian people success in performaning the ambitious tasks set by the 19th MPRP Congress in socialist construction and in the further development of the MPR.

Wojciech Jaruzelski, PZPR Central Committee first secretary and PPR State Council chairman; Zbigniew Messner, PPR Council of Ministers chairman.

JARUZELSKI COMMENTS ON PLANS FOR PARTIAL AMNESTY

LD162245 Madrid in Spanish to Europe 1130 GMT 16 Jul 86

[Text] In an interview granted in Warsaw to Spanish television, Polish head of state General Jaruzelski announced that the amnesty that the Polish parliament is preparing to grant will be of a partial nature. In the past few years, Jaruzelski said, we have granted three amnesties, one of them, in 1984, was a total amnesty in which we released all noncriminals prisoners, and expression used in Poland to describe political prisoners. In 1983 and 1985 the amnesey was partial, as is that which is now being prepared. The framework of this amnesty, Jaruzelski said, will be determined by the Polish parliament which will take the appropriate decisions. It will not include certain extreme cases which in his opinion lead to phenomena that destroy the life of the country and that are related to the violation of Polish law and constitution. Gen Jaruzelski also spoke about the Polish external debt and relations with Spain.

POLITBURO ISSUES COMMUNIQUE AFTER MEETING 9 JUL

AU160718 Warsaw TRYBUNA LUDU in Polish 11 Jul 86 pp 1,2

["Communique Issued After PZPR Politburo Session"]

[Text] On July 19, at its first session following the 10th PZPR Congress, the PZPR Central Committee Politburo discussed the key conclusions stemming from the Central Committee report, congress discussions, the PZPR resolution and program, and the final adddress delivered by the Central Committee first secretary. The importance and urgency of the tasks stemming from these documents calls for their immediate implementation.

One of the fundamental conditions for the successful attainment of the goals set out at the congress is the dissmination of the substance and decisiosn of the congress -- communicating the subtance and decisions of the congress to individual settings and winning over working people for active participation in well-organized and conscientious work for the good of Poland and all Poles. All that is undertaken toward this end by the party ought to be readily understandable and should win the support of the workers class and the millions of working people.

Working in conjunction with the government Presidium, the Politburo conducted a preliminary review of the concept and methodology for the implementation of the resolution in various areas of life. The Politburo decided to draw up -- with the assistance of experts and specialists drawn from numerous milieus and areas of socioeconomic life -- a uniform timetable for the implementation of the decisions made at the 10th Congress. Significant proposals voiced during the precongress campaign will also be reviewed. Special attention was focused on the careful and thorough elaboration of the draft plan -- announced in the Central Committee report and adopted by the congress -- for reviewing organizational structures and posts in the entire country by applying the attestation method.

The review is intended to modernize and improve the functioning of the economy and the state, to provide support for reform mechanisms, to rationalize the level and structure of employment, to reduce bureaucratic phenomena, and to remove regulations that encumber citizens in the conduct of their lives.

This extensive undertaking cannot be a one-time, spectacular campaign. It is a long-term process that will occur in many stages. However, at the present time it is becoming necessary to quickly introduce changes, which are ready for implementation, in those areas of life that meet society's most pressing expectations.

A party-government commission will be formed for reviewing and modernizing economic and state organizational structures and work posts. The commission's membership will be composed of outstanding theorists, political activities, and representatives of social and vocational associations. It will draw up programs for further work and coordinate such work.

At the same time, an extensive public opinion survey will be conducted. The results of this survey and the work produced by experts will be used during the preliminary phase of preparations. The introduction of changes will be preceded by the exhaustive presentation of whatever changes are proposed and thorough discussion on the topic.

The Politburo and the government Presidium deemed it essential to set up an efficient system for the exchange of experience and for the utilization of the best solutions employed by those leading enterprises that make good use of economic reform mechanisms. Among these mechanisms is the brigade contract system, which continues to be implemented too slowly. It will also be necessary to afford strong support for the introduction of the work evaluation system. The attestation system should also encompass investment, projects, production techniques, and production processes, especially those that will go into operation during the current 5-year period, in accordance with planned objectives.

More resolute assistance needs to be provided for the creation of small plants that produce mainly consumer goods, and for enterprises that conduct work directed toward innovation and application.

The Politburo stated that the tasks stemming from the resolutions adopted at the 10th PZPR Congress significantly upgraded the criteria employed vis-a-vis managerial cadres at all levels and increased the degree of professional and social and moral responsibility. The tasks require increased efforts and innovation in work methods, especially in organizing the activities of work teams.

Those who find that the new tasks and harsher requirements are beyond their capabilities should, on their own initiative, give a chance to those whose level of activity, energy, and character traits create a guarantee that heavier responsibilities will be shouldered, a chance to bright, dynamic people who have not always been noticed so far. The creation of new solutions makes it possible for young people in particular to prove themselves under innovative systems and to put their capabilities to the test. Youth organizations should act as patrons of such processes.

There is greater and greater scope for social and organizational activity and for utilizing knowledge and experience in, inter alia, workers self-management councils and regional self-government bodies. The Politburo stated that many social organizations could assume certain tasks that have hitherto been solely discharged by central and regional administrative bodies. [paragraph continues]

Appropriate organizational and legal steps must be taken toward this end.

The Politburo underscored the need for the party to display greater concern for the development and higher quality of ideological work. The realization of economic tasks and the process of solving social problems must be closely linked to strengthening the ideological foundations of party activity and to a more offensive-like approach to its program.

In ideological and training work there is a need to develop a more profound form of conceptual reflection, to analyze the theoretical results of the congress, and to examine the ideological implications of the congress. The content of the 10th Congress ought to be reflected in party training; in economic education programs; in programs on the law, the state, and history; and in ideological and training work with young people. This should occur as quickly as possible and should begin with the period of summer activity.

The principle of openness in public life will be strengthened. Propaganda should focus more on providing concrete and constructive criticism directed at negative phenomena in all areas of life and at subjectively conditioned negligence. At the same time, organizational innovation, outstanding individual achievments, and people who do well in their work ought to be publicized to a greater extent than before. A desire to spread attitudes worthy of emulation ought to be encouraged. The best experience gathered by towns and communes, by regional associations that function well, by selfless activists, and by people passionately devoted to their communities ought to be built upon and publicized.

The Politburo underscored the role of party echelons and organizations in creating a climate that is conductive to conscientiousness, openness, sincerity, and good relations between people. Party organizations must be receptive to the idea of extensive cooperation with people who are not party members and must listen to opinions that they express. The Politburo stressed the status of basic party organizations.

In ministries, the central and regional offices, in enterprises, and in organizations and associations attention should be focused on the implementation of the congress resolution. It should become a reference point used in the execution of tasks. An appropriate climate must be created and preparations ought to be made for implementing the resolution in all its points.

The increase in democracy in all areas of public life and the difficult and responsible nature of the tasks stemming from the congress call for greater discipline in the implementation process. Party members should lead the way in this respect. They should find others emulating them on account of their social attitudes, their attitude toward work, their activeness, and their sense of responsibility; party members should adhere closely to the principle of implementing the resolution conscientiously.

The Politburo stated that the PZPR election and accountability campaign is a period of particular importance. It is a period during which the decisions mad at the 10th Congress will be linked to the most important problems facing communities and to the party organizations representing them.

It will be possible to fully attain the goals stemming from the congress documents only if initiative is released and potential social involvement is efficently utilized. With this in mind, the Politburo requests that all party members study the congress documents thoroughly and establish tasks stemming from these documents for basic party organizations and individual party members. [paragraph continues]

The Politburo also asks party members to disseminate the contents of congress documents in their communities and to win the support of colleagues who are not party members.

The Politburo and government Presidium request that social organizations, unions, and associations that are especially closely connected with the economy, science, and technology, and organization and management analyze as thoroughly as possible those contents of the 10th Congress resolution that concern their areas of statutory activity and define forms and methods for their participation in implementing the decisions made at the congress.

Progress in achieving political stability and in developing processes leading to accord, and measurable and tangible -- although still not sufficient nor satisfactory -- economic achievements constitute a positive base for accelerating Poland's development. Being convinced that the good of the fatherland is the highest common value, the Politburo and the government Presidium call on all citizens to contribute -- to the best of their knowledge, skills, and will -- to the common good by implementing the vision of the 10th PZPR Congress, a vision of an efficient, modern, and law-abiding Poland.

The Politburo approved the program and organizational provisions of the Second Central Committee Plenum, which will be held this month. The plenum will discuss party tasks in disseminating and implementing the resolutions adopted at the 10th Congress.

SEJM SESSION OPENS 17 Jul, AGENDA DETAILED

LD170956 Warsaw PAP in English 0910 GMT 17 Jul 86

[Text] Warsaw, July 17 -- The Sejm (Polish parliament) meeting has been opened here today [17 July]. The initial agenda includes two reports of the economic plan, budget and finance committee. The first one deals with the implementation of the last-year national budget and other finance-related acts. The report also suggests that a motion of acceptance be given to the government. The other report of the committee is concerned with the implementation of the national socio-economic plan for the years 1983-85. It also discusses the extent to which the 1983-85 austerity programme has been implemented.

Today's agenda includes following items:
-- Appointment of members of the socio-economic council,
-- Report of the membership and standing orders committee and of the legislative procedure committee on the Polish Sejm regulations bill,
-- Deputies' questions, and
-- Motion to close the Sejm spring session.

The meeting is attended by Wojciech Jaruzelski and Zbigniew Messner.

Sejm Speaker Roman Malinowski told the assembly that the Council of State submitted to the Sejm a draft law on a special procedure towards perpetrators of some crimes. The Sejm Presidium proposed that the Sejm would examine the appropriate committee's report on the matter today. The Sejm Presidium also received motions on changes within the compositions of the Council of State and the Council of Ministers.

The Sejm added two points to the agenda:
-- A report by the Sejm administration, internal affairs and justice committee and legislative committee on the draft law on special procedure towards perpetrators of some crimes,
-- changes in state posts.

COUNCIL OF MINISTERS, VOIVODAS DISCUSS CONGRESS

LD161908 Warsaw Domestic Service in Polish 1700 GMT 16 Jul 86

[Text] A meeting of the Council of Ministers was held in which voivodas participated. Premier Zbigniew Messner presented a program for the implementation of tasks imposed on the government by the resolutions of the 10th PZPR Congress. Referring to the materials and decisions of the 10th Congress, he said that all ministries and voivodships will prepare their own detailed programs for realization.

The program draws attention to the fact that it has been stressed in detail who is to prepare the answer to a given problem, who supervises, and who is responsible for its implementation. There are many tasks that have to be resolved by a definite date, including those of the Ministries of Domestic Trade and services, Agriculture and Food Economy, and Forestry, and Timber Industry which are required to end the rationing of meat and meat products in 1987.

A discussion followed, which was attended by representatives of the government and the voivodas, on the steps necessary to implement the tasks. A great deal of attention was devoted to issues connected with house building, stressing the fact that much greater responsibility should be borne by work enterprises for the housing conditions of their employees. The need to improve tax regulations was indicated, as was the need for greater concentration of investments and for help for small-scale production, improvements in trade, and an increase in the area of reclaimed land. Naturally, there was also discussion of the administrative tasks arising from the congress resolutions. Summing up the discussion, Zbigniew Messner said the meeting has shown the need for the preparation of a program on implementating the 10th Congress resolutions, and he drew attention to the need for a better execution of decisions made at the highest level, by regional offices.

Later in the meetings the Council of Ministers was acquainted with reports on the implementation of central investments this year, which were included in government orders and undertaken in cooperation with the CEMA countries. The meeting also discussed investment programs due to implementation this year.

JOINT MEETING OF PZPR, ZSL, SD HELD 16 JUL

LD162052 Warsaw Television Service in Polish 1730 GMT 16 Jul 86

[Text] A meeting of the PZPR Central Cooperation Commission, the ZSL, and the SD was held today [16 July]. Taking part in the session were, from the PZPR: Wjociech Jaruzelski, Kazimierz Barcikowski, Jozef Baryla, Jozef Czyrek, and Tadeusz Porebski; from the ZSL: Roman Malinowski, Jozef Koziol, Tadeusz Szelachowski, Bogdan Krolewski, and Kazimierz Olesiak; and from the SD: Tadeusz Withold Mlynczak, Kazimierz Modzelewski, Jersy Gruchalski, Mieczyslaw Lesniak, and Andrzej Rajewski.

Also taking part were representatives of Catholic and lay Christian organizations; signatories of the declaration on PRON; Zenon Komender, chairman of the Pax association; Kazimierz V. Morawski, president of the Christian Social Association; and Andrezej Deskur, chairman of the Polish Catholic-Social Union. Also participating were Jan Dobraczynski, chairman of the PRON National Council, and Jerzy Jaskiernia, secretary general of the PRON National Council.

The results ensuing from the decisions of the 10th PZPR Congress, which serve the further consistent implementation of the course of socialist renewal, were mooted and discussed. During the deliberations, emphasis was placed on the contributions of the allied political parties, of the associations of Catholics and lay Christians, of PRON, and of its individual and collective participants to the results of the discussions on the program of socialist development in Poland endorsed by the 10th PZPR Congress.

The importance of initiatives that serve to extend the area of national accord was pointed out. Support was expressed for the PRON initiative aimed at mitigating legal punitive measures against the perpetrators of certain crimes.

There was discussion of the idea of setting up a social consultative council under the Council of State, and of the possibility of the establishment of citizens' consultative bodies by voivodship people's councils. Support was given to the setting up of socioeconomic councils under the voivodship people's councils, of appointing public spokesmen on civic rights, as well as the regualtion by statute of social consultation, and the further enrichment of the democratic procedures of the electoral law. The significance of PRON's initiatives in these matters was stressed, and the expediency of increasing use by the Sejm, the Council of State, and local self-government, of PRON's opinion-forming and advisory potential was pointed out.

The participation of PRON and its collective members is also essential in carrying out a general survey of organizational structures and workplaces.

Participants in the meeting emphasized the permanence and the topicality of the principles and the content of the delcaration on PRON, which was adopted 4 years ago. At the same time it was stressed that the consistent implementation of the course of socialist renewal, accord, and reform will lead to the strengthening of PRON, and the enrichment of the form and content of its work. A favorable occasion for this would be the accountability and election campaign preceding the Second PRON Congress, to be held in 1987.

COMPOSITION OF PZPR, CONGRESS DELEGATES OUTLINED

AU161225 Warsaw POLITYKA in Polish 5 Jul 86 p 5

[Marek Henzler article: "The 10th Congress -- Members and Delegates"]

[Text] A month before the congress the PZPR numbered 2,125.762 members and candidates, from 1,776 delegates were chosen for the 10th PZPR Congress. The most numerous voivodhsip party organization is the Katowice organization, which numbered 250,800 members at the end of 1985 and chose 208 delegates. The next biggest organizations are the Warsaw (137,000 members and 110 delegates), Poznan (86,200 members and 69 delegates), Bydgoszch (78,400 numbers and 64 delegates), Lodz (76,500 members and 60 delegates), and Kielce (71,200 members and 58 delegates). Every third congress delegate hails from these six voivodships.

The smallest voivodship organizations are the Biala Podlaska (13,400 members and 11 delegates), Chelm (13,900 members and 11 delegates), Lomza (15,800 members and 12 delegates), Ostroleka (16,700 members and 13 delegates), and Przemysl (17, 900 members and 14 delegates). All these voivodships were set up in 1975. The last 13 voivodship organizations in the list of organizations total together as many members and delegates as the Katowice organization does.

Party members and candidates belong to 75,000 primary and 20,600 shop party organizations. Some 50 percent of the primary party organizations are active in rural areas and include one-quarter of the PZPR members.

Over 50 percent of primary party organizations total up to 15 members, and as many as 4,000 of these organizations -- mainly in rural areas and trade, services, education, and health services -- total 5 members each, which means they are just within the limits of their statutory powers. That is why it has been proposed that the congress should change the statute to the effect that three members, instead of the five previously required, are empowered to set up an independent primary party organization. There are about 1,850 party organizations totaling over 100 members. They account for 4 percent of all organizations nd for almost 39 percent of party members and candidates and are situated mainly in large industrial plants, universities, and the organizational units subordinate to the Ministry of National Defense and the Ministry of Internal Affairs.

In 1980-86 the number and composition of PZPR members have radically changed. In the first half of 1980, 106,000 persons were admitted into the party, but when August with all its results arrived, the party lost over 300,000 members before the Ninth Congress. On the eve of this congress there were 2,824,000 members and candidates, of whom every fourth left the party in the following months. About 740,000 members were crossed off the party rolls and about 40,000 members were removed from the party mainly in the second half of 1981 and during martial law. Between the congresses the PZPR admitted about 160,000 candidates into its ransk: 1,200 in the second half of 1981; 7,500 in 1982; 17,000 in 1983, 35,000 in 1984; 63,000 in 1985; and over 30,000 this year.

The largest group of party members who left the party between the congresses were workers, whose numbers decreased from 1,265,000 to 810,000, that is by 36 percent. The number of peasants in the party decreased by 28.8 percent and of intellectuals by 12.2 percent. The class and population structure of the party has also changed: The ratio of workers has decreased from 44.8 to 38.2 percent; that of peasants has significantly decreased from 9.5 to 9 percent; that of intellectuals has increased from 44 to 51.5 percent; and that of young party members (up to 29) has decreased from 15.6 to 7.5 percent. These trends are now beginning to change: The ratio of recent party admissions of workers and peasants has amounted to 50.3 percent, and over 50 percent of new admissions are below 29.

Comparison of the composition of the delegates to the Ninth Congress in 1981 with that at the 10th Congress shows considerable changes. The primary features is that there are fewer delegates now. In 1981 the mandate commission recognized the validity of 1,962 mandates of congress delegates compared with 1,776 mandates at this congress. AT the Ninth Congress 482 workers delegates accounted for 22.3 percent, but at the 10th Congress 743 workers delegates account for 41.3 percent. At the Ninth Congress 195 private and cooperative farmers accounted for 9.2 percent of all delegates and now 174 of them account for 9.8 percent. In 1981 intellectual delegates accounted for 66.7 percent of all delegates, but now they account for 48 percent. In 1981 there were 108 women delegates (5.5 percent), but now there are 356 of them (20 percent). The 10th Congress was attended by 146 professors, lecturers, and doctors, but the Ninth Congress was attended by 118 such figures, although there were almost 200 more delegates overall. In 1981 some 20 percent of delegates were regular workers of the prty apparatus, but there are 15 percent of them at this congress. Every fifth delegate is a member of a youth organization, but in 1981 only every twelfth was. During the Ninth Congress 56 percent of delegates were members of the branch trade unions, 20.6 percent of Solidarity, 0.9 percent of the autonomous trade union, 4.7 percent of the Central Union of Agricultural Circles and Organizations, and 0.5 percent of Solidarity for Private Farmers. Today a decisive majority of delegates belongs to new trade unions. The delegates also include 10 retirees and a large number of employees of defense and interior ministries. The present central party authorities have 173 delegates at the 10th Congress, for which 1,397 (78.7 percent) delegates were chosen for the first time. [paragraph continues]

In 1981 as many as 91 percent were debutants. It is hard to say how the structure of age and education has changed because at both congresses the mandate commissions used different criteria for classifying delegates. In any case the ninth congress was dominated by delegates between 40 and 49 (40 percent), but this congress is being dominated by those between 36 and 50 (52.1 percent). In 1981 some 56.2 percent of delegates possessed incomplete and complete higher education, but at this congress 44 percent of them possess such education.

MIODOWICZ DISCUSSES TRADE UNIONS WITH MINERS

AU160734 Warsaw TRYBUNA LUDU in Polish 11 Jul 86 p 3

[Text] Addressing a meeting of miners at the "Szombierki" coal mine in Bytom, Alfred Miodowicz, PZPR Politburo member and OPZZ chairman, said that it is not coincidental that he is visitng the "Szombierki" mine. There are two work places and work forces that require constant contact from me, he said. One of them is the Lenin Steelworks, where I come from, with which I am still strongly connected, and from which I obtain my only salary. The other work force is you, at the "Szombierki" coal mine, for it is here that a consolidation of the reemerging trade union movement has occurred. A. Miodowicz recalled that the first and most important matter for trade unionists is to protect the health of working people more effectively. That is why trade unions strongly support decisions which forecast a modernization of industry. In this way, heavy daily toil will be easier. Nothing aggravates trade unionists as much as views that the trade unions are conservative and do not encourage economic reform, A. Miodowicz said. Trade unions' style of action an our organizatinal structure disprove this most clearly. All trade union authority and rights lie in the hands of the factory trade unions, which have maximum interest in the independence of their factories. Neither is it true that we trade unionists defend all workers the same way, even those who "lag behind." Here in "Szombierki" 2 years ago we spoke about collective labor agreements. Today a bill on these is already in the Sejm. It is true that this bill does not satisfy us completely, but thanks to the political decisions that have been made there ar no more disputes between the government side and trade union side. There is one single meritorious discussion.

Many issues encountered by the trade unions every day have been discussed at the congress and supported by means of the decisions taken there. But trade unions must also draw conclusions for themselves. For example, the struggle against inflation was regarded as an important task for the party. But it is just as important for the trade unions, A. Miodowicz said. Price rises can certainly not be avoided, but we must carefully monitor some rises, for example food. We must equally monitor wages.

How do I view my appointment as Politburo member? Life and time themselves will surely provide the best answer, but today this may cause controversy. I will try to explain how I understand this appointment and how those who voted for me understand it. I believe it is an expression of recognition for the organization, steadfastness, and consistency we have displayed in our trade union activity. It is also an expression of recognition for the union's class political line, for all those deserving the respect of trade union activists, for the chairman of factory and departmental councils, and for activists within trade union federations and other structures. We have already been able to convince ourselves, A. Miodowicz continued, that if trade unions fail to take part in the shaping of political decisions from the very beginning, it is much more difficult for them to alter the situation later. This is illustrated by our harsh encounters over prices, or by the question of maintaining the social benefits currently inf orce, or the subject of amending the labor code, where we fiaied to achieve anything, or the law on work premises. There exists a "sparkle" ["iskrzenie"] along the government-trade union line, and it will continue to exist. Therefore, it is good for the trade unions to be where important decisions are made.

'DANGEROUS' ARTICLE CONDEMNED, EDITORS RESIGN

AU161951 Warsaw TRYBUNA LUDU in Polish 26 Jun 86 p 4

[Article signed "(C.K.)": "In Connection With the POZJA Article -- a Dangerous Integration of the World"]

[Text] There are texts written by literary men and by critics that are impossible to ignore because they stimulate interest, concern, admiration, or opposition. The article "In the World Torn Apart" (Part one: Poets and Courtiers; and Part Two: Thirty Years in 3 years), which was written by Bohdan Urbankowski, deputy chief editor of POEZJA, and which was published in POEZJA Issue 3, 1986, stimulates absolute disbelief and indignation in light of the fact that dangerous products of worthless thoughts and language again emerge from a past that seemed to be irrevocably over and done with and that sterotypes and myths that serve the dangerous integration of the world in the name of reactionary and chauvinistic values have come to life again.

Bodhan Urbankowski made an attempt to sum up the postwar years in Polish literary life and based it on a conservative evaluation of our most recent history. He questioned the meaning of the Polish revolution and decided that great social and constitutional reforms and socialist construction were "crimes committed against the entire nation and its present and future life." Repeating the anticommunist phraseology about the alleged power of the "new class" and falsifying the meaning of the postwar social and constitutional changes, Urbankowski came out in favor of the views of the owners of "prosperus properities", the interests of the rich, and the WIN [Freedom and Independence -- underground political organization during World War II] program.

One effect of the war on politics, he writes, "was the paradoxical shift of Poland in Europe -- geographically toward the West and politically and ideologically toward he East." To Urbanowski this shift has deprived Poland of its "national sacrum" and has subjected it to the laicization of its culture and to Stalinization. Anti-Sovietism and clericalism prevent Urbanowski from seeing any positive political and constitutional solutions that are favorable to Poland. Everything is being contaminated by harmful positions. Salvation could come from "national socialism," the protoplasts of which are to him Pilsudski, Abramowski, Brzozwski, Kelles-Krauz, the Ossowskis, Chalasinski, Hockfeld, and others, but which was destroyed by the "red encyclopedists," as he calls the cultural activitists of the Marxist left-wing.

Urbankowski links the socialism that does not originate from the "national sacrum" to "Soviet models," to decrees from above on these models issued by the "servile members of the former Lwow [Soviet Lvov] aktivs," and to the ideology brought to Poland by the Polish Armed Forces. In this context the Polish autonomous elections, class arguments, conflicts of the Polish revolution, and great social and economic problems of the dramastic postwar period in Poland do not exist; everything becomes a manipulation of the expanded alien agencies, as the POEZJA author argues. Instead of culture based on the "national sacrum" and of religious values linked to this culture, we have been given a substitue, nihilistic, Stalinist, and lay culture, in which the role of "substitute religion. that is of new Faith," is being played by the scientific principles of Marxism -- principles that Urbankowski ridicules to the full. This new culture and the literary generations linked to its are "substitute" in nature, and it is primarily the security service that benefits from them. Actually, there is no Polish culture at all because the best people -- the poets of the nationalistic rightist group called "Sztuka i Narod" [Art and Nation] -- lost their lives during the war and their place was taken by "inferior" survivors of Baczynski's generation: Bratyny, Borowski, Rozewicz, Biaoloszewski, and Bartelski. [paragraph continues]

Nor can Staff and Iwaszkiewicz be said to represent Polish culture because they have never written poems with "messages direct from the sacrum", although they are "religious believers."

Urbankowski's philosophy of history is as syncretistic as were many conservative systems that the extreme antisocialiste groups used not so long ago. His philosophy is no doubt an outgrowth of Roman Dmowski's ideas, and that is why Urbankowski accuses the Jews of whatever has taken place in Polish literature since the war. He is very skilled in counting the Jews who are present on editorial boards and in politics. He also share religious ideas with the prewar National Democratics and believes that, in terms of Aryanism, polytheism is better than Judaic monotheism. From the National Democratics he borrowed entire sets of phrases and the practice of identifying our nationality with Catholicism and of dividing people into nationality creative elites and into aliens. He is also fond of the traditions of anarchosyndicalist ides, of the ideology of freedom and independence, which he takes as a model for Polish reality, and of other similar ideas. Everything in this system is useful and functional because it helps destroy "the political-literary legend that links the beginning of PPR poetry to the Polish People's Armed Forces approching from the East to Lublin -- the 'first capital."'

That is why he produced countermyths without caring for their cohesiveness because he knows that conservative idelogies have something special, nice, and desirable to offer everyone. That is why in Bohdan Urbankowski's view "national socialism" is merely a very transparent and motely view for the most nationalistic, anti-Soviet, and anti-Semitic aspects of the ideologies represented by the prewar National Democratics. These ideologies regard Marxism as Jewish communism, and alien body, a "pseudoscience," and a great manipulation, the only escape from which is pure nationalism and the "national sacrum."

"In the World Torn Apart" reminds us of whatever is dangerous and shameful and whatever we want to forget. This article has been concocted from the vapors of dangerous myths. We must warn against and protect our culture from such ideas.

The Executive Committee of the PZPR primary organization of the Warsaw branch of the Union of Polish Writers also adopts such a stand, expressing the "astonishment and indignation" of the party community of writers. Sharing the view about the political harmfulness of the publication of Urbanowski's article, which represents an antisocialist and nationalistic concept of Poland's most recent history and of postwar literary life, the PZPR Cultural Department and Propaganda Department asked the POEZJA editor to make personnel changes. As a result, Bohdan Drozdowski resigned as chief editor of POEZJA and Bohdan Urbankowski was recalled from his function of deputy chief editor.

RESULTS OF HUNGARIAN ECONOMIC TALKS REPORTED

LD112116 Budapest MTI in English 1847 GMT 11 Jul 86

[Text] Budapest, July 11 (MTI) -- Hungarian Deputy Prime Minister Lajos Faluvegi, president of the National Planning Office and Stefan Birlea, president of the State Planning Commission of the Socialist Republic of Romania held talks in Bucharest July 10th and 11th on the advance of economic cooperation between the two countries. They agreed on the continuation of national economic plans, contents and organizations. As a result of the talks commodity turnover between the two countries is to rise between 1987 and 1990. Import of Dacia cars will be 30,000 per annum. There is to be an expansion of reciprocal deliveries in the engineering industry and chemical industry, and continous plan coordination and the working plan have been approved. The parties examined the elaboration of the programme of Hungarian-Romanian economic and technological and scientific cooperation until the year 2000, and marked out the themes of cooperation of importance to economic strategy which determine the development trends of economic relations in the long term. Particular attention is to be given to cooperation in road vehicle production, microelectronics, robotics and the chemical industry. Briefs were given on economic policy endeavours and on topical issues in the system of planning and economic management.

During the course of his stay in Bucharest the deputy chairman of the Council of Ministers met Prime Minister Constantin Dascalescu, and Lejos Faluvegi also met with deputy Prime Minister Gheorghe Petrescu, chairman of the Romanian section of the Hungarian-Romanian mixed government committee on economic cooperation. Present at the talks was Tibor Hodicska, temporary charge d'affairs at the Embassy of the Hungarian People's Republic in Romania. Lajos Faluvegi and the delegation he headed returned to Budapest Friday.

CEAUSESCU, FRG'S STERCKEN DISCUSS ECONOMIC TIES

AU161858 Bucharest AGERPRES in English 1829 GMT 16 Jul 86

[Text] Bucharest AGERPRES 16/7/86 -- On July 16, President Nicolae Ceausescu of Romania received Hans Stercken, president of the Interparliamentary Union Council, chairman of the Foreign Affairs Commission of the Bundestag of the Federal Republic of Germany, who is visiting Romania, invited by the Grand National Assembly.

The guest conveyed to President Nicolae Ceausescu cordial salutes on behalf of Helmut Kohl, federal chancellor of West Germany. At the same time he expressed satisfaction at being received by the Romanian head of state and at exchanging opinions on issues of joint interest. The present of the Interparliamentary Union Council assessed highly the activity carried by Romanian, by its president, on an international plane and in the context he stressed with satisfaction the special attention paid by the Romanian head of state to the role played by parliaments and the Interparliamentary Union in promoting the policy of detente, disarmament, understanding and peace. President Nicolae Ceausescu thanked for the message and sent the federal chancellor of West Germany a warm salute and best wishes.

During the talks the sides highlighted the relations of multilateral collaboration between Romania and the Federal Republic of Germany and mentioned the wide possibilities at hand for a development of these relations, for an amplification of the economic cooperation and trade exchanges as well as for an expansion of the collaboration in peak domains of sciences and techonology and in other spheres of activity.

The sides also approached certain issues of the world political life. In the context President Nicolae Ceausescu considered that under the grave international situation that continues to be complex and grave, everything is necessary to be done to halt the arms race and pass on to disarmament, to nuclear disarmament in the first place, to eradicate the states of tension and conflict, to solve all the litigious interstate issues peacefully, by way of negotiations, for setting in a climate of peace, security, confidence and cooperation in the European Continent and throughout the world. As far as the world economic situation is concerned, the sides laid stress on the need for measures to be endorsed, meant to lead to a global settlement high foreign debts of the developing countries, to the settlement of the international economic relations upon new, equitable bases.

ROMANIAN ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT OUTLOOK DEBATED

AU161800 Bucharest AGERPRES in English 1701 GMT 16 Jul 86

[Text] Bucharest AGERPRES 16/7/1986 -- Currently Romania traverses a superior stage of its development and at the conclusin of the 1986-1990 period it is to become an economically medium-developed country. Such outstanding economists as professors Ioan Blaga, Gheorghe Cretoiu, Constantii Mecu and Mihai Paraluta express their opinions in a debate, published on July 16 by SCINTEIA, on the changes implied by this new stage of the country's development. The participants in the debate stress that Romania's passage to the stage of an economically medium-developed country is historically important to the Romanian people, representing an essential stage, a step forward in the plane of developing and modernizing the forces of production and improving the quality of life and work of all the country's citizens.

Stressing that the RCP approaches the concept of a medium-developed country in the context of the current development of the forces of production, taking into consideration the dialectics of their development on a world plane, the participants in the debate mention that, by and large, currently Romania already meets the standards of a medium-developed country, great gaps existing, though, in point of the quality indices. That is why over the current stage the leading aspect of the economic growth is the intensive development with a powerful assertion of the quality factors. The very structure of the plan for the 1986-1990 period aims first of all to eradicate the quality gaps separating this country from the economically-developed ones. This is precisely the content and purpose of the new strategies established in the fields of investments, technoligical progress, power generation and use of the base of raw and subsidiary materials.

Concomitantly with the orientations toward the development and modernization of the technical and material base of society, stressing the process of modernization of the economic structures and enhancing labour productivity at a faster rate, attaining the new stage of development also requires the attainment of a superior level of the country's efficient and balanced participation in the world economic circuit. This participation must provide equally in the purchase of raw materials and advanced pieces of equipment and technologies, and the superior capitalization, by way of exports, of the Romanian products as well as an even balance of payments under the long-term conditions and restrictions characteristic of the contemporary economy.

Pointing out that on a social plane from many points of view Romania stands on a par with the economically-advanced countries, and even enjoys a considerable advance in many respects, the specialistse participant in the debate show that through all of its evolution Romania offers a viable model of a way to leave behind the stage opf a developing country over a short interval, this proving the advantages of socialism.

Romania's becoming out of the medium-developed countries is also very important in the political plane, considering the fact that the stronger its economy, the more genuine the country's economic independence -- the lasting and irreplaceable base of political independence. Building a powerful, modern economy in Romania is both an act of revolutionary patriotism of international significance and the proof of the RCP attachment to the goals of the assertion of the socialist forces in the world.

HYDROELECTRIC CAPACITIES, FUTURE PLANS DETAILED

AU161659 Bucharest AGERPRES in English 1559 GMT 16 Jul 86

[Text] Bucharest AGERPRES 16/7/86 -- The balance-sheet of postwar water engineering power development in Romania points to a nearly one hundred-fold growth, from 48,000 kw installed generating capacity in 1945, to about 4.4 million kw at present. A unitary outlook, which gives priority to thorough topographic, hydrological and geological surveys, has underlain the steadfast growth of this paramount sector of both Romanian power engineering and the national economy as a whole. The energy-giving potential of Romania's waterways was put at 40 billion kwh annually, which can be tapped by several hundred hydroelectric stations with a combined installed power of nearly 15.2 million kw. The energy-giving potential has been already tapped in a propotion of 34 per cent, with the 94 water power plants in operation producing 13.7 billion kwh of electric power in an average hydrological year.

Pursing the complex management of hydraulic resources, electric power plants were built on waterfalls. The outlook on hydrogeneration development is illustrated by the completion of two major hydroelectric power stations on the Danube, another 16 on the Olt River, 18 on the Arges River, adding to which are other smaller power systems. Accordingly, besides electricy generation, vast irrigation projects could be carried out, and water supplied to industrial units and localities. The same outlook governs the building of 59 new water plants -- of which eleven will be commissioned on the Olt River, ten on the Mures River, five on the Siret, another five on the Crisul Repede, as well as several smaller plants, which, taken togther with already operating power plants, will boost the hydroelectric output to 17,837 million kwh a year, that is, 44.5 per cent of the total hydroelectric potential.

Besides the above plants, where work is now in progress, blueprints are prepared for 14 other water power stations, which will come on stream in the ongoing five-year period, to produce a combined total of 175. Consequently by 1990, the installed power of Romania's hydroelectric plants will stand at 6,528, with an electricity generating capacity of 18.2 billion kwh per annum, that is, hydro generation will account for 18 per cent of the power output produced in the last year of the quinquennium.

SUNDIC COMMENT ON FUTURE SALT COMMITTEE MEETING

LD161625 Zagreb Domestic Service in Serbo-Croatian 1300 GMT 16 Jul 86

[Milika Sundic Commentary]

[Text] Here now is our foreign political commentary which deals with Soviet-United States relations and the problem of disarmament and the factors on which the new Soviet-U.S. summit could depend. Here is Milika Sundic:

The United States has, quite unexpectedly for some, accepted the Soviet proposal about the holding of an extraordinary meeting of the SALT Permament Consultative Committee in Geneva on 22 July. In the opinion of some, the United States has in this way demonstrated its readiness to reexamine all the aspects of SALT II jointly with the Soviet Union. The American acceptance of the proposal is all the more significant given the fact that not long ago President Reagan announced America's intention to abrogate the treaty because, as he explained, the Soviet Union had for a long time been violating it.

At the meeting of the Permanent Consultative Committee, the first to be held at Soviet request, the United States will try to prove this while it seems certain that the Soviet Union will work toward linking the implementation of SALT II with a new Reagan-Gorbachev summit.

During his recent visit to Moscow, President Mitterrand also came to the conclusion that Mikhail Gorbachev would find it difficult to agree on a new meeting with Reagan if the United States decides to abandon SALT II. It appears that this subject was discussed at length by the Soviet and British foreign ministers, Eduard Shevardnadze and Geoffrey Howe.

It should be remembered that the Soviet Union is rejecting all accusations that it violated the SALT II agreement while the United States publicly announced that it intended to abandon the treaty at the end of the year. This raises the question of whether it would be realistic, at the present moment -- so crucial for the new Soviet-U.S. summit, -- to expect any results from the meeting of the Permament Consultative Committee. In other words, should the American acceptance of the proposal for the meeting in Geneva be interpreted as an indication of the possibility that the Reagan administration might reexamine its intention to abandon the SALT II treaty?

There are many people in the United States who support the idea of negotiations with the Soviet Union and who see the new Reagan-Gorbachev meeting as the only way out of the present crisis. One must neither ignore the constant efforts by the U.S. European allies towards this end.

Before he makes the final decision about the SALT II treaty, President Reagan should take all this into consideration particularly inview of the fact that the Soviet Union regards the SALT agreement as the basis for all its future agreements with the United States.

The meeting of the Permament Consultative Committee will probably make no decisions about the fate of the SALT treaty but it could make the United States delay its decision to abandon it until it is clear that the Soviet Union would not agree on a meeting with Reagan unless U.S. President rescinds its decision.

There is a belief in the world -- and how realistic it is will soon become clear -- that both the Soviet Union and the United States are making efforts to narrow the gap of mistrust which is dividing them and to ensure that the Reagan-Gorbachev meeting does take place. It is obvious that the present circumstances are not totally conducive to a new meeting but it is also obvious that its cancellation would lead to [word indistinct] and new confrontations between Moscow and Washington.

LJUBICIC RECEIVES LOGINOV, GORBACHEV MESSAGE

LD161425 Belgrade TANJUG in English 1319 GMT 16 Jul 86

[Text] Belgrade, July 16 (TANJUG) -- Presidency of Yugoslavia member Nikola Ljubicic has received Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Vadim Loginov who handed him a personal message of Communist Party of Soviet Union (CPSU) General Secretary Mikhail Gorbachev for the Yugoslav State Presidency.

The message pertains to the Soviet stands and initiatives on checking the arms race and opening a genuine disarmament process to embrace nuclear and all other types of weaponry.

Expressing thanks for the message of the CPSU general secretary, Ljubucic set out that in keeping with its non-aligned policy Yugoslavia has been consistently striving for immediately checking the dangerous arms race and towards disarmament on a universal basis, strengthening confidence, peace and security in the world, and upheld all concrete proposals and initiatives conducive to achieving these goals.

In the ensuing talks, which passed in a friendly atmosphere, overall relations between Yugoslavia and Soviet Union were assessed positively as was the successful comprehensive cooperation in all areas of mutual interest.

The two sides noted that the exchange of messages was a useful form of continual political dialogue and exchange of views between the leaderships of the two countries.

Dizdarevic Receives Loginov

[Text] Belgrade, 16 Jul (TANJUG) -- Raif Dizdarevic, federal secretary for foreign affairs, today received Vadim Loginov, USSR deputy foreign minister.

In the talks it was pointed out with satisfaction that Yugoslav-Soviet relations were developing successfully and that there were good bases for such a development in future as well. Apart from talks on some current international question, the federal secretary acquainted Loginov with the activities of Yugoslavia in the Nonaligned Movement and preparations for the forthcoming summit in Harare.

DIZDAREVIC GREETS ZAIRE FOREIGN AFFAIRS MINISTER

LD161503 Belgrade TANJUG Domestic Service in Serbo-Croatian 1322 GMT 16 Jul 86

[Excerpt] Belgrade 16 Jul (TANJUG) -- Mandungu Bula Nyati, minister of foreign affairs of the Republic of Zaire, with his wife and aides today arrived on an official and friendly visit to Yugoslavia.

The guest from the friendly nonaligned African country was met and greeted by Raif Dzdarevic, federal secretary for foreign affairs, along with aides. Lekwo Mapessa ambassador of the Republic of Zaire to Yugoslavia, and the embassy staff, were also present at the arrival. [passage omitted]

Economic Cooperation Discussed

LD162138 Belgrade TANJUG Domestic Service in Serbo-Croatian 2005 GMT 16 Jul 86

[Text] Belgrade, 16 Jul (TANJUG) -- Zaire is interested in developing cooperation with Yugoslavia, in particular in the economic area. This was said by Mandungu Bula Nyati, minister of foreign affairs of the Republic of Zaire during the official Yugoslav-Zairian talks held this afternoon in Belgrade. The Zairian foreign minister informed in detail Raif Dzdarevic, federal secretary for foreign affairs, about the socio-economic development of this large, populous country, situated in the very center of the African Continent.

The two ministers also carried out a comprehensive exchange of views on questions related to bilateral cooperation, in particular in the economic area. The Zairian foreign minister in particular spoke about the policy of reviving the Zaire economy and stressed his country's interest in cooperation with Yugoslavia on the basis of mutual benefit, through engaging Yugoslav economic organizations on the realization of the 5-year plan of Zaire. Both sides established that there was interest and significant opportunities to continue and further widen present cooperation, primarily in the areas of priority importance for this plan, agriculture, processing industry and the electric power industry.

Minister Bula Nyati stressed that he was particularly pleased that Yugoslavia is the first non-aligned country he visited since he recently took over the foreign affairs portfolio in the government.

Ministers Nyati and Dizdarevic, with the participation of their aides, also exchanged views on the current questions from the international political and economic scene. The Zairian foreign affairs minister informed the Yugoslav side about his country's activities on the eve of the eighth summit of nonaligned states in Harare. In this context, he spoke in particular about relations between Zaire and Angola, a front line country, stressing the interest of Kinshasa to continue developing good-neighborly relations with the government in Luanda.

Dizdarevic Hosts Dinner

LD170510 Belgrade TANJUG Domestic Service in Serbo-Croatian 2237 GMT 16 Jul 86

[Text] Belgrade, 16 Jul (TANJUG) -- Raif Dizdarevic, federal secretary for foreign affairs, arranged a formal dinner this evening in the Palace of the Federation in New Belgrade in honor of Mandungu Bula Nyati, minister of foreign affairs of the Republic of Zaire.

In the course of the dinner, which took place in a very cordial and warm atmosphere, the host and his guest exchanged formal toasts.

Once again wishing Minister Nyati a sincere welcome and pleasant stay in Yugoslavia, Federal Secretary for Foreign Affairs Raif Dizdarevic said that the friendship between Yugoslavia and Zaire dates from the time this African country struggled for independence.

Stressing that Yugoslav-Zairian economic cooperation is a model of cooperation between developing countries, the Yugoslav foreign minister added that this cooperation is developing in the interests of both sides, and that this visit will contribute to it even more.

Underlining the importance of a new economic order in the world, the federal secretary spoke of the need for expanding and strengthening cooperation between developing countries, to which Zaire and Yugoslavia belong. He also recalled the importance of resolving the critical economic situation in Africa. Continuing his toast, Dizdarevic also spoke about the forthcoming eighth conference of the heads of state and government of the nonaligned nations in Harare, expressing in this connection his conviction that this gathering would demonstrate the consistent unity of action of the movement.

Thanking his host for his arm words, Zairian Minister of Foreign Affairs Mandungu Bula Nyati stressed in his toat that his visit represents the further continuity of the successful dialogue between the two countries, and that it will serve to stimulate and activate the cooperation between Yugoslavia and Zaire.

Recalling the importance of the agreements that have been concluded in the past -- on cooperation in the areas of the economy and information -- Minister Nyati also noted the importance of signing the convention on scientific-technical and cultural cooperation between the two countries.

Minister Nyati particularly stressed the importance of cooperation between Yugoslavia and Zaire in the Nonaligned Movement, noting that both these countries were founders of the movement. For the Republic of Zaire, nonalignment is the natural option of an authentic movement which is finding its own way, he said.

The Zairian minister expressed the conviction that the eighth summit in Harare will assist all members of the movement to return to the original principles of nonalignment, principles that were enunciated in the declaration adopted at the first summit of the nonaligned nations in Belgrade.

ISSUES OUTLINED FOR NONALIGNED CONFERENCE

LD161734 Belgrade TANJUG Domestic Service in Serbo-Croatian 1411 GMT 16 Jul 86

[Text] Belgrade, 16 Jul (TANJUG) -- Today the SFRY Presidency discussed and approved a platform for the activity of the Yugoslav delegation at the eighth summit conference of nonaligned countries which will take place in Harare 1-7 September. The Presidency also nominated members of the Yugoslav delegation for the conference. The session was presided over by President Sinan Hasani, and included the presidents of the republication and provincial presidencies and the highest ranking officials of federal organs and organizations.

Raif Dizdarevic, federal security for foreign affairs, acquainted the SFRY Presidency with the current activities of the Nonaligned Movement in the final stage of preparations for the eighth conference in Harare.

It was stated at the session that the conference is taking place at a time characterized by continuation of the arms race, the increasingly difficult position of developing countries, the expansion of existing hotbeds of crisis with the possibility that new ones might erupt, and the increased attacks on the independence and security, primarily of nonaligned countries. A certain level of detente in relations between the superpowers and blocs, it was pointed out, has so far not led to progress in deailing with any of the most difficult international problems.

The priority directions and nonaligned countries' activity, it was stressed at the session, are to strengthen the process of peace, detente, security, disarmament, and equitable international cooperation, as well as to solve as urgently as possible all the burning questions of international economic relations. The nonaligned countries, it was stressed, welcomed the resumption of dialogue between the superpowers, but at the same time they expect concrete results toward achieving universal detente.

The resumption of the North-South dialogue, solving the question of the developing countries' debts, the participation of these countries in scientific development and the use of the achievements of modern technology, imposes the need to establish concret actions without delay. Stress was also laid on the need to overcome stagnation and the decreasing economic cooperation between nonaligned countries.

The significance of a more active involvement in seeking the ways to solve the existing hotbeds of crisis in the world was also emphasized. It was pointed out that the efforts made so far are not sufficient, that these crisis are not being solved, while the situation in some regions is even becoming more aggravated, primarily in the Near East, the Mediterranean, Central America, and Southeast and southwest Asia. Particular stress was laid on the increasingly aggravated situation in South Africa, caused by the brutal actions of the racist Pretoria regime toward the majority population of South Africa and its threatening of the independence of the frontline countries.

It was stressed that in solving these problems, it is indispensably significant to further strengthening the United Nations as a universal and democratic world organization for negotiations and solving key problems on the basis of sovereign equality, to which a special contribution, as it has been the case so far, should be made by nonaligned countries.

It was assessed at the session that, in the preparations for the eighth conference in Harare, the activity of the nonaligned countries has gained strength and their readiness for concrete involvement of the movement on the basis of the original principles and orientations of the nonalignment policy has become prominent. The solidarity and cooperation of the nonaligned countries in defending independence and the right to their own way of development have been strengthened, as well as their opposition to direct and indirect intervention, pressures and interferences, all forms of foreign domination, competition among the blocs and the presence of foreign troops and bases on other countries' territories.

Adopting the platform for the activity of the Yugoslav delegation, the Presidency established that the summit has been preceded by the broad comprehensive action in our country, in which Yugoslavia's firm readiness to make the greatest possible contribution to the activity of the movement and to the success of the eighth conference of nonaligned countries has been demonstrated. In the forthcoming period as well, our country will continue discussing and putting into concrete terms its stands on the questions to be discussed in Harare. It was particularly stressed that the Yugoslav delegation will make maximum efforts to ensure that the eighth conference -- at which the 25th anniversary of the first conference of the heads of states or governments in Belgrade will be marked -- will open up prospects for even more successful activity of the movement and the policy of nonalignment in the struggle for world peace and for equitable political and economic relations between countries and nations.

The Presidency believes that the eighth summit conference of nonaligned countries should, through concrete decisions, provide a new and strong stimulus to the activity of the Nonaligned Movement as a global, independent, and extra-bloc factor in the process of changing political and economic relations in the world and solving key international questions.

The Yugoslav delegation to the conference in Harare will be led by Sinan Hasani, president of the SFRY Presidency, and will include the following: Josip Vrhovec, member of the SFRY Presidency; Raif Dizdarevic, federal secretary for foreign affairs; Dr Oskar Kovac, member of the Federal Executive Council; Ignac Golob, SFRY permanent representative to the UN; Dragoslav Pejic, assistant federal secretary for foreign affairs; and Dusan Litvinovic, SFRY ambassador to Zimbabwe.

SFRY - SWEDISH POLITICAL CONSULTATIONS HELD

LD162030 Belgrade TANJUG in English 1848 GMT 16 Jul 86

[Text] Belgrade, July 16 (TANJUG) -- The latest international developments, including the situation in Europe, and the activities aimed at insuring the success of the Stockholm Conference on Security and Conference Builiding Measures were the main topics of the talks held here today between Deputy Yugoslav Foreign Secretary Budimir Loncar and Swedish State Secretary Pierre Schori.

The talks were part of the regular political consultations between the Yugoslav Secretariat for Foreign Affairs and the Swedish Foreign Ministry.

Today's talks were also devoted to Yugoslav-Swedish relations, in which context both sides stated the readiness further to expand their mutual cooperation, especially at the economic level Pierre Schori was today received by Yugoslav Foreign Secretary Raif Dizdarevic.

INCREASE IN RETAIL PRICES OF GAS, DIESEL FUEL

LD162122 Belgrade TANJUG Domestic Service in Serbo-Croatian 2016 GMT 16 Jul 86

[Text] Belgrade, 16 Jul (TANJUG) -- The retail price of gas from midnight tonight will go up by about 20 percent. The decision on this has been taken by the Federal Executive Council.

A liter of 86-octane fuel will, instead of the present 151 dinars, cost 181 dinars; 98-octane gas increases in price from 162 to 195 dinars, and lead-free gas will sell at a new price which is increased from 181 to 214 dinars.

As well as gas, diesel fuel will also increase in price, with diesel-1 costing 158 instead of 132 dinars. The price of diesel-2 goes up from 131 to 157 dinars, and diesel-3 from 130 to 156 dinars per liter.

The cost of fuel for agriculture, urban and suburban transportation and other areas which have hitherto had concessionary rates, will remain unchanged. According to the calculations of the Federal Institute for Prices, the new prices of gas and diesel fuel will increase the cost of living by 0.94 percent, and will increase retail prices by 1.5 percent.

It is, of course, appropriate to ask what the funds realized from increasing the price of gas and diesel fuel will be used for. First and foremost they will go to promoting Yugoslavia's foreign trade, but they will also contribute to he more rapid construction and better maintenance of roads. The rise in the price of gas means that a further 5 dinars per liter will be allocated for roads. Refinary of gas remain the same. In other words, only retail prices are increasing.

IRREGULARITIES IN GOVERNMENT SPENDING REPORTED

LD162121 Belgrade TANJUG Domestic Service in Serbo-Croatian 1157 GMT 16 Jul 86

[Excerpts] Belgrade, 16 Jul (TANJUG) -- The latest report by the Federal Budget Inspectorate warns that there were iregularities last year both in the calculation of the Federation's income and in the spending of budget funds. There was not a single federal organ visited by the budget inspectors which had not deviated, if only by a small degree, from the regulations. The state of affairs is best reflected in the fact that the inspectors have called for the return of more than 7 billion dinars to the federal coffers.

In connection with the finding of the Budget Inspectorate, delegates in the Federal Budget Committee have emphasized that the utilization of federal budget funds must serve as a model to the whole of society. Energetically calling for the legal, specific, and rational spending of federal budget monies, the delegates insisted on the strengthening of the Budget Inspectorate and on the strong moral condemnation of irresponsible attitudes toward social resources. [passage omitted]

Of the federal organs, the findings of the inspectorate are most striking in the case of the Presidium of the Conference of the Socialist Youth Federation of Yugoslavia, where almost everything is problematical, from the calcuation of personal incomes, to errors in travel claims, hospitality accounts for visits by foreign delegations, and the implementation of certain agreements relating to youth day, and the accounting of expenses for the youth congress.

WORK PLAN ADOPTED FOR ALL-PEOPLE'S DEFENSE

LD162005 Belgrade TANJUG Domestic Service in Serbo-Croatian 1321 GMT 16 Jul 86

[Text] Pristina, 16 Jul (TANJUG) -- The Commission for All-People's Defense and Social Self-Protection adopted at today's session a work plan for the next 1-year period and the rules of procedure on the tasks, organization and the way of work of this commission.

A demand was put forward for a more energetic activity against the phenomena of economic crime and speculations, as well as for a more organized work with young people on their training and concrete participation in the system of all people's defense and social self-protection.

The commission will devote special attention to the state of organization of all-people's defense and social self-protection in municipalities, local communities and organizations of associated labor, as well as to undertaking activity in the organizations and organs of the LC with the aim to further strengthen and socialize all people's defense and social self-protection. It was said that to this end in the next period the commission would discuss the questions of organization of the ideopolitical activity of the LC in the units of territorial defense, enrollment of candidates in schools of internal affairs, secondary military schools and academies. The commission will also discuss the political-security situation in Kosovo, in cooperation with the municipal committees of the LC for all people's defense and social self-protection in the province.

CROATIAN LC DISCUSSES NEW METHODS, GOALS

AU161753 Belgrade BORBA in Serbo-Croatian 21-22 Jun 86 p 6

[K. Bijelic and S. Vranic Report]

[Excerpts] Zagreb, 20 Jun -- The quick overcoming of our grave economic situation, the strengthening of self-management and the process of associated labor, inducing the development of a modern and world-oriented economy, stimulating the development of science and technology, faster progress in developing expert activities, and the development of our political system and the removal of all barriers obstructing its realization, are, in sum, the main questions toward which the LC of Croatia will direct its attention and its activities.

To take on these tasks, the Central Commitee of the LC of Croatia, with Stanko Stojcevic presiding, today at its first session since the 10th Croatian LC Congress decided on a turnabout in the methods of its work, in other words, it declared itself in favor of methods which would be suitable to the essence of the tasks facing the LC.

A Turnabout in Work

In his introductory speech regarding the basis of program activities, Drago Dimitrovic, secretary of the Central Committee's Presidium, as well as other people taking part in the discussion, strongly stressed the need for the LC to get away from paper work, in other words, instead of doing forum-like work, to turn more than ever toward real life and its problems. [passage omitted]

Dusan Calic pointed out that it is not enough for the LC merely to talk about major changes, but that it should say precisely what changes are necessary and who should carry out these tasks; otherwise it will be impossible to hold everybody responsible for his own work and undertaken obligations. [passage omitted]

Requests for the LC to turn more than ever before toward theoretical work were also expressed. In this connection, Celestin Sardelic spoke about the building of a modern theory and political vision of the party as a vanguard of the political organization of class and people [as published] which will be suitable to current exceptional historical conditions, as an unavoidable task of the LC as a whole. SLOVENE WRITERS PROTEST AGAINST UNJUST PERSECUTION

AU161513 Ljubljana DELO in Dlovene 8 Jul 86 p 6

["Statement by the Slovene Writers Association"]

[Text] In connection with numerous recent events which constitute attacks on basic human rights, as well as on the constitutional and legal rights of many writers, scientists, and journalists, the Commission for the Protection of Thought and Writing of the Slovene Writers Association expresses its protest against all the factors that cause such steps, and against those who carry them out, or incite them.

In this connection we first of all join all the organizations that have protested publicly against the criminal proceedings against Tomaz Mastnak on the basis of Article 112 of the Criminal Code of the SR of Slovenia because of his opinion expressed during the election procedure about the then candidate for the president of the Federal Executive Council. We refer to our initiative made at the first illegal, but covert, intervention in the MLADINA editorial board, when Mastnak's article, which has now been made the subject of criminal charges, had to be withdrawn, but because of lack of information at that time we could not proceed.

Prosecution in the courts can only serve as a reivival of political trials and together with pressure against the independence of the courts, as a simultaneous increase in general repression all over the country. Therefore we mention some other examples of repression which, among other things, diminish the prestige of our country.

Here we have in the first place the cruel persecution of Dr Vladimir Dedijer, academician, historian, and president of the Ruhssel Tribunal, and his family, and even of his scientific associates, primarily in connection with the fourth volume of his "New Contributions for a Biography of J.B. Tito" (because of announced new facts about the Dachau trials [in 1948 and 1949, when several Communists of long standing were convicted and some of them executed, to be rehabilitated in the seventies]), while a translation of his third volume cannot be published in Slovenia. Therefore we join in the protest which the late Lado Kozak, together with Bojan Stih, Rudi Rizman, and other personages, addressed to the Central Committee of the LC of Slovenia a year ago. At the same time we protest resolutely against the horrid treatment indeed of Dedijer and his family by some internal affairs organs, about which we have been informed by Comrade Dedijer.

In this connection we cannot pass over the statements by some of the highest internal affairs officials; we were unable to do so regarding the speech by Culafic, federal secretary for internal affairs, on the occasion of Security Day last year. On the same occasion this year, Tomaz Ertl, secretary for internal affairs of the SR of Slovenia, made a speech in which he also came out against every criticism, which for him is "a method of irresponsible petty political speculation," especially if it concerns "people whom we entrusted with responsible offices." There is no doubt that this refers above all to people who write. In both speeches, however, there is not a single word about the inhuman conduct, for instance, of some governors of Yugoslav prisons of the doctors there, and of other employees, who were identified by their full names by their victims (Seselj, seks, Paraga, and others) whose distressing evidence elicits horror and as such concerns all of us. Such positions by people who are responsible for our security and our civil rights impart the gereral tone and incite the conduct referred to.

Finally we cannot avoid the recent unacceptable statement by Bozidar Gorjan, president of the Republican Committee of the Federation of Veterans Associations, about the events in Rog [partisan territory in Slovenia in World War II] which have not been properly investigated by far, but which have; However, been disturbing the participants in the national liberation struggle and our whole public, because they can by no means be "unregretted." A statement emphasized in this way means pressure on the investigation and on the formation of public opinion.

SAWP PRESIDIUM CALLS WRITERS CHARGES UNFOUNDED

LD160635 Belgrade TANJUG Domestic Service in Serbo-Croatian 1557 GMT 15 Jul 86

[Summary] Ljubljana; 15 Jul (TANJUG) -- The Presidium of the Slovene SAWP Republican Conference held a session today to discuss the report by the Slovene Executive Council on the economic trends in the first 6 months. It was stressed in the debate that the indicators presented give cause for concern and that broad-based mobilization is needed in order to achieve the tasks set before us.

"The Presidium also discussed the recent statement by the Society of Slovene Writers which was published in DELP on 8 July. In brief, in this statement the Society's Commission for the Protection of Thought and Writing voiced its protest against all factors which make attacks on the human, constitutional, and legal rights of writers, scientists, and publicists. The statement also warns that repression is gaining ground in the country, citing the trial of Tomaz Mastnak, the alleged persecution of Vladimir Delijer and his family, and also some passages from statements made by Tomaz Ertl, the republic's secretary for internal affairs, and Bozidar Gorjan, president of the republican Federation of Veterans' Associations.

"It emerged from the debate, which lasted for several hours that the society's statement contained unfounded accusations and unsubstantiated claims. It was agreed that in its present form the statement is unacceptable. Veno Taufer and Tone Prtljic, the two signatories to the statement, even apologized in public to Tomaz Ertl. It was said that after the statement was published, a patient and well reasoned dialogue which, it was stressed, should occur more frequently in the country's social, political, and economic life, was conducted with the signatories. The mistake lay in the fact that the statement was made public first and that only afterwards did we sit down to discuss it openly. It was decided that the Society of Slovene Writers should be informed about the today's debate, its conclusions, and the views expressed. The society is then expected to decide whether or not to put out a new statement, which will be based on valid arguments.

BTA WARNS OF DETERIORATING TURKISH RELATIONS

["BTA Declaration" -- BTA headline]

[Text] Sofia, July 17 (BTA) -- Recently, Mr Turgut Ozal, prime minister of Turkey, has taken the liberty of making certain gross and ill-befitting verbal attacks against the People's Republic of Bulgaria connected with the "problem" of the condition of Bulgarian Muslims, a problem artificially raised and fanned up by Turkey. These lies and slanders have become increasingly frequent with the progress of the election campaign in Turkey. Had these statements been made by a private citizen, they could have still been passed over in silence. This is not the case, however, as the statements in question have come from a prime minister and a leader of a ruling party.

In this connection, the BULGARIAN TELEGRAPH AGENCY has been authorised to declare:

The ostensible "concern" for the Bulgarian Muslims voiced by Prime Minister Ozal is totally unfounded, both morally and politically, and it is unjustifiable in terms of international law. All allegations about restrictions of the rights and freedoms of Bulgarian Muslims, about demolished mosques, persecution on grounds of religious affiliation, etc., are absurd and ill-intended fabrications. They can be ascessed in no other way but as an attempt at inadmissible interference in the internal affairs of the sovereign Bulgarian state and in the life of her citizens, as a demonstration of anachronistic pan-Turkish ambitions aimed at kindling an anti-Bulgarian hysteria in neighboring Turkey and at creating a distorting idea of the People's Republic of Bulgaria.

These fabrications have naturally stirred the indignation of the Bulgarian people who reject them most categorically.

Bulgaro-Turkish relations have a complicated history. They have gone through difficult periods and through good-neighborliness and cooperation in recent decades. The positive elements in these relations have come about as a result of the communality of interests of the Bulgarian and Turkish peoples, and of the joint efforts made by the two countries' politicians. Bulgaria has always been seeking good relations with all neighboring states, Turkey included. Good-neighbor relations, however, require reciprocity, respect, serious and honorable partnership.

This country has not done anything which can be interpreted as impairing Turkish interests, as an obstacle to the favourable promotion of mutually advantageous cooperation, of understanding and good-neighborliness. The maintenance, the strengthening and the promotion of such relations presupposes a responsible statesmanlike approach. Otherwise everything achieved could be wasted off-handedly. Is this what the incumbent prime minister of Turkey wants? If he wants this, then he will have only himself to blame for the consequences ensuing from the deterioration of the climate of understanding and good-neighborliness between our two countries, and his name will go down in history linked with an ill-fated episode in Bulgaro-Turkish relations.

Over the last few years, the continuous process of the Bulgarians' getting rid of yet another vestige left from the Ottoman domination -- the Turkish element in the names of part of them -- was brought to an ultimate and irreversible completion. This is a strictly private matter, which, in the conditions of free and democratic Bulgaria, is settled by the citizens themselves. The question arises as to whether Mr Ozal's attitude to Bulgarians' shedding the vestiges of a tragic past is not underlined by designs for attaining chauvinistic as well as alien strategic goals?

One such policy serves the interest of those circles which are seeking to destabilize the situation in the Balkans and on a wider scale. It has nothing to do with the real interests of the Turkish people and of Bulgaro-Turkish understanding.

Short-sighted political reckonings have always been a bad counsel. And since it is a question of relations between two sovereign neighbouring states, relations which have a past, a present and a future, let us recall the popular saying, well known both in Bulgaria and in Turkey: "Measure twice and cut once".

The interests of the two peoples call for realism and a constructive approach, and not for kindling chauvinistic passions and statements in the spirit of cold war. There is no, and there can be no other reasonable alternative in Bulgaro-Turkish relations.

TRANSPORTATION COOPERATION TALKS WITH GREECE

AU171656 Sofia BTA in English 1732 GMT 17 Jul 86

[Text] Sofia, July 17 (BTA) -- Bulgaria and Greece are interested in a long-term promotion of their cooperation in transport and communications, said here today Mr Vasil Tsanov, minister of transport, and Mr Yeoryios Papadhimitriou, the Greek minister of transport and communications. They signed a protocol on their talks which assesses positively the links in these fields and outlines their future expansion.

In view of the two countries' geographical position, there are untapped possibilities for an increase especially of transit shipments through their territories and, to that end, for a more active use of the transport traffic from the Nordic and central European countries.

In their common assessment, a fine beginning was set in the team work of Bulgaria, Greece and Syria to study the possibilities for opening a ferry service between Volos (Greece) and Latakia (Syria).

In the future, efforts will be focused on combined motor transport deliveries from Europe to the Middle East. In this connection, versions will be worked out to improve mutually advantageous cooperation.

The heads of the two countries' railroad administrations signed a separate long-term agreement on the development of bilateral and transit railroad deliveries.

Mr Georgi Atanasov, chairman of the Council of Ministers, received the Greek guest today. They noted the upgrade development of Bulgarian-Greek relations and surveyed the state of cooperation in water, air and road transport, as well as the possibilities for a promotion of transport links between Bulgaria, Greece and the Middle East countries.

During his visit here, Mr Yeoryios Papadhimitriou conferred with Mr Pencho Kubadinski, chairman of the National Council of the Fatherland Front, and with Mr Khristo Khristov, minister of trade.

ZHIVKOV GREETS SRV'S TRUONG CHINH ON ELECTION

AU171029 Sofia RABOTNICHESKO DELO in Bulgarian 15 Jul 86 p 1

[Text] Todor Zhivkov, general secretary of the BCP Central Committee and chairman of the State Council of the People's Republic of Bulgaria, [PRB] has sent the following telegram to Truong Chinh, general secretary of the Communist Party of Vietnam [CPV] and chairman of the State Council of the Socialist Republic of Vietnam.

Dear Comrade Truong Chinh,

In the name of the BCP Central Committee, all Bulgarian Communists, and in my own name I congratulate you most sincerely on the occasion of your election as general secretary of the CPV Central Committee.

We know you as an outstanding leader of the CPV, with a substantial contribution to the building up of a united Socialist Vietnam.

The Bulgarian Communists and the entire Bulgarian people are profoundly convinced that under the Marxist-Leninist leadership of the CPV Central Committee the fraternal Vietnamese people, inspired by the testaments of Ho Chi Minh and the decisions of the Fifth CPV Congress, will achieve new successes in socialist construction and the further strengthening of the friendship, unity, and cooperation with the Soviet Union and the countries of the socialist community, and will make a worthy contribution to the struggle for peace and for turning Southeast Asia into a zone of peace, good-neighborliness, and mutual beneficial cooperation.

The BCP and the PRB will continue in the future to expand and deepen the friendship and comprehensive cooperation with the VCP and the SRV, built upon the principles of Marxism-Leninism and socialist internationalism, for the good of our two peoples socialism, and peace.

I sincerely wish you good health and new successes in your highly responsible activity.

GREETINGS TO MONGOLIA ON NATIONAL HOLIDAY

AU171026 Sofia RABOTNICHESKO DELO in Bulgarian 11 Jul 86 pp 1, 2

[Text] Todor Zhivkov, general secretary of the BCP Central Committee and chairman of the State Council, and Georgi Atanasov, chairman of the Council of Ministers, have sent the following message to Jambyn Batmonh, general secretary of the Central Committee of the Mongolian People's Revolutionary Party [MPRP] and chairman of the Presidium of the Great People's Hural of the Mongolian People's Republic, and Dumaagiyn Sodnom, chairman of the Council of Ministers of the Mongolian People's Republic.

Dear Comrades, on behalf of the BCP Central Committee, the State Council and Council of Ministers of the People's Republic of Bulgaria, the entire Bulgarian people, and on our personal behalf we send you and the entire working people of fraternal Mongolia cordial greetings and best wishes on 11 July -- the country's national holiday.

Inspired by the example of the Great October Revolution, the Mongolian revolution triumphed 65 years ago and revealed great opportunities of ascending development for the Mongolian people. Under the leadership of their Marxist-Leninist People's Revolutionary Party, with the selfless assistance of the USSR, and in close unity of action with the other fraternal countries of the socialist community, the Mongolian working people achieved great successes in constructing the material-technical base of socialism.

The Mongolian People's Republic is actively developing economic cooperation with the CEMA member-countries and makes its contribution to strengthening socialist economic integration.

The Bulgarian Communists and our country's entire working people highly value the peaceful foreign policy of the Mongolian People's Republic, aimed at creating a climate of good-neighborliness and understanding among the people of the Asian Continent and throughout the world.

We note with deep satisfaction that friendship and cooperation between our parties and countries is constantly strengthening and developing on the basis of the principles of Marxism-Leninism and socialist internationalism, for the benefit of the Bulgarian and Mongolian peoples, and in the name of the unity and cohesion of the socialist community's countries.

On the occasion of your bright holiday -- the 65th anniversary of the Mongolian People's Revolution -- we wish the fraternal Mongolian people even greater successes in construction socialism and in the struggle for implementing the decisions of the 19th MPRP Congress.

MINISTERS CRITICIZE ENTERPRISES' PLAN FULFILLMENT

AU171633 Sofia RABOTNICHESKO DELO in Bulgarian 16 Jul 86 pp 1, 8

["In the Council of Ministers -- the Country's Economy Is Developing Successfully -- Certain Economic Trusts Sharply Criticized for Unsatisfactory Results in Fulfilling the 6-Month Plan"]

[Text] The Council of Ministers discussed the results of the fulfillment of the Uniform Plan for the Country's Socioeconomic Development during the first half of the year. It was established that, as a result of the nationwide upsurge in honor of the 13th BCP Congress and for fulfilling the congress' decisions, the plan has been fulfilled as a whole in all the basic indexes. Considerable growth has been achieved in production, social labor productivity, profitability, retail goods turnover, services to the population, wages, and so on. A substantial effect has been obtained from introducing the achievements of technical progress into practice. The country's economy is developing successfully during the first year of the Ninth 5-Year Plan period.

The Council of Ministers drew attention to the lagging behind in certain tasks, permitted weaknesses, and unsolved problems, and adopted appropriate measures. The leaderships of the economic organizations were ordered to make an in-depth analysis of the reasons for the nonfulfillment of the plan with regard to individual indexes, and to intensify the work of opening up new reserves in order to accelerate rates and raise efficiency in accordance with the party postulates for a qualitative new growth in the economy. Severe criticism was made of the following for unsatisfactory results in fulfillment of the plan:

Stroitelstov Economic Trust [ET], Chairman Georgi Grigorov;
Khimicheska Promishlenost ET, Chairman Kiril Petkov;
Rodopa ET, Chairman Nikola Spasov;
Balkandar ET, Chairman Stefan Danyanov;
Pamukoteks ET, Chairman Boyan Yanev;
Pirin ET, Chairman Stoyan Gadzhanov; and Ruen ET, Chairman Boncho Sarafov.

Particular attention was drawn to creating the necessary organization for rhythmically fulfilling the plan and maintaining high rates of production during July and August. [paragraph continues]

Special measures should be adopted by the leadership of the enterprises, combines, and economic trusts to speed up the introduction into practice of scientific and technical achievements; to fully utilize the intensive factors to overcome the lagging in fulfillment of the state orders for certain important products; to improve the utilization of the basic funds, raw materials, other materials, and manpower; to drastically improve quality; to fulfill the contracts for production-sharing deliveries and material and technical supplies; to ensure production for export and for the home market; and to strengthen plan, technological, financial, and labor discipline.

The construction organizations and the investors were instructed to do what is necessary to overcome the lagging behind in the construction of certain products that are to be commissioned and to ensure the production which they have envisaged for the year, as well as to complete the housing provided for in the plan.

The Ministry of Transportation was ordered to improve the coordination in the operation of the individual types of transport and between the goods suppliers and the transportation organizations, with a view to ensuring the shipment of goods in a timely manner and to a high standard of quality.

It is the immediate task of the National Agro-Industrial Union and the agro-industrial complexes to speed up the harvest and the sowing of the second crops, and to ensure the gathering of fruit and vegetables according to schedule and without losses. The executive committees of the okrug people's councils must exercise systematic control of the fulfillment of these tasks.

Instructions were given to the ministries and the leaderships of the economic trusts and the combines to press on further with their activities relating to reorganizing the style and methods of work under the conditions of the new management structures, in order to develop the initiative of the direct goods producers, as well as of the self-governing systems, and to overfulfill the plan for the year in all indexes.

FILIPOV ATTENDS VRATSA PLENUM; LAGS NOTED

AU171844 Sofia Domestic Service in Bulgarian 1730 GMT 17 Jul 86

[Text] On 17 July a plenum of the Vratsa Okrug BCP organization took place. It was attended by Comrade Grisha Filipov. The plenum dealt with improving the political and party work related to accelerating the commissioning of the third and constructing the sixth block of the Kozloduy Nuclear Complex. During the discussion it was noted that the process of completing the construction sites awaiting commissioning, and the process of equipping them are lagging behind. Labor time and resources are not being fully utilized. The participants in the plenum adopted concrete measures for overcoming the difficulties.

MEASURES ENACTED TO ENSURE WINTER POWER SUPPLIES

[Text] The Bureau of the Council of Ministers examined the preparations for ensuring stable electric-power and heating supplies during the fall and winter period and approved concrete measures.

It was stressed that the necessary preconditions have been created for increasing the production of electric power and for ensuring normal satisfaction of the growing needs of the national economy and the population, and that the necessary reseves have also been created for the stable operation of the power supply system.

At the same time, it was stressed that the regular and normal supply of electricity is connected with observing the necessary discipline both by power-producing enterprises and consumers.

The ministries, economic trusts, and the executive committees of the okrug people's councils was instructed to make an analysis by the end of August 1986 of the preparations of the enterprises, departments, and individual production units for operation during the winter with the most efficient and economical utilization of electric power and fuels.

The Energetika Economic Trust and the economic organizations which possess factory power plants were charged to complete the repairs of these plants by the end of October and to ensure the necessary coal reserves.

Incentives and measures were defined for increasing the production of briquettes, for additional production of wood for fuel, and for delivery of coal in order to satisfy the needs of the population more fully.

The attention of the Energetika Economic Trust, the Stroitelstvo Economic Trust, and the Executive Committee of Sofia City People's Council was drawn to the lagging behind which had been permitted in the construction of the district central heating installations in Sofia, and they were charged with adopting measures by the end of July this year for the projects for commissioning to be urgently brought into service this year.

It is exceptionally important for the economic organizations, institutions, and the citizens to immediately adopt measures to repair and insulate production and public buildings, housing, shops, and so on.

In noting that the labor collectives and the population had displayed high awareness, contributing thereby to substantial savings of energy resources, the Bureau of the Council of Ministers voiced its confidence that they will now also show an attitude of responsibility and discipline in order to ensure the most thrifty use of electric power and fuels and to guarantee the normal operation of the national economy during the winter.

PAPER ON CADRE CHANGES BETWEEN CPCZ CONGRESSES

[Editorial: "Party Functionary"]

[Excerpts] [passage omitted] The party pays systematic attention to cadre policy and work with cadres. Almost one-third of secretaries and over 45 percent of leading secretaries of district party committees and 40 percent of secretaries of regional party committees were exchanged, for various reasons, in the period between the 16th and 17th Congresses. The annual membership meetings of primary party organizations held prior to the congress elected 23 percent new members and 15 percent new chairmen of primary party committees. A total of 36 percent of the members of district party committees and more than 33 percent of the members and candidate members of regional party committees were exchanged at the precongress conferences.

The CPCZ Central Committee and CPSL Central Committee suport stability of cadres, but also their reasonable replacement. They have repeatedly stressed that there continue to be quite a number of party functionaries and managerial workers whose work results do not come up to current requirements. They live from hand to mouth, work without a well-thought-out concept, dodge conflicts, and either justify shortcomings or do not see their causes in themselves but somewhere "on top" or "at the bottom." They do not invest their energy to fulfill tasks but to find loopholes and roundabout ways of getting out of messy situations. They avail themselves of administrative methods of management. Political officials thus often turn into dispatch clerks, organizers into statisticians, and educators into learners. As Comrade Mikhail Gorbachev said describing the conduct of these party functionaries at the CPSU Central Committee session this June: "They speak with relish and competently about the current economic campaign, about milk yields and weight increments, about tons and so forth, but when the issue is a political analysis of social phenomena, socioeconomic tasks, problems of science and technology, or the potentials of the human factors, they frequently lose the ground under their feet." It is as though he speaking our experiences.

The present era demands of party functionaries a CONTINUOUS UPDATING OF KNOWLEDGE [passage published in wide-spaced type] enhancement of qualifications, and widening of the ideopolitical, scientific-technical, and economic horizons. Without these qualities, they cannot possibly efficiently guide and manage. [passage omitted]

'SECRET' OPINION POLL FAVORS NEUTRALITY

AU170957 Vienna DIE PRESSE in German 17 Jul 86 p 2

[Special DIE PRESSE report by "P.M."]

[Text] Vienna -- In one of the most extraordinary political actions since the 1968 invasion by East bloc forces, independent sociologists conducted a secret opinion poll in CSSR, which showed the following main result: The overwhelming majority of the population would decide in favor of a pluralist democracy and would prefer neutrality over belonging to any bloc. In free elections the ruling communist party would only get 14 percent of the votes.

The most important thing is, without a doubt, the fact that it was possible to conduct this opinion poll. The organizers were actually able to work through the 85 questions with 342 compatriots; despite the danger of being discovered by the authorities they also polled communist party members, although their share does not quite correspond to the otherwise representative cross section of the population. Thus the sociologists themselves called the results relative; but these results to give important insights into social development in the CSSR. The study was recently published by the Czech exile journal SVEDECTVI (TESTIMONY) and -- in German -- by the Viennese journal OSTNACHRICHTEN (NEWS FROM THE EAST).

"Identification with Marxism or communism is totally disappearing in young people," the study says. Not a single interlocutor under the age of 35 professed to be a "Marxist," only 0.85 percent called themselves communists. Whe having the opportunity of selecting several terms, 42.7 percent decided in favor of "democrat," 14.5 percent were for "believer," and 12.8 percent for "socialist-non-Marxist." Almost two thirds of the younger people said: "I reject any such appellation, I am simply a human being."

Taken the opinion poll as a whole, 50.8 percent agreed with this statement; even more approval, namely 54 percent, was given to the term "democrat," while only 4.4 percent in each case selected "Marxist" or "communist," a total of 16.9 percent consider themselves as "religious people."

The attitude toward the superpowers led the sociologists to conclude that there is a marked tendency toward neutrality among their compatriots. Although 27.7 percent of those polled said that the term "imperialist superpower" fits the Soviet Union without any reservations (United States: 8.8 percent), the majority only partly agreed with these critical statements. But nine times more CSSR citizens expressed a positive attitude toward the United States.

KROLIKOWSKI DEMANDS RETURN OF MEISSNER

LD171332 East Berlin ADN International Service in German 1244 GMT 17 Jul 86

[Text] Berlin, 17 Jul (ADN) -- Dr Herbert Krolikowski, secretry of state and first deputy minister of the GDR Foreign Affairs Ministry, stressed today to Dr Hans Otto Braeutigam, the head of the permanent FRG Mission in the GDR, the GDR's demand for the immediate and unhindered return of GDR citizen Professor Herbert Meissner, deputy secretary general of the GDR Academy of Sciences, to the GDR, which the FRG authorities have denied him for days, against his will. Secretary of State Krolikowski pointed out that the measures introduced by the FRG authorities are aimed directly against professor Meissner's personal freedom. They are a serious interference in tourist visit traffic. State Secretary Krolikowski strongly rejected the FRG's claim to have a "duty to look after" GDR citizens.

In view of the FRG's behavior, one must conclude that certain circles in the FRG are deliberately harming relations between the two German states. The FRG alone bears responsibility for all the consequences arising from this.

State Secretary Krolikowski again stressed, in the interests of preserving the level of relations reached, his demand for the immediate and unhindered return of Professor Meissner to the GDR, the restoration of safety in tourist and visitor traffic, and the inviolability of GDR citizens.

GORBACHEV-MITTERAND TALKS SEEN AS PRODUCTIVE

AU171053 East Berlin NEUE ZEIT in German 14 Jul 86 p 2

[Spartak Beglov: "Productive Dialogue on Disarmament Issues"]

[Text] The 16 and 1/2 hours that Mikhail Gorbachev and Francois Mitterand spent in talks in Moscow concentrated mainly on questions of disarmament and security in Europe and other regions. Both politicians proceeded from the fact that at the present time one has arrived at a crossroads and the arms race can only be stopped with extreme difficulty, if the existing chances are not utilized.

Here is to be pointed out that in view of the general international interest in the results of the visit of the French president in the USSR, many American observers in Moscow asked only one question: Will Mitterrand succeed in playing a "mediator's role" between the Soviewt and the American leadership? Of course, it was taken into account that Mitterrand had come to Moscow immmediately after his meeting with the head of the Washington administration. The French side, however, rejected this version of a mediation and stressed its interest in using such meetings for discussing its own view point on the pressing problems of the present.

However, it seems that for the "rest" of the world the circumstance that both statesmen achieved agreement on the moste important issues is of particular importance. The main thing is that for the sake of success in the disarmament dialogue, the balance must be preserved and that it is inadmissible to undermine agreements slowly down the arms race and preventing its expansion into space. It is absolutely clear that this means adherence to the SALT II treaty and an ABM treaty unlimited in time as a basis for the stability on which the entire process of negotiations between the USSR and the United States is based in the field of disarmanent.

In questions of European security Mikhail Gorbachev and Francois Mitterrand agreed that the international development depends to a large extent on the positive role of Europe. The French head of state praised in this connection the extraordinary importance of the Budapest proposals of the Warsaw Pact states on an essential reduction of conventional arms from the Atlantic to the Urals.

Of course, apart from the agreement of the USSR and French attitudes to preventing the arms race, there are also a number of concrete differences. Nevertheless, to come back to Europe, the consolidation of the joint interest of both states in the success of the Stockholm conference on confidence-building measures and security and disarmament in Europe can be clearly seen. In view of the renewed meeting of the 35 CSCE member-states scheduled to take place in Vienna in November, a successful conclusion of the Stockholm conference is particularly necessary.

The exchange of views on overcoming individual conflict situations and on strengthening security in other regions also proved useful. This applies above all to the Middle East. As is known, the Soviet Union proposed a long time ago that this conflict situation be led out of the deadlock by convening an international conference of all interested sides under the auspices of the United Nations. As can be clearly seen from the French president's statements in Moscow, France is now also in favor of such an international forum.

The resume of the results of this 14th Soviet-French summit is: The dialogue was productive and confirmed the great potential rooted in the Soviet-French relations for a positive influence on the development of the European and international situation.

AXEN BIDS FAREWELL TO PARTY SCHOOL GRADUATES

DW161927 East Berlin Television Service in German 1730 GMT 16 Jul 86

[Text] Bidding farewell to more than 500 national and foreign graduates of the SED Central Committee Party Advanced School, Karl Marx Hermann Axen, Politburo member and SED Central Committee secretary, conveyed the most cordial greetings and congratulations of the Central Committee and its general secretary, Erich Honecker. The speaker said that the studies are concluded at a time when the basic resolutions of the 11th SED Congress initiate a new stage in the implementation of the party program and thus the further shaping of the advanced socialist society in the GDR. The Central Committee is firmly convinced, Hermann Axen said, that all graduates are well prepared for actively contributing as communists to the implementation of the new tasks.

In a letter to Erich Honecker the graduates assert that they will creatively employ the knowledge they acquired during the studies by consistently implementing the resolutions of the 11th SED Congress. On behalf of the foreign students from 22 countries (Celia Teller) from Nicaragua thanked the SED and the GDR people for their solidarity and support. At festive functions yesterday, Professor Kurt Tiedke, rector of the Party Advanced School, conferred on the graduates of the 3-year course and the correspondence course the degree of graduated social scientists, and presented certificates to the participants in the 1-year course.

COUNCIL OF MINISTERS HOLDS SESSION 17 JUL

LD172140 Budapest MTI in English 1500 GMT 17 Jul 86

[Text] Budapest, July 17 (MTI) -- Thursday's session of the Council of Ministers noted with approval the briefing by the chairman of the Council of Ministers on his talks with the federal chancellor of Austria.

The government confirmed the resolution of the State Planning Commission of the medium term tasks of coal mining and measures concerning its situation. The Ministry of Industry is to conclude agreements with the companies on executing the restructuring and cost reducing tasks. The government discussed and approved the report on the session of the Hungarian-Soviet inter-governmental Committee for Economic and Technological-Scientific Cooperation in Moscow.

The Council of Ministers heard the report of the chairman of the State Economic Commission on implementation to date of projects for economy with energy, the economic use of materials and technological updating, as well as those for by-product and waste recycling. The Council of Ministers expressed dissatisfaction that in the past year and a half there has been a slow-down in activity aimed at thrift, and the country is behind schedule concerning the collection of several waste materials large in volume.

Therefore it called the attention to the management bodies and units of economic operations involved to increase their efforts to implement the objectives of 1986 and to accelerate the creation of the conditions required for the work.

The government called upon the members of the Council of Ministers and the chiefs of the bodies with nation-wide authority involved to examine the opportunities for implementing the proposals made by the members of Parliament at the summer session of Parliament involved on the results.

Production Costs Discussed

LD172144 Budapest MTI in English 1930 GMT 17 Jul 86

[Text] Budapest, July 17 (MTI) -- Central programmes aimed at moderating production costs, including those in energy management, economic use of materials and for streamlining technology, and those serving the utilization of secondary products and waste, are to continue in the 7th Five-Year Plan (1986-1990). At its session Thursday, the Council of Ministers discussed the state of the three programmes, and the future tasks.

In the framework of the energy management programme, companies achieved annual energy savings of about 35 petajoules in the 6th Five-Year Plan cycle, as a result of investments worth some 14,000 million forints, and energy carriers the equivalent of more than 22 petajoules were also replaced. Major savings were recorded in oil, natural gas and coke, and natural gas was substituted for oil in many places. In the 7th Five-Year Plan period, priority is to be assured to energetics development and modernization projects that result in absolute energy savings and production expansion, and improve coal quality.

The Programme for Economic Use of Materials and Streamlining Technology was approved by the government in 1982. Results were primarily achieved by processing, construction industry and building material industry companies. Total savings amounted to 36,000 million forints between 1982 and 1985.

The government is to assure financial benefits to projects linked to the programme. Investments that can be realized in a relatively short time and with a rapid rate of return from savings will receive priority.

The programme for utilizing secondary products and waste was launched in 1981. The government envisaged projects worth 10,000 million forints until 1985, half of which were bank loans, the rest state subsidy and company sources. The companies beginning investments were granted financial, tax, tariff and interest benefits. The targets set down have been realized, the waste collecting network has been expanded, as has been the waste-preparatory capacity.

The target for the 7th Five-Year Plan period is to increase the value of utilized waste by 6,500-7,500 million forints by 1990.

Resolution on Coal Mining

LD172041 Budapest MTI in English 1841 GMT 17 Jul 86

[Text] Budapest, July 17 (MTI) -- As reported, the Council of Ministers approved the resolution of the State Planning Commission on the state of coal mining and the tasks in the 7th Five-Year Plan cycle.

The government agreed with the proposal that coal production in the 7th Five-Year Plan be an annual 24 million tons, the same as in 1985. It considers a structure change in production aimed at considerably reducing production costs to be justified. Open-cut lignite production is to increase from the current annual 6.6 million tons to 8.7 million tons in 1990. This will make it possible to decrease the total production of deep-cut mining from the annual 17.4 million tons to 15.3 million tons.

Efficiency calculations and cost-accounting analyses were recently carried out at 35 coal producing shafts. It was stated that exploitation has to be gradually wounded up at 12-13 shafts, which would make coal mining more profitable. State management of coal mining is to be streamlined, alongside observing the independence of companies, in a way that makes coal production more efficient.

The Ministry of Industry is to conclude agreements with the coal mining companies on the production, development, structure transformation and cost management task for the 7th Five Year Plan period. The agreements will define the concrete tasks and will also set down the necessary conditions. On the basis of this it will become possible to eliminate the deficit of Hungarian coal mining by 1990, through reducing losses by an annual 2,000 million forints.

LABOR ISSUES, DROP IN ECONOMIC GROWTH VIEWED

LD171413 Budapest Domestic Service in Hungarian 0445 GMT 17 Jul 86

[Text] The country's labor situation is balanced. This was the title of the latest survey by the State Office for Wages and Labor, which set out to examine if the number of people employed in industry and agriculture had fallen according to plan in the first months of the year. In industry the fall has been somewhat less than anticipated, in the construction sector and in domestic trade the fall in numbers has been slightly greater than planned.

The results show that the labor management of enterprises still does not follow the plans closely enough. Often the aim is to retain the workforce when it is not justified by production. This is one of the reasons why the productivity of the people's economy is not registering the desired growth. Here is Kata Kelemen with Karoly Gulyas, department head of the office:

[Kelemen] The fall in the size of the workforce has slowed down in the state-owned industrial sector. What is the reason for this? Have employment conditions become more favorable in the enterprises and cooperatives?

[Gulyas] No, they have not become more favorable. On the contrary, as a result of the modification and modernization of the system of regulators last year, workforces should have shrunk more than they did in 1985, for instance.

Not even the changes in the system of regulators have so far forced or stimulated the economic organizations to reduce their workforces more dynamically. One of the means and conditions of increased efficiency is to have fewer people working and to produce more with better productivity.

[Kelemen] Some large industrial enterprises are still saying that they have labor shortages. Can they be right when they complain of this problem.

[Gulyas] Yes and no. Structural tensions exist, and they appear within individual branches, areas, professions and enterprises. In 1985 the number of unfilled vacancies registered by labor exchanges exceeded 60,000, yet at the same time between 1,250 and 1,500 people awaiting employment were registered.

[Kelemen] If we look at the numbers there is no problem. The number of vacancies far exceeds the number of people looking for a job. But labor surplus and labor shortage do not always appear at the same location.

[Guylas] Yes, this is the problem. In the last month of the past year there were nine towns with between 50 and 100 people, and two towns with more than 100 people whose employment could only be secured after a longer than average period of waiting, and under unfavorable circumstances. Among these towns were Debrecen, Kisvarda, Nyibator and Szekszard.

[Kelemen] Does the state pay job-finding benefit [elhelyezkedesi segely]?

[Gulyas] Job-finding benefits are not paid, because there is no district or county in Hungary where people cannot get a job for a longer period of time, for -- let's say -- a period exceeding 6 months. The labor exchanges can offer and secure employment. There are occupations where employers are desperate to find people. Such is the situation with engine fitters, steel structure fitters, lathe operators, car mechanics, welders, electricians and bricklayers.

[Kelemen] But if someone does not have one of those skills, but is qualified in some other field where he cannot find employment, can he then be given a temporary job and put on the waiting list for a suitable job?

[Gulyas] It is not quite the way you have described, but labor exchanges and local councils have the appropriate means to help in such situations. Enterprises can pay average wages to their employees for a 6-month period of notice. The period of notice is regulated by the collective agreement, it can be extended to 6 months by mutual consent. And within 6 months the labor exchange can find employment for the workers. And if this proves impossible, then they can make use of the so-called "retraining support" system, whereby the state provides the financial means from a central fund to retrain the workers.

[Kelemen] Public opinion has become reasonably accustomed to the idea of necessary redeployment. The individual affected, however, often finds himself in a difficult position.

[Gulyas] The activity connected with labor management is going to become a bit tougher. So there will be more people who, unlike in the past, will spend a little longer waiting for a job, or will have to undertake retraining. By central and local measures it must be ensured that this discomfort is minimized. At the same time, a system of labor management is needed which is most suitable for society, the enterprise and the individual. Such measures are currently being developed. The state guarantees full employment, and the task of the enterprises is to achieve efficient employment. These two objectives must be synchronized in a way that suits both society and the individual.

The delegation met Ferenc Havasi, member of the Political Committee of the Hungarian Socialist Workers' Party, and secretary of the Central Committee.

SEJM PASSES AMNESTY LAW PROPOSED BY PRON

LD171943 Warsaw Domestic Service in Polish 1800 GMT 17 Jul 86

[Text] The Sejm has passed the law on special procedure toward perpetrators of some crimes. In presenting the draft of this law, Deputy Elzbieta Lucja Gacek, a judge and member of the State Council and chairperson of the Council of State Amnesty Commission, stated: The progressing normalization of social and economic life, the gradual but consistent improvement of the everyday existence of the working people, the noticeable improvement of peace and internal order in Poland, and the increase in the feeling of safety of citizens have caused the PRON to undertake a humanitarian decision, giving as justification the need to allow the perpetrators of certain crimes another chance to return to normal family and community life.

The PRON initiative was received with understanding by the highest party and state authorities. The law, noted the deputy while discussing the details of the draft, includes crimes against the state and public order, common and fiscal crimes, and offenses, including fiscal offenses, committed before 17 July 1986. This applies to people who have already been sentenced as well as those against whom the penal proceedings are still in progress, or who by the end of this year will voluntarily disclose their criminal activity. In such cases the following will be pardoned in full of the legally binding penalties of imprisonment, fines that have not yet been collected, court fees and costs, and additional penalties that are legally binding, excluding the sentences involving confiscation of property, military demotions, and damages that have been awarded and are due for execution. Penal proceedings will also be waived.

The deputy also said: The proposed regulations exclude the possibility of applying the law in cases of perpetrators of the most serious crimes such as, for instance, treason, espionage, large-scale foreign currency offenses and customs offenses, or membership in criminal or secret organizations. In exceptional cases, which are justified by special circumstances, however, it is proposed that even in these cases the general prosecutor may be permitted to apply to the Supreme Court so as to take advantage of the law.

In regard to common crimes, including fiscal ones, stated the deputy, the law pardons the legally binding sentences of imprisonment of up to a year and reduces by half the sentences of 1-2 years. Only penalties of imprisonment would be pardonable or reduced. This law would not apply to legally binding fines, additional penalties or cumulative penalties [nawiazki], or costs, fees or damages that have been awarded by the court. For instance, this benefit will not extend to perpetrators of, for instance, [word indistinct], (?theft of goods in carriage) of illegal manufacture of alcohol. Apart from this the law encompasses, for humanitarian reasons, perpetrators of common crimes who are women over 50 and men over 60, juveniles and people who are guardians of children of up to 16 years old, and, finally, those who have committed involuntary crimes. They will be released early on probation from penal institutions. The law will not apply unconditionally. A period of probation lasting to the end of the coming year has been established. In case of committing a subsequent similar offense, for which a prison sentence is passed, the effects of the law will be waived.

Provisions of Law

["Gacek Sejm Address (Abridged)" -- PAP headline]

[Text] Warsaw, July 17 -- The Polish Council of State today made a formal request to the Sejm speaker, under Article 25, Paragraph One of the Constitution, to pass a law on special procedure on perpetrators of legal offences. Following are the assumptions and provisions of the law.

The Patriotic Movement for the National Rebirth (PRON) has come up with an initiative of another humanitarian move, justifying it with a need to give one more chance for perpetrators of certain categories of offences to return to normal life in the family and society. The initiative has been met with understanding on the part of top party and state authorities.

The present socio-political situation in Poland is marked by expanding national agreement and strengthened social order. The use of the means of coercion alone is no longer absolutely necessary, all the more so as the objectives of the penal measures applied have been achieved in a significant degree, particularly with the perpetrators of offences against the state or public order. In our legislative and social activity, we should release an stimulate those elements of the consciousness of individuals, milieux and social groups, through which they can understand and appreciate that socialism offers realistic possibilities of active and worthwhile life, with a sense of belonging in society and without a need to violate the law.

The presented (amnesty) bill should also become a fresh binding factor for Poland's internal social structure in which everyone can any time join the building of the socialist fatherland. However, this does not mean rehabilitation of all those who, for particularly socially reprehensible reasons, struck at the socialist legal order. Only a law-abiding authority, which enjoys prestige and social support, can make humanitarian moves of such rank. This act of good will should be accompained by awareness that every manifestation of social agreement can expect understanding and support of the authorities, while every violation of the legal order will be met with due repression. Meeting halfway the perpetrators offences against the state or public sector, we want to give a chance for return into society to those of them whose hitherto behaviour, kind of offence committed, behaviour after the offence, and socialization chances, give basis to expect that they will not return to the road of crime and will actively join the country's life.

The deadline beyond which the perpetrators will not be covered by the proposed act is July 17, 1986. The date is proposed as a deadline for presenting perpetrators of offences against the state or public order with charges. If no charges have been filed against a perpetrator by that date, it gives him a chance to avail himself of the procedure specified by the act, provided that she or he will make a declaration of dropping criminal activity, disclose the details connected with the crimes, and submit the instruments used for them. A condition of dropping the proceedings or not starting them in cases specified will also be that the perpetrator reports on his own account to a law enforcement organ -- or a Polish diplomatic or consular mission abroad -- by Dec. 31, 1986 at the latest, and makes a relevant written statement. The proposed act covers also those offenders who committed offences against the political, social or economic interests of the state, its institutions or organs, or public order, for political reasons. It covers those already sentenced, those now under penal proceedings, and those who on their own account confess their criminal activity by Dec. 31, 1986.

Under these conditions, application of the special procedure will result in complete pardoning of binding jail terms and uncollected fines and court payments and costs. Complete pardon will also cover binding additional civil sanctions except confiscation of property, reduction to the ranks or demotion to a lower rank in the Armed Forces, as well as ruled compensations and supplementary payments to injured persons or for a public purpose. The (amnesty) act will be applied by a court relevant for each case of the category covered, on a motion of the prosecutor, or by the prosecutor along in the case of preparatory proceedings.

In view of the need to ensure the protection of Poland's most vital economic interests and above all the country's security, it is proposed that the act should not cover perpetrators of the following offences:

-- High treason, participation in a conspiracy against People's Poland, espionage, sabotage and activity detrimental to socialized economy, and preparations for high treason or conspiracy.

-- Large scale offences against socialized economy and violations of foreign currency or customs regulations .

-- Membership in an agreement to the detriment of People's Poland, or an underground or criminal organization.

-- So-called "small economic sabotage".

However, it is proposed that in exceptional cases, the prosecutor general could request the Supreme Court to apply the act on perpetrators of crimes excluded from its operation.

Concerning petty crimes and tax evasion, the act proposes to pardon binding terms of up to one year of jail and halves the sentences between one and two years of jail. Those barred from the special procedure in that group of offences include perpetrators of murder, rape, wilful taking of a carrier's property, narcotics manufacture, trafficking and trade, illicit production and storage of spirit of devices for its production, as well as trading such articles. Others barred from the act's benefits would be violators of the anti-alcoholism act, recidivists, social parasites (work-dodgers) and those guilty of hooliganism or offences committed under the influence of alcohol.

Besides the above scope of the act, it is proposed to cover perpetrators of petty offences, who deserve special treatment for humanitarian reasons, considering their age or family situation. This would apply to offenders who turned 50 (women) or 60 (men) by the day the act comes in life, juveniles and those personally exercising parental custody over a child under 16 years of age, as well as those found guilty of unintentional crimes. The special procedure is proposed to take effect on July 23, and discharges of those deprived of liberty to be concluded by Sept. 15, 1986.

Officials Address Journalists

LD180033 Warsaw PAP in English 0010 GMT 18 Jul 86

[Text] Warsaw, July 17 -- The Polish Sejm (parliament) held a news conference here today chaired by head of the Sejm Committee for Administration, Internal Affairs and Justice Jozef Barecki immediately after the legislators passed an act on special procedure on perpetrators of some offences.

Polish and foreign journalists could ask questions to reporting legislator Elzieta Gacek, PRON National Council General Secretary Jerzy Jaskiernia, Justice Minister Lech Domeracki and Poland's Prosecutor General Jozef Zyta.

Speaking as first, Jaskiernia said he hoped the effects of the new move would be as positive as with the previous such initiatives, and he termed it as part of a whole range of moves aiming to pave the way for national agreement.

Elzbieta Gacek told the journalists the new legislation was not entirely an amnesty act, for part of its regulations are optional.

Asked whether leaders of the former "Solidarnosc" can expect to be released under the act, the prosecutor general and justice minister said the parliament had set general legal rules not for particular individuals.

"The Sejm does not adjust the law to names, but makes it possible for all who have violated the law to benefit from the new act. Every case will require thorough examination," the journalists were told. They were also told that preliminary estimates say some 15,000 people will have been freed under the act by mid-September and some 5,000 more who will avail themselves of its provisions after that date.

A total of 114,800 people are held in jails in Poland, including 189 convicted or detained on charges involving non-criminal motives; the conference was told.

PRON Official Comments

LD172139 Warsaw PAP in English 1948 GMT 17 Jul 86

["Senior PRON Official on Amnesty" -- PAP headline]

[Text] Warsaw, July 17: "The Sejm (Polish parliament) has accepted PRON's plea for an act of mercy after the movement has again come up with an initiative for forgiveness and leniency," PRON National Council General Secretary Jerzy Jaskiernia told PAP.

He said the reason behind the move was "not weakness or wish to indulge the moral or social ills troubling us, but the strengthening of the state, confirmed daily by reality. The whole society has worked for that act, as anti-state destruction finds no more support in (society), and every form of violation of the penal code arouses deepest indignation.

"Any dangerous political gamble striking at the socialist system or the state finds no response and hands in vacuum," Jaskiernia noted, adding:

"In that situation, pardoning some of the perpetrators of offences against state interests heralds no danger or shattering the ties of national agreement which we have established and strengthened in a collective efforee. PRON's first congress has said that a socialist Poland must be a strong state and that this strength came from democratic human relations based on respect for human dignity, just laws and collective discipline. This makes the wisdom of a nation. The mercy act has been announced in that conviction, and we expected Polish society to take the move in just that way, and people covered by it to use the chance of return into society," Jaskiernia said.

Papers Evaluate Law

LD180936 Warsaw PAP in English 0840 GMT 18 Jul 86

[Text] Warsaw, July 18 -- Polish newspapers comment the law on special procedure towards perpetrators of some offences. The government RZECPOSPOLITA daily wrote, excerpts:

"One should have expected this law since the PRON initiative had gained support of the PUWP supreme forum. Also, the day of adopting it comes as no surprise. The holiday of setting up the people's state is exceptionally favourable to the situation in which exactly the state should use its prerogatives and show magnanimity towards those who commited a sin against it in various ways and for various motives.

"It is primarily a continuation of humanitarian steps taken so far by the authorities. Over the past few years, similar decisions have been taken several times and they always yielded positive results: winning over people, who violated law for various reasons, to society. But it also, and perhaps chiefly, reflects Poland's socio-political situation: the deepening process of normalization of life, the expansion of the idea of national agreement, the strengthening of public order and the rise in the citizens' sense of security. It, therefore, testifies to the state's strength," RZECZPOSPOLITA said.

ZYCIE WARSZAWY says this on the same subject. "This is still another humanitarian initiative of the socialist state that gets strengthened. This is still another chance to broaden the plane of national agreement to promote work for Poland. This is the way in which the law adopted by the Sejm will surely be accepted and sized up. The law envisages the possibility to pardon essential and additional penalities to those who, as deputy rapporteur Elizbieta Gacek said, 'committed offences against the state or public order for political reasons'.

"Certainly, all of us can be satisfied over this law that springs from initiatives forwarded by the PRON and the Council of State and that orginates directly from the spirit and decisions of the 10th PUWP Congress. This is the following line: increasingly farther from divisions and doggedness, and increasingly nearer to normal life," ZYCIE WARSZAWY says.

SEJM REPLACES CONSTRUCTION, FINANCE MINISTERS

LD172116 Warsaw PAP in English 2100 GMT 17 Jul 86

[Text] Warsaw, July 17: The Sejm confirmed the reports on the implementation of the state budget and other financial acts in 1985. It voted acceptance for the government's accounts of that year. It also approved the reports on the 1983-1985 NPSG (National Socio-Economic Plan) performance and acknowledged the state of the austerity programme implementation in this period.

On a motion from the prime minister, the Polish Sejm (parliament) today recalled Jozef Niewiadomski as minister for construction, town and country planning and municipal administration, and Stanislaw Nieckarz as the Finance Minister. They have been replaced by Jerzy Bajszczak and Bazyli Samojlik, respectively.

The parliament also filled the nine vacancies on the parliament's socio-economic council, and recalled Afred Miodowicz from his post as member of the Council of State, upon his resignation. He was replaced by Jerzy Uzieblo.

SEJM HEARS ECONOMIC REPORTS, ELECTS OFFICIALS

LD172256 Warsaw PAP in English 2141 GMT 17 Jul 86

[Text] Warsaw, July 17: The Sejm (Polish parliament) held its last meeting before summer vacations during which it has granted the government acceptance for the past year. The Sejm adopted a report on the implementation of the three-year plan (1983-1985), and an austerity programme. The Polish parliament also adopted a law on special procedure towards perpetrators of some offences, made changes in a number of state posts and adopted new Sejm regulations. In view of the late hour, the chamber resolved to cross deputies' question time off the agenda and ended the spring Sejm session.

The Sejm added two items to the agenda:

-- A report by the Sejm Administration, Internal Affairs and Justice Committee and Legislative Committee on the draft law, submitted by the Council of State, on special procedure towards perpetrators of some offences,

-- Changes in state posts.

The meeting started at 10.00 hrs, with Wojciech Jaruzelski and Zbigniew Messner attending the debate. Sejm Speaker Roman Malinowski, before the chamber went on with work, referred to the recently ended 10th PUWP Congress (an abridged text of Malinowski's address is given separately).

The Sejm meeting was attended by a delegation of the Australian Parliament, with chairwoman of the Chamber of Representatives Joan Child, which is ending its visit to Poland today. Roman Malinowski expressed his satisfaction over the visit of Australian parliamentarians and voiced the conviction that their visit, numerous talks and meetings, would serve better understanding of the two nations and development of Polish-Australian cooperation.

Next, deputy Mieczyslaw Fracki delivered a report of the Economic, Planning, Budget and Finance Committee. He was followed by Taduesz Hupalowski, chairman of the Supreme Board of Control. Hupalowski's address was followed by deputies' discussion in which over 20 speakers took the floor.

The Sejm adopted a resolution approving the government report on the 1985 implementation of the state budget, credit plan, balance of payments, central fund for the development of culture and of the plan of the labour redeployment fund, and granted the government acceptance for that period with one vote against and three abstentions.

Next, the chamber unanimously approved the report on the implementation of the 1983-1985 national socio-economic plan and acknowledged the report on state of the implementation of the austerity programme in the period in question.

Under the next item on the agenda deputy Lucja Gacek delivered a report of the Sejm Administration, Internal Affairs and Justice Committee and the Legislative Committee on the draft law, submitted by the Council of State, on special procedure towards perpetrators of some offices. With one abstention, the Sejm adopted the law on special procedure towards perpetrators of some offences.

The next item on the agenda was devoted to changes in state posts. The Sejm Presidium received a letter from the president of the Council of State which said that Alfred Miodowicz had tenered his resignation from the post of member of the Council of State. In this connectin the president of the Council of State addressed the Sejm with a request to recall Miodowicz from that post and proposed Jerzy Uzieblo as a replacement. The Sejm adopted a resolution with 272 voices for a 3 abstentions to recall Alfred Miodowicz from the Council of State membership, and, with one vote against, appointed Jerzy Uzieblo as member of the Council of State.

Next, parliament made changes in the composition of the Council of Minister. Prime Minister Zbigniew Messner submitted a motion to recall Jozef Niewiadomski (PUWP) from the post of minister for construction, town and country planning and municipal administration, in connection with his election and with three votes against and one abstention, appointed Bazyli Samojlik as minister of finance.

The Sejm, with two votes against and 4 abstentions, appointed nine members of the socio-economic council at the Sejm.

The chamber also adopted new Sejm regulations. Report of the Membership and Standing Orders Committee and of the Legislative Committee on this issue was presented by deputy Elzbieta Rutkowska. Resolution on the regulations was adopted with one vote against and one abstention.

The Sejm adopted a resolution closing the spring session of the Sejm. This was the last item on the agenda.

Malinowski Addresses Sejm

LD171532 Warsaw PAP in English 1441 GMT 17 Jul 86

[Text] Warsaw, July 17 -- Following is the abridged text of the address, delivered by Sejm speaker, Roman Malinowski at today's Sejm meeting:

"The 10th PUWP Congress constitutes a firm confirmation, and simutaneously an expansion of the line of socialist renewal, the line of reforms and agreement. It is well served by the initiatives to establish consultative bodies at the Council of State and the voivodship people's councils, and to appoint social spokesmen for civic rights, as well as the current works on the law on consultations and the already announced, further democratization of electoral law. Also of great significance is the draft law, filed by the Council of State, on creating possibilities for some of those who violated the law to return to normal life.

The implementation of congress resolutions, with the numerous conclusions and ideas formulated in the course of recent electoral campaign for the Polish Sejm or filed by the deputies taken into consideration, call for uniting our society's all patriotic forces to resolve the main problems of national life. Such a unity would be founded on the allied cooperation between the leading PUWP party, and the United Peasants' Party ZSL and the Democratic Party SD, based on a coalition-system of exercising power, well rooted within the coalition power system.

Also the expansion of the scope of national agreement, the enrichment of socialist dialogue announced by the congress are of paramount importance.

The key to solving all the difficult Polish problems lies in enhancing the development and efficiency processes, narrowing the gap between us and the states which (?excel) in science, technology and economy. The success of our plans and the successful future of our state depends on well-organized work, on a basic breakthrough in its efficiency. The 10th PUWP Congress resolutions should find full confirmation in the activities of all state organs. The self-government, social, vocational, educational, and cultural organizations should seek inspiration in the 10th PUWP Congress achievements to make their contribution to Poland's social life constantly grow. Particular tasks in transforming the congress attainments into specific state decisions fall under the authority of the Sejm, people's councils, government and state administration excutive bodies. Justice and control bodies face important tasks in the field of reinforcing the rule of law. In the nearest future all state bodies should assess their tasks against the background of the 10th PUWP Congress resolutions.

There are essential tasks facing the Sejm. The main idea behind our work on the 5-year plan and on state financial plans should be based on the striving to make them reflect in a maximal way the intentions of the 10th PUWP Congress resolutions. A broadly preceived inspection of the implementation of laws, a consistent observation of state discipline and law abidingness should form our leading tasks for the forthcoming years. The full application of broad powers by people's councils should be treated as their legal obligation and an imperative for obtaining socio-economic growth. The implementation of those tasks obligates the Sejm committees to put an emphasis on their control activities instead of occasional one-sided postulating work. This will make the role and importance of the supreme board of inspection (NIK) even greater.

Cooperation between Sejm committees and trade unions, social organizations and pro-affiliated bodies should be further developed. We consider it necessary that the Sejm and its committees make even fuller use of the existing consultative and opinion-making establishment as represented by the socio-economic council and the team of Sejm advisers.

In the sphere of legislation we should aim at ensuring that the law be functional and democratic, that it reflect the principles of socialist justice. At the same time, we should strive at establishing the law that would be dependable and when amended a subject to fully mature and necessary amendments. Sejm Presidium considers it necessary to introduce - on the advice of respective state bodies -- into the Sejm and its committees' agendas the problems pointed out in the resolutions of the 10th PUWP Congress.

The 10th PUWP Congress marks the opening of a new period in the development of our people's state. It is my strong belief that working of our country, workers, farmers, and intellectuals, will spare no effort in materializing the 10th Congress resolutions. There is no other way to ensure prosperous future for our society.

Fracki Presents Economic Report

LD172119 Warsaw PAP in English 1810 GMT 17 Jul 86

["Fracki's Address (Abridged) -- PAP headline]

[Text] Warsaw, July 17 -- Speaking on behalf of the Economic Planning, Budget, and Finance Committee, Deputy Fracki presented the remarks and conclusions drawn during a parliamentary debate on the reports submitted by the government.

He said: Among other things, that the characteristic of the national socio-economic polan (NPSG) for the years 1983-1985, carried by the government report, consists in its objective way of disclosing difficulties and failures. The general evaluation of the NPSG implementation is, however, difficult and complex, he said.

Despite the planners' uncertainty whether the pace of growth they wanted would turn out feasible, the majority of tasks has been surpassed. The breaking of a destructive downward trend of the years 1980-1982 was achieved under unusually tough conditions. The plan provided for a growth pace ranging between 10.1 and 11.7 per cent while the practical outcome is 15.7 per cent. Industrial and agricultural production, as well as the consumption growth, exceeded the plan, also, much greater than expected was the progress recorded in the realization of the food self-reliance project. The overall industrial output has reached a magnitude close to that of the pre-crisis period. But the quality standards in the industrial production are lower when its internal structure is taken into consideration.

Most of the objections and doubts concerned investment activities. The NPSG provided for a 1.1 per cent increase in investment outlays, while in practice the increase has gone up to 29 per cent. Greater investment spendings as such are no good unless their structure and the entire investment process are improved.

The construction of new flats was exactly as planned, although its decreasing pace in the context of high, unsatisfied needs is disburbing and unacceptable from the social point of view.

The planned tasks have been overfulfilled in food supplies but the supplies of goods than food were much below the targets. Total market supplies were 3 per cent smaller than planned which swept the supply part of the internal market equilibrium below the planned figures.

Monetary incomes of the population were planned to grow by 48 per cent but they have actually been 86 per cent higher. It was also stipulated that this growth be covered from market supplies, increased by 21-24 per cent (in constant prices) and from a 37-44 per cent price increase. This was intended to bring about a global balance in the market and cut inflation down to a one-digit size. These goals have not been reached and salaries were the main source of money flooding the market with no relation to better efficiency in production.

The deputy stressed that in its assumptions the economic reform had caused deep changes in the style and character of the economic policy, thoiugh not all of its provisions have been dully materialized. Pro-efficiency mechanisms do not work because no appropriate economic infrastructure associated with balance, price-making, and the "hard financing" has been provided, he said.

Evaluating the implementation of the state budget, Deputy Fracki pointed to the fact that the planned proportions of the secondary distribution of national income did not substantially change, although there were changes in the size of budgetary income and spendings. A deficit in the central budget shrunk by some 11 billion zlotys but the state's debt with the National Bank of Poland (NBP), created by a loan granted for covering the deficit, continues to grow and reached 590.7 billion zlotys in 1985. One of the ways to stimulate economic efficiency growth was for the banks for differentiate their relations with enterprises. By giving support to efficient enterprises, the banks stepped up their influence on inefficient firms, especially those which lost credit-worthiness.

No further progress has been achieved in the balance of the population's monetary incomes and expenses in 1985, which was expected to take the form of a balance between the current buying power of the population and the supplies of goods and services. Positive trends which showed up in this field in the period 1983-1984 have not been maintained. The inflation gap of about 200 billion zlotys in 1982, 90 billion zlotys in 1983, and 40 billion in 1984, has swollen to 150 billion zlotys in 1985. Monetary incomes of the people, which were much greater than planned (6.1 per cent), and the smaller-than-planned increase in the volume of supplied goods and services are basically responsible for this untoward situation.

Poland's payment balance in 1985 was clearly and concisely presented in the context of turnovers recorded during several previous years. It shows that the payment situation in Poland has become much worse over the years 1983-1985, the deputy said. The indebtedness in rubles grew by 50 per cent to reach 5.6 billion rubles, while the convertible currencies debt was 8 per cent greater which makes up [word indistinct] U.S. dollars at the end of 1985.

Despite many critical remarks and objections, the deputies positively evaluated the government reports under consideration. In its further activities, the government should allow for the remarks and conclusions made by the Sejm (parliamentary) committees. Deputy Francki motioned for the approval of the government reports and voting its acceptance for the period between January 1st and December 31st, 1985.

NIK Official Views Budget

LD172118 Warsaw PAP in English 1849 GMT 17 Jul 86

["Hupalowski's Sejm Address (Abridged)" -- Pap headline]

[Text] Warsaw, July 17 -- "The 1983-1985 national socio-economic plan has been accomplished under difficult and complex conditions, both internal and external. It was a plan for immense responsibility and no less hope," said Tadeusz Hupalowski, the chairman of the Supreme Board of Inspection (NIK) in his Sejm (parliament) address today.

Most of the goals enshrined in the plan were attained, most of the tasks -- accomplished, many of them even exceeded. A considerable economic growth, many of them even exceeded. A considerable economic growth took place in Poland in the last year of the three-year period, although the growth rate got weakened in several fields. The planned improvement in the money-market balance has been missed. The growth rate of money incomes was higher than the growth rate of goods and services supplies. This stemmed, to a considerable extent, from further deterioration of the relation between the increase of wages and labour productivity.

A certain progress has been observed in balancing the incomes and expenditures of the budget. It is worthwhile to call attention to the high growth trend of incomes and expenditures in recent years. This resulted not only from favorable phenomena of the growth in production and services, but the growing rate of redistribution of budget financed means as well.

The difficult economic situation of Poland did not facilitate the full implementation of the legal principle of self-financing of enterprises. The lack of balance in many segments of the domestic market, the varying level of technological development of enterprises, the hindering of price increases in order to protect the groups with lowest incomes caused that the financial situation of enterprises was much diversified in 1985.

These objectives conditions explained to a great extent the considerable scope of assistance to production enterprises by the budget. Some 80 per cent of the increase of financial accumulation resulted from the increase of prices, while only less than 20 per cent from the quantitative growth of sold production and services.

The growing number of unprofitable enterprises, some 20 per cent of total number, was another unfavourable phenomenon of recent years. Especially deep deficit was observed in coal, diary, and meat industries as well as city transport and housing economy. The chief cause of subsiding the unprofitable production by the state budget was to sustain the prices of goods and services which do not cover production costs. In many enterprises, the financial difficulties resulted from shaping wage systems regardless the attained production effects and quality of products.

Foreign currency write-offs for exporting enterprises are growing but they combine with the awaiting payment orders that make up some 450 million U.S. dollars. Despite the difficult payment situation of the country, we must not let the exporters lose confidence in this effective pro-export incentive.

The better and quicker we analyze and solve the vital problem of improving organizational structures and posts attestation -- pointed out by the PUWP 10th Congress -- the more effectively and quickly will come the recovery of the national economy and improvement of society's life, the NIK chairman said. Inspections carried out in 1983-1985 showed considerable diversity in the effectiveness of austerity measures. Unused reserves are reflected in numerous case of poor management. Squandering of quality materials, human labor, energy, fuels, and fixed assets for the production of low-quality goods is a sign of a special type of degeneration. There is no alternative to rational management today, and there will not be any tomorrow.

Many bank departments eased their crediting conditions also for the inefficient enterprises. This was mainly why the influx of credits into enterprises topped the plan by 350 billion zlotys. The banks' efficiency in forcing them to take curative measures was evident. But the budgetary and crediting policy still lacks full coherence, Hupalowski said. Reviews of local budgets showed a progressing improvement in the discipline of spending although the financial mechanisms in this field still need to be improved.

The new system of managing the national economy opens wide possibilities to the development of social initiative and energy. A consistent implementation of the economic reform is the condition of a full release of the nation's creative forces, achievement of progress in meeting social needs. The directions of activity outlined by the PUWP 10th Congress require widespread social understanding, acceptance, and commitment. This is a great, unique opportunity for good work and creative inventiveness to grow in price also in Poland, he said.

CENTRAL CONTROL, AUDIT COMMISSION HOLDS SESSION

LD172000 Warsaw Domestic Service in Polish 1800 GMT 17 Jul 86

[Text] The PZPR Central Control and Audit Commission Presidium has held its first meeting in the new term of office. Work plans and the commission's tasks for the second half of the year were discussed.

It was underscored that, above all, they would be connected with the implementation of the 10th Congress resolutions and with the decisions of the Central Committee. It was emphasized that it will be of particular importance that the activity of the commission be aimed at combating all attempts to bring into the party alien ideological and political views, and at shaping proper moral attitudes among PZPR members. It was decided to convene a plenary meeting of the Central Control and Audit Commission in September.

Draft Work Plan Discussed

LD172128 Warsaw PAP in English 1944 GMT 17 Jul 86

[Text] Warsaw, July 17 -- The Presidium of PUWP Central Control, Audit and Review Commission (CKKR) held its first session in the new term, chaired by Political Bureau member, CKKR head Wlodzimierz Mokrzyszczak. During the meeting CKKR members discussed the draft plan of work and the commision's tasks for the next six months. During the period in question the commission will conduct control, juridical and preventive-educational activities aimed first of all at the implementation of the 10th PUWP Congress resolutions and CC decisions.

The presidium determined that the CKKR should particularly strive to see to the proper realization of party resolutions, fight against all attempts to introduce foreign views into the party, both in ideological and political terms, shape proper moral attitudes of PUWP members, strengthen the role of warning talks and party jurisdiction as very important instruments of educational activity, consistently apply statutory sanctions against the PUWP members guilty of economic mismanagement, waste, unjustified use of social means and other neglects of their kind.

The CKKR Presidium found it necessary for the commission to support activities of organs of state and social control with particular regard to the worker-peasant inspection.

ORZECHOWSKI ASSESSES PZPR ROLE IN GLOBAL ISSUES

AU171116 Warsaw NOWE DROGI in Polish May 86 pp 5-10

[Article by Foreign Minister Marian Orzechowski: "The PZPR in the Face of Basic Problems of the Modern World"]

[Text] We are entering the final and decisive stage of talks on the draft PZPR program. The talks so far indicate that our party's idea and need for comprehensive and long-term document have met with the support of society, although the degree of acceptance and attitudes to specific concepts and elements vary from one social and professional milieu to another. One of the main topics of the national debate on the program was foreign policy problems and Poland's international position, which are discussed in Chapter 7 of the draft. One may state with satisfaction that the content and tone matters. They confirm once again the basic truth that foreign policy is a mainstay and broad platform of national accord, and that Poles are united by national pride and a sincere wish for their country to occupy its rightful place in the community of nations. An expression of this is the constructive cooperation in this sphere between all the forces that recognize the PPR's constitutional reality and accept the fact that a permanent national existence plus Poland's place in Europe and the world come before any differences in interests or views. [paragraph continues]

The national support for the party's activity in the international sphere provides the PZPR with a patriotic commitment to present honest information on foreign policy and its conditions, arouse the young generation's interest in problems of the modern world and in dilemmas concerning its development, and make this generation sensitive to the fortunes of other nations.

During the talks on the draft program there has been no shortage of voices indicating the danger to Poland stemming from the development of the world situation, especially today at a time when imperialist forces are stepping up their confrontation activity vis-a-vis the socialist countries, and when the leading circles of world imperialism are setting themselves two equal and closely interconnected goals — attaining military superiority over the socialist countries and forcing these countries to abandon their ambitious socioeconomic plans. Worth stressing is the general acceptance of the fact that the nuclear-space era requires a new way of thinking, a new approach toward problems of world politics, and the creation of a cohesive system of ties joining various aspects of international security. The remarks and opinions being made about such an important issue as disarmament are enriching the substance of what the draft program contains. In particular, the talks have pointed out the humanitarian aspect of this topic and expressed concern for the future of the world and mankind and over the destructive economic influence of armaments caused by the fact that armaments policy reduced society's level of consumption and takes over a major part of production potential, new technologies, and human thought, and over action for military purposes, which conflict with mankind's development needs. In this context, approval has been expressed for Poland's peaceful foreign policy, its political-defensive alliances, and its economic cooperation with the Soviet Union and other socialist countries. It has also been indicated that domestic order in Poland is important in the international arena, and that our country's security and position among the socialist countries, in Europe, and in the world are not fixed and incommutable values, but ones that must be energetically guarded.

The social reflections and dialogue on problems of Poland's foreign policy have been supplemented with the innovative analyses of the 27th CPSU Congress, which define the development trends of the world today and provide an up-to-date assessment of the present stage and future of the struggle between the forces of progress and forces of reaction on a European and world scale. As has already been the case several times, the Soviet Union has once again spoken out in favor of secure life between nations, cooperation, and peace. The radical program of liberating mankind from mass destruction weapons by the end of this century and preventing the militarization of space — part of the general concept of the system of international security presented at the 27th CPSU Congress and supplemented with new disarmament initiatives proposed by M. Gorbachev at the 11th SED Congress -- are proof of the first socialist power's profound feeling of responsiblity for the fate of the world. The ideas contained in this program will influence various development processes in international politics. The Polish people, who know the nightmare of war better than anyone else, fully appreciate the historic significance of the Soviet proposals, and give these proposals their firm support.

The international situation continues to be very complicated. There is still a danger of world nuclear catastrophe. World peace is also threatened by armed conflicts and hotbeds of war in various parts of the world. The main reason for all the threats faced by the world is the hegemonistic and confrontational politics of the United States, characterized by a strong stream of neoglobalism and enjoying the support of certain NATO forces. The U.S. Government has set itself the goal of achieving military superiority over the socialist states and has stepped up an unprecedented arms race. The Politics from a position of strength is being accompanied by economic blackmail and propaganda aggression. Current U.S. politics has rekindled FRG revisionist and revanchist circles' hopes of changing the European territorial-political reality. [paragraph continues]

While noticing everything that endangers world peace, life on earth itself, and, of course, the existence of the Polish nation, we nevertheless do not believe that mankind's slide toward the brink of nuclear catastrophe is irreversible. One can restore the climate of confidence and cooperation to international relations. The prerequisites for improving the situation have emerged. These are provided mainly by the prospect of improving USSR-U.S. relations as a result of the Geneva "summit" and further Soviet-American dialogue. The general satisfaction with the Geneva meeting shows how large the world's desire for positive change is. Whether we will succeed in averting the present dangerous development trend in the world situation depends on our energy and initiative. A feasible program in this sphere has been presented by the 27th CPSU Congress. We also find such a desire in our party's draft program and in the 10th PZPR Congress theses. It is also contained in the communiques of the Sofia session of the Warsaw Pact Political Consultative Committee and the March 1986 Warsaw session of the Warsaw Pact Foreign Ministers' Committee.

When formulating the principles of the future program and defining the PZPR's stance toward basic problems of the modern world, we bear in mind the chief transformations occuring in the world and take into account all the factors that cause them. These include most of all the struggle between the forces of progress and forces of reaction and between socialism and capitalism on a world scale, which imperialism is trying to turn into a sharp confrontation in all spheres of life. One of those spheres about which we, beset with today's problems, are prone to forget is the ideological sphere. Yet underplaying the dangers stemming from this sphere could cause serious consequences. For we are currently experiencing the most acute ideological struggle since the "cold war" era, a struggle for which the adversary is seeking and creating new technological, economic, and political resources. Imperialism is trying to compel nations to abandon the socialist system and relinquish the principles on which socialism is based and from which it grows. This gives us an urgent need to prepare and conduct an effective ideological confrontation with our chief ideological adversaries on a world and domestic scale, with U.S. neoconservatism and its European offshoots -- which are clearly on the offensive today -- with all variants of christian-democratic ideology, and with the re-emerging neofascism and revisionism. In the foreign policy sphere this means having to counteract efforts to transfer ideological differences into the sphere of international relations.

A second factor of the transformations in the modern world is the development of the world revolutionary process. This must be investigated in all its present shapes and forms so that we might adopt our own stance toward it and define our platform and path of support for it.

The third factor is the rapid tempo of the scientific and technological revolution, which the world is currently experiencing. This revolutin is manifesting itself in progress in the following fields, among others: automatics, electronics, information technology, biotechnology, and gentic engineering. The technological gap separating several of the most highly developed countries from the rest of the world is widening. Socialist countries cannot remain indifferent to the intensified activity taking place in the highly industrialized countries of the West. They cannot and will not permit the emergence of a technical and technological gap in the principal areas of research that have a direct impact on the future development of the world economy. However, the socialist countries are compelled to resolve these problems under complicated internal and external conditions, for one of the goals of imperialist strategy at the present time is to cut us off from the achievements and benefits of the scientific and technological revolution.

Finally, the fourth factor -- the growing number of pressing problems and threats to mankind of a global kind. [paragraph continues]

Among the most serious of these are the world's unequal economic development; the growing debt burdern, which already exceeds billions of dollars; the growing technological guls between countries, a phenomenon that is also occurring on a European scale; mass unemployment; and ecological, energy, resource, food, and demographic problems. Solutions to these problems call for joint efforts on the part of all states. It will become easier to solve these problems if energy and resources stop being wasted on the arms race.

The characteristic features of the current international situation are the rapidity with which events occur and the emergence of new political, military, and economic phenomena. Under these circumstances the main foreign policy goals of our party and state are and will remain: acting to ensure that the best possible external conditions exist for the successful development of socialist construction in Poland; the effective defense of our national interests, sovereignty, territorial integrity, and security; and the growth and consolidation of Poland's international prestige. The realization of these goals is served by the lasting principles underlying Polish foreign policy. The first of these principles is the strengthening of our fraternal alliances and comprehensive cooperation with the Soviet Union and the other socialist states. History has confirmed the existence of an indissoluble link between our country's security and opportunities for socioeconomic development, and its political structure and the nature of relations between Poland and the Soviet Union and the other members of the socialist community. This manifests itself in Poland's active participation in developing the peace strategy of states belonging to the socialist community within the framework of the Warsaw Pact and in the realization of undertakings that have been jointly agreed.

We are currently entering a period of implementing bilateral and multilateral programs for the development of economic and scientific and technological cooperation with other socialist states. These programs set out prospects for such cooperation that extend beyond the beginning of the next century and sketch out a new phase in socialist integration. The distinctive features of this phase will be an increasing level of coordination of socioeconomic development strategy between CEMA states and an accelerated rate of scientific, technical, and technological progress. New forms of cooperation will be developed and perfected, cooperation in fields such as direct social and production cooperation between enterprises, which will involve millions of people in all the fraternal countries. We will work together to solve the key problems of our community's institutional structures, such as ways of effecting a fundamental increase in labor productivity and managerial efficiency, of accelerating the scientific and technological revolution, of improving the system of planning and management, and of developing socialist democracy.

Communist and workers parties are the driving force behind comprehensive cooperation between the socialist countries. To strengthen cohesion with communists of fraternal countries and to enrich practice in the construction of socialism the PZPR will continue to work to enhance interparty bonds, bonds that encompass all party cells, from central committees to basic party organizations, and will contribute to bilateral and multilateral exchanges of views and experience.

The second principle is solidarity with the peoples of Asia, Africa, and Latin America who are engaged in a struggle for national liberation and social progress, and support for their fight for independence and self-determination and against neocolonialism and racial discrimination. A convergence or identity of aims and aspirations with developing and nonaligned states creates a suitable basis for the comprehensive development of relations. This concerns, above all, those states that have embarked upon the road of socialist development. Finally, the third principle, that of peaceful coexistence with states of differing sociopolitical systems. We have two main goals in our contacts with them. [paragraph continues]

One of these goals is to work consistently toward the development of dialogue that enhances detente. The second is to create a basis for the development of broad cooperation that is free from discrimination, cooperation that is based on the principles of partnership and mutual advantage.

We work toward the realization of these goals by our active presence in the international arena and in multilateral forums, especially in the disarmament field. We will continue to make important efforts to bring about a successful outcome to the Vienna negotiations and the Stockholm conference, and to achieve significant progress at the Geneva disarmament conference. By taking part in the implementation of the CSEC Final Act we will strive to normalize our relations with the capitalist countries of Europe.

A very important part of Polish foreign policy is multilateral diplomacy. We have always been active in this area, believing that such activity has an important bearing on Poland's authority and its image in the eyes of the world, that is contributes to the growth of confidence and understanding between states, and that it bases international relations on principles of peaceful coexistence and cooperation. We will continue our tradition of being active at the UN forum and in its agencies. During its postwar history our state has played and will continue to play an active role in regulating regional conflicts and disagreements and in activities aimed at preserving world peace and security.

The PZPR program of international activity strongly stresses that being a Marxist-Leninist party we are an inseparable part of the world communist and workers movement. We are permanently linked up to it by bonds of proletarian internationalism. We wish to play an active part in the movement and to contribute to the enhancement of its strength and unity. In the face of growing imperialist aggression, which is creating unprecedented threats to world peace, unity on the part of the communists and workers movement and all peaceful, progressive, and democratic forces is of particular importance.

The analysis of external factors affecting the future development of socialist construction in our country submitted for national discussion and the main lines of the PPR foreign policy set out in chapter seven of the draft PZPR program are an unequivocal expression the concept of maintaining peace in a world of social progress and national liberation. This document, along with proposals, opinions, and postulates arising from the national debate that enrich it, will be submitted at the 10th Congress. The congress will decide its final form and content, and will set out tasks for the party and state in the international sphere. The 10th Congress will give rise to important and many-sided inspiration and will define courses of further intensified activity, which our party and people's state conducts in the interest of socialism.

ECONOMIC DELEGATION CONCLUDES INDONESIAN VISIT

LD172127 Warsaw PAP in English 1950 GMT 17 Jul 86

[Text] Bangkok, July 17 -- After an official visit to Indonesia, Polish economic delegation headed by Deputy Prime Minister Zbigniew Szalajda held talks in Singapore, Malaysia and Thailand. In Singapore, Szalajda met with Deputy Premier Ong Teng Cheong and with President of the Federation of Chambers of Commerce and Industry Tan Wah Thong. In Malaysia, Szalajda, accompanied by Minister of Foreign Trade Andrzej Wojcik, visited Deputy Prime Minister Ghafara Baba and held talks with Minister of Foreign Affairs Tengku Datuk Ahmad Rithauddeen. On the last leg of his South-east Asian tour, Szalajda was received in Bangkok by Prime Minister of Thailand Prem Tinsulanon and met with Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of Foreign Affairs Sitthi Sawetsila, while Minister Wojcik held talks with Minister of Trade Surate Osathanukhro.

During all the meetings the Polish delegation discussed prospects for the development of Poland's economic cooperation with South-east Asian states as well as conditions for the increase of mutual turnover, with all the sides expressing the view that the economic potentials of the respective states, considering their complementary character, make it possible to considerably expand mutual economic relations and trade.

POLAND, USSR SIGN PROTOCOL ON COAL COOPERATION

LD171747 Warsaw Domestic Service in Polish 1500 GMT 17 Jul 86

[Text] A protocol on Polish-Russian cooperation between the coal industries was signed at the conclusion of the visit to Poland of a delegation of Soviet miners, including Mikhail Shchadov, the minister of the coal industry. It was decided to extend cooperation centered on specialization in the manufacture of mining machinery and equipment. It was also decided to continue research into the conversion of coal into liquid fuel. Ministers Shchadov and Piotrowski discussed the course of work on the planning and construction of the Antonovskaya mine, in the Soviet Union, which is to be carried out entirely by Poles.

SOVIET BALTIC FLEET GROUP ENDS 4-DAY VISIT

LD172012 Warsaw PAP in English 1814 GMT 17 Jul 86

[Text] Warsaw, July 17 -- A delegation of the Baltic Fleet of the USSR, headed by its Vice-Admiral Vitaliy Ivanov, wound up a four-day visit of friendship to this country today. During their stay in the Polish northern coastal tri-city of Gdansk, Ndynia, Sopot, the Soviet guests met with the commandant and members of the scientific board of the Bohaterow Westerplatte Higher School of the Navy in Gdynia to exchange views on training the cadre for the Navy. The guests also paid tribute to soldiers fallen during fights for Gdansk in World War Two and laid wreaths at the cemetery-mausoleum of Soviet soldiers in Gdansk.

POLISH INTELLECTUALS APPEAL TO GORBACHEV

PM171606 Paris LE FIGARO in French 15 Jul 86 p 4

[Bernard Margueritte dispatch: "Poland: Open Letter To Gorbachev"]

[Text] Warsaw -- The event that all Warsaw intellectuals and politicians are talking about at the moment is the 15-page open letter sent to Mr Gorbachev on behalf of over 200 Polish intellectuals belonging to a reformist group called "Experience and Future" by Stefan Bratkowski, former chairman of the Polish journalists' assocation during the Solidarity period. The theme of the letter is simple: It is an attempt to persuade the Kremlin leader that the situation in Poland is explosive and threatens Moscow's well understood interests and that Mr Gorbachev would be serving his interests much better by agreeing to a limited liberalization in Warsaw.

The first point to be made is that the tone of the letter addressed to the "highly esteemed general secretary" is extremely courteous. The author even points out that "contrary to the opinions of many commentators of the world press, my friends and I believe that the Soviet Union's current policy will nevertheless aim to eliminate stagnation, stereotypes, and obsolete and dogmatic preconceptions, and seek to discover new horizons."

Next Stefan Bratkowski takes issue with the idea that the present situation is favorable to the Soviet Union, with a Poland -- through which the most terrible invasions of Russia came -- acting as a buffer zone. This is an illusion, he argues, especially since in this era of strategic nuclear weapons the importance of this buffer zone is constantly diminishing.

In fact the situation is serious: "According to its own convictions, the Polish Government apparatus has no reserves of hope. It is not possible to appeal, in the name of the country's reconstruction, for faith in the future and in the system's potential, as is done in the Soviet Union.

"It is no longer possible to appeal to patriotic feeling or to reason, which has again been deceived. The ruling team has succeeded neither in controlling inflation nor in reducing the foreign debt nor in altering the investments structure. In the political field it has failed to create a movement in support of its action. The government apparatus' isolation from the population is increasing."

This is all the more critical inasmuch as young people in particular are fully aware that "the peoples of countries 300 km away from our borders seem to live on another planet, whereas Poland is threatened by ecological disaster affecting people's health, increasing poverty, and a further decline of its civilization."

Is it possible to "stem the Polish volcano"? This would be "illusory and futile." In fact "there is a growing feeling among young people of a total lack of prospects and opportunities -- a feeling that could cause desperate reactions on the part of the most idealistic and bravest of the young generation." Here neither the church nor Solidarity could appeal for moderation any longer.

In the cultural field there is "an attempt gradually to eliminate Poland's national identity and cultural heritage." This attempt is seen by the Poles as "a desire to cut off Poland from its Western cultural roots, from its Christian tradition."

All this threatens to cause a violent explosion on the part of desperate people. Would it not be better to reach "a genuine and sincere reconciliation between the Polish and Russian nations?" What are Mr Bratkowski and his friends asking for? Quite simply "the complete implementation of the Yalta accords, which implies the recognition of the status as an independent state whose powers are decided on by elections proper to parliamentary democracies."

In exchange this new Poland will not demand the elimination of the Soviet bases on its territory provided that they do not perform the role of "political supervisory bodies." It will remain a member of the Warsaw Pact and will not challenge any of Europe's existing borders.

As will be seen, Mr Bratkowski says, "the sovereign Polish state expects from the Soviet Union infinitely smaller concessions than those the Soviet Union has granted Finland." The author ends by saying that by accepting this historical outlook held by the Polish intellectuals Mr Gorbachev would gain so much credibility that nobody could oppose his disarmament offers and that he would have a free hand at home to carry out his reform plans.

CEAUSESCU SENDS CONGRATULATIONS TO TRUONG CHINH

AU171941 Bucharest SCINTEIA in Romanian 16 Jul 86 p 5

[Text] To Comrade Truong Chinh, general secretary of the Communist Party of Vietnam [CPV] Central Committee

Dear Comrade Truong Chinh:

On the occasion of your election to the office of general secretary of the CPV Central Committee, I convey to you warm greetings and best wishes for success in fulfilling the highly responsible duties the party bestowed upon you.

I express my belief that the relations of friendship and cooperation between the RCP and the CPV and between the SR of Romania and the Socialist Republic of Vietnam will continue to develop in the future too for the benefit and in the interest of the Romanian and Vietnamese people and the cause of socialism and peace throughout the world.

AKTIV CABLES CEAUSESCU REGARDING TRAINING

AU172046 Bucharest SCINTEIA in Romanian 8 Jul 86 p 3

["Cable addressed to Comrade Nicolae Ceausescu, RCP Secretary General, President of the SR of Romania, and Supreme Commander of the Armed Forces by the Plenary Meeting of the Political Council of the Interior Ministry Aktiv" held on 7 July in Bucharest]

[Text] Much Esteemed and Beloved Comrade Nicolae Ceausescu:

The plenary meeting of the Political Council of the Interior Ministry Aktiv is holding its proceedings in the same atmosphere of strong enthusiasm and creative engagement in which our whole nation is celebrating the 65th anniversary of the RCP's founding and is paying homage to the 50th anniversary of the Brasov trial of the communist and antifascist fighters and discussing, with communist exactness, the tasks involving commanders, party organizations and bodies, and all personnel to commendably implement the provisions of the directives of the Supreme Commander regarding the military and political training of the Army in the period 1986-90.

Stressing the fact that the participants in the plenary meeting express their feelings of great admiration, love, and boundless devotion for the most beloved son of the nation, the cable reads:

The national military doctrine formulated by you makes an outstanding contribution to developing Romanian and international military thinking and clearly directs the whole activity of the Interior Ministry bodies, conferring on them the capacity to unflinchingly implement the tasks and missions included in the historic decisions of the 13th RCP Congress.

We report to you, much esteemed and beloved supreme commander, that in the spirit of the valuable theses, ideas, and in orientations included in your recent speeches, the plenary meeting has critically analyzed the results attained in the activity of educating the personnel and ensuring the specification and training of military troops. The efficiency of these activities are being reflected in the way the missions that were ordered are carried out. Likewise, the plenary meeting established the concrete ways and means and the priority tasks in the activity of commanders and RCP and the Union of Communist Youth organizations and bodies meant to continuously improve the process of training all personnel, ensuring their patriotic, revolutionary, and civic education, and developing the feelings of love and pride for the glorius past and the great achievements of the Romanian people, under the wise leadership of the party, in building the comprehensively developed socialist society in Romania and the country's advance toward communism.

Animated by your wonderful example of patriotic devotion and revolutionary enthusiasm, we assure you, with the power of our oath, much esteemed and beloved Comrade Supreme Commander, that we will work in the spirit of the guidelines, requirements, and tasks included in your ample sociopolitical work and we will do all we can to implement exactly, and at a high qualitative level, the party decisions, the laws of the country, and the new directives regarding the military and political training of the Army, thus making our contribution to accomplishing the great work of building socialism and communism on the ancient soil of our beloved free, sovereign, and independent homeland — the Socialist Republic of Romania.

Long live Comrade Supreme Commander !

CEAUSESCU MEETS ZAIRIAN FOREIGN MINISTER

AU151822 Bucharest AGERPRES in English 1746 GMT 15 Jul 86

[Text] Bucharest AGERPRES 15/7/1986 -- On July 15 President Nicolae Ceausescu of Romania received Mandungu Bula Nyati, state commissioner for foreign relations of the Republic of Zaire, now on an official visit to Romania.

The guest handed over to President Nicolae Ceausescu a message from the founding president of the Mouvement Populaire de la Revolution, Mobutu Sese Seko, president of the Republic of Zaire, and on his behalf conveyed to him a warm salute. He pointed out the high consideration enjoyed in his country by Romania's foreign policy promoted consistently by President Nicolae Ceausescu, and by the demarches and actions devoted by the Romanian head of state to the cause of international peace, understanding and collaboration.

President Nicolae Ceausescu thanked for the message and addressed the president of the Republic of Zaire a warm salute.

During the interview that proceeded in a cordial atmosphere, the sides highlighted the good relations between Romania and Zaire and the possibilities offered by the economic potential of the two countries to a stronger development of the collaboration and cooperation between Romania and Zaire on multiple planes, particularly to the expansion of the collaboration in production starting from long-term accords that should confer stability on the open prospects to the bilateral relations, in the interest of both peoples.

The sides also approached current issues of the world political life.

In the context Nicolae Ceausescu showed that under the current international circumstances everything is necessary to be done to halt the dangerous course of events, to implement disarmanent, nuclear disarmament in the first plce, to set in the world a climate of detente, security, peace and wide collaboration among nations. At the same time during the talks the sides pointed out the need for political, negotiated solutions to be found to all the states of tension and conflict, to all the inter-state litigious issues.

Related to the African situation President Nicolae Ceausescu reasserted Romania's full support to the struggle waged by the African peoples for their free and independent development. Highlighted was the importance of strengthening the unity and solidarity of the countries in that continent, of expanding the collaboration between them in order to solve with joint effort the problems posed by eradicating underdevelopment and by their more rapid advancement along the path of economic and social progress. In the context the sides pointed out the need to organize an international conference under the U.N, with the participation of all the states, in view of settling the issues of underdevelopment and of setting in a new world economic order.

There was reasserted the resolve of Romania and Zaire to collaborate more and more tightly in the world arena, within the U.N. and other international bodies and to make their contribution to finding constructive solutions to the great problems confronting mankind.

ECONOMIC INVESTMENT PROGRAM REVIEWED

AU171419 Bucharest AGERPRES in English 1127 GMT 17 Jul 86

[Excerpts] Bucharest AGERPRES 17/7/1986 -- Romania is traversing a new development stage which will place it among the economically medium-developed countries, having the prospect to turn into a manysided developed country by the end of the millenium. [passage omitted]

Large investments were made in agriculture. In the previous five-year period [1981-85] for instance, they topped 2.5 times the ones realized in 1951-1965 interval. By the end of 1985 the total area arranged for irrigation stood at 2,956,300 hectares, accounting for nearly 30 per cent of the country's arable land. [passage omitted]

Romania maintains its policy of substantial investments. An investment program amounting to 1,400 thousand million lei is to be carried out in the current five-year period. More than 840 thousand million lei of the total are to be allotted to industry, especially to power engineering and the extractive industry. In the processing industry investments are streamlined more particularly toward completing the projects begun in the previous quinquennium and updatng existing units. Moreover, agriculture benefits from 210 thousand million lei. As much as 750,000 flats are to be built over this five-year period, so that 2.5 million inhabitants can move to new dwellings.

All in all, over this five-year period, some 900 important production units -- industrial, farming and animal-breeding units -- will be put on stream so that by 1990 fixed assets amount to 3,800 thousand million lei.

NEW PRODUCTS FROM ELECTRONIC INDUSTRY REPORTED

AU091757 Bucharest AGERPRES in English 1740 GMT 9 Jul 86

[Text] Bucharest, AGERPRES, 09/07/1986 -- "Telerom P 2" is the symbol of a new microcomputer put into fabrication by the Cluj-Napoca Industrial Electronics and Automation Enterprise. This is a product of wide application in the fields of economic, financial, administration, technical and scientific calculus, education and design. Recently, the same enterprise has started serially producing the FBIS-1 equipment for minute surgical operations. It performs fine incisions of the tissue and causes it to curdle [as received] simultaneously.

Romania's specializing enterprises currenly produce computers, mini and microcomuters of the generations 3 and 3.5, numeric displays for the automatic control of the processes of production, industrial robots, medium and powerful electronic memories, measurement and control equipment, television sets, radiocassette recorders, invoicing and accounting machines and other products of major interest.

In less than 15 years 75 per cent of the national economy has been endowed with computers, and since 1985 it has been offering to export half of its production. Over the 1986-1990 interval the Romanian electronics output will grow 110 per cent as to 1985. The Felix C 512/1024 computer will be replaced by the medium-large capacity Felix C 8020, adapted for use with the local and national teleprocessing networks. New improved models MF 32-bit microcomputer will be worked out, as well as home microcomputers, portable terminals, external memories and new operation systems.

INTERIOR SECRETARY MEETS WITH FRENCH COUNTERPART

LD171830 Belgrade TANJUG in English 1645 GMT 17 86

[Text] Belgrade, July 17 (TANJUG) -- French Interior Minister Charles Pascua is on a visit to Yugoslavia, where his host is Yugoslav Interior Secretary Dobroslav Culafic.

It was assessed in the talks today that in the traditionally friendly and comprehensive relations between Yugoslavia and France cooperation in the area of security has a significant place. This cooperation is successful, but, as noted, all the possibilities which could contribute to the two countries' increased security and implementing their obligations in the international community were not made use of.

New forms of cooperation were agreed on and special attention devoted to combating international terrorism and other organized forms of international crime.

Apart from bilateral cooperation, the cooperation within Interpol was emphasized. The 55th session of the Interpol General Assembly will be held in Yugoslavia in October this year.

FURTHER REPORTAGE ON SFRY, ZAIRIAN TALKS

Scientific Cooperation Urged

LD172219 Belgrade TANJUG Domestic Service in Serbo-Croatian 1551 GMT 17 Jul 86

[Text] Belgrade, 17 Jul (TANJUG) -- Tibor Salma, member of the Federal Executive Council, in Belgrade today held talks with Mandungu Bula Nyati, Zairian minister of foreign affairs, on economic cooperation between the two countries, as well as on the possibilities for its further promotion. It was stressed that Zaire had great interest in developing cooperation with Yugoslavia, and in particular through involving Yugoslav economic organizations in the realization of the 5-year development plan of this African country.

At the same time, both sides expressed interest in promoting economic and scientific-technological cooperation, and in particular in the areas of priority importance, such as agriculture, the electric power industry and processing industry, and on the basis of using their own raw materials. In this connection stress was laid on the need for the two countries to come to know each other better, to which great contributions would be made through the exchange of business delegations between the two friendly and nonaligned countries.

During the day the guest from Zaire, who is paying an official and friendly visit to Yugoslavia, visited the Military Museum in Kalemegdan and the Museum of African Art.

This afternoon talks between Raif Dizdarevic, federal secretary for foreign affairs, and Mandunga Bula Nyati, Zairean minister of foreign affairs, will continue. The Zairean minister will tomorrow visit the SR of Bosnia-Hercegovina.

Meets Mikulic

LD172221 Belgrade TANJUG Domestic Service in Serbo-Croatian 1718 GMT 17 Jul 86

[Text] Belgrade, 17 Jul (TANJUG) -- Branko Mikulic, president of the Federal Executive Council, today received in the Palace of the Federation, Mandungu Bula Nyati, Zairian minister of Foreign Affairs, who is paying an official and friendly visit to our country.

In the talks on bilateral cooperation, they established that there were good conditions for widening economic relations between Yugoslavia and Zaire. This in particular referes to agriculture, mining and processing of minerals, and to construction projects. The significance of mutual cooperation between nonaligned and developing countries, particularly in the area of scientific-technological development, and in tackling the problem of debts were stressed. They expressed the expectation that the forthcoming, eighth conference of nonaligned countries in Harare would contribute to strengthening the actional unity of nonaligned countries in solving big international problems. Raif Dizdarevic, federal secretary of foreign affairs, also took part in the talks.

Upcoming Conference Discussed

LD172225 Belgrade TANJUG in English 1833 GMT 17 Jul 86

[Text] Belgrade, 17 Jul (TANJUG) -- The conference of heads of state and governments in Harare will manifest the consistent unity of the non-aligned countries based on the authentic principles and aims of the movement.

The above was set out by Zairian Foreign Minister Mandungu Bula Nyatia and Yugoslav Foreign Secretary Raif Dizdarevic at the close of talks in Belgrade this afternoon. The two ministers also agreed that the non-aligned countries had succeeded in removing aims directed at turning the movement from its authentic principles established at the first summit in Belgrade in 1961. Both sides agreed on the need to exert pressure on the superpowers to continue talks to secure a lasting peace.

The foreign ministers of Yugoslavia and Zaire also consider that the September summit in Harare should deal more with the economic problems of the developing countries. To this end, Yugoslavia and Zaire call translation into practice of the idea that the movement form a permanent economic committee.

The talks particularly focused on an analysis of the international situation and crisis points such as southern Africa, the Middle East, the Iraq-Iran war, Central America, Afghanistan, Kampuchea etc. The two ministers also acquainted each other on the stand of their countries regarding the initiative launched at the ministerial conference in New Delhi to precisely define the movement's stand on terrorism. They assessed it was essential to clearly differentiate between terrorism and liberation struggles.

Nyatia and Dizdarevic also called for the Movement of Non-Alignment to urge the strengthening of the role played by the United Nations in international relations. It is essential, therefore, to prevent the attempts by the great powers to create a monopoly in the world organization, the Yugoslav and Ziarian foreign minister concluded.

FEDERAL EXECUTIVE COUNCIL HOLDS SESSION

LD180502 Belgrade TANJUG Domestic Service in Serbo-Croatian 1639 GMT 17 Jul 86

[Excerpts] Belgrade, 17 Jul (TANJUG) -- In the federal budget for the next 2 years, the dinar equivalent of 540,000 dollars will be secured for the purchase and transportation of food for countries which receive assistance from the World Food Program. This is envisaged in the draft law on securing funds for Yugoslavia's contribution to this program up to the year 1988, which was adopted by the Federal Executive Council at its session today. The following statement from the session was issued by the Federal Secretariat for Information:

The Federal Executive Council, presided over by Janez Zemljaric, adopted several regulations within its competence at its session today.

The council approved the draft law on securing funds for Yugoslavia's contribution to the World Food Porgram for next year and 1988. According to the draft, within the federal budget for those years the dinar equivalent of 540,000 U.S. dollars will be secured. These funds will be used for the purchase of agricultural and food products on the domestic market at world prices and for the payment of the costs of transportation to countries which receive assistance from the World Food Program. [passage omitted]

Yugoslavia has, ever since the foundation of the World Food Program, made regular contributions of food and to some extent transporation.

The session approved a proposal on adopting a law on changes and amendments to the law on statistical research of interest to the whole country. The changes would guarantee greater cooperation and coordination by competent organs and organizations in collecting data of interest to the whole country, and on this basis the more rational expenditure of funds for this research.

The Federal Executive Council approved the drafts of changes in the law on measures restricting the market and free exchange of goods and services in the interests of the whole country and the law on quality controls of agricultural and food products for foreign trade, as well as proposed changes in the Law on the Federal Market Inspectorate and the draft of the law.

In all three cases, an increase in penalties was proposed for violations of the provisions of the law, with the aim of ensuring the purpose of penalizing and strengthening legal discipline.

Within the framework of preparations for the forthcoming summit of nonaligned countries in Harare, the council examined Yugoslavia's relations with the Arab countries of the Gulf, the countries of Latin America and the Carribean region, and the African countries south of the Sahara. It was assessed that all the conditions exist for broader development and the promotion of comprehensive relations between Yugoslavia and these countries, and the competent federal organs were given the task of undertaking specific measures and activities to this end.

The council ratified several international acts and approved solutions in the sphere of cadre issues.

INCREASE IN INDUSTRIAL PRODUCTION REPORTED

LD171930 Belgrade TANJUG Domestic Service in Serbo-Croatian 1205 GMT 17 Jul 86

[Summary] Belgrade, 17 Jul (TANJUG) -- According to representatives of the Federal Statistics Institute who held a press conference today in the International Press Center in Belgrade, in the past 6 months of this year industrial production increased by 5.2 percent compared with the same period last year. The highest growth was recorded in Macedonia, 9.7 percent; and Bosnia-Hercegovina, 7.8 percent; while the lowest was in Vojvodina, 3.9 percent; and Slovenia, 2 percent.

The higher growth rate of 15.6 percent was realized by iron ore production; 12 percent by oil derivatives production, and 10.9 percente by chemical products. A decline in production was recorded in non-ferrous metals, construction materials and ship building.

By the end of May the reserves of finished products wereup by 0.4 percent compared with the same period last year, while the reserves of consumer goods decreased by 10.3 percent.

Exports in the 6-month period amounted to $4.646 billion, which is 2.5 percent less than in the first 6 months of last year. Imports amounted to $5.7 billion, an increase of 0.6 percent. The cover of imports by exports is 81 percent, which is 3 percent less than in the first half of 1985.

The highest exports were realized by the machine-building industry and production of transportation systems, worth $592 million. Exports of chemical products were worth $528 million and food $363 million.

KOMUNIST RESPONSE TO RECENT ALBANIAN CLAIMS

LD171819 Belgrade TANJUG in English 1635 GMT 17 Jul 86

[Text] Belgrade, July 17 (TANJUG) -- The League of Communists of Yugoslavia (LCY) press organ KOMUNIST today rejectsd as groundless the claims presented in the Albanian Party of Labour Organ ZERI I POPULLIT, according to which Yugoslavia's allegedly anti-Albanian policy was again manifested at the recent 13th LCY Congress.

KOMUNIST sets out that quite the opposite is actually the case, Albania interfering in Yugoslavia's internal affairs and displaying territorial claims towards it, as clearly substantiated by historical facts.

Enver Hoxha, whose course Albania continues steadily to pursue, as set out in Tirana, had taken upon himself the task of persuading foreign statesmen, including Stalin, Khrushchev and Mao Tse Tung, that "Kosovo and other parts of Yugoslavia..are Albanian territories, belong to Albania, and should be returned to it".

An illustration of Albania's continued territorial claims towards Yugoslavia is also to be found in "The Encyclopedia of Albania", in which towns in the Yugoslav republics of Serbia and Montenegro are given as "Albanian". KOMUNIST recalls that Tirana even prints postage stamps showing Yugoslav towns and parts of the country.

The LCY weekly sets out that Albania's policy of interference in Yugoslavia's internal affairs was reflected at the 18th Congress of the Albanian Party of Labour in the support lent to Albanian separatists in the Yugoslav province of Kosovo and their demands that Kosovo be given the status of a republic.

Turning to the ZERI I POPULLIT's position according to which Albania, Greece, and Bulgaria allegedly make up an anti-Yugoslav coalition, KOMUNIST writes that Yugoslavia is far from being antagonistically disposed towards any of the three countries, although it has open questions, in varying degrees, in relations with each, (?which) it wishes to resolve.

"The 13th LCY Congress had in fact underscored (which the ZERI I POPULLIT commentator failed to observe) that open borders and a policy on good-neighbour relations are the cornerstones of Yugoslavia's foreign policy", the LCY press organ sets out.

"If bilateral relations are based on the principles of peaceful coexistence, which imply non-interference, equality and the mutual recognition will encounter less obstacles", KOMUNIST writes, and sets out that it is in these frameworks that a policy of good-neighbour relations must prove itself in deeds.

SAWPY CONFERENCE DISCUSSES KOSOVO SITUATION

LD172211 Belgrade TANJUG Domestic Service in Serbo-Croatian 1035 GMT 17 Jul 86

[Excerpts] Belgrade, 17 Jul (TANJUG) -- The results achieved so far in the efforts to stabilize the situation in Kosovo should not be underestimated but at the same time we must not allow ourselves to be lulled into self-satisfaction at what has been achieved over the last 5 years, especially in view of the fact that some of the key tasks from the Platform on Kosovo have not yet been fulfilled. This refers, in particular, to the emigration of Serbs and Montenegrins and the suppression of the organized forms of hostile activity.

This is what Velizart Skerovic, member of the Presidium of the SAWPY Federal Conference, said in his introductory report at today's session of the Presidium convened to discuss the information about the hitherto implementation of the stance which the SAWPY's future sociopolitical activity in realizing the political platform on Kosovo. Having noted that there has of late been an increase in the activity and cooperation designed to resolve the problems of Kosovo, for which the conclusions of the LCY Central Committee Presidium and the SFRY Presidency as well as the 13th LCY Congress provided a strong stimulus, Skerovic went on to say that the intensified activity had helped to overcome some of the difficulties. This is illustrated by the fact that the economy in the province has recorded considerable successes, that over the last 4 years 2,500 people has returned to Kosovo, that the problems of coordinating school textbooks are being overcome, and so on.

However, Skerovic said, as a result of the enemy's intensified activity, the security-political situation in Kosovo Polje and some other towns has deteriorated. The overall results of the SAWPY's activity cannot be regarded as satisfactory, he added, because they fall short of the expectations and the obligations set in the stance. There is enough reason for self-criticism within the Presidium itself because it failed to ensure a continued monitoring of the pressing problems in the province, nor did it take an active part in the efforts to solve them. This was particularly apparent at the beginning of the year. [passage omitted]

The process of the ideopolitical differentiation in Kosovo has so far produced certain results. However, these are inadequate, particularly those recorded in the sphere of education, science, judiciary and within the officers' ranks in all-people's defense and social self-protection. The Socialist Alliance, Skerovic added, must take a more active part in the action to speed up the differentiation process particularly among the cadres in administrative and other organs whose work involves everyday contacts with the public. Those cadres who only formally denounce the irredentist movement while in their work and behavior do nothing to oppose it, are in fact helping it. At the same time they present a great obstacle to the efforts to stabilize the situation in the province faster. [passage omitted]

Skerovic said that the lack of undersanding of the situation in Kosovo and the objectives of hostile activity has recently found its expression in theses put forward by individuals, saying that it is a matter of relations between Serbs and Albanians, and that the whole point is that Serbs and Albanians should sit down and themselves make an agreement how to live together. This thesis, he added, is not only the expression of regional blindness and narrowmindedness, but its aim is to break up the unity of Serbs and Albanians, as well as all other nations and nationalities in Kosovo and widen the country in the struggle against the Albanian separatism and all other nationalisms, as a common enemy. It is obvious, Skerovic said, that this is a question of ideological platform of nationalistic linking and tolerance and of some kind of a restoration of a slogan about a national reconciliation with the class enemy. [passage omitted]

Most young people have got rid of ideological confusion and there is no danger that they might succumb to nationalistic influences, Bajram Selimi said, disagreeing with some of the assessments made in the report.

He believes that some of these assessments can refer to last year, but not to the first half of this year. The past delegate elections were used for a resolute cadre rejuvenation which has already been carried out through electing people who proved themselves in a concrete struggle for the stabilization of the political situation in Kosovo, Selimi said. [passage omitted]

In the discussion, stress was laid on the need for the Socialist Alliance to become more involved in the process of reintegration into society of those young people in Kosovo who have been convicted. Some participants also said that religious instruction has overstepped legally permissable frameworks and has grown into religious education, as well as that young people educated in Moslem universities are gaining influence. [passage omitted]

The Presidium gave its support to the platform for the eighth conference of nonaligned countries in Harare. Following an explanation by Budimir Loncar, in the discussion it was pointed out that the Socialist Alliance should be more strongly present in the Yugoslav actions on the international stage. Support was also given to the initiative to mark the 25th anniversary of the first conference of the heads of governments or states of nonaligned countries.

Socialist Alliance on Kosovo

LD172036 Belgrade TANJUG in English 1828 GMT 17 Jul 86

[Text] Belgrade, July 17 (TANJUG) -- The Yugoslav Socialist Alliance maintains that the political and security situation in the Province of Kosovo cannot be qualified as stable until the hostile activity of Albanian separatists and the migration of Serbs and Montenegrins from the province under pressure from them cease.

The Socialist Alliance presidency today urged a greater and more concrete engagement of this largest Yugoslav socio-political organization in the normalization of the situation in Kosovo.

The participants in the discussion underscored that Kosovo was a Yugoslav problem, and Yugoslavia's security and unity were indivisible.

An impediment standing in the way of a speedier stabilization of the situation in Kosovo, as set out in the discussion, are officials in Kosovo who condemn the activity of Albanian separatists in words but do not oppose it in deeds. The Socialist Alliance, as set out, must therefore act along the line of unmasking these individuals.

Through proposing practical measures, the socialist alliance must also contribute to improving the inter-nationality relations in Kosovo, strained since 1981, when Albanian separatists, striving to create an ethnically pure Kosovo, begun putting various forms of pressure on Serbs and Montenegrins with the aim of driving them out of the province.

Participants in the discussion also pointed out the need for a greater engagement of the Socialist Alliance in the process of reintegrating into society the Kosovo youths sentenced for hostile activities after the 1981 counter-revolutionary events.

BOSNIA-HERCEGOVINA LABOR LOSSES REPORTED

LD172206 Belgrade TANJUG Domestic Service in Serbo-Croatian 1829 GMT 17 Jul 86

[Summary] Sarajevo, 17 Jul (TANJUG) -- Today the Executive Council of the Bosnia-Hercegovina Assembly held a session devoted to the analysis of losses incurred by the organizations of associated labor in the economy and by social activities in the republic last year and in the first 3 months of this year. The council also discussed proposed measures and activities to overcome the situation.

Last year the losses of the organizations of associated labor in the economy and in social activities amounted to 59.9 billion dinars. Losses in the economy alone increased by 228 percent in relation to 1984, amounting to 39 billion dinars. These unfavorable trends continued this year and in the first 3 months 1,251 organizations of associated labor incurred losses of 57.4 billion dinars. This is 2.9 percent more than in the same period last year.

The situation is aggravated by price increases and growth in the rate of inflation. A particularly serious problem is very low personal incomes for workers, and in some work organizations, labor is paid irregularly.

CROATIAN ASSEMBLY REVIEWS ECONOMIC TRENDS

LD171535 Belgrade TANJUG Domestic Service in Serbo-Croatian 1353 GMT 17 Jul 86

[Summary] Zagreb, 17 Jul (TANJUG) -- Today at a joint session of all three chambers, delegates of the Croatian Assembly were informed about economic trends in the past 6 months, measures and activities for the realization of the resolution on the policy of the socioeconomic development of Croatia in 1986 and the social plan of Croatia from 1986-90. The introductory report was submitted by Ante Milovic, president of the Executive Council of the Croatian Assembly.

Apart from a certain growth of industrial production -- 4.1 percent in the first 5 months -- and rise in employment, the realization of the key resolution objectives is unsatisfactory. For example, exports are on the decline, the rate of inflation is high, while personal, general and joint expenditure is above the realistic level of production and productivity.

At the session Dr Ljubomir Baban was unanimously elected new member of the Executive Council of the Croatian Assembly.

SERBIAN BREAD PRICES JUDGED TOO HIGH

LD162202 Belgrade TANJUG Domestic Service in Serbo-Croatian 1430 GMT 16 Jul 86

[Summary] Belgrade, 16 Jul (TANJUG) -- The Serbian LC Central Committee Presidium held a session today which was presided over by Slobodan Milosevic. The meeting discussed the current economic situation and activities aimed at realizing the policy of economic stabilization. It was stated that industrial production in Serbia since the beginning of the year has grown 6.3 percent, which is above the country's average. A trend toward further revival of production was recorded in June as well, while at the beginning of July the first results of the increasing of exports were recorded. The Presidium assessed the omissions which took place recently in connection with bread prices as inadmissible and stressed that full social and political responsibility should be borne for improvised and wrong decisions.

New Bread Prices Called For

LD172208 Zagreb Domestic Service in Serbo-Croatian 2000 GMT 17 Jul 86

[Text] At its session today, the Executive Council of the Serbian Assembly proposed to the Federal Executive Council to adopt a decision on the new price of flour and bread as soon as possible. On the other hand, a decision on the new prices of oil, sugar, meat, and milk should, according to the proposal by this council, be postponed until September. In the explanation, it is said that a decision on the price of bread and flour should be made at once in order to prevent the further worsening of the market supply of these articles.

YUGOSLAV ACADEMICIAN CRITICIZES KOSOVO SITUATION

AU181210 Tirana ATA in English 0920 GMT 18 Jul 86

["Press review" -- ATA headline]

[Excerpts] Tirana, July 18 (ATA) -- In the field of foreign policy, the speakers carry today excerpts from the interview of Dr. F. Muhic, professor of the Faculty of Philosophy of Shkup, published in the review DANAS of Zagreb and from the article by the report V. Mayer published in the West German newspaper FRANKFURTER ALLGEMEINE ZEITUNG which dwell on the situation in Kosovo, prepared by the ALBANIAN TELEGRAPHIC AGENCY.

Dr. F. Muhic says among others in the review DANAS: "I cannot keep silence even if I would pay it with my life, suffice to know that something may be salved. It has gone so far. What worries me most regarding Kosovo is the feeling that things will come out of control if it continues like this.

It is said that there are pressures, since Albanians are buying lands. But under such a kind of pressure we have lost one million people, who have come out of Yugoslavia to secure the daily bread for their families. Nobody is responsible for this. The economic pressure cannot be stopped. Why is there not taken into consideration the fact that Albanians too are transferred from Kosovo, but nobody speaks of the transfer of the Yugoslavs from Yugoslavia, either.

Now, there is spoken with fear of the high birthrate of the Albanians. 'They are a danger for us'. But, indeed the question is like this: Are the Albanians Yugoslavs or not. When some of them called we are not Yugoslavs we plunged them in jail. But if they are Yugoslavs and we say that they are such, and as a consequence we do not leave them part from us, then it must be said that their number does not increase, but ours increases, the number of the Yugoslavs rises." [passage omitted]

ROLE OF PEOPLE'S COUNCILS IN ECONOMY EXPLAINED

AU210755 Tirana BASHKIMI in Albania 14 Jul 86 p 1

[Editorial: "The People's Council Must Do More To Tackle Great Problems of the Economy"]

[Text] In the course of implementing the decisions of the 13th and 14th AWP Central Committee plenums and Comrade Ramiz Alia's instructions, the activity of the people's councils has been rising constantly. The state organs are dealing with the problems of the economy better than ever before, thus raising the standard of management and control work.

During the 6-month period, our economy has been forcefully demonstrating its fundamental features, its dynamism, and its balanced development. The achievements attained and the overfulfillment of the planned tasks in numerous branches and sectors of the economy in many districts are a testimony to this. Tirana, Vlore, Berat, Permet, and other districts have particularly distinguished themselves in this respect. These achievements are a result of a profound political understanding of the tasks and have served as a stimulating force in the progress of work everywhere, in setting in motion the great reserves of our society.

This dynamism observed in production and other sectors is a reflection of the fervor and initiative of the masses, of the spirit of actions. The state organs have supported these actions and revolutionary initiatives better and have raised the method of work through actions to a higher level of efficiency. As was stressed at the ninth session of the 10th legislature of the People's Assembly, the successful crowning of important actions in the commissioning of irrigation projects and the broad movement for the creation of small herds of cattle at brigade level, a movement that was inspired by the party and supported by the patriotism of the cooperativist peasantry, are a clear testimony of this dynamism. Movements like these have by now become a massive phenomenon and the peasantry itself is fully convinced that in the not too distant future it will meet all of its needs for milk on the basis of the production by these herds. As was stressed at the 15th AWP Central Committee Plenum, this initiative must be further promoted, consolidating the development of these herds. The party's solicitude was once again reflected in the 25 percent reduction of the price of milk from these herds for members of the brigades.

The present stage in the development of our socialist society and the future of the economy require that the people's councils and the executive committees should raise the efficiency of their management and controling work and tackle economic and financial problems more profoundly so that the planned tasks are fulfilled all along the line by branches, sectors, and districts. The great economic problems must be at the center of the people's councils' attention.

The district people's council executive committees have considerable and important tasks for their sections and must strengthen their links with the base. This requires that their method of work be improved in order to better and more efficiently resolve the problems concerning the district, enterprise, and agricultural cooperative, that they disseminate experience, and that they concretely assist the work of the people's councils of joined villages, particularly the village people's councils. The ministries and other central departments must also establish closer linked with the village people's councils and assist more concretely in raising the participation of the state organs throughout the entire planning process, as well as in resolving problems arising in the course of implementing the plans.

In order to raise the efficiency of the management and controling work of the people's councils, the activation of permanent commissions, council members, and activists would bring positive results. They must intensify their demands for accounting by the sections of the executive committees and the economic and state organs at the base, struggling againt formalism in demanding accounts; they must broach problems that appear; and they must seek out those who are responsible for the nonfulfillment of tasks. The state organs must on no occasion reconcile themselves to the spirit of justifications or to manifestations of bureaucracy and technocracy.

The 15th AWP Central Committee Plenum approved the draft directives of the Ninth AWP Congress for the Eighth 5-Year Plan for the development of the economy and culture. The participation of all the people in the great popular discussion on the draft directives constitutes a great action of profound ideological, economic, and social substance. In this framework, the people's council at all levels, as well as the state and economic organs, under the guidance of the party, must draw out the advanced and innovative thinking of the working masses in order to uncover and place in the service of the people and the economy the great reserves constantly created by our socialist economy, and in order to increase the mobilization and fervor of the working masses and thus, go to the Ninth AWP Congress and the 45th anniversary of its founding with as many achievements as possible in all fields.

BALKAN PASSENGER PLANE DETAINED IN ISTANBUL

AU201750 Sofia BTA in English 1737 GMT 20 Jul 86

[Text] Sofia, July 20 (BTA) -- A Balkan Airlines TU 154 passenger jet on the regular Sofia-Istanbul-Sofia flight was illegally detained by the Turkish authorities at Istanbul airport today. This is a gross violation of the norms of international air travel and of the bilateral agreement between the two countries. The Bulgarian air company sent another airplane to Istanbul to collect the 135 passengers that were to travel to Sofia.

The Ministry of Foreign Affairs of Bulgaria has protested before the Turkish ambassador to Sofia and has asked for the immediate freeing of the airplane and for its return to Bulgaria.

ZHIVKOV MEETS WITH FRG CP CHAIRMAN MIES

AU181325 Sofia BTA in English 1307 GMT 18 Jul 86

[Text] Sofia, July 18 (BTA) -- Mr. Todor Zhivkov, secretary general of the CC of the BCP, met with Mr. Herbert Mies, chairman of the German Communist Party, who is on a holiday in this country.

Mr. Todor Zhivkov familiarized the guest with the activity of the Bulgarian Communists and the Bulgarian people in connection with the carrying out of the resolutions of the 13th Congress of the BCP, which has outlined the strategy for qualitatively new growth of economy on the basis of the achievements of science and technology, for further utilization of the advantages of the socialist society and for ever greater satisfying the public's needs. He spoke about the peaceloving foreign policy of this country and paid special attention to the efforts for maintaining relations of goodneighbourliness and cooperation in the Balkans, for turning of the region into a nuclear and chemical-weapons-free zone.

Mr. Herbert Mies gave high assessment to the achievements of the Bulgarian people in the construction of socialist society, as well as to the constructive foreign policy of the country. He informed Mr. Todor Zhivkov of the 8th Congress of the German Communist Party, which was held recently, and of the activity in connection with the implementation of the resolutions of the congress. The two party leaders assessed the international situation as alarming and stressed that this was due to the aggressive policy of imperialism.

Both sides expressed full support to the comprehensive and realistic programme for peace, adopted at the 27th CPSU Congress, land to the numerous constructive initiatives of the U.S.S.R. and the other socialist countries, outlining the way for radical reductions of nuclear and conventional weapons, for overall healing of the international situation.

Mr. Todor Zhivkov and Mr. Herbert Mies confirmed the determination of the BCP and the German Communist Party to continue to develop and deepen the mutual relations, to cooperate for the strengthening of the unity of the international communist and workers' movement on the basis of Marxism-Leninism and proletarian internationalistm.

ZHIVKOV GREETS IRAQI PRESIDENT ON NATIONAL DAY

[Text] State Council Chairman Todor Zhivkov has sent a telegram to Saddam Husayn, chairman of the Revolutionary Command Council and president of the Republic of Iraq.

In the telegram, most cordial greetings and good wishes are sent to the Iraqi people on the occasion of the country's national day.

Confidence is expressed that the relations of friendship and mutually beneficial cooperation between Bulgaria and Iraq will continue to develop and deepen in the interest of our peoples and of peace, understanding, and cooperation in the world. The telegram wishes progress, prosperity, and peace to the friendly Iraqi people.

CONSULTATIONS HELD WITH PDRY FOREIGN MINISTRY

AU181707 Sofia BTA in English 1543 GMT 18 Jul 86

[Text] Sofia, July 18 (BTA) -- Consultations were held between the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of Bulgaria and the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of the People's Democratic Republic of Yemen on issues in connection with the preparations for the 41st Session of the U.N., and on the activity of the two countries in international organizations.

The Bulgarian delegation was led by Mr. Dimitur Kostov, ambassador, head of the "U.N. and Disarmament" Department, and the Yemeni delegation was led by Mr. Salim Faras, head of "International Organizations and Conferences" Department.

Mr. Salim Faras was received by Mr. Ivan Ganev, deputy minister of foreign affairs.

FOREIGN MINISTRY CONSULTATIONS WITH MOROCCO

AU191810 Sofia BTA in English 1735 GMT 19 Jul 86

[Text] Sofia, July 19 (BTA) -- Political consultations were held from July 17 through 19 between the Ministries of Foreign Affairs of Bulgaria and Morocco. The Bulgarian side was represented by Mr. Ivan Ganve, deputy minister of foreign affairs, and the Moroccon by Mr. Ahmed Cherkaoui, state secretary for foreign affairs and cooperation.

The Moroccon guest was received by Mr. Georgi Atanasov, chairman of the Council of Ministers, by Mr. Khristo Khristov, minister of trade, by Mr. Alexi Ivanov, minister of agriculture and woods, by Mr. Mariy Ivanov, first deputy minister of foreign affairs and by Mr. Krustyo Trichkov, deputy chairman of the National Council of the Fatherland Front.

The consultations and meetings discussed the state and prospects of bilateral relations and noted with satisfaction that they are traditionally good and are developing on a mutually advantageous basis in the interests of the two friendly peoples. A credit agreement was signed between Bulgaria and Morocco.

The guest was informed of Bulgaria's development and of the guidelines in her foreign policy. Special attention was paid to Bulgaria's activities for securing a lasting climate of goodneighbourliness, trust, peace and security in the Balkins and for turning these into a zone free of nuclear and chemical weapons. The consultations confirmed Bulgaria's invariable and principled support for the struggle of the Arab peoples and for their just cause, especially for those of the Arab people of Palestine who are struggling for their national self-determination and for the foundation of an independent state.

Mr. Ahmed Cherkaoui informed the Bulgarian side of the guidelines in the foreign policy of Morocco. He expressed the support of his country for the peaceful initiatives leading to the easing of international tension and to the stopping of the arms race. The guest paid special attention to the problems in Africa and to the Middle East crisis.

[CTK report: "Zambian Guests Have Left; A joint Communique Adopted at the End of the UNIP Delegation's Stay in Czechoslovakia"]

[Excerpts] Prague (CTK) -- The delegation of the United National Independence Party (UNIP) of Zambia, headed by its General Secretary Aleksander Grey Zulu, which paid an official friendly visit to the CSSR at the invitation of the CPCZ Central Committee, left for home on Friday [11 July]. [passage omitted]

A joint communique was adopted at the end. It states:

A delegation of the UNIP of Zambia, headed by its General Secretary Alexander Grey Zulu, at the invitation of the CPCZ Central Committee paid an official friendly visit to Czechoslovakia on 6-11 July 1986.

In the course of the visit, Alexander Grey Zulu was received by Gustav Husak, CPCZ Central Committee general secretary and CSSR president. Bilateral interest in the future successful development of relations and mutual cooperation between the CPCZ and the UNIP was affirmed in the course of the reception, as well as the interest in continuing the endeavor aimed at developing Czechoslovak-Zambian relations in all fields.

The delegation laid a wreath at the Tomb of the Unknown Warrior at the Zizkov Hill, and with a bouquet of red flowers it paid respects to the memory of Klement Gottwald, a prominent representative of the CPCZ and of the international communist movement.

In the course of deliberations between Vasil Bilak, member of the Presidium and secretary of the CPCZ Central Committee, and Alexander Grey Zulu, UNIP general secretary, the two parties exchanged information about the activity and tasks of the CPCZ and the UNIP, and assessed the possibilities of the further development of cooperation between their parties. Issues connected with the possibility between the CSSR and the Republic of Zambia also were discussed.

In the course of the visit, Bohuslav Chnoupek, CSSR minister of foreign affairs, received Mavis Muyanda, state minister of foreign affairs of the Republic of Zambia, and member of the Zambian delegation; and Bohumil Urban, CSSR minister of foreign trade, received Daniel Lisulo, chairman of the Political and Legal Committee of the UNIP Central Committee.

During their talks, the two parties noted with satisfaction the accord or closeness of standpoints on the most important international political issues and as regards the assessment of the current international situation. They expressed profound alarm over the strained situation in the world. Both parties depicted the aggressive and militarist policy of imperialism, particularly American imperialism as the main cause of this state. Imperialism, and especially the U.S. military-industrial complex are escalating the feverish arms buildup. In an effort to gain military superiority they are developing new systems of nuclear and space weapons, fomenting hotbeds of tension in various parts of the world, interfering in the international affairs of sovereign states, deliberately provoking situations of crisis, and in order to destabilize the developing countries within the framework of their neocolonialist interests, they are imperilling international security.

The two parties condemned the policy of imperialist intervention and the policy of neoglobalism in various parts of the world. They favor a consistent construction of a comprehensive system of international security, including economic security.

The two parties also condemn a further escalation of the feverish arms buildup and express strong alarm over the U.S. steps to transfer it to outer space. They stress the necessity of immediately halting the arms race, especially in the sphere of nuclear weapons, and favor a total ban on and the scrapping of chemical and bacteriological weapons.

In this connection they voiced support for Soviet peace initiatives in the sphere of disarmament and to the peace proposals of the Warsaw Pact countries, which originated from the session of the Warsaw Pact's Political Consultative Committee in Budapest. The two parties noted the inadmissibility of terrorism as a method of resolving international problems and stressed the need to eliminate its causes. In this connection they condemned the acts of state terrorism by the United States vis-a-vis Libya, by Israel vis-a-vis the independent Middle East states, and in particular by the racist regime of the Republic of South Africa vis-a-vis the front states in southern Africa.

They sharply condemn the policy of racial discrimination and apartheid, and the unleashing of the unprecedented repression by the Pretoria regime against the majority of the population of the Republic of South Africa and Namibia. They agree that the racist regime could not excist and continue its unconcelaed contempt for the norms of international law, the UN charter, and the appropriate UN and the OAU resolutions, without the broad and all-round support of the United States, some other NATO members, and Israel. They are of the opinion that arpartheid cannot be reformed [modifikovan], but must be eliminated. The two sides expressed their unequivocal support for the legitimate demands of the nations of Namibia and the Republic of South Africa for freedom and independence, and called for a general imposition of the severest sanctions on the Pretoria regime. In this connection they condemned the U.S. and British so-called policy of constructive cooperation with the South Africa racists and their deliberate boycott of imposed sanctions.

In this connection, the two parties attach great importance to the upcoming eighth conference of the nonaligned countries on the highest level in Zimbabwe's Harare, which will, without doubt, contribute to the further consolidation of the unity of the nonaligned countries and will be an important support for the forces of progress and peace not only in southern Africa, but throughout the world. At the close of the visit, Alexander Grey Zulu expressed thanks for the reception and the hospitality accorded to him and his retinue in the course of his stay in the CSSR.

ROHLICEK, STROGANOV DISCUSS JOINT UNDERTAKINGS

[CTK Report: "Deepening Czechoslovak-Soviet Cooperation; On Principles for Setting Up Joint Ventures, Enterprises, and Collectives; Comrade R. Rohlicek Received Comrade S. Stroganov"]

[Text] Prague (CTK) -- In Prague on Wednesday [16 July], Rudolf Rohlicek, CSSR first deputy premier, received Genrikh Stroganov, deputy chairman of the USSR State Planning Committee, who had talks with Josef Voracek, first deputy chairman of the State Planning Commission, on drafts of agreements between the CSSR Government and the USSR Council of Ministers on the establishment of direct relations between production and scientific-technical organizations, and on the main principles for setting up joint ventures [sdruzeni], enterprises, and collectives.

Preliminary agreement has been reached on 74 proposals for the establishment of direct relations between Czechoslovak and Soviet production and scientific-technical organizations, and 17 proposals for setting up joint enterprises and institutions. Further 92 proposals pertaining to the establishment of direct relations are being defined.

The purpose of the intergovernmental agreements on direct relations and on setting up joint enterprises is to comprehensively deepen production cooperation and specialization in the spirit of the deliberations conducted by the highest CSSR and USSR representatives, Gustav Husak and Mikhail Gorbachev, and thus markedly contribute to the intensification of the national economy.

The reception was attended by Igor Cherkasov, USSR charge d'affairs ad interim to the CSSR.

DOMESTIC ENTERPRISE SHORTCOMINGS ANALYZED

LD191731 Bratislava Domestic Service in Slovak 1030 GMT 19 Jul 86

[Excerpts] Esteemed listeners, here is a domestic policy commentary for this week, which was prepared by Milan Blaha, our editor:

Last week the harvest was in the headlines. Some while ago we heard the latest news about its progress. The warehouses and silos are getting fuller and the question asked most frequently is what will this year's harvest be like? The fact is, that the grain crops and mainly the wheat crops, have been noticeably affected by protracted draught and so a big question mark hangs all the time over the grain harvest. Well, it is expected that it will be about 10 percent less than we planned and this year's plan calculated for 3.02 million metric tons of densely sowed cereals and with 880,000 metric tons of corn, which is altogether 3.9 million metric tons of grain crops. If there is less, then the task of reducing to a minimum the losses during the harvest becomes an urgent task for the farmers. According to the information from the Ministry of Agriculture and Food of the Slovak SR, the 2 to 2.5 percent norm of losses will not be exceeded. The combine harvester operators are not therefore aiming at cutting hectares, as was habitual in other years, but at the quantity of threshed grain. And this is the correct way, because this year's grain is of exceptional quality. [passage omitted]

In a word, quality is the main criterion for all field work. It is exactly the same criterion, which construction workers were reminded of last week on the occasion of their day by Minister Miklanek. He said: Increasing output and efficiency and shortening construction time are the most important tasks of the construction industry. Understandably; there is not a corner of the republic, where there is be no construction going on.

But these words are valid not just in a domestic sense, because a new task of particular significance is the construction of integrated projects in the Soviet Union -- the Progress, Krivoy Rog and Karachaganak projects. All of them have so far been struggling against the infantile diseases of growth and so the question arises yet again: Who was not ready? Construction collectives or the top level bosses? The answer will be given with further construction work, but one must nevertheless ask the question about quality. For instance even in connection with the results attained by the financial autonomy sphere in the first 6 months of the 8th 5-Year Plan. In all honesty, they did not sound very optimistic.

And so, the history of the unsuccessful first years of 5-year plan periods will evidently be continued. It seems as if our leading economic managers are not inventive enough in the economic field, as they increasingly rely upon eventual transfers of the tasks to the next periods, instead of relying upon their own abilities and enterprise. But the doors which made it possible for careless dirctors to be ranked among the best, despite violating contractual obligations, producing low quality goods, and utilizing resources badly, are slowly but surely closing. The world of limited resources is, after all, demanding quality. Every other alternative means wasting expensive raw materials, materials, power and human labor. True, it is not at all easy to produce goods of highest technological and economic parameters. On the contrary, it is an exceptionally complex process, which encompasses all occupations within an enterprise. In other words, the highest quality of a product is a reflection of the quality of all work. It represents its true picture. After all, compatibility with world parameters is not obtained by waving a magic wand, but by everyday toilsome quality work, which will grow into habit and the habit into tradition.

Only in the atmosphere of the highest demands upon the work of each individual and in the environment where everybody has to prove and defend the standard of one's own qualification on an everyday basis, is it possible to rely upon the contributions of the inexhaustible resources of social production, such as scientific and technological development, international socialist economic integration and creative activity of working people. These are the factors, which have the ability of reproducing themselves continuously on a higher qualitative level. To what extent we shall succeed in opening these wells of living water, has to be answered by everybody at their working place and everybody will have to judge one's own contribution towards increasing quality. Let us not forget: In the present conditions the knowledge of economic laws and the ability to use them is unavoidable. This is why the quality of managers and their talent to manage production in a responsible way in the conditions of scientific and technological revolution with the necessary economic effect is so important.

CTK COMMENTS ON LATEST U.S. NEVADA NUCLEAR TEST

LD182040 Prague CTK in English 1830 GMT 18 Jul 86

["CTK Comment on Latest U.S. Nuclear Test"; by Karel Filek]

[Text] Prague July 18 (CTK) -- The latest nuclear test conducted by the United States in the Nevada desert last night showed again that Ronald Reagan's administration is not willing to respond to appeals from the Soviet Union, the world public as well as the American people and join the moratorium unilaterally declared by the Soviet Union on last August 6.

The White House and the Pentagon say they must complete the planned series of nuclear tests irrespective of the fact that the Soviet Union has discontinued its tests and that it had conducted at least one-third fewer tests than the United States. Last night's blast weas the fourteenth since the Soviet moratorium came into force.

The Soviet Government has agreed with inspection on the spot and thus rid Washington of the last pretext for rejecting agreement. Soviet and American scientists have jointly installed seismic apparatuses near the Soviet nuclear testing site near Semiplaotinsk and similar devices are to be installed near the Nevada Desert before the end of this year. They can record the slightest tremor and their installation efficiently refutes White House arguments that a possible agreement on banning all nuclear weapons tests cannot be controlled.

The Soviet Union has several times confirmed its willingness to open talks on a total ban on nuclear weapons tests.

MEISSNER INTERVIEWED, DESCRIBES ALLEGED ABDUCTION

DW182111 East Berlin Television Service in German 1800 GMT 18 Jul 86

[Interview with Professor Dr Herbert Meissner by correspondent Dr Lutz Renner in the GDR Permanent Mission in Bonn 18 July -- recorded]

[Text] [Renner] Professor Meissner, in the past days you have experienced situations involving strong psychological stress. Therefore, I would like to ask you whether you are in a position to give the interview.

[Meissner] Yes, I am well and in a position to give it.

[Renner] Noboday forced you to do that?

[Meissner] Naturally not.

[Renner] Well, then let us review the beginning of the whole story. I cannot imagine that a man like you would commit larceny in a department store. Was that a trap, or what was it?

[Meissner] That obviously was a provocation. I was in West Berlin on a normal business trip, looked at a few goods at Wertheim's department store, wanted to buy something and had something in my hand to examine and choose it. Then somebody put his hand on my shoulder and said I was temporarily arrested. Two people took me to a separate room. Neither was a record made there nor was I asked about my personal data. There was a telephone call of just one sentence: The man can be picked up. A few minutes later two uniformed policeman took me to a police jail. There the real story began.

[Renner] How did it proceed?

[Meissner] It proceeded in the following way: I had to hand over all my personal possessions. I was totally stripped. I was accused of being engaged in intelligence activities. It was said this suspicion was now being investigated. There were a number of talks. I was reproached with clearly and evidently being a spy and similar things. Then I was transferred to the state police protection [polizeilicher staatsschutz] -- I suppose that is the official term. There additional interrogations took place.

[Renner] If I have understood you correctly, the alleged larceny in the department store was of no importance at all.

[Meissner] From then on, it was of no importance any more. It also did not play a role in initial press reports. The Berlin TAGESSPIEGEL on 10 July stated that a recheck with the department store's leading staff showed that they knew nothing about the incident. That clearly confirms that obviously those people were not staff members, and that clearly proves -- and I also realized it relatively quickly there -- that it was a provocation which is often applied by Western intelligence services to withdraw somebody temporarily from circulation or get totally hold of him. I know that from experience; as you know, I have for many years and very often visited other countries.

[Renner] You said that you were with the state police protection. What happened there?

[Meissner] At the state police protection, I was interrogated. My personal possessions were analyzed. There was again the charge of proved intelligence activities. I was reminded of the earlier business trips and other things. Threats were voiced, that it was clear that 8-10 or 12 years in prison would be the obvious result. A number of similar threats of that kind were voiced, with the most important thing being, however, that I was given drinks which obviously contained psychoactive drugs, because subsequently I was getting into a state of slight euphoria which can be described in the following way: You do not take anything seriously any more; everything seems to be quite harmless and funny; you are stepping outside yourself, as it were, are standing beside yourself, and are watching yourself like on a stage, while nevertheless you somehow remain mentally present and concentrated. It is a very odd state which I have never known before.

[Renner] If I am understanding you correctly, you had no alternative.

[Meissner] You can term it that way. In that situation I signed a statement which contains a statement that I would defect to the FRG, and which later on was presented to me several times, each time accompanied by the remark that now I would have no opportunity of going back to the GDR. It was very eloquently described to me what the GDR authorities would do to me if I were to go back to the GDR.

[Renner] What else happened?

[Meissner] Then 1the Federal Intelligence Service intervened. I was brought before a representative of the Federal Intelligence Service. Guarded by armed officials of the state police protection, I was taken to Berlin-Tegel Airport where in the evening I was placed in a plane for Munich. In Munich, two cars were waiting for me on the airfield, and I was taken to a town southwest of Munich, called Murnau, where I spent the following days always accompanied by two officers of the Federal Intelligence Service.

[Renner] Let me ask you at this point as well: Did you go voluntarily?

[Meissner] All that was done was against my will, and the whole affair happened against my will. Therefore, voluntariness is out of the question.

[Renner] If I have understood you correctly, that would mean that the facts constitute the offense of abduction.

[Meissner] They clearly constitute such an offense.

[Renner] What happened then?

[Meissner] Then I had a number of talks in Munich. I was interrogated, and I thought that I now had to utilize every opportunity to bring about a situation which would allow me to get away as quickly as possible and return to the GDR.

[Renner] Were you then also under the influence of drugs?

[Meissner] Not at that point. However, I was under extraordinary stress, because I did not sleep for almost 5 days. I was constantly considering whether I had any chance and what way I should choose.

[Renner] Did you sign any documents?

[Meissner] In Munich I signed a document which contains the demand not to establish contact with the GDR Permanent Mission. However, I did that under the aspect of bringing about a situation which would allow relaxing the watch. I utilized every opportunity to that end. I handled the talks and interrogations during the first 2 or 3 days in a way that I could politically answer for. Then I found the point where I could go to the Permanent Mission.

[Renner] The FRG press reported that you also got a new passport.

[Meissner] Yes, in Munich a passport was handed to me or forced on me -- as you like -- a FRG passport which was not made out in my name, however, but on the name of Martin Bauer, and which was dated back to 1985 and gave Hannover as place of issue. In other words, it clearly was a forged document. I accepted it without having the intention of ever making use of it. However, that also plays a role in the deal.

[Renner] How did you get to Bonn?

[Meissner] In Munich I used a medical examination -- I had mentioned my cardiac rhythm defect to get the necessary medicaments that I am used to -- to further relax the circumstances. I was given an apartment on Munich's Westkreuz, in the guest house called forum. On the first evening, on Monday, 14 July, the day we went to Munich in the morning, I was allowed to walk about the city, see people, be without the permanent guards, and get a little rest in that way. That also was recommended by that doctor, so as to restore my psychological stability and ease the pressure on my nerves. It certainly was also considered as an aspect allowing them to collaborate with me better in the future. I utilized that opportunity immediately for finding a way that would lead me to the Permanent Mission in Bonn. I ask you to understand that the details of that way cannot be disclosed for television. Anyway I called on the Permanent Mission, was immediately admitted as a GDR citizen, and have from that moment been perfectly taken care of, and I am very grateful for that.

[Renner] Then you had a statement conveyed to the Federal Chancellery, but were not ready to talk to FRG authorities. Why not?

[Meissner] You know, Mr Renner. First of all, I am a GDR citizen and I am not subject to the FRG law. I am ready at any time to give any information to my authorities. I am not ready to negotiate with the FRG authorities. Second, after what I have experienced in the last 5 days on the part of various FRG authorities, I have not been very eager to get into personal touch with those authorities again.

[Renner] Reviewing the entire process, how would you assess it?

[Meissner] As a clear political provocation which certainly had two aims. First, the problematic relations possibly were to be tested -- an attempt which is not entirely new. Second, the opportunity was to be utilized of dragging a high-ranking GDR representative to the other side, urging or blackmailing or forcing him to commit treason, and in this way profiting from it politically against the GDR. For 30 years I have been politically and scientifically active. I have been to many countries, and I know from my political experience that one has to assume such things.

[Renner] Why were you in West Berlin?

[Meissner] I planned to talk with a colleague. I have a number of colleagues in West Berlin. They also are known to the Federal authorities. I have occasional scientific contacts with them.

Those contacts, like many others that I have during travels, at conference, and other meetings, have always been aimed at furthering scientific cooperation, encouraging scientific developments, exchanging views and opinions -- in other words, everything that has been considered so important in the Helsinki Final Act. I have done that for many years, and not totally without success. That also was my task on that day.

[Renner] Professor Meissner, you are now in the GDR Permanent Mission in Bonn. Where do you see a solution to your problem?

[Meissner] Mr Renner, in my statement which was presented to the Federal Chancellery, I clearly requested my return to the GDR. I expressly restated that I am voluntarily staying in the building of our country's Permanent Mission, that I have been held and influenced in the Federal Republic against my will, and that I have no other wish but return to my home country. I am sure they need me there, and I want to spend the next 10 years and work and be diligent there rather than do something else or be somewhere elese. What matters is not only work. I also want to live with my family, be with my friends and comrades whom I would like to greet very cordially from here. There is no other solution for me but the return to the GDR.

[Renner] Thank you very much for the interview.

ATTEMPTED RECRUITMENT OF LAWYER BY FRG PROTESTED

LD181520 East Berlin ADN International Service in German 1335 GMT 18 Jul 86

[Text] Berlin, 18 Jul (ADN) -- A representation by the GDR Ministry of Foreign affairs to the FRG's Permanent Mission in the GDR capital protested on 3 July 1986 the blackmail methods by the FRG Secret Service (BND). BND employees attempted on several occasions to contact a GDR lawyer, Edgar Irmscher, during business trips to Berlin (West) both in the middle of the street and in writing, trying to force him, by means of false accusations of intelligence acitivity, to collaborate with the BND and thus betray the GDR. The GDR Ministry of Foreign Affairs emphatically demanded a halt to all secret service activities against the lawyer Irmscher since the unimpeded exercise of his activity lies not only in the interests of the CDR.

POSSIBILITIES FOR PROGRESS AT CSCE TALKS NOTED

LD182145 East Berlin Voice of GDR Domestic Service in German 1605 GMT 18 Jul 86

[Guenter Leuschner Commentary]

[Text] The 11th round of the Conference on Confidence-Building Measures and Security and Disarmanent in Europe ended in Stockholm today which was attended by all the 35 CSCE states. At the final session Oleg Grinevskiy, Soviet chief delegate, said that important progress had been made over the past few days. There will now be a 4-week summer recess. The final decision on a result of the conference will have to be taken during the final stage of negotiations in mid-August. Guenter Leuschner comments:

The majority of diplomats will benefit little from this recess; they will have to forego their holidays because work will continue in Stockholm for the greater part of these 4 weeks, informally as diplomatic language has it. The proposal for this came from France. It was supported at once by the Soviet Union, and because this occurred immediately after the talks between President Mitterrand and Mikhail Gorbachev in Moscow, the connection can be obvious.

France and the Soviet Union intend to make every effort to arrive at a solution to the still outstanding issues by the end of the conference on 19 September, in other words to achieve a result. If there is an opportunity for a change for the better in Europe, then there could be no better starting point than success at the Stockholm conference. One could hear repeatedly over the past few days, especially from French diplomats. The fact that even the recess is being used can well be interpreted as a willingness by the majority of the conference participants to aim seriously and intensively at such a success.

Once again it is no accident that optimistic sentiments are now gaining the upper hand in Stockholm; even the U.S. chief negotiator told journalists that he saw the outline of an agreement, even if some of the outlines were still wrapped in clouds. If hopes for success have become at least somewhat greater, then there are several reasons.

On the one hand, the editorial work is, after all, making some progress, even if still too slowly. Next, the flexibility of the socialist countries, their willingness to comprise, is having an effect; especially during the past few days there was renewed proof of it. We have agreed to postpone for the time being the inclusion of independent activities by the armed forces in confidence-building. Thus, the extent of the confidence-building measures is, admittedly, being reduced -- which does not correspond to our conceptions -- but the socialist countries have thus met requests by the NATO states. In other words, one obstacle has been removed. Finally, over the past few weeks there were for the first time indications that the West is prepared to compromise, which is yet another positive factor.

Yet, it is too early to talk of a breakthrough, on the one hand because there are still two or three difficult problems to be solved, and on the other hand, there are many who remember the end of the Bern CSCE meeting on human contacts. Then, only a few weeks ago, after numerous efforts, a substantial final document had come about: 34 countries assented, but the United States said no and blocked everything. It is perhaps difficult to imagine that a similar situation will present itself, especially because the Bern fiasco led to a whopping big row inside NATO. But, can it really be ruled out altogether? This will probably be known only at the very end of the Stockholm conference, namely on 19 September.

HONECKER MEETS HEAD OF GROUP OF SOVIET FORCES

LD191327 East Berlin ADN International Service in German 1247 GMT 19 Jul 86

[Text] Berlin, 19 Jul (ADN) -- Erich Honecker, SED Central Committee general secretary, GDR Council of State chairman and GDR National Defense Council chairman, received Army General Petr Lushev, Group of Soviet Forces in Germany (GSFG) commander in chief on Saturday, to mark the end of his service in the GSFG.

Erich Honecker praised Army General Lushev's successful work as GSFG head and his personal contribution to the further development and strengthening of the fraternal relations between the SED and CPSU, the GDR and the USSR, and their peoples and armies.

Army General Lushev was awarded the Scharnhorst Order in recognition of his services in the reliable military protection of socialism and peace.

Army General Lushev warmly thanked the GDR party and state leadership for the high award. He praised the great support which was consistently given to the GSFG and assured the SED Central Committee general secretary that the GSFG will, in close alliance with the GDR people and the National People's Army, fulfill its internationalist duty to protect peace and socialism at all times. Erich Honecker wished Army General Lushev much success in his new, responsible work.

There was an exchange of views during the meeting on current issues in the military-political situation and on the further deepening of fraternal relations between the GDR and the USSR and their armed forces.

The meeting, which took place in a cordial and fraternal atmosphere, was attended by Egon Krenz, member of the Politburo and secretary of the SED Central Committee, and Colonel General Fritz Streletz, GDR National Defense Council secretary.

Lieutenant General Nikolay Moiseyev, member of the Military Council and head of the Group's Political Directorate also was present.

KRENZ, PCP OFFICIAL DISCUSS DISARMAMENT POLICIES

[Text] The SED and the Portuguese Communist Party expect the United States to join the unilateral Soviet Moratorium on nuclear test. This was expressed today by the two parties' leading representatives, Egon Krenz and Jorge Araujo. The two politicians paid tribute to the disarmament initiatives of the Budapest meeting of the Warsaw Pact states and the USSR proposals to liberate the world from nuclear weapons. During their meeting [date, place not specified], Jorge Araujo praised the development of the German workers and peasants state. He spoke about his party's efforts at defending the achievements of the April revolution in Portugal.

HONECKER GREETS IRAQ'S HUSAYN ON NATIONAL DAY

AU191949 East Berlin NEUES DEUTSCHLAND in German 17 Jul 86 p 2

[Text] Berlin (ADN) -- Erich Honecker, SED Central Committee general secretary and GDR State Council chairman, has conveyed congratulations on the national day of the Republic of Iraq to Saddam Husayn, general secretary of the regional leadership of the Arab Socialist Ba'th Party, president of the Republic of Iraq, and chairman of the Revolution Command Council. The telegram stresses that in the present tense international situation it is more urgent than ever that all states undertake joint efforts to enter the path of nuclear disarmament and to guarantee for all countries peaceful conditions for their development.

Erich Honecker expresses his firm conviction that the tested friendly relations between the GDR and Iraq will further deepen to the benefit of both peoples and as a contribution to safeguarding world peace.

GLEMP COMMENTS ON POSSIBLE PAPAL VISIT TO POLAND

AU201325 Vienna ORF Teletext in German 1313 GMT 20 Jul 86

[Text] Sassari (Sardinia) -- In the words of the primate, Cardinal Glemp, Poland in the last few years was on the very verge of a civil war. In a press conference in Sardinia, Glemp said that the Polish party and state leader was, however, "a very intelligent and cultivated man, with whom one can speak." With regard to a possible third trip by Pope John Paul II to Poland, said Glemp, the Polish Government would not oppose such a visit.

LABOR MINISTER VISITS MOSCOW FOR BRIEFINGS

LD181932 Warsaw PAP in English 1716 GMT 18 Jul 86

[By PAP correspondent Jozef Rzeszut]

[Text] Moscow, July 18: Poland's minister of labour, wages and social affairs, Stanislaw Gebala visited the USSR with a group of experts on the invitation from the Soviet State Committee for Labour and Social Affairs. During his Soviet visit, Minister Gebala held talks with Soviet vice-chairman of the Council of Ministers, Yuriy Batalin, chairman of the State Committee for Labour and Social Affairs, Ivan Gladkiy, and called on the CPSU CC Economic Department, where he met with the first deputy of the department chairman, Vladimir Mozin.

During the talks, Minister Gebala was briefed by the Soviet representatives on the activities undertaken in the field of labour and social affairs after the CPSU 27th Congress, and presented the works of his ministry after the 10th PUWP Congress. The sides also agreed upon the field of cooperation between the labour and social affairs' ministries of both states. Minister Gebala also toured the Elektrosila and Bolshevichka industrial plants in Leningrad and met with representatives of city authorities. The detailed review of Soviet experience in the field of labour and social affairs will be used in the implementation of the targets set out for the ministry by the 10th PUWP Congress.

U.S. NUCLEAR TEST HIGHLIGHTS 'IMMENSE' DIFFERENCES

LD182047 Warsaw PAP in English 1815 GMT 18 Jul 86

["U.S. Nuclear Test Blast: More than Obvious Now"; by Andrzej Rayzacher]

[Text] Warsaw, July 18: By carrying out another underground nuclear test blast in Nevada yesterday, the U.S. questioned again the significant opportunity to agree on a total ban on those tests. It is more than obvious for the world now that the Reagan administration, whose boss announced in 1983 that the goal of his life was to make nuclear weapons "powerless and outdated," tries all means to build up and update its arsenal, and underground nuclear tests are necessary to this end. Even in the NATO states, increasingly more frequent are opinions that, as a result of the Soviet disarmament offensive, "the Soviets introduced certain dynamics to the process of limiting armaments," while the U.S. leading circles clearly lack a concept. Perhaps never before the differences in flexibility, inventiveness, mobility and consistence between Washington and Moscow were so immense as now.

JAILED SOLIDARITY LEADERS MAY NOT ACCEPT AMNESTY

AU201256 Paris AFP in English 1248 GMT 20 Jul 86

[Text] Warsaw, July 20 (AFP) -- Jailed Solidarity leaders may prefer to serve their full sentences rather than agree to abstain from opposition activities if freed under Poland's new clemency law, opposition sources said here Sunday. Bogdan Lis, 34, for instance, has told his mother that he would not sign any commitment which would make him abandon the struggle to restablish independent trade unions, she said after visiting him at the Barczewo prison in northern Poland. Mr. Lis was jailed for two years in June 1985. Former Solidarity leader and Nobel Peace Prize winner Lech Walesa has called the clemency law decreed by the Polish parliament Thursday [17 July] "pure propaganda".

The law -- officially called a special procedure concerning people having committed certain offenses -- was seemingly intended to free political prisoners, but also includes ordinary prisoners. The government acknowledges 189 political prisoners, while the opposition puts their number at 350. The law -- due to become effective on Tuesday [22 July], Poland's national holiday -- also opened the way for the Supreme Court to cancel prosecution procedures against "opinion offenders," by request of the general prosecutor in cases "especially justified."

The law stipulates that political offenders must commit themselves in writing "not to break the law" again and that any pardon would be cancelled if the person "willingly" commits the same type of offence before the end of 1987. General Prosecutor Jozef Zyta would not say whether signing the pledge was obligatory, however, saying that each case would be examined separately and that the government had shown good will and expected reciprocity.

The clemency law also applies to underground opposition militants who surface by the end of the year and give authorities details about their clandestine activities. Some 20,000 common offenders could also benefit from the clemency measures, Justice Minister Lech Domeracki has said, indicating that jailed mothers, women over 50 men over 60 would be especially considered. Official figures show 114,000 people are serving prison sentences in Poland.

MINISTER EXPLAINS ALCOHOLISM, DRUG ABUSE PROGRAMS

LD201414 Warsaw Domestic Service in Polish 1100 GMT 20 Jul 86

[Text] For a long time now, the matter of the struggle against social pathology and the methods for preventing it has been a focus of attention for the authorites and the mass media. The interview given by Minister of Health and Social Welfare Moroslaw Cybulko to Malgorzata Jarocka from the contemporary weekly ARGUMENTY is also devoted o this topic. The minister reminds readers that the Ministry of Health and Social Welfare actively participated in the formation of the laws relating to these problems -- the laws on upbringing in sobriety, on counteracting alcoholism, and on preventing drug addiction.

Despite the law, however, counteracting alcoholism is not yet effective. The actions up to now lack consistency. In some cases it is also necessary to strengthen repressive actions. Criminal activites and breaking of this law are tolerated too often, especially in work enterprises. The role and tasks of the health service are undoubtedly specific and irreplaceable. As I said, they rest on the removal of the health consequences of alcohol abuse. On the other hand, we cannot and should not take over the obligations of other services or institutions.

The anti-alcohol fund is allocated for the implementation of tasks in upbringing in sobriety and counteracting alcoholism. In 1985, the subsidy for the central anti-alcohol fund came to Z5.58 billion and in 1976 to 9 billion. Its resources are used by many ministries and social organizations. In our ministry, resources from this fund are allocated, above all, for the widening and better use of the counteraddiction medical service base: social welfare homes and drying-out clinics. In 1985, about z6 billion were allocated for these aims. The plan for 1986 comes to z4.5 billion. In the current year, 2,546 psychiatric and counteraddictive beds have been provided, as well as 10 counteraddiction advice centers and 2,374 beds in social welfare homes. Over and above this, resources from the fund are allocated for help to addicts and members of their families -- 580 million in 1985 and 800 billion in the current year -- and for medical research, personnel training, and health education.

Currently, it is estimated that about 200,000 people in Poland have contact with narcotic substances. These are the so-called threatened people. On the other hand, a specific state of illness -- so-called dependence, addiction -- is manifest in about 30-35,00 people. Narcotic substances are generally taken by people from 17 to 30 years old, but elementary school sudents are intoxicating themselves more and more often, using solvents, glues, and medicines. There are currently 13 specialist advice centers and 21 consultation points in the country, of which 11 are run by Monar [Voluntary Anti-Drug Abuse and Therapy Organization]. Over 100 specialized detoxification units have been separately allocated. There are 20 rehabilitation centers -- 12 run by Monar -- with about 500 beds.

The need for cooperation between the ministry, institutions, and social and youth organizations; bodies of the authorities; and state administration at different levels is obvious. It is demanded by the necessity for implementing appropriate and coherent social policy.

Commissions acting at the Council of Ministers, and appointed under the appropriate legislation, namely the Commission to Counteract Alcoholism and the Commission to Counter Drug Addition, fulfill coordinating and inspirational function.

Most important is the creation of conditions in the family, at school, in the work enterprise, and in the local milieux so that social attitudes and deviant behavior are not tolerated further by surrounding people and so that such practices cease to be worthwhile for particular people, stresses Minister Miroslaw Cybulko.

MOKRZYSZCZAK EVALUATES CURRENT PZPR STATUS

AU192000 Warsaw ZYCIE PARTII in Polish 2 Jul 86 pp 6, 7

[Interview with Wlodzimierz Mokrzyszczak, PZPR Politburo candidate member and Central Committee secretary, by Jozef Grabowicz and Alina Reutt: "The Party's Strength Comes in Action" -- date and place not given]

[Excerpts] [Passage omitted] [Grabowicz, Reutt] What is the present meaning of the increase in the party's political-organizational work and of the increased effectiveness of its activity?

[Mokrzyszczak] We know that nothing comes from nothing and that we must work for everything. That is why the fact that every objective person is now able to see the increase in the importance and role of the party is a result of the enormous work carried out by us in the past few years.

At the beginning of the eighties the party, which was in a way turned in on itself, was forced to take action in order to regain its ideological unity and the ability of effective activity. But now times are different and the priority of party tasks is different. The party must direct its energy toward work among people, the workers class, and nonparty persons, and must preserve the atmosphere of candor and critical observations that prevailed furing the precongress meetings and individual talks. It is necessary to give publicity to the view aired by people at meetings and behind the scenes at various conferences.

I wish to recall here the importance of the 20th plenum resolution on raising the effectiveness of the party's political and organizational activities and, especially, on improving the performance of the party's basic cells. One of the main tasks posed for party cells and organizations was to accelerate the rate of party work, to increase effective activity, to enlarge the number of aktivs, and to make qualitative progress in the daily activities of all party cells and organizations, especially those at the lowest levels. The congress campaign showed that this progress is being achieved in many cases. Many primary party organizations have gained in inner strength, have become militant, and have regained the trust of work forces and the real political position in plants and communities. The party is now more militant and more effective in its actions, and most party organizations continue to work in a consistent and planned manner. [passage omitted]

[Grabowicz, Reutt] The implementation of the party program calls for the militant participation of all PZPR members, but the fact is that there are still many kibitzers [kibice] in it, that some functionaries are fond of "militancy" in the form of meetings, and that many members indulge in propaganda slogans instead of really committing themselves to pary work. What is your view on all this?

[Mokrzyszczak] I know that there are in the party individuals on whom we cannot rely in various situations, who show no initiative, and who have just formal ties with the party and pay their dues. At meetings they officially back party policy, but behind the scenes they dissociate themselves from the resolutions they had voted for just a few moments before. Some individuals confess to their party membership only during working hours.

Such people should be reminded of the principle that one must take roots in the party and must stay with it for better and for worse. We must tigthen ideomoral requirements, especially in the case of the managing cadres, the attitudes of which have an impact on the attitudes of the rank-and-file. We all know that the authority of the ideas represented by the party has never weakened, but that the authority of the individuals who have distorted these ideas has always perished.

[Grabowski, Reutt] During the congress campaign some people pointed to certain weaknesses of party work, such as the inconsistent implementation of appointed goals. Which has more precision: the items of resolutions or the recommendations on how they should be implemented and controlled?

[Mokrzyszczak] People often ask us about the effectiveness of our resolutions and decisions; this means they are fond of the activities that are programmed in such a way as to not allow for any changes. But we cannot program life once and for all because life produces many surprises. That is why we must modify resolutions during their implementation. However, it is fact that our organization of work, our ways to achieve our targets, and the manner in which we assign tasks and deadlines in implementing our resolutions are not our strong points. The inflation of resolutions is one result of this. Every task, including every party task, must be planned and controlled effectively. It is effective daily organizational activity and not the number of various meetings that determines the results of party work

[Grabowski, Reutt] The party has been increasing as of July last year. What is the present state of the party and what are the trends in its quantitative development?

[Mokrzyszczak] The party now has fewer members, but it has gained in resilience and experience. It continues to gain new people -- mostly workers and young people -- who do not want to remain on the sidelines. The party must continue to gain in quality and numbers, but this must not be done in a haphazard way. We need consistent and painstaking work, primarily with nonparty workers and young people -- with everyone willing to work for the country in our ranks.

This year the party has gained 10,362 new comrades. As of the beginning of January 1986 36,673 persons were admitted as candidates. On 31 May of this year the party totaled 2,215,762 comrades, of whom 38.2 percent were workers, 9 percent peasants, and 52.5 percent intellectuals.

We want to improve the class competition of the party because the ratio of workers in the party is still not proportional to their ratio in the structure of our working population. I think that we have too few young people in the party, that the development of the party forces in individual social and occupational communities is unequal, and that there are too few party members in rural areas. All this show that we must stablize the party's numerical development, expand and strengthen the workers backbone, and ensure that, together with peasants, workers are the dominant force in the party.

The party has arrived at its congress stronger in experience and aware not only of the growing trust of the workers class, but also of its historic responsibility. The fact that all people trust the party places obligations on us, and we must be equal to them.

GENERAL OUTLINES FUTURE TASKS FOR GRADUATES

AU210805 Warsaw ZOLNIERZ WOLNOSCI in Polish 14 Jul 86 p 2

[Speech by Division General Tadeusz Szacilo, chief of the Main Political Administration of the Polish Armed Forces, at a graduation ceremony held at the "Feliks Dzierszynski" Military Political Academy on 12 July]

[Excerpt] [passage omitted] Comrade graduates! Today's graduation ceremony is an important event in both your personal and service lives. The masters diplomas in pedagogy, political science, and economics that you have just been awarded are a confirmation of your personal achievements and an expression of the political and professional maturity that you have attained. This also represents an achievement for the school.

Graduation opens a new period in your responsible work and service. When you come to undertake difficult work in military units remember that you not only represent yourselves but the school that has equipped you with the necessary qualifications and skills as well. It has provided you with a thorough knowledge of Marxism-Leninism and has armed you with a methology that will enable yuou to understand the laws of social development correctly and the mechanisms for identifying and cultivating people's awareness, convictions, and attitudes. You must continually deepen and extend this knowledge and be able to apply it in social and military life.

The main task facing you should be to make independent and creative use of the knowledge and skills that you have acquired during your studies and the rich theoretical and methodological results produced by the 10th PZPR Congress and the 27th CPSU Congress. Familiarizing yourselves with tasks and the implementation of the 10th Congress resolution in the Armed Forces will be the main element in your work during the period immediately following the completion of your studies.

Despite progress in the normalization of life in our country you will find yourselves working in a difficult and complicated situation. We cannot escape from economic and social difficulties. These difficulties are varied and have many different causes. All social forces must be mobilized to overcome them. We must also always remember that there are forces in whose interest it is that the process of overcoming the consequences of the crisis lasts as long as possible. In the battle for the consciousness of our society, and especially that of young people, the enemies of socialism will continue to employ deceit and slander and to remain silent about or distort facts and processes that they find uncomfortable. This is why in the name of truth and to render futile attempts to effect the moral disarmament of society, we must provide an accurate picture of Polish reality, and speak the truth about the undeniable achievements of the past years, but we must also speak about the weaknesses and dark moments in our recent history, the results of the erroneous policies that were pursued before August 1980 and of the total chaos that existed in our country between August 1980 and December 1981. We must always ask ourselves questions find answers to them: What have we just left behind us? How far along the historical path have we come? Which difficulties along this path have we overcome? Why was our development not balanced in all areas? What are the sources and causes of current difficulties? What needs to be done to strengthen what was healthy in our life and to eliminate what is incompatible with the essence of socialism?

Our difficulties are compounded by the unfavorable international situation. We are still exposed to the confrontational policy being pursued by the United States and the NATO members. They have made it their vocation to fight socialism, to destabilize the world situation, to arrest processes directed toward detente, to preserve and inflame sources of conflict and tension, and to interfere in the internal affairs of their states and nation. [paragraph continues]

Poland has been made a special target of their interest and attacks, of attempts at isolation in the international arena, and the subject of economic restrictions and propaganda aggression.

In contrast to imperialism's adventurist policy, principally the neoglobalist policy of the United States, the policy pursued by the Soviet Union and the other socialist states is one of peace.

ROMANIAN PROPOSALS AT STOCKHOLM, VIENNA ADVOCATED

AU181603 Bucharest AGERPRES in English 1502 GMT 18 Jul 86

["The Conclusion of Negotiations on Confidence-Building, Security and Disarmament -- A Major Target" -- AGERPRES headline]

[Text] Bucharest, AGERPRES 18/7/1986 -- The implementation of a general disarmement programme, centered on nuclear disarmament and including measures to cut back on conventional weapons, as well as other steps conducive to the achievement of disarmament, calls for the recovery of existing negotiating forums and their most efficient employment, and, more particularly, for the success of the Stockholm Confernce on Confidence- and Security-Building Measures Disarmament in Europe and of the Vienna talks so that a corresponding agreement on the reduction of arms and troops in central Europe may be reached as soon as possible, reads a commentary in the July 18 issue of newspaper SCINTEIA. The two negotiating bodies can make an important contribution to building up confidence on the European Continent, to the cause of disarmament and peace in Europe and in the world, the aforesaid newspaper shows underscoring that the agenda of the Stockholm conference includes numerous proposals advanced by the USSR, the USA and other Western countries, by neutral and non-aligned countries, and, respectively, by Romania.

Romania, one of the conference sponsors, has taken active part in its proceedings and has made intense efforts to bring stances nearer to one another and find mutually acceptable solutions also to essential problems whose resolution is a matter of concern for all the states in the continent. Great interest was shown in the document "Romania's Stance, President Nicolae Ceausescu's Outlook and Considerations on Confidence- and Security-Building Measures and Disarmament in Europe", which was set forth during the conference and was highly appreciated owing to the realistic and constructive character of the proposals it contains. Noteworthy among the steps it envisages are: the renunciation of multinational manoeuvres along interstate frontiers; the creation of a 50-100 km zone along interstate borders tiers where manoeuvres, displacements or concentrations of armed forces and weapons should not occur, where large units belonging to them should not be put under a state of alert, where armed forces, weapons and military activities should be limited, as a step forward towards the establishment of demilitarized zones, the establishment of a corridor free of nuclear weapons and of other arms of mass destruction, eventually of all weapons and military forces, with the exception of order and border forces, along the frontiers between the NATO countries and the countries participating in the Warsaw Treaty; the limitation of the armed forces taking part in military manoeuvres; compuslory prior notification of wide-scope manoeuvres and military movements carried out by ground, air and naval forces; compulsory notification of a state of alert on national or foreign armed forces in the territory of states or on important units belonging to them; the establishment of a system of mutual information exchange and systematic consultations on the security of the European states and continent, of preventing and settling crisis situations; agreement on measures to prevent the outbreak of a nuclear conflict by mistake or accident; the conclusion of an all-European treaty on the non-recourse to the use and threat of force to contain provisions and measures apt to render the observance of the security, territorial integrity and national independence and sovereignty of each particpating state effective; non-deployment of new troops and military bases on the territory of other states in Europe and the halting of the development and updationg of the existing ones; freezing of the military spending of the participating states until an accord is reached on their reduction; encouragment of and support granted to the efforts aimed at the creation of zones of peaceful collaboration and good neighbourliness, free of nuclear weapons in various parts of Europe -- in the Balkans, in the northern part of the continent, a.o.; a ban on war-like propaganda and the encouragement, through mass media, of mutual interestate confidence, the ensurance of the peoples' right to peace, life and independence.

Taking account of the fact that the first phase of the conference will conclude soon, that on the basis of an assessment of its results the new all-European conference due in Vienna on November 4 will extend its mandate to the negotiation and adoption of effective disarmament measures, Romania considers that at present additional efforts are needed so that an early accord on confidence and security-building measures may be reached. The pieces of news from the latest round of negotiations in Stockholm are promising. What matters now is that all the states should prove a sense of compromise and the necessary political will so that, on the basis of existing proposals, negotiations may end and an general accord reached providing for confidence- and security-building, for the strengthening of collaboration in our continent.

Romania's president has repeatedly shown that an accord could be reached at the Vienna talks on the reduction of armed forces and weapons and adjacent measures in central Europe as early as this year.

Romania has made known its position in principle according to which the starting point should be an overall outlook, the elaboration and implementation of a complex, phased programme of measures of military disengagement and disarmament both on the continent and in its various areas, in central Europe included, and, subsequently, advanced such a prospective programme to the forum in Vienna.

Realities show that the 39 rounds of negotiations in Austria's capital city did not succeed in arriving at an agreement although throughout the interval, and this year too, the participating states advanced palpable proposals and drafts. Undoubtedly, the goal of the Vienna talks is limited and it cannot put an end to arms race on the continent. However, the conclusion of an accord -- even if partial -- on the reduction of troops and armament in central Europe would go down as an improtant political act, as an effective contribution to confidence-building among the states in this geographic area and, in general, in Europe, liable to pave the road to negotiations on a radical, serious cut in weapons and military forces in the continent as a whole. That is why Romania considers that further efforts are needed so that an accord may be reached in Vienna as early as this year. Existing proposals make a fine foundation. What is needed now is political will to conclude an appropriate understanding.

According to the outlook, of Romania, of president Nicolae Ceausescu, palpable results in the aforesaid bodies in Stockholm and Vienna, as well as in other forums negotiating disarmament-related questions, as well as steps, even if small, might exert a positive influence on the international political climate and contribute to lessening interstate tension, all while encouraging the security-building process on our continent, the achievement of disarmament in Europe and in the world.

[Text] To Mr Saddam Husayn, president of the Republic of Iraq, Baghdad:

On the national day of the Republic of Iraq, I take special pleasure in extending, on behalf of the Romanian people and myself, warm congratulations and best wishes for good health and personal happiness, as well as wishes for progress and prosperity to the friendly Iraqi people. I also want to express the conviction that relations of friendship and cooperation between our countries will continue to develop in the interest of the Romanian and Iraqi peoples and the cause of peace and understanding in the world.

REVIEW OF INDUSTRIAL, AGRICULTURAL ACHIEVEMENTS

AU191628 Bucharest AGERPRES in English 1511 GMT 19 Jul 86

[Text] Bucharest AGERPRES 19/7/1986 -- After twenty one years since the Bucharest opening of the Ninth Congress of the RCP, Romania is up with remarkable list of achievements in its economic and social development along the path opened by the historic forum of July 1960. The fact that over the last four five-year periods (1966-1985) the rate of accumulation has grown gradually up to approximately one third of the national income, from 17.1 percent over the 1956-1960 period, this leading to a considerable rise in the potential of the Romanian economy. Had the accumulation rate established for the periods prior to the Ninth RCP Congress been maintained, the current level of development of the economy would have been reached only after the year 2000. The industrial production went up over six times and the agricultural one more than twice. Through the development and powerful modernization of all the economic branches the national income is up 3.8 times, over 3.4 million new jobs have been created in all the sectors and counties in the country; more than 250 industrial platforms have been erected, each country becoming a powerful industrial centre.

The years since the Ninth Congress of the RCP have been the richest in investments in Romania's history. The might of the Romanian industry and technology has been proved by the construction of the Danube-Black Sea Canal, of the Trans-Fagarasan road, of the Bucharest subway, of the great machine-building, metallurgical, chemical and petrochemical combines.

Stress was laid in the development of industry on the modern and highly-technological branches and subbranches - machine building, electrotechnological, electronics, fine machiners, optics, chemistry and petrochemistry -- whose growth rates have constantly been higher than those recorded by industry as a whole. Currently the Romanian industry is apt to meet ninety percent of the needs of the national economy in point of machinery, tools, installations and equipment and creates over sixty percent of the national income, up from 48.9 percent in 1965. The machine-building and chemical industries alone turn out thirty nine percent of the country's current industrial production. Late in 1985 Romania's fixed assets amounted to some 2,780 billion lei, of which more than ninety percent have been created after the Ninth Congress of the RCP.

There has been considered the place of agriculture in the structure of Romania's economy.

Benefitting by a considerable amount of investments -- in excess of four hundred billion lei over these 21 years - the productive force of agriculture has grown: among other things in 1985 there were turned out over twenty million tons of cereals (up from 12.6 million tons in 1965. Its present technical and material base is strong, the irrigated area extends on nearly three million hectares (up from the 1965 area of 230,000 hectares), the amount of chemical fertilizers delivered to agriculture this year is eight times higher than in 1965 the hydrotechnical operations cover nearly eight million hectares, that is some twenty one times more than two decades ago.

The Romanian economy is now a balanced national complex properly structured by branches and subbranches of production, with more mobile links between the production and sale of goods, with a more reationally-defined social division of labour and with wide international prospects, integrating itself in a more competitive and economically efficient way in the world division of labour and in the relations of trade and cooperation with other states.

At present Romania is a trade partner supplying to the foreign markets highly-processed products that hold sixty one percent of all its exports up from 36.2 in 1965.

IMPROVEMENT IN 'QUALITY OF LIFE' REVIEWED

AU191337 Bucharest AGERPRES in English 1132 GMT 19 Jul 86

[Text] Bucharest, AGERPRES 19/7/1986 -- Wide-scope programmes of improving the quality of life have been implemented in the over two decades since the Ninth RCP Congress. Everywhere in the country's counties economic and social development has resulted in new jobs. The number of working people grew to 7.7 million in 1985 from 4.3 in 1965.

Over this period the working people have benefited from successive remuneration rises. Consequently at present average remuneration is almost three times as big as in 1965. A large share of the incomes resuling from the people's work is used to meet the social and cultural needs of all the members of society (free of charge or at low rates). Whereas in 1965 the state allotted 20.9 thousand million lei for social-cultural expenses, last year these funds stood at 107.6 thousand million lei, which means that they increased from 1,100 (rpt 1,100) lei to 4,73t (rpt 4,736) lei per inhabitant on an average.

While the 46-hour work week started being effective in the last five-year period, a passage is to be made -- in close relation with productivity growth -- to a shorter work week -- 44-to-42 hours. There is a large network of spas in the country's most picturesque zones. Annual more than eleven million working people as to 5.9 million people in 1965 benefit from it. New districts and towns have been built, rural settlements are being modernized. The 2.3 million flats built since 1965 represent six times those building during the previous two decades.

Ever larger funds have been earmarked for education, health care, mother and child, social security and old age pensions, expansion and diversification of public services, consumer goods sales, cultural, artistic and sport activities, etc.

SUNDIC ON REPORTED REAGAN MESSAGE TO GORBACHEV

LD191506 Zagreb Domestic Service in Serbo-Croatian 1300 GMT 19 Jul 86

[Milika Sundic commentary]

[Text] The well-informed NEW YORK TIMES claims in a commentary that President Reagan has prepared a message for Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev in which he expounds a plan for the parallel reduction of strategic arms and nuclear tests by the two superpowers. The claim, by the leading U.S. paper, has not yet been confirmed or denied. However, it is known that Reagan owes Mikhail Gorbachev a reply to his initiatives relating to the reduction and limitation of strategic nuclear weapons and a halt to nuclear tests, and the said claim by THE NEW YORK TIMES could therefore be correct. On the other hand, the time is drawing increasingly closer for arranging a meeting between Reagan and Gorbachev, but this as everyone knows, depends above all on whether the two superpowers succeed in harmonizing at least to some extent their stands on contenious issues, in particular on the problem of disarmament.

For the time being, however, there are no hints in this direction because the stands of the two sides on the problem of disarmament remain unchanged. This is confirmed by Reagan's latest statement to a group of student leaders, in which the U.S. President claims that his "star wars" program will aid the speeding up of talks on arms control with the USSR because it will, supposedly, oblige Moscow to recognize that the constant buildup of its arsenal of nuclear weapons will not give it an advantage in the relevant military armaments for long.

This statement of Reagan's will give no encouragement to Moscow, for it has long been known what the USSR thinks of "star wars." Mikhail Gorbachev wants to meet the President Reagan but only on condition that this meeting yields appropriate results in the sphere of disarmament. We have confirmation of this also in the statement by Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Loginov to Radio Yugoslavia 2 days ago, in which he said that there will be no meeting between Reagan and Gorbachev if no progress is achieved at the talks in Geneva on the reduction and limitation of nuclear missiles and the demilitarization of space. A similar statement was also made by Eduard Shevardnadze at a press conference in London, when he said that the ball is in the U.S. court, meaning clearly that it depends on how the United States behaves with regard to the latest proposals of Mikhail Gorbachev. In other words, the way to a fresh summit between Reagan and Gorbachev is via Geneva, where the two superpowers are negotiating on the reduction of nuclear arms and the demilitarization of space.

The Geneva talks should also produce an answer to the question of the fate of the SALT II agreement which is the United States wants to abandon on the grounds that the USSR has long since ceased to adhere to it. If, however, it transpires that the claims of THE NEW YORK TIMES on the content of the message which Reagan is preparing for Mikhail Gorbachev are correct, this could be a way out of the present blind alley. In this case, it would be possible to talk with greater confidence both about progress at the Geneva negotiations on disarmament and about the arranging of a date for the Reagan-Gorbachev meeting at the end of this or the beginning of next year. Any other path would lead to further Soviet-U.S. confrontation.

HASANI-INTERVIEW ON NONALIGNED ANNIVERSARY

LD181022 Belgrade TANJUG Domestic Service in Serbo-Croatian 1044 GMT 17 Jul 86

["Excerpts From Sinan Hasani's Interview Granted to OSLOBODJENJE on 25th Anniversary of Belgrade Conference of Nonaligned" -- TANJUG headline]

[Text] Belgrade, 17 Jul (TANJUG) -- Over the last 25 years, that is, since the Belgrade conference that marked the birth of the Nonaligned Movement, the meaning and importance of the policy that operates outside the blocs have been fully asserted. Through their principles and goals, their original analysis of the developments in the international situation and, above all, their alternative ideas about proposals for the ways to overcome the key problems of the present day world, the policy and movement of nonalignment have gained recognition as a comprehensive doctrine in world relations that can provide answers to the most complex issues of the present day and the future development of the international community on the basis of the democratization in political and economic relations in the world, Sinan Hasani, president of the SFRY Presidency, says in his interview to OSLOBODJENJE of Sarajevo.

Without the movement and policy of nonalignment, Hasani stresses, the world would inevitably have experienced deeper confronations. Even at the first conference an action was launched to halt the arms race. It has become clear today, as this problem continues to pose the greatest danger to the survival of mankind, how farsighted and meaningful that initiative was.

Nothing that the nonaligned have confronted the international community with a whole series of vital issues, including such an important one as the need for establishing a new international economic system, as one of the basic prerequisities for the stability in the world and a more secure future for all countries, Sinan Hasani goes on to say that the policy of nonalignment has confirmed itself as having real and lasting values, while the movement as a whole gained recognition as a nonbloc, independent, global and indispensable factor in international relations.

By their efforts to realize their goals, the movement and policy of nonalignment have given shape to an entire historical phase and become a necessity in the modern world, Hasani stresses.

He adds, however, that in view of everything the movement wanted to achieve in world relations from its very outset, it must be said that nothing has yet been completed. We still have no stable peace or global security in the world and there is no full equality in either political or economic relations in the world. The world continues to live, burdened by very serious troublespots.

Still, we can rightly say that all major issues of interest for the future and the development of mankind have been raised practically as a result of the activity of nonaligned countries. Hasani said, however, that deep differences in views about and conflicting interests regarding how to solve these problems do exist. Radical changes in international political and economic relations are needed but that is a long-term process which, understandably, is being met with strong resistance on the part of those who occupy dominant positions, either politically, economically, or militarily.

Hasani singled out the forestalling of any further divisions of the world into mutually antagonistic military and political blocs as one of the greatest achievements of the Nonaligned Movement:

The blocs and bloc divisions are the reality of this world which, it is clear, will continue for some time. Precisely for this reason and because, objectively speaking, it calls for active and peaceful coexistence, for wide-ranging equal cooperation and for the democratization in all the areas of international life must have had a palliative effect on bloc divisions and their negative consequences, the policy of nonalignment will become an increasingly indispensable factor. It is all the more important therefore for the movement to be united in its actions, to base its activity on the original principles of its policy and to use the United Nations as much as possible as the largest world forum which should operate increasingly on the basis of the well-known principles.

We, in Europe, where the bloc divisions are the sharpest, must invest constant efforts at preserving and promoting the process of such vital importance as the CSCE, Hasani stressed.

In reply to a question about various pressures, above all those from the blocs, on the nonaligned, Hasani said that the most efficient way to oppose these pressures was through constant strengthening and unity within the movement and through coordinated work on the issues of common interest.

For this reason, as Hasani puts it, any conflict between the nonaligned countries hampers the movement's actions and work. The causes behind the conflicts usually reflect the circumstances in which these countries has been developing, but the role of foreign factors, bloc and other pressures and rivalries should not be neglected.

Although the movement is doing its utmost to see these situations resolved peacefully, it still has to do even more. It should offer it services to those countries but without any interference or arbitrary decisions. Yugoslavia favors the introduction of some sort of codex that would prevent conflicts among, and contribute to, resolving problems between the nonaligned countries through peaceful means. We shall continue to advocate this. It would please us if the eighth summit in Harare were to make a further step in this direction.

Emphasizing the great influence the movement and the policy of nonalignment are having on UN activity and its role in international relations, Hasani said that the Nonaligned Movement has made a significant contribution to the democratization and development of the world organization.

The United Nations also, however, relects the realities of the contemporary world. Some of the great powers have recently been exerting strong pressures on the United Nations in order to subordinate the organization to their own interests. Attempts are being made to change the role and democratic character of the United Nations. The nonaligned countries are determined in their opposition to such tendencies and the summit in Harare will pay great attention to the issue of consolidating the role and influence of the United Nations. Of course, the nonaligned countries realize that only through concerted efforts on the part of the entire international community can the United Nations eliminate the shortcomings that hamper its work and thus become an even more efficient instrument of the struggle for preserving peace and enhancing international cooperation.

Peace and security in the world are being constantly jeopardized, Hasani says. To a large extent this is caused by the state of relations between the great powers and blocs, which are now often contradictory. The prospects for the further development of the international situation are therefore extremely uncertain and not very favorable because not one of its main features has changed. The expectations to the effect that the resumption of the dialogue between the superpowers would lead to a large-scale relaxation of tension are not being realized. On the contrary, the arms race is being given fresh stimuli through the manufacturing of new weapons and by the possible abandonement of the existing agreements.

Over the last 25 years, since the first conference in Belgrade, the movement has put forward a number of initiatives and proposals that, I am convinced, have led to some of the agreements reached since then and have been related to ways to slow the arms race. The struggle for a stable and lasting peace and security cannot, however, be conducted or won by the nonaligned countries alone, Hasani stressed.

He added that it is important for the international situation to stabilize because the development of nonaligned and developing countries is linked to, and depends on, reducing the expenditure on arms. This is having a twofold effect on the developing and nonaligned countries, Hasani says: First, the developed countries' investment in the development of developing countries, which is, realistically speaking, in the interest of both, is negligable, while both the nonaligned and the developing countries, due to constant threats to their security, are forced to allocate an increasing part of their national income for defense purposes. This, of course, is a heavy burden on the already meager development funds.

Even a minimal reduction in the arms expenditures by developed countries, or rather an increase in investments in the economies of the developing countries, would have an enormous effect, Hasani added. The specific proposals and initiatives of the nonaligned countries in the sphere of disarmament are aimed not only at reducing the dangers to peace and security, but also to creating conditions for these funds to be used for development and for the developing countries to free themselves from purchasing and producing weapons.

The nonaligned countries are also the main advocates of action for an international conference on disarmament and development, the holding of which has been postponed because of resistance on the part of some developed countries. The main thing is for the main proponents of the arms race to accept that it is essential to see the end of the arms race and the problems of development as interrelated. Such a realization is gradually developing, particularly in the smaller member countries of the blocs, which are becoming increasingly aware of the absurdity of continuing the arms race and of the danger of an even greater division of the world.

Replying to a question on the reform of economic relations in the world, Hasani said that the nonaligned and other developing countries have not without reason stressed the demand for essential change in the existing international economic order and the establisment of a new one based on the principles of the sovereign equality of all states and broad international cooperation.

The Nonaligned Movement and the Group of 77 developing countries act on the conviction that a new international economic order is historically inevitable, but there is still no real readiness on the part of the developed countries to renounce their privileged poosition. On the contrary, their resistance is increasingly pronounced and that is why the struggle for change in the present relations will be hard and painstaking.

CONCERN SEEN OVER BORDER CROSSINGS BY TERRORISTS

AU201557 Belgrade Domestic Service in Serbo-Croatian 0800 GMT 20 Jul 86

[Nebojsa Jankovic commentary from the "Sunday at 10" program]

[Excerpts] [Passage omitted] One should not forget that Europe has become a battlefield for the operations of middle eastern and other terrorist groups which are, according to some information, trying and partially succeeding in connecting themselves with Euro-terrorists. As a geographical and political crossroads between the west and east and north and south, our country also faces the phenomenon of international terrorism from time to time despite our enviable level of internal security. How can we contribute toward the struggle against this evil and at the same time not betray some of our principles?

[Begin Jankovic recording] I would like to mention two principles Yugoslavia should not betray at any price because they are written in our country's Constitution. The first one relates to the openness of Yugoslav borders and the second to the obligation of helping just liberation struggle movements. However, it is clear that our borders cannot be open to everybody, as it is obvious that there is a great gap between terrorists and those who are operating in occupied territories or occupied countries. Therefore, irrespective of motives, Yugoslavia cannot allow and, if possible, must try to prevent its territory from becoming a transit route for the movement of terrorists. All those who want to misuse the openness of Yugoslav borders for terrorist purposes in Europe are not the friends of this country and, I think, there should not and must not be any misunderstanding about it.

MIKULIC DISCUSSES HOSTING OF OLYMPICS WITH IOC

LD182127 Belgrade TANJUG Domestic Service in Serbo-Croatian 1717 GMT 18 Jul 86

[Text] Belgrade, 18 Jul (TANJUG) -- Branko Mikulic, president of the FEC, received Pedor Ramirez Vazquez of Mexico and Turgut Atakol of Turkey, members of the International Olympic Committee [IOC] this morning. The guests expressed their high opinion about Belgrade's capacity for organizing the 1992 Summer Olympics. Branko Mikulic drew attention to the support that the candidature of Belgrade received throughout the country. The decision on which country will organize the 1992 Olympic Games will be made by 90 members of the IOC at a meeting in Lausanne on 17 October by secret vote.

ZAIRIAN FOREIGN MINISTER ENDS VISIT, DEPARTS

LD191434 Belgrade TANJUG in English 1256 GMT 19 Jul 86

["Pool" item]

[Text] Belgrade, July 19 (TANJUG) -- Zairian Foreign Minister Mandungu Bula Nyati left here for Paris today, after an official and friendly visit to Yugoslavia at the invitation of Foreign Secretary Raif Dizdarevic. In their talks during the visit, the two foreign ministers discussed preparations for the eighth nonaligned summit in Harare, international topics and Yugoslav-Zairian relations.

Dizdarevic and Nyati expressed confidence that the forthcoming nonaligned summit will contribute towards strengthening the unity of the movement and its capacity of action for dealing with major international issues. They stressed the importance of cooperation among the developing and nonaligned countries, above all in scientific-technological development and the settlement of the problem of debts.

The Yugoslav and Zairian foreign ministers paid special attention to the focuses of crisis, such as southern Africa, the Middle East, the Iraq-Iran war, Central America, Afghanistan and Kampuchea.

They noted the considerable opportunities existing for an expansion of Yugoslav-Zairian economic cooperation, above all in the fields of agriculture, electric power, processing, and mining industries.

During the visit Mandungu Bula Nyati was received by President of the State Presidency Sinan Hasani and Prime Minister Branko Mikulic.

Yugoslavia is the first nonaligned country visited by Nyati after becoming Zairian foreign minister.

FRANCE DESIRES FURTHER DEVELOPMENT OF RELATIONS

LD181931 Belgrade TANJUG Domestic Service in Serbo-Croatian 1532 GMT 18 Jul 86

[Text] Belgrade, 18 Jul (TANJUG) -- Branko Mikulic, president of the FEC, today received Charles Pasqua, the French minister of the interior, who is on an official and friendly visit to Yugoslavia. Charles Pasqua handed to Branko Mikulic a message and greetings from the French Prime Minister Jacques Chirac.

The message states the readiness and interest of the new French Government to expand and further develop the traditionally good relations and cooperation between Yugoslavia and France.

Branko Mikulic expressed thanks for the message and returned his greetings to the French prime minister. He observed that Yugoslav-French relations are developing in all fields but that there is great scope for their expansion, especially in economic, scientific and technical cooperation.

In the talks in which Dobroslav Culafic, federal secretary for internal affairs, also took part, other questions of bilateral relations and broader international cooperation were considered. It was stressed that joint action of the developing and developed countries is essential in order to give a fresh impetus to solving the major economic problems with which the vast majority of mankind is confronted. Yugoslavia and France could play an important role in this.

Minister Ends Visit

LD190354 Belgrade TANJUG in English 1634 GMT 18 Jul 86

[Text] Belgrade, July 18 (TANJUG) -- Yugoslav Secretary of the Interior Dobroslav Culafic and French Interior Minister Charles Pasqua discussed here today ways to ensure a more comprehensive legal and social security of Yugoslav workers temporarily employed in France, and ways to fight concrete forms of crime encountered by Yugoslav and French internal affairs departments.

Culafic and Pasqua agreed on concrete forms of cooperation between the Yugoslav and French interior departments, especially in fighting international terrorism, terrorist activities and hostile activities of anti-Yugoslav emigres, drug trafficking and other forms of organized international crime. Charles Pasque ended his visit to Yugoslavia today.

MAMULA SPEAKS TO LCY CONGRESS COMMISSION

AU180921 Belgrade NARODNA ARMIJA (supplement) in Serbo-Croatian No. 2451 3 Jul 86 pp 5-8

[Text] The first speaker on the second day of the work of the Commission for All-People's Defense and Social Self-Protection [of the 13th LCY Congress on 26 June] was Fleet Admiral Branko Mamula, member of the LCY Central Committee and federal secretary for national defense. Referring to some current problems of our defense and not entering into detailed explanations provided in the text filled with the materials of this congress commission, Admiral Mamula said: Among the most important problems of the contemporary world, the question of peace and war occupies a place. The importance of this problem has become exceptional for the fate of mankind, and especially for the fate of small, independent, and nonaligned countries. In fact these countries, with all the difficulties which they face in their own development, have no greater or more complicated problem than how to preserve their independence and to ensure integral security. The crisis in international relations has become a permanent situation, although its intensity varies, and the question of peace and war is posed for realistic politicians and soldiers as a question of relations between crisis and war. Speaking about crisis as the realistic state of affairs in the international community, one must bear in mind the fact that on a world scale, crisis appears in three aspects, to wit: as a structural crisis of capitalism, which must be regarded as a long-term historical process; as a crisis of socialism, or better as a chain crisis of certain models of socialist societies, which is a consequence of the pronouncedly uneven development of socialism as a world process; and finally as a multifaceted and multilayered crisis embracing the developing countries. Economic underdevelopment, lack of capital, the lack of development of science and technological skills, and a shortage of skilled cadres, and of everything that is necessary for an accelerated development with which the consequences of the age-long lagging of the recent colonies would at least to some extent be mitigated, are factors which limit a complete emancipation of the newly liberated countries and peoples.

In addition to intensive psychological-propaganda activities directed toward influencing the consciousness of people, especially the young generation, and changing their position and attitude toward the existing system of social values the economic power of highly developed countries is used as a means of achieving imperialist and hegemonistic aims in global and regional proportions. Economic, financial, and technological power increasingly assumes the nature of personal military might and determines other aspects and forms of social power. They developed countries not only are not ready to make certain concessions to the less developed countries through technology transfers, but transform science, technical equipment, and technology to a strategic means of subjugating them.

From the struggle for world peace and security point of view, bloc formations as the sysmetric concentration of the military powers' capabilities manifest themselves as the strongest generators of crises and the constant threat to peace, whether the peace is endangered directly or indirectly.

The military factor as a whole has become an essential part of both home and foreign policies so that military policy is taking more and more of their space and exerts more and more influence. In addition, the symbiosis of military power and economic might is becoming increasingly expressed. The phenomenon of a military-industrial complex is the result of the collusion of complementary interests and the personal linking of the military system and the management bureaucracy of production corporations in some of the most developed countries. This provides both sides with extra power in influence politics in general, and the making of political decisions which directly concern peace and war in particular.

The Stocks of More Modern Kinds of Arms

There is no doubt that the specific interests of the military-industrial complex exert a lot of influence on the speeding up of and the widening of the area of the arms race, which has already been extended into the space. From the security point of view, of particular concern is the continuous increase in the stocks of the newer kinds of arms in Europe, particularly in its southern wing. Continuous work has been conducted on the development of all kinds of arms and corresponding strategic concepts which to a great extent makes defense more complicated in general, particularly the defense of small independent countries. This in particular applies to those countries that are in the regions traditionally burdened by chronic crises and wars. I have in mind, above all, the Middle East, the Mediterranean, North Africa, southern Africa and that part called the Horn of Africa. Under certain circumstances the crises from these parts could very quickly spread to other developing countries. This is a qualitatively new strategic situation in relation to that existing prior to the mid 60's when the state of relations on the territory of Eurasia was dominant and fairly simple. All other areas -- all three oceans, Africa south of the Sahara, North and South America, Australia, and Antarctica -- were in the background, in the so-called geostrategic shadow. With the increased role of the naval component within the global strategy of the other superpower, the zones of conflicts are expanding while "strategic shadows" are disappearing, the territory of Europe, in which the most numberous and most modern forces and arms of both blocs have been installed, as well as the corresponding military structures, has not lost its earlier strategic importance in the new conditions, particularly the center and the southern wing -- the Mediterranean.

All this, as well as the possibility that the Middle East and Mediterranean crises could, under certain conditions, spread to other areas, inevitably affects security in the Balkans and therefore the security of our country.

Considering the current general military-strategic situation in the world, and the indications of some general trends in its further development, the question is whether the confrontation of political forces and ideas can lead to a war of wider proportions which would inevitably involve our country too? In assessing the possibility and probability of a wider world conflict one has to start from the fact that the hitherto limiting factors, among which are the balance of strategic forces and the nature of nuclear arms and the activity of world public opinion have been successfully preventing the breaking out of a war of world proportions.

Dangers Thoroughly Examined

At levels lower than the global level, there has never been any thought about refraining from conducting wars of limited proportions. This is unequiovocally indicated by the fact that as many as 165 limited wars have been waged since World War II. In addition to war and military intervention as the traditional forms of demonstration of military power, one has in the past few years tended to affirm and legalize the employment of offensive means from a distance, as a special form of interventionism. In the context of such a policy, special interservice forces specializing in armed intervention have been organized. their structure, equipment, organization, and the doctrine of using them are specifically designed for intervention in developing countries and in the zones of vital strategic interests of the countries that develop such forces.

This policy, in practice, introduces open interventionism as a military doctrine, motivated with extreme countrerrevolutionary aims. Precisely this doctrine of so-called lower intensity operations [dejstvo nizeg intenziteta], which is becoming increasingly accepted in the behavior of the military factor in the world, constitutes a real danger for both our security and independence. We are studying this danger comprehensively as a peculiar doctrinal innovation, but even more as a possible form of application of armed force even against our coontry under given international circumstances, especially in the event of serious internal difficulties. Within the concept of an all-people's defense, we must possess an adequate military response to such aggressive action, too.

On what kind of general postulates can we and must we strengthen our defense and security? I wish to stress that our concept of all-people's defense and social self-protection is able to find successful answers to all the challenges and dangers that threaten our security and independence. In building our country's defense strength we must further strengthen the unity of all the defense forces, especially the armed forces, as well as the unity of the leading and command system, and the unity of the rear area cover for the armed forces with reliance on social capacities and resources. It is precisely in strengthening unity at all the fronts of our defense, along with the enhancement of the material potential of society and its general organization and ability, that one should perceive real possibilities for realizing the Titoite principle of reliance on one's own forces as an essential strategic precept of our defense.

The postulates on which our defense must be based are certainly the fundamental values of our revolution and our socialist self-managing building: 1) the integrity of the country, brotherhood and unity, and equality; 2) the sociopolitical and socioeconomic system of socialist self-management; 3) independent foreign policy. Ranging along with them is undoubtedly also a high level of economic and technological independence of the country as a prerequisite for implementing the conceptual precept of relying on one's own forces.

In order to be able to reply more concretely and precisely to the question about the relationship between the essential characterisitics and achievements in our society's development, and the implementation of the postulates on which our defense strenght is based, one would need to make a thorough analysis of all the relenvant facts, one would need to make a thorough analysis of all the relevant facts, which, of course, I would not embark upon on this occasion. I wish to stress that we would have to carry out such analyses more thoroughly than we have been doing and to perceive and solve the laggings in social development more quickly, not allowing them to accumulate and threaten the very foundations of society, and thus of it defense.

Some Perceptions of Our Concept of All-People's Defense

The disintegration processes which held sway in this crisis period of our society and which threatens to erode the basic values of our revolution, which at the same time are the basic postulates of an all-people's defense, need not be immediately reflected in the situation in the armed forces, and above all the situation in the Yugoslav People's Army [YPA]. The defense consciousness, as the consciousness of the highest common interest of all parts of the country, may act relatively independently as a cohesive force in society in overcoming the crisis situation in the country. However, this is not of long duration in the Army, which is an integral part of society. The Army quickly takes on all the negative influences of the social environment, and it is more and more difficult to preserve the high defense and ideopolitical consciousness of the army organism under the given sociopolitical and socioeconomic conditions.

The Army personnel stand aside fromthe squabbles among the republics and provinces, and are preserved from nationalism that has any organized and significant influence, and from all other forms of sociopolitical behavior that is unacceptable. However, the LCY organization in the YPA and the leading cadres of the Army feel to the full extent all the difficulties of preserving the purity of the Army.

We consider it very harmful and socially and politically unacceptable that attempts are made to dispute the Army's right to participate as a social subject, on an equal footing with all other forces of society, in a search for ways out of the crisis. The YPA arose from the national libertion and revolutionary movement and war was conducted for the liberation of the country and the establishment of a new, Yugoslav, socialist social community. Only such an Army, always at the center of revolutionary process, neither separated from society nor closed against it, has been able and may be able to be the backbone of an all-people's defense in the protection of the security and in the defense of the country and may preserve its deeply national and progressive nature.

Naivety and Lack of Understanding

There is unfortunately much naivety and lack of understanding in some views on our defense and the role of the armed forces and especially the YPA in our society, and various hostile forces skillfully use it in their antisocialist and antiself-managing activities. Let us take, for example, the so-called "peace moment," or requests that we should stop arming, or that a so-called "civilian service" instead of the military service be introduced, not to mention the views and requests that are directed toward actually destroying the unity of the armed forces. These are the so-called thesis about national armies and the thesis that the Yugoslav People's Army is a brake on the socialization of defense matters.

I would not, on this occasion, comment on all these and other views, which are basically unacceptable. I would only point out two things. In an independent and nonaligned country such as ours, whose internal sociopolitical system is charactrized by deep democratic, equal, and humane social relations, and which is a consistent, proven, and confirmed fighter for peace and equal cooperation in international relations, and whose armed forces and entire defense system have an exclusively defensive function and goal, one must with full justification pose the question, what is the purpose of an internal "peace movement," particularly if it manifests itself and is enhanced under the conditions of increased danger for the country's security? We must ask whether it is not a matter of an alternative program of our international activities, or of influencing our internal public opinion. I think that matters must be clearly classified and called by their proper name. The "peace movement" which appears in our country not only fails to contribute to our security, and thus to peace in this region, but may be directly serving the realization of the interests of those external and internal forces that are bothered by such a Yugoslavia and that want to endanger our security and independence.

By this I do not want to negate the need for our working people and citizens, and particularly the youth, to involve themselves spontaneously and in an organized way in the international condemnation of aggression, military intervention, state terrorism; and the use of military power in general. On the contrary, this kind of activity is necessary and for them we have institutional forms within the existing institutions and orgenizations of our sociopolitical system, and the entire Yugoslav political activity on the international plan.

Nonaligned Are Not a Military-Political Coalition

In connection with this I should particularly like to turn to some criticisms of the military-technological and military-economic cooperation between the nonaligned countries. It looks as though some people either do not understand or do not want to see two basic facts: First, the nonaligned countries and the Nonaligned Movement as a whole in no way represent a military-political coalition, and, second, these countries, in defending their freedom and independence, have to rely primarily on their own forces. In this sense the help of more advanced nonaligned and uncommitted countries for those with not such a developed science and technology of production should be understood as an expression of their mutual solidarity and balanced military cooperation.

The criticism of cooperation among small and nonaligned countries objectively suits big powers and militarily and technically developed countries, which by the way already have superiority internationally, particularly military-political relations and are to increase it. One even wonders if this criticism of relations and solidarity between small, nonaligned, undeveloped, and developing countries is aimed at discouraging the concept of relying on one's own forces as the only worthwhile alternative to belonging to a bloc.

Before I embark on some concrete questions regarding the further development of our armed forces, let me stress the following once more: (1) we do not see any possibility of our concept of all people's defense and social self-protection really existing outside the fundamental postulates of our society as a whole, and (2) the concept of all people's defense and social self-protection, as formulated by Tito, represents our lasting choice in terms of its general position. This means in fact that we will resolutely strive to preserve all its social postulates, without which this concept would not exist in the first place.

Questions for Further Development of Armed Forces

I would like to turn now to some specific questions about the further development of our Armed Forces in a world of many external and internal factors.

We will continue to base our defense against the classic form of aggression on the mass armed forces, because in this way some unavoidable shortfalls in the level of technical equipment are compensated for. But, if one talks about interventionism, state terrorist military interventions, or a long-distance war, or broadly speaking, the so-called lower intensity operations, all of which could be imposed on us, then we must have forces and an adequate military answer to such types of threats. In order to cope with such a danger and in order to prevent a possible strategic surprise, we must strengthen the peacetime part of the YPA, particularly its qualitative components, while further reducing the number of those who constitute part of it.

In this connection I should like to remind you that the YPA is the strike part of our Armed Forces, and it must be correspondingly organized, armed, equipped, trained, and made mobile with such a degree of combat readiness that it can successfully oppose the aggressors' main forces and be able in particular to successfully provide strategic resistance to the first and strongest aggressors' attack, prevent surprises, secure the transition of our society to a state of war, and also successfully conduct the armed struggle of an all people's defense war together with other forces of all people's defense. Although this would involve a relatively small part of the territorial defense, its participation in fulfilling its war tasks plays an important part.

Misunderstandings About Territorial Defense

However, I must say that we occasionally encounter some misunderstandings when one speaks about the role of territorial defense in our doctrine and our concept of building it up further. There are some who believe that the territorial defense, as an army, must have the organizational and technical attributes that the YPA possesses. This has resulted in some parallelism in the building of the YPA and the territorial defense as components of integrated armed forces. We are endeavoring to overcome these views, so that the development of territorial defense will be returned to the framework which Tito clearly intended for it at the end of the sixties. According to the same views, the YPA is considered to be a kind of federal and statist military organization, even a potential power above society. This explains some worrying voices heard recently in public regarding the YPA, military service, and the military obligation of our citizens in general. Contrary to this proposition, territorial defense is considered to be the democratic, socialized model of a military organization, the only one suitable for a self-managing socialist society. Our stance regarding this is very clear. Each of the two military forces' components has its place and role in our doctrine of armed struggle. This doctrine is unique and each of the two components in their own way constitute a part of an armed people in the marxist meaning of these words.

Territorial Defense is for the greater part primarily aimed at fulfilling tasks that involve: total and efficient combat control of the territory and the armed protection of the functioning of the sociopolitical and socioeconomic system in temporary occupied territory; the continuity of armed struggle in a battlefield under all military-strategic conditions (including the temporarily occupied territory); and the mass nature of the armed struggle and the forces taking part in it. The widely spread territorial defense forces will be primarily involved in these tasks. We are building this component of our armed forces as a military organization and as a mass and broadly conceived defense movement, which must be open all the time and which will continue to grow, according to our needs, capabilities for armament, equipment, demographic conditions, and other resources. We also achieved this kind of permanent state of creation and quantitative and qualitative growth of our revolutionary Armed Forces (starting from platoons, companies, battalions, and other higher units) in the People's Liberation War. Therefore, we are not talking about something particularly new, but about the creative application of these experiences under current, changed sociohistoric conditions.

The Moral-Political State and training as the Most Important Factors of Defense

The Moral-political state of the Armed Forces in general has been maintained, and we have had no problems that would have shaken the YPA and created difficulties for society. Conversely, it may be said that, with our activities and the overall state of relations in the YPA, we have contributed to the sociopolitical stability of the country in all the past periods as well as in this latest period, which in many respects was exceptionally difficult. We developed the faith among our personnel that we have the strength and sufficient will to overcome the difficulties. We have insisted that our further existence and development as a multiple social community is possible only on Tito's line. [Paragraph continues]

We have not permitted that different individual views be imposed on us from any side, and we have always endeavored, to build our critical attitude toward them, proceeding from the general precepts adopted in the LCY. We have assessed that nationalism as a condensed expression of antisocialist and antiself-managing forces and actions is most dangerous in a multinational community, under the conditions of most varied divisions, in the country and temporary divisions in the LCY. We assessed that only a clear course to Yugoslavism, which cannot be replaced by anything else, may be our course as the armed forces of all the peoples and nationalities of Yugoslavia. It is quite clear to use that there can be no Yugoslavism without the cooperation of all the parts of Yugoslavia, and from this emanates our constant involvement in building such cooperation in general, and particularly in the field of defense, where we, the communists in the armed forces, have most direct tasks.

We have conducted ourselves in this way, but I must say that on this course we have been and continue to be exposed to sharp attacks, and it seems that this became more and more pronounced as the 13th LCY Congress was approaching. At the basis of these attacks, there lies the attempt to show that because of the weakening of some of the other cohesive factors of society there has been a serious danger that we may usurp social authority and may ultimately impose ourselves [i de se konacno nametnemo]. It is not difficult to assess from which forces in the country and outside the country this emanates, nor to appreciate the perfidy of such a message.

The Truth Before Which We Cannot Close Our Eyes

I should particularly like to point out the strategic importance of training to successfully conduct an armed struggle and an all-peoples war in general.

The achievements and tendencies in the development of modern technologies and the application of scientific-technical knowledge for military purposes, and in an analogous way, the changed physiognomy of the armed struggle and war under modern conditions demand a high level of expertise and training of officers and men both in the armed forces and in all other subjects and structures of society. Only through the successful functioning of every one of these parts one can count the successful functioning of the overall defense system that we posses in all-people's defense.

In order to achieve this goal, in their training, other modern armies either have a professional (paid) officer and soldier cadre, or a combination where by the soldiers serve much longer military service, thus securing a successful command of knowledge and experience in the handling and use of the increasingly complicated systems of armaments and military equipment. This is the truth before which we must not close our eyes because in the event of agression against our country we will have to fight this kind of trained forces. Therefore some recently expressed opinions and calls in our country for military training -- including training for combat battle in a modern war against armed forces with the latest technical equipment -- to be organized and realized even at the level of local communes sound naive.

We Are Entering the Next Period With Real Optimism

We must not have any illusions that it is sufficient in itself for us to conduct a just, self-defenseive all people's war and that because we have achieved significant results in the socialization of the all people's defense and social self-protection, this will guarantee the successful conduct of an armed struggle and warfare against the highly trained forces of a possible aggressor with the latest technical equipment. [paragraph continues]

Only by having a sufficient number of well equipped and superbly and expertly trained forces, together with the skill, readiness, organization, and involvement of all other subjects and forces of society, can we count on the successful conduct of an armed battle and of all people's self-defensive war, as we have planned it.

Considering the fact that military service has been reduced to 12 months, we have already undertaken concrete measures to intensify training, with particular stress on training on land, as well as to improve the methods of combat training and education in general. The improvement of the material base and the method of training active and reserve soldiers and officer personnel of our armed forces is conducted on the same lines. However, I must say that the quality of the training of a greater part of the social structures outside our armed forces is still on the lower level and that we must take specific measures to improve this situation.

Let me conclude. The entire building of our Armed Forces and the YPA has been particularly assessed on the basis of real relations in, and the capabilities of, the home production of arms and military equipment and society's financial, demographic, an other resources. All these factors, we think, have been successfully evaluated, which will make it possible to enter the next period with real optimism that despite all economic and other difficulties we will be able to strengthen the combat capability of our armed forces and the whole defense capability of our country. Of course, this will be achieved only if some current social problems are solved more quickly and more successfully.

Daljevic on Role of Army

AU182120 Belgrade NARODNA ARMIJA (Supplement) in Serbo-Croatian No. 2451, 3 Jul 86 p 9

[Excerpts] In the Commission for the Development of the Political System of Socialist Self-Management [of the 13th LCY Congress] Milan Daljevic took part in the discussion [on 27 June]. Speaking about the place and role of the Yugoslav People's Army in our political system, Daljevic first stressed that the Army is a part of this system and that as a constituent element of it, it has, and can have, no interests of its own separate from the people and the workers class. [passage omitted]

The Yugoslav People's Army has its responsibilty determined by the Constitution to protect our social system from all forms of external and internal endangerments. In this connection it is not superfluous to draw attention to the fact that any aggression, regardless of whence it came, would also aim at changing the political system as defined by the Constitution and the overall concept of our social development. As is know, some forces in our own country also strive for this aim. They are not so great and so politically influential that we have to fear them especially, but they are also not so weak and politically inert that we can underestimate them, particularly since as a rule they work hand in hand with hostile emigres and other reactionary forces in the world. [passage omitted]

The Army personnel were always the first in eliminating the consequences of earthquakes and protecting against fires, floods, and other natural disasters. On the other hand, they are active participants in the country's sociopolitical life, which is shown by the fact that more than 8,000 Yugoslav People's Army personnel were elected to various institutions of the delegate system during the past elections.

It is therefore baseless to identify in this fact an alleged imposition by the Yugoslav People's Army or its growth into a force that stands above the system. The Army does not have the role of an arbiter in social disputes and matters that are within the power of other organizations and organs, and it has no political ambitions out of harmony with its basic social function, its people's and revolutionary character, and the nature of our system. Of course, comrades, even if it wanted to, the Army could not live outside the system that we are building and developing, Dalejevic said, and he continued.

It is well known that a military organization in any country cannot hold itself isolated and politically neutral. Our Army personnel do not live under any kind of glass cover. They directly feel all the difficulties of society, directly experience all its successes, and in every respect share the fate of the worker class and the working people and citizens and Yugoslavia. The proposition, that Army personnel should be closed up in the barracks, which has been heard with increasing loudness in some circles recently, is in itself directly opposed to our striving that self-management should develop as a comprehensive social relationship. What is the matter here is in essence a peculiar form and expression of antiself-managing ideological and political concepts. About 100,000 Communists live and work in the Army. Even as Communists they cannot be deprived of the right to participate actively in political life and, in accordance with their capabilities, to behave critically toward the reality of which they constitute an inseparable part. The People's and Revolutionary Army cannot and must not be separated from the main social currents and be closed up in the barracks. The LCY program also points this out. [passage omitted]

DIZDAREVIC, KOVAC DEPART FOR EEC MEETING

GENERAL ZORKO SENTS GREETINCS TO SOLDIERS

LD182135 Belgrade TANJUG Domestic Service in Serbo-Croatian 1236 GMT 18 Jul 86

[Text] Belgrade, 18 Jul (TANJUG) -- Colonel General Zorko Canadi, chief of the Yugoslav People's Army General Staff, sent greetings in connection with 20 July -- the day of nuclear, biological and chemical defense -- to all soldiers, cadets, officers, and civilians serving in this branch of our Armed Forces. In the message of greetings it says:

"In this year, in which the subjective forces have clearly expressed determination in struggling for the continued development of our socialist self-managing society, you have achieved significant results in developing and perfecting the military expertise of your units and institutions, training cadres for the nuclear, biological, and chemical defense of the Armed Forces and society, and in strengthening the brotherhood and unity of our nations and nationalities. The development of nuclear, chemical, and other kinds of weapons for mass destruction and thus, for endangering peace and security in the world as well as in our area, obliges you to invest fresh efforts in ideopolitical and specialized military perfection and in the struggle for high moral-political unity in your collectives. [paragraph continues]

I am convinced that, as before, you will carry out these tasks with self-sacrifice and steadfastly continue the zealous traditions of your forerunners in constructing and developing the branch of nuclear, biological, and chemical defense and thus, extend the concept of all-people's defense and social self-protection. I greet you on this holiday and wish you fresh successes in your work."

FEDERAL LEADERS DISCUSS KOSOVO ECONOMIC PROBLEMS

LD182145 Belgrade TANJUG Domestic Service in Serbo-Croatian 1644 GMT 18 Jul 86

[Text] Pristina, 18 Jul (TANJUG) -- Janez Zemljaric, vice president of the FEC; Svetozar Rikanovic, federal secretary for finance; Egon Padovan and Muhamet Mustafa, members of the FEC; Dunsa Vlatkovic, governor of the National Bank of Yugoslavia; and Fadulj Mumini, member of the Serbian Executive Council, are in Kosovo for a 1-day working visit. With representatives of the Kosovo Executive Council they discussed the development and current economic problems of the province and examined the results realized by the Kosovo economy over the last 6 months.

As was reported, particular attention was paid to the problems that are hampering implementation of the policy designed to accelerate development of the Socialist Autonomous Province of Kosovo and are delaying resolution of the debt problems and investment policy. It was stressed that the erratic way in which funds are being received from the federal fund and overspending in investment are affecting the financial obligations of the Kosovo economy, which, as a result of foreign exchange differentials, already owes about 59 billion dinars.

VUKMANOVIC DETAILS REQUEST TO LEAD KOSOVO SERBS

AU191922 Belgrade Television Service in Serbo-Croatian 2030 GMT 26 Jun 86

[Report on Svetozar Vukmanovic Tempo speech in the 13th LCY Congress Commission for the Development of the Political System of Socialist Self-Management in Belgrade on 26 June -- recorded]

[Text] I will tell you a story, my own personal story, a personal experience which occurred some 5 or 6 days ago. I go up (?in the morning), I got up at 7 in the morning. In fact I get up at 4 every morning, but then I do physical exercises. At 0700, the telephone rings.

I answer: Who is it? Kosovo Polje here, such and such a person. Am I speaking with Svetozar Vukmanovic? Yes, I am on the phone. On behalf of 120,000 Serbs and Montenegrins, we ask you to step forward to our head, to represent our interests, for we are forced to abandon our homes; to gather up everything, our property, our livestock, our things, everything; and to move to Belgrade.

I said: Where will you go, for heaven's sake?

It is impossible to stay here.

Now this makes me think: Is it possible that 120,000 people in our socialist country ... Is it poossible? I know that things happened earlier, I knew that. But that it has gone so far that they must leave under force -- that is not propaganda, that is not what being taken in by propaganda means. To separate me from my home, from my house -- that is a difficult matter.

During the war, I had great difficulties separating a fighter from his home so as to make mobile units for fighting, but here they succeeded.

REAL ESTATE LAW AMENDED TO STOP FORCED EMIGRATION

LD181729 Belgrade TANJUG Domestic Service in Serbo-Croatian 1258 GMT 18 Jul 86

[Text] Pristina, 18 Jul (TANJUG) -- Today, the Kosovo Assembly, under the emergency procedure, adopted changes and amendments to the law on buying and selling real estate, according to which -- exceptionally -- a temporary ban is imposed on buying and selling real estate if it is carried out with the (?emigration) of Serbs and Montenegrins from the province as its aim. The introduction of this provision into the already existing law is the result of the measures and activities of the SFRY Presidency and LCY Central Committee Presidium on the current political situation in Kosov. The ban on buying and selling real estate can be in force as long as there are reasons for which this measure is being adopted, at the longest until the end of 1990. Contracts clashing with this provision will be declared invalid, as will those which have not yet been certified in court. More specific instructions for implementing the ban on buying and selling real estate that leads to the emigration of Serbs and Montenegrins from Kosovo will be provided by the director of the Provincial Administration for Property and Legal Relations.

VOJVODINA ASSEMBLY ENDS BREAD SUBSIDIES

LD191324 Belgrade TANJUG Domestic Service in Serbo-Croatian 1024 GMT 19 Jul 86

[Text] Novi Sad; 19 Jul (TANJUG) -- After many years of paying subsidies for bread, the Executive Council of the Vojvodina Assembly is terminating this means of protecting the living standard. This is justified on the grounds that subsidies guarantee cheap bread for all consumers regardless of their incomes. Instead of this, all municipalities and associated labor in the province will take measures to protect the living standard of those workers whose income cannot tolerate the latest price rises for this basic foodstuff and for energy.

Analyses for the last year show that more than 4 billion dinars was spent on various forms of social payments and assistance in Vojvodina. In 31 of Vojvodina's 50 municipalities the law on social protection was consistently implemented. Approximately 8,800 persons availed themselves of their right to benefit from 5,869 to 13,620 dinars in financial assistance. This constant or temporary financial assistance is practically the only source of existence for more than 12,800 inhabitants of the province. For this reason the workers in Vojvodina's center for social work have been trying to ensure that the money intended for improving the living standard reaches those who need it most.

The latest price increases are not small. The recommendation of the Vojvodina Assembly Executive Council that all measures be taken in the municipalities and work organizations to protect the living standard of the workers most threatened must be taken seriously, as an urgent sociopolitical task.

TU PRESIDIUM EXAMINES WORK STOPPAGES, SOLUTIONS

LD181214 Belgrade TANJUG Domestic Service in Serbo-Croatian 0939 GMT 18 Jul 86

[Text] Sarajevo, 18 Jul (TANJUG) -- In Bosnia-Hercegovina, in the first half of this year, there were work stoppages in around 30 organizations of associated labor. The number of stoppages so far and the number of workers who went on strike is not, however, as worrying as the fact that the position of some of these collectives, particularly the ones suffering losses, is increasingly difficult. Work stoppages are also taking place in areas, such as education and culture, in which this was not the case before, it was said at the 18 July session of the Bosnia-Hercegovina Trade Union Council Presidium. According to the Presidium, the main task of the trade union organizations and organs is to analyze the causes of work stoppages on time and take action to eliminate them.

MONTENEGRO'S STEFANOVIC VIEWS ALBANIAN RELATIONS

LD181836 Belgrade TANJUG Domestic Service in Serbo-Croatian 1159 GMT 18 Jul 86

[Summary] Titograd, 18 Jul (TANJUG) -- At a joint session of all the chambers of the Montenegrin Assembly, Milenko Stefanovic, the chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, spoke about the position of Yugoslav minorities in neighboring countries and their role in promoting good-neighborly relations.

"He recalled that Yugoslavia has expressed readiness on a number of occasions to establish normal and good-neighborly relations with neighboring Albania, which would be of mutual benefit. The Albanian Government, however, instead of cooperating on these principles, continues to be obsessed with the idea of incorporating certain parts of Yugoslavia into Albania. It should for all time be clear to this country, Stefanovic stressed, that it can develop its relations with Yugoslavia only on the basis of reciprocal respect for territorial integrity and noninterference in internal affairs. It is in our interest as well as Albania's, he went on, to overcome the current strained relations and to create conditions for realizing the national rights of the sections of our peoples who live in Albania as well as those of the Albanian nationality in our country. Thus, the conditions would also be created for Montenegro, as an immediate neighbor of Albania, to develop more fruitful economic, scientific-technical, cultural, sports, and other forms of cooperation on well-known principles."

Milenko Stefanovic went on to endorse the latest Federal Executive Council economic measures to stimulate exports and called for material support for the proposed free customs zone at Bar, to ensure its operation by the end of the year.

CSSR DELEGATE ADDRESSES DISARMAMENT CONFERENCE

LD171250 Prague CTK in English 1230 GMT 17 Jul 86

[Text] Geneva July 17 (CTK) -- Czechoslovak Ambassador Milos Vejvoda told the Conference on Disarmament in Geneva today that the need to prevent the arms race in space was a very practical problem for Czechoslovakia.

Together with other countries of the socialist community, Czechoslovakia participates in the Interkosmos program which is an extensive program of the peaceful use of space. It has gained many experiences in space biology and medicine, meteorology, communications, etc. Czechoslovakia was the third country whose citizen went into space. Space should remain a peace affair, otherwise its research would pose great risks which would be borne by the whole international community.

This is why Czechoslovak Foreign Minister Bohuslav Chnoupek stressed in his letter to the U.N. secretary general on July 3 that Czechoslovakia regards a ban on the development, testing and deployment of offensive space weapons under strict international control as one of the most important tasks of the present time.

Milos Vejvoda noted it is almost certain that man's activity in space can spread to his benefit to the whole solar system and perhaps even to more remote worlds. This is why Czechoslovakia fully identifies itself with the program of "star peace" proposed by the Soviet Union last June, which provides for the creation of a joint international basis for space research, including the establishment of a world space organization. Czechoslovakia is prepared to devote all its strength and experiences to this program which corresponds to what are now vital needs of mankind, Milos Vejvoda said.

[Text] Sweden: Another round of the Conference on Confidence-Building Measures and Security and Disarmament in Europe ended in Stockholm today. Ambassador Alois Reznik, the head of the Czechoslovak delegation, when assessing the situation at the conference, stressed that the work on drafting the final document intensified recently. The stands between both sides have come closer together in certain important issues, chiefly thanks to the constructive attitude of the Warsaw Pact member states. Alois Reznik said, however, a number of unresolved questions remain, as well as substantial differences in certain stands adopted by individual countries.

[Text] Tirana, July 19 (ATA) -- The President of the Presidium of the People's Assembly of the People's Socialist Republic of Albania Comrade Ramiz Alia sent the following message of greetings to the President of the Republic of Nicaragua Daniel Ortega Saavedra:

"On occasion of your national day, I have the pleasure that on behalf of the Albanian people, the Presidium of the People's Assembly and in my name to convey to you sincere greetings and to the friendly people of Nicaragua the best wishes for the progress and development of the country as well as successes in the just struggle for the defence of the homeland from the attacks and plots of imperialism. I avail myself of the opportunity to express the conviction that the friendly relations between our two countries develop uninterruptedly."

EEC CONTINUES 'NEOCOLONIALIST EXPLOITATION'

AU201716 Tirana BASHKIMI in Albanian 12 Jul 86 p 3-4

[Ilir Gurakuqi article: "Topics and Problems of International Life -- The EEC -- A Neocolonialist Association in Relation to Undeveloped Countries"]

[Excerpts] At the time of the creation of the EEC, its members used fraternization as their principal means of keeping undeveloped countries within their sphere of influence.

The policy of fraternization preserved the general form of relations between a metropolis and its colonies. [passage omitted]

The seventies showed even more clearly that the further economic development of West European countries largely depended upon economic links with undeveloped countries. Undeveloped countries give to the Common Market about 80 percent of their energy sources, more than 50 percent of their food supply, more than 40 percent of their minerals (cobalt 90 percent, phosphate 64 percent, copper 58 percent), and 30 percent of their agricultural production. Also, undeveloped countries absorb a large proportion of the Community's exports.

Bearing these realities in mind, in the mid seventies the member-states of the EEC began to adapt their relations with undeveloped countries to new conditions. First, there emerged the concept of "interdependence between developed capitalist countries and developing countries" or of "equal partnership" between them. [paragraph continues]

The EEC became the spokesman of the philosophy that accepted the need for some concessions towards undeveloped countries, particularly in the sphere of the international capitalist division of labor. The first important practical application of this so-called "equal partnership" was the Lome Convention, which from 1975 on governed economic and trade relations between the community and countries of Africa, the Caribbean, and the Pacific Ocean. Up to the present day there have been three conventions, the first for 1975-1980, the second for 1980-1985. [passage omitted]

Despite much advertisement of the trading concessions made by the EEC, the final balance after 10 years of cooperation between the signatories of the First and Second Lome Conventions remained heavily against undeveloped countries. Their trading position deteriorated markedly. During the seventies the number of countries in partnership with the EEC tripled, while their general share in the trade declined from 8.2 percent to 6.6 percent; it now constitutes a mere 4.5 percent. The Community's officials attempt to justify this phenomenon by pointing to a reduction in the competitiveness of goods produced by partner states, but the true cause lies in the protectionist and discriminative character of the EEC's trading policy. [passage omitted]

The signatories of the Lome Convention remain, as before, the poorest nations in the world. At the beginning of the seventies, two-thirds of the signatories were among these nations, but at the beginning of the eighties the proportion had risen to three-quarters. Between 1975 and 1981 there foreign debts tripled and today have reached 50 billion dollars. Moreover, in recent years there has been a clear tendency to place difficulties in the way of "aid;" this can only swell these debts further. Meanwhile, the larger proportion of this "aid" has been clawed back by West European firms in the form of orders for good and equipment produced by them. [passage omitted]

In defense of its policies, the EEC has attempted to blame the miscarriage of its policy of "equal partnership" upon the undeveloped countries, who, according to the EC, place excessive hopes in Community aid and spend their assured income in irrational ways. The aim of the EEC in its negotiation of the Third Lome Convention was to achieve the same results more cheaply. And, as LE MONDE has written, "The Third Lome Convention resembles the earlier agreements to a hair." [passage omitted]

Also, West European monopolies have secured some new advantages; the convention leaves a great deal of leeway in provisions for the investment of community capital. On the basis of the convention, private firms from EEC countries have been given additional guartantenes, principally against nationalization. They have also been given exceptionally favorable terms for investment.

So, the essence of the Third Lome Convention, like its predecessors, is the neocolonialist exploitation of undeveloped countries by West European nations. This exploitation has become more subtle from one convention to the next, but the economic reality of undeveloped countries speaks for itself. It is so disparate that no neocolonial mask can hid it.

IMPORTANCE OF REWARDING WORKERS STRESSED

AU191914 Tirana ZERI I POPULLIT in Albanian 11 Jul 86 p 1

[Sotiraq Gjordeni article: "For a Correct Relationship Between Moral Stimuli and Penalizing Measures"]

[Excerpts] The advanced person, the vanguard worker, everyone who honors himself and society through his toil is appreciated. This appreciation ranges from warm praise to moral stimuli of various kinds. [paragraph continues]

This practice, this emulation has by now won a solid place in the method of work of many basic party organizations, their instruments, and cadres. [passage omitted]

Why, then, do we bother to write this? Because in practice there are still cadres who manifest attitudes showing a lack of correct concepts concerning emulation. What is worse, they go to the other extreme, strongly relying solely on penalizing administrative measures. Should such measures be adopted? Undoubtedly. These, too, are very efficient and of an educational nature. But some managers believe that they have found a panacea to remedy matters solely through the use of penalizing measures. This is not right. [passage omitted]

From the moment of his appointment as manager, a comrade must understand that the party has appreciated his work. Why then does he forget that, as a party worker, he must show the same appreciation for distinguished working people? Such a leading comrade is far from having mastered a revolutionary communist method of working with people. Naturally, leaders must insist on demanding accounts and must even adopt measures. But the timing, the severity of these measures, the consideration of those against whom measures are adopted, and this must always be done in accordance with labor legislation -- all this, too, is part of a communist method of working. When measures are adopted every time a mistake has been made, in other words, when such a practice becomes a rule, well, this is not a communist method of working. Nor is it a communist method of working when the leader forgetes that the appreciation of good work also includes proposals for decorations. The life and activity of people is a dynamic process and an appreciation of the best workers serves not only a personal satisfaction to them, but also as a further stimulus to the, as well as others. In other words, it creates a stimulative and inspiring atmosphere affecting everyone.

The right to decorations belongs to those who work intelligently and creatively, who have thrown own petit bourgeois sentiments, complacency, routine work, slowness, it belongs to those who set the pace. It is society, the collective, the party organizations who honor those who have defeated time. The right of appreciating hard work is not the property of some managers who keep proposals for decorations under lock and key. The right to award decorations, as well as the right to penalize or not to penalize, is not theirs alone. The party organization also has a great role in this. [passage omitted]

BTA QUESTIONS DETENTION OF PLANE IN TURKEY

AU211923 Sofia BTA in English 1859 GMT 21 Jul 86

[Bulgarian Plane Still Held Unwarrantedly" -- BTA Headline]

[Text] Sofia, July 21 (BTA) -- A Bulgarian TU-154 passenger jet belonging to Balkan Airlines continues to be held unwarrantedly at Istanbul airport.

What was the pretext for this action?

There were Turkish citizens among the casualties in a 1984 accident with a Bulgarian airplane. Balkan Airlines paid the relatives of the deceased the maximum size of the insurances envisaged in the Warsaw Convention. The wife of one of the Turkish citizen however, has filed a suit against the Bulgarian company in a certain Turkish regional court which ruled that the Bulgarian company must pay damages seven times bigger than the sum paid to the widow. This ruling runs counter to the respective international and bilateral agreements and Balkan Airlines has appealed it before a higher court which has still not made a pronouncement on the case.

The Turkish authorities detained the Bulgarian airplane basing their action on the ruling of the regional court. It is quite obvious that the true reason for this action is by no means of legal nature.

No other state has taken such action in the past under similar circumstances.

International legal practice has never encountered a case in which a foreign passenger airliner is held because of a private claim for damages, and a totally ungrounded one at that.

GEORGI ATANASOV MEETS USSR PLANNING OFFICIAL

AU211848 Sofia BTA in English 1740 GMT 21 Jul 86

[Text] Sofia, July 21 (BTA) -- Today Mr Georgi Atanasov, Politburo member of the CC of the BCP and chairman of the Council of Ministers, received Mr Anatoliy Reut, first deputy chairman of the USSR State Planning Committee.

The condemned highly the work done by the planning agencies for the establishment of direct ties among the two countries' economic associations and enterprises, for the promotion of new forms of joint business and research and development work.

LIGHT INDUSTRY COOPERATION TALKS WITH USSR

AU211849 Sofia BTA in English 1742 GMT 21 Jul 86

[Text] Sofia, July 21 (BTA) -- Bulgarian and Soviet enterprises working in the two countries' light industries will continue to extend their cooperation. This was confirmed during the talks between Ms Elena Zlateva, chairman of the Associaiton of the Light Industry of Bulgaria, and Mr Anatoliy Pushkin, deputy minister of the Soviet Union's light industry.

Four Bulgaro-Soviet enterprises will be established in Bulgaria and the U.S.S.R. in fulfillment of the program for economic and techno-scientific cooperation between the two countries during the period ending in the year 2000. These enterprises will produce sports shoes and clothes, electronic devices and microprocessor systems for the light industry.

Agreement was reached to set up two small joint enterprises for the production of sports shoes and cotton sportswear. Joint teams will start studies on matters of basic importance for the development of the light industry. The two countries will also broaden their exchange operations and mutual supply with raw materials related to the light industry.

CSSR MILITARY DELEGATION VISIT REPORTED

AU211327 Sofia NARODNA ARMIYA in Bulgarian 19 Jul 86 p 1

[Text] From 14 to 18 July a working group of the Main Political Administration of the CSSR People's Army, led by General Major Vaclav Lokajcek, deputy head of the Main Political Administration of the CSSR People's Army, visited Bulgaria.

The representatives of the CSSR People's Army had talks with the deputy head of the Main Political Administration of the Bulgarian People's Army [title, no name as published] and other political workers, who briefed them on the experience of ideological work conducted in the Bulgarian People's Army, and work related to studying, clarifying, and implementing the decisions of the 13th BCP Congress. Special interest was shown towards new forms and methods in ideological work, the closer connection of ideological work with life, and with the tasks which our army solves while introducing the achievements of scientific-technical progress, counterpropaganda activity, and other subjects. During the visit to the Khristo Botev People's School for Reserve Officers and to military units the CSSR guests had meetings and talks with commanders and political workers, and were acquainted with the conditions under which Bulgarian soliders train and study.

The representatives of the CSSR People's Army were received by Lieutenant General Ivan Bosev, first deputy head of the Main Political Administration of the Bulgarian People's Army.

MLADENOV BEGINS TALKS WITH IRAQI COUNTERPART

AU211945 Sofia BTA in English 1915 GMT 21 Jul 86

[Text] Sofia, July 21 (BTA) -- Mr Petur Mladenov, minister of foreign affairs, and Mr Tariq 'Aziz, deputy foreign minister and minister of foreign affairs of Iraq, who is paying an official visit here, opened official talks today.

The two foreign ministers gave a positive assessment to the bilateral relations, noting their upgrade development. An emphasis was laid on the political, economic, cultural and other contacts, which are not only in the interests of the two countries' peoples but also benefit the strengthening of world peace and security. They expressed the conviction that the current visit to Bulgaria by the chief Iraqi diplomat will make a fresh contribution to the promotion of cooperation which is making progress in keeping with the agreements reached between Mr Todor Zhivkov and Mr Saddam Husayn.

The guest emphasised that the treaties signed between Iraq and Bulgaria are among the best his country has, and that they are being fulfilled.

The talks covered a number of topical international issues. An emphasis was laid on the need for urgent measures to strengthen peace and security, for halting the arms race, above all in the nuclear field, for a negotiated settlement of international disputes in compliance with the U.N. Charter and international law.

Mr Petur Mladenov spoke about the new political thinking, an imperative in the nuclear age when war becomes an absurdity.

Mr Tariq 'Aziz commended the principled stand taken by the Soviet Union and by the other socialist states on the key issues of our time. He emphasised that the socialist community's love of peace is not a propaganda ploy, that it is backed up by specific practical moves both on a regional and on a global scale.

The two sides declared themselves for an end of the Iraq-Iran war, for a just settlement of the Middle East crisis with due respect for the interests of all parties concerned, including the exercise of the Palestinian people's right to self-determination and to the establishment of an independent homeland under the leadership of the P.L.O. as the sole legitimate representative of the Arab people of Palestine.

They condemned the actions of Israel and its patrons, standing in the way to a fair settlement of the Middle East conflict.

Another topic of discussion was the situation in southern Africa and in other parts of the world, spelling danger to peace and security on the planet.

Mr Petur Mladenov familiarized the guest with Bulgaria's peaceloving policy and more specifically with her efforts towards strengthening peace and good-neighborliness in the Balkans.

ZHIVKOV GREETS NICARAGUA'S ORTEGA ON ANNIVERSARY

AU211348 Sofia RABOTNICHESKO DELO in Bulgarian 19 Jul 86 p 1

[Text] Todor Zhivkov, general secretary of the BCP Central Committee and State Council chairman, has sent Daniel Ortega Saavedra, president of the Republic of Nicaragua and coordinator of the Executive Committee of the Sandinist Front of National Liberation, a greetings message on the national holiday of the Repubic of Nicaragua -- the seventh anniversary of the Sandinist People's Revolution.

We rejoice at the courage and confidence in the future with which the Nicaraguan people, led by the Sandinist Front for National Liberation, resist the constant threats, terrorist actions, and attempts at diktat on the part of the imperialist forces and their mercenaries, the message reads. We are convinced that their striving to divert heroic Nicaragua from the ascending road of the Sandinist People's Revolution, the road of democratic and independent development, is doomed to fail. The solidarity, sympathy, and esteem of all honest people throughout the world, and all of progressive mankind are on the side of the country of freedom and peace.

The message further points out that the People's Republic of Bulgaria highly evaluates and supports the constructive approach of the Nicaraguan Government toward reaching a mutually acceptable solution of Latin American problems, and its initiatives which fully correspond with the vital interests of the peoples in the region and the world, and the interests of peace, good-neighborliness, and cooperation.

The message expresses again the steady solidarity of the People's Republic of Bulgaria and the Bulgarian people with the just cause of heroic Nicaragua and the Nicaraguan people, with whom we are connected by sincere friendship and friendly relations, as well as by common ideals in the struggle for peace and social progress.

LEADERS' APPEARANCES REPORTED FOR 13-19 JULY

RAILWAY REPAIR WORK INSPECTED, WEAKNESSES FOUND

AU181320 Sofia Domestic Service in Bulgarian 0900 GMT 18 Jul 86

[Text] A meeting of the State and People's Control Committee ended a short while ago. The meeting examined the results of the inspection of the delivery and operation of the mechanization equipment for carrying out overhaul and repair of the railway track system of the Bulgarian State Railways economic trust. It was established that the courses adopted by the Bulgarian State Railways trust for the accelerated mechanization of the work create conditions that guarantee the security and safety for the movement of trains at high speeds, as well as a considerable reduction of unpleasant labor in this activity. Alongside this, however, serious weaknesses have been permitted by the leadership of the Bulgarian State Railways, which have led to the inefficient utilization of a considerable portion of the track-repair mechanization equipment delivered and to breaches of technological and labor discipline, which indisputably are having an effect on both the production and the financial stability of the trust. The State and People's Control Committee imposed appropriate punishments on the responsible leaders of the trust.

DOHLUS ARRIVES IN JAPAN FOR TALKS WITH JCP

LD211551 East Berlin ADN International Service in German 1025 GMT 21 Jul 86

[Text] Tokyo, 21 Jul (ADN) -- An SED Central Committee delegation headed by Horst Dohlus, member of the Politburo and secretary of the Central Committee, arrived in Tokyo today at the invitation of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of Japan [JCP].

On arrival, Horst Dohlus expressed his conviction that the visit would help shape the successfully developing relations between SED and JCP still more closely and intensively. It is a cause of satisfaction that the two parties could develop ties concerning many important questions on identical views, especially the cardinal issue of the present -- the prevention of a nuclear inferno and the safeguarding of peace.

The great commitment of the Japanese people and the fraternal party in the struggle for peace, disarmament and detente, for the safeguarding of mankind's existence, is highly appreciated. Horst Dohlus said that through joint campaigns by all forces interested in peace it should, and has to be possible to stop the disastrous development conjured up by aggressive forces, and to achieve a transition from confrontation and arms-drive madness to detente.

In the course of its visit to Japan the SED delegation will conduct talks with leading JCP representatives on the further development of friendly relations between the two fraternal parties.

LEADERS CONGRATULATE JARUZELSKI, MESSNER

LD212305 East Berlin Voice of GDR Domestic Service in German 1700 GMT 21 Jul 86

[Text] Friendly relations with the People's Republic of Poland are developing ever more comprehensively in the view of the leading GDR representatives Erich Honecker and Willi Stoph. To mark Poland's National Day tomorrow, they sent a congratulations telegram to Wojciech Jaruzelski and Zbigniew Messner. The new quality in cooperation will become even clearer. The GDR and Poland are purposefully implementing the agreements reached last December at the highest level, including the long-term program for cooperation in science, technology, and production up to the year 2000. They are strengthening socialism in both countries with the further expansion of relations, and contribute to securing the position of the socialist community of states in the worldwide struggle against the danger of war and for a turn for the better.

10TH PZPR CONGRESS RESOLUTION PUBLISHED

AU180641 Warsaw TRYBUNA LUDU (Supplement) in Polish 14 Jul 86

[Resolution adopted by the 10th PZPR Congress: "On Increasing Management Efficiency and Improving the Standard of Living, on Enhancing Socialist Democracy, on Consolidating Poland's International Position"]

[Text] The 10th PZPR Congress:

-- Approves the Central Committee report presented by Comrade Wojciech Jaruzelski, PZPR Central Committee first secretary;

-- Accepts the report on the Central Committee's activity and on the implementation of the resolutions of the PZPR Extraordinary Congress, approves the Central Committee's activity during the last term of office, and assesses positively the implementation of this congress' resolutions;

-- Accepts the Central Control and Audit Commission reports, approving their activity during the last term of office;

-- Accepts the report of the Ninth Extraordinary Congress Appeals Commission and approves its activity;

-- Approves the chief paths of the 1986-90 National Socioeconomic Plan;

-- Approves the PZPR progress, obligating all party members to implement it consistently.

The 10th Congress states that the consistent implementation of the Ninth Extraordinary PZPR Congress resolutions has permitted significant progress in eliminating the effects of the political, social, and economic crisis on the threshold of which our fatherland found itself in the seventies and eighties.

It has been fully confirmed that the decision of 13 December 1981, which saved the country from the catastrophe toward which antisocialist forces were pushing it, was in the most profound interests of the nation. Confirming its national and class essence, which have been ideologically shaped by the party, the Polish People's Army acted in accordance with decisions taken by the supreme state bodies on the basis of their constitutional powers, and put an end to the counterrevolutionary threat, thus permitting political-economic stabilization and the implementation of the line of socialist renewal, which were tasks set by the Ninth Congress. For this, the delegates of the 10th Congress pay their deep respects.

The congress also expresses recognition for all functionaries of the Citizens Militia and Security Service for their effective action to defend and safeguard the state's internal security, and for their devoted and responsible service in protecting the law, public order, and civic calm.

The political stabilization, socioeconomic improvement, progress in economic reform and social life, and climate of national accord, which have been achieved over the past 4 years, permit us to look to the future more boldly today.

We must progress more rapidly. Acceleration is a historic necessity and constitutes the guiding thought of the party program. It should be incorporated in the country's future socioeconomic development plan, which has been worked out by the government. The need to proceed from extensive to intensive methods is a feature of the present stage of socialist construction.

By regrouping forces and restoring economic equilibrium, we will permit significant progress to be made in many spheres of the country's life during the present 5-year period, especially during its second half. This should be encouraged by the programs of accelerated development implemented by the socialist countries, the paths of which were defined by the important 27th CPSU Congress. Socialism is facing the challenge of today and tomorrow. Poland wishes to take an active part in this process, and will do so.

We will create the point of departure for accelerated development during the present 5-year period, overcoming the development barriers caused by the depreciation of fixed assets, restricted supplies of materials and energy, and shorter working hours. This will, however, be accompanied by the lowest rise in manpower since the war and by an increase in the non-working population. We must also steadily increase the excess of exports over imports, especially because of our serious debts. Meeting these needs is only possible by means of an energetic and consistent socioeconomic policy, involving a reorientation of our economy onto the path of intensive development. We must concentrate our forces and resources on this most important task. This requires a marshalling of all patriotic forces and well organized and dedicated work.

At the same time, acting in a spirit of national accord and by enhancing socialist democracy, we will overcome the mistrust and tension still besetting society so that the entire nation may project a joint effort to achieve the common goals that are benefit to the fatherland.

The 10th Congress stated that the party's general goal during the next few years is to further implement the line of the Ninth Extraordinary Congress -- a line of accord, struggle, and socialist reforms -- for the sake of the supreme interests of the workers class, all working people, and all society. Our highest national goal is to build a secure, well-managed, and law-abiding Poland.

The following tasks are at the forefront of our intentions during the present 5-year period, in accordance with the PZPR program:

-- A gradual improvement in the standard of living for working people and their families;

-- A consolidation and perpetuation of the national economy's capability for efficient and balanced development;

-- A further growth in socialist democracy as a basis for strengthening the state, plus a marshaling of all the country's patriotic forces around the supreme interests of the Polish nation;

-- An increase in Poland's international position and prestige, especially by tightening and expanding the multilateral bonds joining us to the socialist community and by means of an energetic participation in the international movement to defend peace in Europe and the world.

Adopting this resolution and defining the party's most important tasks and the country's basic problems requiring total or partial solution in 1986-90, the 10th PZPR Congress firmly states that we in the fatherland possess enough strength to achieve these goals so that what is necessary for Poland may become possible.

I. The Most Urgent Social Tasks

We are resolving social problems under exceedingly difficult conditions. The economic regression that occured during the deteriorating world economic situation and that was caused by errors committed in the seventies, plus the disorganization of social and economic life in 1980 and 1981 brought on by antisocialist forces and enhanced by lawless economic restrictions against Poland by the capitalist countries, caused a fall in the national income as high as 25 percent.

Shortened working hours, inadequate use of these, weakened discipline, and difficulties with raw materials imposed a restriction on the production of goods. Emphasis on wage rises and other unfavorable phenomena caused inflation, which is causing negative social and economic effects.

Under these circumstances, the party has particularly concentrated on protecting the population's standard of living, especially of those in the most difficult material situation. Consumption fell by 16 percent, accompanied by a 40 percent fall in investment outlay. This weakened the production potential and reduced the economy's development capability. At the same time as the population increased by 1.5 million between 1981 and 1985, the possibility of solving great social problems such as housing construction or the development of educational facilities decreased.

The 10th Congress states openly: The objective economic conditions do not permit a rapid solution to all urgent problems, that is why it is necessary to concentrate attention, forces, and resources on those that are of the greatest importance for the workers class and all working people.

The speed and extent to which these problems are solved will depend mainly on real progress in efficiency both on a national economic scale and within every enterprise. The basic goals of social development and the ways of achieving them have been set by the national discussions preceding the people's council and Sejm elections, and by the conclusions stemming from the precongress campaign, especially from the discussions on the draft party program and 10th Congress theses.

1. During this 5-year period we will move toward a further improvement in market supplies of food and industrial commodities.

Consistently aiming to achieve the country's self-sufficiency in food as forecast in the future program, we will channel the maximum available resources toward developing agricultural output and storage, expanding the food industry, and developing the entire food complex.

We will ensure a further growth in agricultural output and increase the range of available food commodities, so that running a household, especially by working women, may become less burdensome and time-consuming. We will counteract all waste of crops and aim to constantly improve the quality of food commodities. The rationing of meat and meat products should be abolished during this 5-year period.

Supplies of food commodities should rise by 12 percent and of industrial goods by 17 percent by 1990.

It is also essential to balance out the market of general utility industrial goods, especially mechanical household equipment, electronic goods, and products of the light and chemical industries. It is necessary to improve the range of the above goods on offer, ensuring various price and technical categories.

In order to accelerate an improvement in market supplies, those plants that manufacture production resources should also undertake profitable market production, setting up economic teams for this purpose and making use of by-products and waste products.

The development of cooperatives will continue to be encouraged, especially that of invalids cooperatives, state-controlled local industry cooperatives, and other forms of small-scale production, including those in the private sector. The people's councils should encourage the establishment of small-scale service and production enterprises in rural areas. Small-scale industry should make greater use of local raw materials.

2. It is essential to achieve progress in solving the housing problem during the present 5-year period.

The aim should be to permit every family to satisfy, through its own efforts and with state aid, its housing needs to a standard that is socially regarded as essential. Between 1,050,000 and 1,150,000 apartments should be built in the 1986-90 period. This will mean a 12-13 percent increase in general housing space. Modernization and refurbishing work will also be stepped up, and about 900,000 old apartments will be modernized by 1990. Work places should play a greater part than so far in solving the housing problems of their own employees. Better development conditions will be guaranteed for private construction, the basic way of satisfying housing needs in rural areas and small towns, by increasing the availability of prepared building sites and improving the supply of building materials.

The next few years will be a period of setting housing construction in order, healing its defects, and overcoming its weaknesses, which include excessively long cycles of investment, material waste, and low quality.

During activity to improve housing policy, it is necessary to pay particular attention to implementing those mechanisms that facilitate an exchange in accommodation. Between 1986 and 1990, the necessary prerequisites will be established for the construction of 300,000 apartments per year during the second half of the next 5-year period. The manufacture of building materials and fixtures and fittings will be increased, and the communal infrastructure expanded. The construction of accompanying facilities -- shops, clinics, schools, and nurseries -- will keep pace with the construction of housing districts.

State financial aid for housing construction should depend on the area and technical standard of the accomodation and on the form of ownership. The population should cover the costs of building and using apartments to a greater extent.

The party expects the staff of design offices, institutes, and construction and industrial enterprises working for the needs of housing construction to encourage a constant increase in the number of apartments under construction by means of rational design, technological progress, and a proper and sparing use of material resources. We also expect active cooperation in this sphere from the trade unions, youth organizations, political and social activists, and scientific-technical and creative associations.

3. An urgent task during the next few years is to effectively curb inflation.

The party places this issue at the center of the government's attention and action, and of action by all economic bodies. It calls on work forces, trade unions, and workers self-management bodies to support this action. Only through joint strength can we improve the low level of management and halt the rising production costs that cause price rises. [paragraph continues]

The 10th Congress commits the government to undertake essential activity aimed at reducing inflation to below 10 percent during the next few years. While performing this task, it is necessary to improve those mechanisms that restrict inflation; prevent excessive wage rises and other forms of income not covered by production and costs reduction, and improve the bad employment structure and inefficient investment activity. An effective struggle against inflation also requires the strengthening of the zloty. A plan of action in this sphere should form an integral part of the 1986-90 National Socioeconomic Plan.

4. Society's health and the state of the environment will continue to be a subject of special concern for the party.

Further progress in this area requires coordinated activity by all citizens and a gradual increase in spending on health protection. In order to raise the general level of health it is essential to concern oneself with personal hygiene, the country's cleanliness, environmental protection, and the combating of social ills, especially alcoholism and drug addiction. Preparing society to take an active part in protecting its own health requires considerable progress in health education for the young generation. During the present 5-year period it is necessary to devote particular attention to the struggle against the chief dangers to health, which include circulation diseases and tumors. Combating these dangers will be dominated by preventive action, with a simultaneous concentration of resources on basic health protection, including that of work forces, mothers with children, and elderly and infirm people. In order to improve preventive action, healing processes, and rehabilitation, it is necessary to increase medical facilities and the number of medical cadres, with the aim of reducing the disproportions that exist between various parts of the country. It is also expedient to free doctors of bureaucratic burdens. About 25,000 beds in newly-built hospitals should be guaranteed, as well as better supplies of medical equipment for hospitals and clinics and better supplies of drugs for the population.

As far as care for elderly and infirm persons is concerned, broader assistance for these should be extended by local communities. At the same time it is necessary to achieve clear progress in creating more welfare homes, especially for the chronically ill. There will be a greater availability and higher level of medical benefits by improving the organization and work of the health service. Health premises will guarantee 24-hour out-patient care, as well as a better deployment of cadres and apparatus in hospitals every day of the week.

Care in sanatoriums will be improved by making broader use of health resorts and factory rest facilities.

In this country we will continue general activity aimed at cleanliness, order, and esthetics, and a higher standard of living and recuperation. We will look after the environment, consistently implementing the latest resolutions in this sphere which commit industry to supply work places with essential protective equipment. Investments in environmental protection will be concentrated on those regions with the greatest damage to the environment. Construction of sewage disposal plants will be accelerated, and atmospheric pollution halted. The draft 5-year plan foresees a serious increase in spending for these goals.

We will undertake social activity aimed at protecting our country's nature and increasing the size of green areas, parks, and forests. We will introduce state and social programs of protecting and increasing our natural waters, which possess fundamental importance for agriculture and other sectors of the national economy, and protecting the environment. The great investment activity aimed at supplying water to Warsaw, the Katowice conurbation, Krakow, and the Sudeten region will be continued over the next few years.

We must do everything to turn Poland into a country that worships cleanliness and esthetics.

5. The growing intellectual needs and aspirations of a socialist society require greater attention to be paid to general and higher education and culture.

While modernizing educational facilities, we will at the same time raise the level of education and upbringing, including in it the following processes: a better preparation of young people for the scientific-technological revolution; a better knowledge of the humanitarian contents of our nation's culture; and a comprehensive shaping of socialist, civic, and patriotic attitudes. The present 5-year period will contain considerable progress in this sphere and will bring a rise in the status of education and schooling in the life and development of our nation.

The school conditions of children and young people will gradually improve. The population increase of the last 5-year period, during which about 700,000 babies were born per year, means that building 18,000 new educational premises during the present 5-year period is one of the most important social tasks facing the state.

An expansion of the network of kindergartens will mean that by 1990, 60 percent of all children of kindergarten age will actually attend them, instead of the present 50 percent.

The party expects active support from society in the performance of tasks involving the development of education. In particular, society should support the National School Aid Pledge.

There will also be significant progress in the propagation of culture -- book publishing; radio and television output; records, audio cassettes, and videotapes; the cinema and theater; libraries; and houses of culture and the applied arts.

The party considers it important to increase modern art's influence on esthetic tastes; on the purity of the Polish language; on interpersonal relationships; and on combating the invasion of kitsch, ugliness, and other phenomena that conflict with the ethos of socialist life. The work of the Industrial Supervisory Council should encourage this, and this council should be reestablished accordingly.

Concerned with general access to the riches of modern culture, we will at the same time place objects of our national social and cultural heritage under special state and social care. It is necessary to continue restoration work on Krakow, Poland's ancient capital, and to make sure there is further progress in bringing back beauty to other Polish cities, in protecting architectural masterpieces against damage, and in working out plans for renovating them.

6. The congress believes that incomes policy -- involving wages, pensions, and other benefits -- should clearly confirm the principles of socialist social justices.

The general level of society's income must be closely connected with social productivity.

In wages policy, it is essential to consistently apply the socialist principle: to each according to his work, from each according to his ability. This is a necessary condition for increasing society's respect for professionalism and the ethos of good work.

During economic reform, an increase in the incentive function of wage requires:

-- Factory wage funds that are closely dependent on productivity;

-- Observance of the principle that wages should be more closely dependent on work quality, and elimination of all privileges not based on work effort;

-- Propagation of the system of assessing work and approving job positions;

-- Altering the wage principles applicable to managerial cadres in such a way that they may be more interested in the production results of their enterprises.

The new model of collective labor agreements should serve to strengthen these tendencies.

Such a wages policy will mean having to overcome egalitarianism and efforts to achieve higher wages not justified by the amount of work put in. The party will actively involve itself in eliminating these trains of thought from society, expecting support from the trade unions and workers self-management bodies. Proper solutions in this sphere would serve to stabilize work forces and prevent excessive job migration. This will also serve to improve management efficiency, and thus raise society's standard of living.

Wages in the non-production sphere should be adapted to wages in the material sphere. However, here it is also necessary to establish wages which meet qualifications and individual work results. This should also serve to establish a proper wage structure for graduates of higher education establishments, giving preference to those with the highest grades.

The party will create a climate that encourages care for combatants, war invalids, and work veterans. The basic principle of the social benefits policy will be to apply this care primarily to those persons and families in greatest need of state care. The legal rules governing the granting of social benefits need to be set in order.. Of course, nonsensical situations and abuse in this sphere must be removed. On a general level, the government must work out a program of changes. Following broad social consultations, especially with the trade unions, it will be presented at the Second National PZPR Conference. An annual review of pensions and the elimination of the so-called old portfolio of benefits will ensure a rise in the real value of pensions in this 5-year period.

Socialist social justice requires fair renumeration for work performed today or during one's former working life, on the one hand, and making sure that no one usurps the results of someone else's work on the other.

Speculation, foreign currency dealing, and psuedotourism must be eliminated with heightened severity. The profiteering by means of various kinds of machinations, which still occurs in the private sector, must be combated with all the strength of the law.

Other inflated incomes in this sector must be controlled more effectively by means of a system of income records, taxation policy, and the application of permissible limits of employment in specific industrial branches and in secondary employment. The competitiveness of medium-sized and small state and cooperative enterprises as well as small-scale production units must also be increased. These should be more efficient and flexible in their work, and should keep up with requirements and fashions.

Honest craftsmen have guaranteed stable conditions for professional activity. In this respect we confirm the policy worked out jointly with the SD.

These are the six major social issues on which the party is focusing during the present 5-year period and it will commit the government to tackling them, calling on the whole of society for its support. These are national problems whose solution requires active involvement by the PZPR, allied parties, and all the nation's patriotic forces. Together we will do everything to make the next few years provide society with a feeling of progress in implementing the future socioeconomic program, consolidating socialist democracy, and accelerating social and cultural development, and will make these years impart increasing confidence in a favorable tomorrow.

II. Basic Economic Tasks

The performance of economic tasks and introducing the economy onto the path of intensive development are a necessary condition for achieving social goals. There can be no progress in satisfying social needs without basic progress in the economy and without the creation of resources to satisfy these needs. One cannot circumvent the connection between creation and division. An increasingly broader understanding of this truth must be ensured. It must be present in the party's work and in all spheres of social life every day.

The draft plan for the present 5-year period foresees a 16-19 percent rise in the national income and a 24 percent rise in investment outlay compared with 1981-85. It is foreseen that consumption per Pole will increase by 9-11 percent. However, this will only be feasible if the material-intensiveness of production falls by 7.5-9.5 percent, if energy consumption per unit of national income falls in the region of 9-11 percent, and if productivity in industry increases by 16 percent.

The chief ways of intensifying economic development are:

-- Proceeding to the second stage of reform;

-- Accelerating scientific, technological, and organizational development;

-- Making fuller use of work resources, energy, raw materials, and fixed assets;

-- Increasing the economy's pro-export orientation;

-- Carrying out structural changes to the national economy;

-- Carrying out a general review of organizational structures in the economy and state.

1. The first and most important area is economic reform. The 10th PZPR Congress is firmly in favor of continuing and further improving the functioning of the reform that was started as a result of the decisions of the Ninth Extraordinary Congress. The present qualitatively new stage of reforming our economy requires a resolute introduction of comprehensive solutions serving to improve economic efficiency. A faster balancing out of the market, setting price relations in order, reducing subsidies, consistently heeding the principle of self-finance by enterprises, increasing austerity and work discipline -- these are the basic goals of the second stage of economic reform. The congress is in favor of a rapid realization of these goals. The intensification of work in this direction should be preceded by a broad informative-consultative campaign.

Various mechanisms and instruments will be improved in line with the changes in the economy, while at the same time keeping the basic principles of the reform stable. The Economic Reform Commission continues to have an important role to play here.

The essence of the institutional changes is to improve the strategic functions of central management and planning and at the same time perpetuate the independence, self-management, and responsibility of enterprises and boost their initiative and energy. This will require, among other things, an appropriate shape to the system of assessing enterprises and a consolidation of the manager's position by means of legal regulations. A general review of managers should consolidate this trend. It is also necessary to increase the material and social position of the technical supervisory service.

Also necessary is a greater feeling of economic responsibility felt by enterprises, stricter rules governing finance, a full use of cost-effectiveness analyses during decision-making processes, a closer connection between financial and material planning, and a balancing out of the market.

The shaping of organizational structures in the economy must be subordinated to the country's long-term development strategy. Economic forecasts and cost-effectiveness analyses should dictate the choice of forms of organization. Apart from economic branches, which should be dominated by smaller enterprises, various forms of organizational concentration are necesssary wherever this may accelerate scientific-technological progress and permit essential investments. Such concentration, however, cannot encourage monopolist practices.

Today it is essential to bring the principles of the reform to the lowest structures of production, to work brigades and individual posts. The brigade system of work organization, which permits better production results and better quality and work discipline, will be widely propagated in industry, construction, and other sectors of the economy. This also applies to such modern methods of work organization as partnerships and task teams set up by workers. Party organizations and cells should be active in implementing these collective forms of work organization.

At the same time it is necessary to permit broad publicity of the experience of those enterprises that make good use of the mechanisms of reform.

2. One of the most important tasks is to accelerate scientific, technological, and organizational progress. It is essential to improve existing and seek new economic and legal mechanisms and rules that guarantee an effective union between science and socioeconomic practice and that stimulate enterprises' initiative and desire for innovations. Scientific-production centers should be one such form of direct contact between science and industry. Conditions will be increased for a proper definition of long-term state scientific policy, which should establish paths and priorities in the development of individual sectors of research and inventiveness.

We are in favor of implementing the decisions of the Third Polish Science Congress, including the decision to increase spending on research and development to at least 3 percent of the national income by 1990. The increased tasks must be accompanied by an increase in investment outlay, better supplies of research and testing equipment, and greater quantities of scientific and technical literature. We will create conditions for the development of Polish scientific and technical thought and apply special care and respect to the creators of science, guaranteeing them an appropriate material status. Research funds should be concentrated primarily on the spheres set out in the 1986-90 National Socioeconomic Plan. Mechanization, automation, robotization should be widely applied, especially where modern, highly needed production may be achieved the most quickly, and where working conditions are particularly onerous and dangerous. Our country's energetic participation in the CEMA scientific-technological development program and in the similar Polish-Soviet program should support this activity.

We ask all scientific circles, national technical organizations, scientific and technical associations, aktivists in the inventions movement, and, most of all, young cadres to firmly pave the way for scientific-technological development in all spheres of life. It is also necessary to work out a suitable system of promoting inventions and innovations. Factory or interfactory technological development facilities will be created in order to make fuller use of the intellectual potential of engineers and technicians.

In all branches of the national economy, support will be given to the emergence of various forms of small work places in order to be the first to manufacture new products or employ modern technological processes.

In today's times, one of the basic tasks of the party and every cell and organization is to render comprehensive support to matters of scientific-technological progress.

3. A condition for further socioeconomic development is a fuller use of work reserves, energy and raw material resources, machinery, and equipment, and the elimination of waste caused by the bad quality of products.

At a time when the number of working age individuals will be 3-4 times greater than before, it is becoming particularly important to make full use of existing work reserves. These reserves are inherent in factories and in entire industrial branches. In many factories and institutions, actual working time is not 42 hours per week, but only about 30. The main reasons for this are bad work organization, low work discipline, and irregular deliveries.

A firm struggle must be waged against these phenomena. This is a joint matter for the economic administration, workers self-management bodies, and trade unions, and must encounter their full understanding for the sake of the real and vital interests of the work forces.

Changes to the labor law, the introduction of modern systems of organization, and an improvement in employment and wages policy should encourage a better use of work reserves.

Large reserves are inherent in production capital that is not fully used. An urgent task is to increase the number of shifts, especially in modern branches such as electrical goods, electronics, and machines. The manpower for the extra shifts should be obtained by transferring workers from antiquated and inefficient plants. This is particularly possible in large conurbations. The state administration and party cells should pave the way for these processes.

Work forces and their management should be made to expect more, and feel responsible for, rational exploitation of fixed assets, which will permit an optimal use of production resources and transportation. It is necessary to encourage and increase the requirement for a proper conservation and protection of machines, equipment, and buildings against corrosion and wear, as well as repair work, the reconditioning of parts, proper fuel management, adequate supply of spare parts, rational exploitation, and proper training of personnel.

A definite improvement is necessary in the saving of materials, so that a 1-percent rise in the national income may be achieved while increasing supplies of materials by only 0.4-0.5 percent. When establishing development and modernization tasks, enterprises should compare the planned figures for the individual consumption of labor, energy, and raw materials with the figures achieved by leading domestic and foreign producers.

Waste in the form of bad quality goods must be eliminated. Concern for high quality must be displayed at every work post. [paragraph continues]

Not only he who works badly is guilty of idleness, but also he who tolerates bad work.

A consistent application of fiscal sanctions and price, tax, and credit instruments, plus clear responsibility imposed on each worker, must make bad quality production unprofitable to anyone. The party will commit the government to firm action in this matter.

4. Efforts to increase exports and to intensify economic integration with CEMA countries are a most important condition for our economic development. This calls for decisively increasing the role of foreign trade in this 5-year period. Larger participation in the international division of labor is one of the basic prerequisites for accelerating economic growth, radically improving the effectiveness of economic management, raising the technological and quality standards of production, and increasing the flow of fabricating materials and goods to production and market places.

Export strategy should aim at:

-- Changes in the structure of production to make it possible to increase crucially the economy's export capability;

-- Consistently backing increases in profitable exports through investment and supply preferences and through an active fiscal and price policy.

The Bank for Export Development has a crucial role to play in promoting pro-export measures. We will improve the system of convertible currency allowances for enterprises in order to make their imports dependent on income from exports. It is necessary to stabilize the conditions under which enterprises administer such allowances.

Tackling and increasing export production should be given central attention by the party organizations in industrial enterprises and should become the primary aim of party aktivs and work forces. Export results will be some of the basic criteria for evaluating the performance of enterprise managements.

Comprehensive links with the economies of the CEMA countries, especially the USSR, will continue to play the most important role in our cooperation with foreign countries. Poland will actively participate in all activities within CEMA in order to ensure further progress in the process of socialist economic integration. We attach principal importance to fully realizing the decisions of the Moscow economic conference of CEMA countries in December 1985 and the long-term programs adopted as a result of this conference.

In our bilateral relations with CEMA countries we will seek to increase mutual trade, coproduction, and production specialization and to extensively promote new forms of cooperation through setting up joint enterprises, developing direct production and scientific-technological cooperation among enterprises and research units, and organizing joint investments.

Planning to develop our economy along pro-export lines, we declare once again our resolve to engage in partnerlike cooperation with all countries. Poland is for the creation of a new international economic order that is based on full equality, is favorable to development, and provides economic security for all countries.

Illegal restrictions applied against Poland have lost us billions and billions of zlotys, have retarded our efforts to overcome our economic crisis, and have greatly curbed our potential to repay our debts. We want to honor our obligations. Our ability to repay our debts must be based on our economy's development needs and real potential. [paragraph continues]

Aware that the ultimate solution to the problem of our debts depends on a decisive increase in the production and export of our economy, we expect that the creditor countries will cooperate with us in a realistic way and will give up attempts to discriminate against us in economic matters.

5. The need to accelerate structural changes in the economy has grown for many years now. These changes must include improvements in the effectiveness of economic management and of competitiveness in foreign markets. It is necessary to accelerate the development of those branches and sectors of industry that lead in promoting technological progress, in expanding export capability, in eliminating production bottlenecks, and in increasing the processing of domestic raw materials and fuels. In particular, this applies to sectors such as electronics, electrical engineering, controling and measuring equipment, pharmaceuticals, and small-scale chemistry. The increased share of these sectors in overall production should help lower the material- and energy-intensiveness of the national income.

We must not postpone the implementation of structural changes. We must modernize the existing potential and create conditions for the accelerated development of the sectors and enterprises that already produce modern goods and promote progress. The central authority's duty is to determine the lines of change and to adjust investment and credit policy to them. The task of enterprises is to make changes in the nature of production, to modernize production, to accelerate the modernization of products, and to adapt them more effectively to the needs of the market and exports.

Structural changes must conform with the severe criteria of effectiveness. In this connection, assisted by the chief technical organization and other organizations and associations, the government should make urgent reviews and verifications of the development programs relating to individual branches of industry, to technologies, and goods. It is necessary to eliminate from these programs whatever does not conform with modernity criteria and does not guarantee decisive decreases in material- and energy-intensiveness.

Investment policy must promote structural changes. In this 5-year period investments outlays, especially those on production, will increase faster than those on consumption. A rational exploitation of these outlays will call -- especially in the first years of the 5-year period -- for financing the tasks that are at a highly advanced stage of implementation. At the same time, it is necessary to increase the funds for purchasing machines and equipment and for modernizing production assets at the expense of construction work.

Improving the effectiveness of investments, especially cutting down construction schedules, is the most important task of investment policy because only this can produce dividends from our outlays not later than this 5-year period.

Investment planning must seek to lower costs and conserve materials without lowering the quality of investments. New design and technological solutions should ensure conservation of energy in the running of projects, which should be of high technological quality.

The necessary expansion of the fuel and energy base must go hand in hand with the greatest possible economic and administrative insistence that fuel and energy must be conserved and that wasteful technologies and procedures must be abandoned.

Poland's development needs and position in Europe make it always necessary for us to better exploit and improve land, air, maritime, and river transportation. The party is for a consistent implementation of the state's maritime policy. [paragraph continues]

It is necessary to increase the economic effectiveness of maritime enterprises and their influence on the country's balance of payments and to continue the modernization of maritime harbors, shipyards, the merchant navy, and the fishing fleet in order, among other things, to ensure the economic profitability of fishing. It is necessary to create conditions for the total and economically justified exploitation of the shipyard industry's potential. It is necessary to standardize and strengthen the administration of our Baltic zone, to improve the exploitation of this zone, and to halt the pollution of the maritime environment.

We will accelerate railroad electrification and modernize and expand the repair and industrial base of railroads, automobiles, shipping, harbors, and airports. We will intensify capital repairs of roads. Crucial improvements in city transportation are most necessary. We will make crucial progress in communications and telecommunications. The government will draw up a program for expanding the production capabilities of the railroad rolling stock in the next 5-year period.

The biggest production reserves of transportation are present in rationalization, which should be based on business accounting and on the necessary organizational and administrative measures taken by the government. We must crucially tighten the conditions under which railroad and automobile stock are issued. In this 5-year period it is necessary to begin the production of modern diesel trucks and trailers of various sizes.

6. The congress regards it as necessary to carry out general reviews of the functioning of the organizational structures in the economy and the state in order to modernize and streamline management, rationalize the levels and structure of employment, and curb red tape. These reviews carried out with the help of wide-ranging verification of structures will shore up the economic reform and generally improve the efficiency of the state's functioning.

These comprehensive reviews should:

-- Finally adjust the functioning of the central state authority to the modified system of administration and define the functions and structures of the ministries as bodies that implement government policy vis-a-vis sectors of the economy;

-- Improve to the highest degree the organizational structures of the economy and the technological and economic features of its individual sectors and differentiate between the so-called supra-enterprise structures on the basis of clear criteria of cost effectiveness analysis;

-- Carry out extensive rationalization of employment in enterprises, cooperatives, and institutions and better deploy and exploit manpower.

An important tool of these reviews should be the method of verifying the functions of the individual organizational units and jobs. This verificaton should objectively determine the standards of the organization and usefulness of individual units, the rationality of the structure of employment, and the work organization within these units. This should result in functional and organizational improvements in state administrative bodies, communal service, trade, general services, education, culture, health services, and the regular manpower of the social organizations subsidized by the state. Public views should be extensively taken into account during these reviews.

Office regulations should also be cut down with the help of the evaluation of the laws carried out by the Legislative Council in 1985.

The party-government commission assisted by representatives of scientific communities, economic practitioners, and sociopolitical activists should be in charge of these complicated measures.

We appeal to representatives of the PRON, the Polish Academy of Sciences, universities, the people's councils, workers self-management bodies, trade unions, the Scientific Society of Organization and Administration, the Polish Economic Society, and the top technical organization to participate in this commission. The worker-peasant inspectorates should also participate as far as possible in review and verification work.

7. The state's farm policy must be improved at all times. Farming must be a strong element of the entire economy. There will be no modern Poland without modern rural areas.

The 10th Congress fully approves of and confirms the farm policy devised by the party and the ZSL. This policy will be consistently continued because it helps solve the great problems of providing increasingly better food for the people and of improving the living and working conditions of the rural population.

Taking into account the special determining factors of the development of socialist relations in farming, the party recognizes the permanent equality of all farming sectors. Encouraging socialist changes in farming and in rural areas, the party declares that these changes can be implemented on the basis of one's completely voluntary choice of the system of farming.

Farms will be evaluated in line with their production and economic results, and those that exploit their potentials in the best possible way will be adjudged as good farms.

Economic mechanisms that ensure the profitability of farm production will help the good farms in all three sectors of farming, will stimulate changes for the better at middling and weak farms, and will eliminate bad farms with low production. Economic and organizational solutions should take into account differences in the peculiarities of individual regions.

We will support increases in farm production, especially plant production, which determine animal production. We will increase the supply of farm equipment and industrial means of production, strengthen self-management groups, and increase the effectiveness of the activities of the social and trade union organizations in rural areas, especially agricultural circles.

The esteem and respect enjoyed by farmers obliges them to acquire and constantly improve job qualifications. This applies especially to those who take over farms and to all those who have farmed and will farm for many years to come. We offer these farmers the training facilities provided for by secondary and university vocational establishments, further training centers, and advisory organizations. Farmers should be more conscientious in observing the duty of acquiring the necessary vocational training and further training.

The most important tasks in this 5-year period are to:

-- Create conditions for developing and modernizing food production, which makes it necessary to increase investments to at least the extent stipulated for the entire national economy; in addition, it is necessary to increase outlays on the development of the food industry and the industries turning out production equipment for farming and the food economy; this increase should be higher than the increase planned for the entire area of material production;

-- Ensure that the supply of all production means for farming and other spheres of food production is large enough to guarantee the achievements of the planned production targets;

-- Increase the area of reclaimed farmland from 448,000 hectares in 1981-1985 to at least 700,000 hectares in this 5-year period;

-- Greatly increase the use of pesticides and the use of 210-215 kg of mineral fertilizers and 200-250 kg of lime per hectare in 1990; one way to obtain these increases is to use larger quantities of magnesium lime and to adjust the level of fertilizing to the needs stemming from the consistently carried out and skillfully exploited verification of soils;

-- Intensify scientific research to meet the needs of farming and food production and, especially, actively and effectively exploit scientific achievements and farming practices;

-- Increase the quantity and improve the quality of spare parts as well as equipment and machines used for the comprehensive mechanization of work;

-- Intensify the work connected with the construction and modernization of water pipelines, sewers, roads, and energy and telephone networks.

In 1990 Polish farming should seek to produce about 25 million metric tons of cereals, 17-17.5 million metric tons of sugar beets, and 1-1.1 million metric tons of oleaginous plants, and should supply the socialized purchasing stations with 2.2-2.5 million metric tons of livestock in terms of meat and about 12 billion liters of milk.

We will take special care of farmlands, which should be better protected against degradation, misuse for nonfarming purposes, and bad exploitation. We will support the development of workers garden plots because they increase the flow of farm produce for the population.

The party regards as especially useful those activities that seek to concentrate farmlands, particularly small private farms, because such a concentration is one of the basic elements of production increases and of improvements in the conditions of the families supported by farming. We will create conditions and issue legal regulations to encourage the integration of farmlands.

The intensification of the production of the farms run by peasants who work in industry will be effected by mechanization services and by the expansion of cooperative and specialist links with the farm industry and socialized farms.

All producer cooperatives and state farms should continue to develop into centers of high farm production and technological, organizational, social, and cultural progress and should influence agriculture as a whole. Economic results will be the basic criterion of their performance. The solutions provided by the economic reform and the flexible forms of comprehensive management of assets and soil will make it possible to achieve desirable results.

We will support the peasant cooperative movement enriched with various forms of collective farming. We fully support the development of the rural cooperative movement in areas such as the procurement of farm produce and supplies, and the struggle against all abuses against farmers. We will improve the flow of goods to the rural areas, including coal and equipment that ensures a better combustion of coal. [paragraph continues]

It is also necessary to ensure that the rural population has a better access to culture, that young rural people are able to advance socially, that nurseries and kindergartens are available, and that services are expanded.

As for forestry, our top task is to improve the health and increase the comprehensive usefulness of woods. This calls for a rational use of timber, a more effective struggle against pests, better measures against industrial pollution, improvements in the genetic properties of trees, and development of the cultivation of fast-growing trees. The national parks should enjoy special care.

The comprehensive mechanization of forestry work will be developed and conditions will be created for the development of construction, including housing construction, in order to improve the living conditions of forestry workers.

We will also take action in order to increase the rational exploitation of raw materials and the industrial processing of timber, especially timber scrap in forests and in industry.

III. Tasks of Developing Social Life

Efforts to strengthen the leading position of the workers class are the guarantee of implementing the aims of socialism. The alliance of the workers and peasant classes, which is the basis of our political system, is of fundamental importance for socialist construction. The consolidation of the alliance of the workers and peasant classes as well as of the intelligentsia is dictated by the unity of the aims of the entire world of labor.

Playing a leading role in the political system, the party watches over the compatibility of the state's activities with the working people's interests and makes sure that citizens, especially the workers class, have a decisive influence on solving the country's problems.

Social organizations and creative and professional associations, which represent the interests of their members and the communities in which they operate, help to trigger their militancy, favorably affect the people's awareness, propagate the humanist values of socialism, and stimulate cultural aspirations. These organizations are important allies of the party in the accomplishment of social aims. We will continue to create conditions for their development, for boosting their militancy, for expanding their field of activity, and for promoting their programmatic and organizational independence.

1. The rebirth of trade unions is an important sociopolitical fact. Trade unions are an essential component part of the socialist system and are able to play effectively their role as servants of the workers class and of the remaining groups of working people. The 10th PZPR Congress approves the PZPR's policy toward the reborn trade unions and confirms the topicality of the decisions made by the 10th Central Committee Plenum in this regard. It is our wish that these decisions affect the state's socioeconomic policy and express and protect the working people's occupational and social interests. At the same time, we expect that trade unions will be bolder in inspiring and supporting all forms of militancy in the process of work, in public life, and in the innovation movement and will promote efforts toward better work organization and discipline and toward greater professional responsibility and pride. We also expect that trade unions will devote more attention to culture, sports, and tourism and will materially support these spheres of life of the work forces.

Ensuring supplies of goods, the development of services, the construction of nurseries and kindergartens, better working and living conditions for workers, especially for working women, and the solution of the working people's housing situation constitute an important task for trade unions.

Through its members that are active in trade unions the party will support the development of their class orientation.

2. The party views workers self-management bodies as some of the basic and permanent elements of socialist democracy.

Regarding self-management bodies as one of the three main pillars of the economic reform, the party expresses its firm resolve to take action in order to increase the participation of the work forces in enterprise management and in encouraging the widest sections of workers and work forces to take responsibility for the fates of enterprises.

The party will resolutely counter all attempts to violate the powers of self-management bodies and will strengthen their authority and importance.

The congress takes the view that the present form of self-management bodies, which was developed on the party's inspiration and which enjoys the support of the work forces, has passed the test of life. Workers self-management bodies have made crucial contributions toward developing positive processes in the economy and increasing the interest of workers in the general results of economic management. The cooperation between these bodies, the people's councils, and territorial self-government bodies merits support.

It is also necessary to improve the cooperation between managing cadres in enterprises, the founding bodies, and workers self-management bodies. There should also be a partnerlike cooperation among social organizations in enterprises. Party organizations and cells will encourage all their partners to promote such cooperation. workers self-management bodies should become schools of socialist democracy, of workers attitudes as joint managers of enterprises, of rational thinking, and of increased militancy. This can be done only by self-management bodies that operate in accordance with the interests and laws of the socialist state, that possess necessary powers, and that enjoy the support of workers, especially of the workers class.

3. The establishment of the private farmers' trade unions is an important sociopolitical fact.

Unions of farmers and agricultural circles and organizations can effectively play their roles by helping to elevate the status of farmers and by militating for better working and living conditions of the rural population. It is our wish that they exert their influence on the state's farm policy and express and protect farmers' occupational and social interests. This will be expedited by the daily implementation of the resolution of the 10th Joint Plenum of the PZPR Central Committee and the ZSL Supreme Committee and of the Sejm law on social and professional organizations of farmers. The party will support this implementation. At the same time, the party expects that trade unions will inspire and support all kinds of militancy in favor of increasing farm production through creating social conditions so that it is possible to fully exploit all the opportunities of private farming, especially opportunities for using land and fixed assets.

4. Efforts to foster the young generation's commitment toward the development of socialist Poland and toward the creation of conditions for young people's effective study, work, and recreation are an important target of the party and the socialist state. The congress confirms the need for the further daily implementation of the resolutions of the Ninth Central Committee Plenum and of the Sejm law on youth affairs. At the same time, we take the view that young people are themselves responsible for exploiting their opportunities in study, work, and sociopolitical life and that the young generation's vital problems can be solved only with their own active participation.

Aside from study work, production pledges, and labor competition, the young generation and its organizations should devote special attention to activities in the field of progress and culture in daily life, health, correct physical development, and the proper exploitation of leisure time. Expecting that young people will take initiative, the party is in favor of extending the area of their responsibility for the country's development. We expect that young people and their organizations will inspire and participate in the great social movement in favor of the scientific-technological revolution and innovations in important spheres of life. The state and economic administration will create the necessary conditions for this movement.

The party will give comprehensive backing to the socialist organizations of the ZMS, ZMW, the Polish Scout Union, and the Union of Polish Students in their efforts to expand their ranks, to gain in programmatic and organizational prowess, and to affect to an ever increasing extent the patriotic attitudes and commitment of the young generation of Poles.

5. We will take consistent action to improve and develop education as laid down in the resolution of the 24th Central Committee Plenum.

In the coming years the party will focus its attention on strengthening the socialist schools' functions of instruction and upbringing, on ensuring the necessary study conditions for the increasing numbers of children and young people, and on developing a model concept of the system of national education to fit in with the needs of the 21st century.

The accomplishment of these tasks makes it necessary to:

-- Change the programmatic curricula and educational methods in schools in such a way as to ensure a more comprehensive development of individuals and to train them so they are able to cope with the challenge of the scientific-technological revolution; it is also necessary to devise and implement the concept of upbringing that provides for training for work through work;

-- Introduce into vocational education more extensive training programs, ones that increase the graduates' opportunities for employment and make it easier for them to acquire new skills in their professional work; it is also necessary to modernize young people's practical training and to enable some of them to become experts in handling production equipment through greater practical cooperation between their schools and industrial enterprises;

-- Obtain further progress of leveling off the educational opportunities of children and youngsters from different communities; kindergarten education will be expanded and increasingly better conditions to enable worker and peasant youths to enjoy all kinds of education will be created; at the same time, we will promote in all schools the system that ensures that the most talented youths can fully develop their interests and talents; lessons and instruction outside of the normal curricula and better educational care will be increased for this purpose;

-- Change the system of teacher training in order to meet more effectively our needs in educational personnel and to raise teachers' qualifications as educators and mentors of young people; one way to do this is to expand and strengthen university courses for prospective teachers and to increase the importance of teaching studies; the party is for constant efforts to raise the social significance and material conditions of teachers; one of the most urgent tasks is to solve the difficult housing situation of teachers in villages and small townships;

-- Provide such building and teaching facilities as to be able to improve gradually teaching conditions;

-- Ensure that students and teachers obtain their books and aids in good time, supply better school equipment, improve student transportation, guarantee better medical care, especially better periodical medical tests, and increase the number of students receiving extra food;

-- Devise a new concept of adult education in order to meet more effectively the aspirations of the working people and the needs of the country's socioeconomic development; this can be done through an efficient system of continuous education, which also includes universities for workers and peasants and an open university.

The consistent implementation of these tasks will provide a basis for a thoroughgoing modernization of the national education system in the nineties. The model concept of the national education system meeting the requirements of the 21st century will have been drawn up and submitted to the people for evaluation by the end of 1988.

Increasing the effectiveness of education and upbringing is a particularly important task for universities. For this reason in the coming 5-year period we will seek to:

-- Zero in the universities' activities on qualitative changes in education, on the discipline of instruction, and on improvements in the quality and punctuality of studies;

-- Modernize study curricula and plans and vary the structure, nature, and duration of studies so as to achieve decisive improvements in the quality of educating and upbringing cadres and to prepare universities for the present and proposed changes in the country's economic-technological and sociocultural development and for the coming increases in the population;

-- Improve the programs and methods of instructing the Marxist-Leninist social sciences in order to increase the impact of these sciences on the process of upbringing and on students' socialist attitudes and model behavior;

-- Strengthen the quality of the upbringing functions of universities and create conditions in order to enable students to increase their participation in the management of their schools;

-- Create a policy of scientific cadres' training that makes it possible for talented academic instructors to develop their abilities and obtain promotion with speed; this policy will also take into account the conditions under which cadres move from universities to industry and other areas of economic public life;

-- Make consistent efforts to ensure that academic instructors participate in the process of socialist upbringing;

-- Modernize the system of university management and improve the principles of academic self-government;

-- Work out long-term forecasts about the needs of cadres with university training and ensure that these cadres are employed more effectively through improvements in the process of their employment and through other means; universities' recommendations with regard to employment of graduates should take into account their study performance and attitudes;

-- Relate more closely the purpose of studies to the country's socioeconomic practice so that, for one thing, results of scientific research can find a better application; the social councils at universities as well as other bodies should play a significant role in this regard;

-- Improve the organization of university scientific research in order to effect its rational concentration.

To accomplish these tasks it will be necessary to increase university funds.

6. Further progress in fostering the socialist way of life calls for continuous efforts to raise the social significance of culture.

The broad meaning of culture is to us the way of life of the people. The development of the people's creative talents depends on the extent to which people participate in culture and in the values produced by it.

Culture helps to develop people's attitudes and conduct, to enrich their intellectual needs, and to foster their humanist ideals. As a rule, culture has been in our history a source of inspiration. It has rallied our people around great causes, has promoted ideals of progress, and has inspired patriotic community. Its leading social streams have helped to mobilize generations of Poles around the idea of democracy and justice, to wind people's hearts and minds for the cause of the workers, and to make an invaluable contribution toward the construction of our socialist fatherland. The cultural policy of the party and the state is meant to strengthen socialist awareness, to protect the achievements and progressive traditions of our national culture, and to create increasingly better conditions for the development and propagation of creative work. The National Cultural Council, which is a body of social consultations and control, has important tasks to accomplish in this regard.

Respecting creative people's right to make their own artistic inquiries and novel proposals, the party will seek to ensure that our cultural life is determined by the works possessing great humanist and ideological qualities, works that are close to the requirements and experience of the workers class and all the working people and that tackle historical and contemporary subjects in the spirit of socialist ideals.

The openness of our cultural policy means that it seeks agreement, dialogue, and cooperation with all streams that are not against the principles of the socialist system. This openness means that we pursue our activities in such a way as to integrate creative communities and to tie them permanently to the cause of Poland's development. This policy is being ruled and will be ruled by objective criteria such as the value of various works and not by subjective criteria such as the vagaries of one's political past.

At the same time, the party will resolutely oppose the efforts of the antisocialist forces and foreign subversive centers to turn our cultural life into an arena of ideological and political struggle against the interests of the socialist state and Polish people.

Cultural policy is widely open to the achievements of the world's arts, especially of those created by the socialist countries. At the same time, it is important always to ensure that Polish arts are present abroad on an ever increasing scale.

The Ninth Congress resolution stresses that the principal yardstick of the development of the society's culture is the increase in the extent and quality of the working masses' participation in creating and responding to culture. [paragraph continues]

This basic task is still valid, and that is why we think that it is of particular importance to overcome the still existing disproportions that mark our efforts to meet cultural aspirations of the individual communities and regions of the country. To accomplish this task it is necessary to:

-- Draw up and implement the program of cultural education for all our people, especially children and youths; this should be done by the mass media; the system of cultural, educational, and artistic institutions; social organizations; and by the greater influence of inspiring ideological artistic criticism;

-- Increase the production of books to eight books per inhabitant in 1990, of movies, television programs, records, tapes, video cassettes, tape recorders, and video recorders and ensure that standards of cultural facilities, especially of the programs devised for the masses, are better and better;

-- Stimulate the activities of the party, trade unions, youth organizations, cultural associations, and departments concerned in favor of propagating culture in industrial enterprises, townships, and villages;

-- Increase funds to meet the increased needs of artistic institutions and cultural units and fully exploit opportunities provided for by the law on the Cultural Development Fund;

-- Promote a cohesive system of training cultural cadres.

Attaching great importance to active participation of basic social communities in culture, the congress instructs all state administrative bodies to implement the long-term program for cultural development and draws their special attention to the issue of the availability of cultural goods for the working people and for new generations of adults. We will counter trends toward curbing this availability for various reasons, including tight funds and increased prices of such goods. That is why it is necessary to increase social contributions toward financing cultural projects, especially libraries, houses of culture, and other cultural facilities. The social and cultural movement and artistic amateurs, who contribute original values to our cultural life and help to foster active and creative attitudes, need more effective support and care.

Television, the press, and radio are important instruments in promoting culture and its democratization. These media should boost their militancy and improve the quality of their activities in this regard.

7. Over the coming years the mass media will occupy an increasingly important role in the implementation of the party's economic strategy; social policy; the economic education process; and in cultivating historical, legal, moral, and civic awareness.

This is why it is a matter of fundamental importance to continually enrich both the form and content of television, radio, and the press, and to truly raise their quality and appeal. The media should propagate socialist and patriotic values, the party program, and the ethic of pride and skill on one's work; encourage interest in scientific and technological progress; and provide extensive information about the contemporary world, its problems and hopes and the dangers to which it is exposed.

We will consistently work toward strengthening the role of the mass media in providing working people with reliable and extensive information; in expressing their opinions and views; in extending openness in public life which is essential for socialist democracy; in excercising social control; in publicizing the achievements of outstanding people; and in criticizing neglect and social ills.

The realization of these tasks calls for constant improvements in the system for directing the mass media so as to increase editorial responsibility for the implementation of party policy contained in the program. The party will take a keen interest in raising the role and social status of journalists as workers on the ideological front; will strive to eliminate obstacles that prevent access to sources of information; will create conditions for responsible and effective press criticism; and will counter all attempts to silence or disregard such criticism or to violate the principles of the press law. Steps will be taken to ensure that there is a systematic increase in the size of print runs of newspapers and periodicals, and of daily newspapers in particular. This should mean that by the end of the 5-year period there will be 108 copies of papers and periodicals for every inhabitant of Poland.

The program for the modernization of printing works will be implemented consistently so as to improve the quality of printing and to reduce printing time. A thorough analysis will be conducted of the range of titles offered by the Polish press in order to ascertain the degree to which it meets public needs and covers all areas of interest.

In view of the particular importance of radio and television, the most widespread forms of the mass media, a long-term program for the development of radio and television ought to be drawn up and implemented. The program should take account of the following needs inter alia:

-- To extend the second television channel to the entire country and to increase the role of regional editors in the channel's programming.

-- To create conditions for transmission and reception of television programs using satellite technology within the framework of cooperation between socialist states.

8. Physical culture, tourism, and rest are important elements of life in a socialist society.

Having an important preventative and rehabilitational function, they will be used to a greater extent that hitherto to improve the health of the nation; to enhance ties between people; to improve occupational efficiency; and to make better use of leisure time. Physical culture, tourism, and rest ought to have a more tangible effect on the psychological development of children and young people, to more effectively create habits and patterns of behavior that encourage a healthy life-style.

The party recognizes the need to raise the importance of physical culture and tourism in satisfying social needs; in creating the modern man -- a citizen of a socialist state; and in combating manifestations of social evils, especially among young people.

A program for increasing opportunities for active and mass recreation for the entire population will be drawn up and gradually implemented.

The further expansion of all these areas calls for the creation of appropriate material and organizational conditions, for improvements in economic and financial mechanisms, and for broader involvement and support from all the cells of the state administration and social forces.

We will strive to attain a gradual improvement in facilities, including sports school facilities; to reduce regional and community disparities in this area; and to increase the production and quality of equipment. It is also essential to undertake institutional activities in the field of competitive sport in order to ensure high standards and high moral values.

IV. On Strengthening the Socialist State, Enhancing Democracy, and Furthering National Understanding

1. The party will continue its policy of strengthening the Polish People's Republic -- a socialist and democratic state; the fundamental composition of national existence; and the development of the Polish nation. The party will strengthen the position of the PPR in the community of socialist states and in the entire international community. The party will enrich and expand democracy, and will work to increase effective participation by workers, peasants, the intelligentsia, and all working people in the functioning of state institutions: the Sejm, people's councils, and control and state administration organs. The party will train its members and inspire the training of all citizens in a spirit of respect for the state and its organs and representatives, and respect for the law and observance of the law.

During the period since the Ninth Extraordinary Congress much has been done to effect the socialist renewal of social and political relations. A broad system of social consultation has developed -- a valuable achievement of socialist renewal. The principle of openness in public life has been adopted and implemented; the scope of social control has been extended; self-government and independence for social organizations and associations have been strengthened; conditions have been created for open criticism in the mass media; and adherence to the principles of socialist law observance has been enhanced in all areas. This is a great and joint achievement of the party, its allied parties, and all the forces brought together in the PRON.

The 10th Congress states that the party is resolved to progress further along this path. The party unanimously and resolutely favors taking the process of socialist renewal a stage further, in the spirit of the slogan: Extend accord and fight with more determination. We are for extending national accord around the most vital interests of the nation and state, and are for supporting accord in matters such as socioeconomic development, social justice, democratization, ideological tolerance; sovereignty, and peace. At the same time, it will be necessary to wage an intensified struggle against those who harm the stability of the nation and the state.

The party believes that conditions will mature permitting the further development and enhancement of the instruments of socialist democracy and enabling these instruments to acquire a permanent character in the form of amendments to the PPR Constitution. Improvements in the electoral code for people's councils and the Sejm will be of great importance. The democratic process of selecting and consulting with candidates for places on representative bodies and for state posts should be expanded and put into operation throughout the state system. It should be a matter of constant concern that workers and peasants receive appropriate representation in elected organs. In conjunction with the PRON and after extensive social consultation, the possibility of new, stronger local self-government organs should be examined. Proposals to create public spokesman for civil rights and to set up socioeconomic councils attached to voivodship people's councils should also be acted upon.

During the coming years, particular attention ought to be devoted to strengthening all state organs and to raising their level of activity.

The party will take steps to see to it that the entire state mechanism serves the process of implementing socialist reforms and changes; that administrative efficiency, effectiveness, and reliability are enhanced; and that social discipline an law-abidingness are deepened.

2. The system of alliance and cooperation between the PZPR and the ZSL and the SD has passed its historical test during the last 40 years and during recent troubled times. [paragraph continues]

We will enhance its achievements by enriching the policy of cooperation between the PZPR and the ZSL and SD. We are steadfast in our support for cooperation with all organizations that base themselves on the institutional principles of the PPR: associations of lay Catholics and Christians and other social organizations and associations.

3. The party respects and acknowledges the achievements of the PRON to date; a movement that is building and extending national understanding. We will work to enhance the role and importance of the PRON. We are in favor of the PRON acting as a patron for actions that improve everyday life, and of the movement working for the comprehensive development of the country, for an improvement in the quality of work, and for efficient management and order in the fatherland. We are in favor of the movement creating a platform for the voicing of various postulates and views. The initiative proposing the creation of a Social Consutlative Committee attached to the State Council with the active participation of the PRON National Council and the creation of corresponding citizens' committees attached to voivodship people's councils needs to be examined and discussed.

4. The party judges the work of the PZPR Sejm Deputies Club during the eighth Sejm session positively. Deputies made an important contribution to the implementation of socialist reforms in all areas of life and to restoring Poland's international position.

The PZPR Sejm Deputies Club will ensure the policies of the party are implemented through the activities of the Sejm. Some plenary sessions of the Central Committee will be held jointly with the PZPR Sejm Deputies Club to this end. The subjects of these meetings ought to be social and economic matters of the greatest importance. Sejm deputies who are party members will attach particular importance to the Sejm's functions in law-making, in defining the directions of state activity, and in exercising control activities. The party will require great activeness on the part of party deputies and that these deputies maintain their ties with the electorate. The party also attaches great importance to the efficient functioning of organs that assist the Sejm, such as the Socioeconomic Council, and the Experts and Specialists Team.

5. We will consistently implement the policy of strengthening people's councils as regional organs of state power and as fundamental organs of self-government for working people. Steps should be taken to ensure that councils at all levels utilize all the powers and rights that are granted them under the law on people's councils and regional self-government of 1983. Proposals on granting additional powers to councils that show thrift and initaitive will be submitted. Teams of PZPR council members working together with ZSL, SD and non-party council members ought to be the driving force behind council activity.

6. The Polish People's Armed Forces under the ideological leadership of the party, faithfully serves the Fatherland, guards the borders of the socialist state and ensures conditions of peace for national existence and the secure and socialist development of the country. By strengthening its bonds with working people, it makes an important contribution to the socioeconomic and cultural development of the Fatherland. It contributes to scientific and technological progress, and to training highly skilled, ideologically committed, and selfless people. The party will work consistently at ensuring that the state's defense capacity is improved, and will see to the comprehensive development of the Armed Forces and the patriotic and defense training of society, and of young people in particular.

7. The party judges the changes that have occurred in the legal system as a result of implementing policy stemming from the Ninth Extraordinary Congress positively. The laws of the PPR should always faithfully reflect the interests and aspirations of working people. The 10th Congress supports stabilization and cohesion in the legal system. [paragraph continues]

This process will be assisted by consolidating socialist legal awareness; improving the work of the state and economic administration; and strengthening the legal protection accorded the citizen. Changes in the legal system should be limited to the essential minimum.

The party will continue to actively develop the social front in the struggle for the moral health of society and in the struggle against all forms of social and economic evils, especially against alcoholism, parasitism, waste, and uneconomical management.

The party will see to it that law observance is strengthened in the state, in social organizations, and among citizens as a whole. The principle that the law is the same for everybody must be consistently observed. An important role in this area has to be performed by institutions and employees in the field of administering justice; by prosecutor's offices; by the citizens militia and the security service; by court and office of state prosecutor control of administrative decisions, by the Tribunal of the State and the Tribunal of the Constitution; and by the workers -peasant Inspectorate. The party creates a climate of public support for these organs.

8. The party attaches great importance to ensuring the full realization of the principle of freedom of conscience and religion, and to participation by all citizens, regardless of their ideological views, in work for the good of the country.

The party is opposed to the illegal use of pressure in matters concerning freedom of conscience and religion and will consistently strive to ensure that the constitutional principles concerning religion are fully observed, including the principle of the separation of church and state and the secular character of public institutions. The party respects and appreciates the humanistic and civic contribution to national progress made by individual churches and religious associations.

On the basis of these principles, we will oppose all abuses of religious life directed against the state, the legal order, or the interests of the PPR state, and will oppose attempts to clericalize social life.

The party proceeds from the assumption that it is not only possible and necessary to maintain permanent relations with the Catholic Church and other religious denominations but that there should also be long-term cooperation with the state in many areas of life that are of vital importance for national interests. There should be cooperation in the following areas in particular: the defense of peace as the supreme good for our entire nation and all mankind; the enhancement of civic virtues and the cultivation of a positive work ethic; action against manifestations of social and moral evils; the protection of society's moral health; the protection of national monuments and buildings, protection of the beauty of our natural environment; and issues concerning health and social assistance. We express the hope that all these matters will constitute an area for increasingly fruitful cooperation between the state and the Catholic Church and all the churches and religious denominations in the country.

V. Improving Party Activity

Guided by the congress resolution and the statute adopted at the Ninth Extraordinary Congress, the party has strengthened its Marxist-Leninist ideological identity, its unity, its ability to act and its bond with the workers class, and it has preserved its directing role in the state by restoring its leading role in society and by maintaining its class character.

The main burden of party work is being gradually transfered to basic organizations. These organizations are becoming more active in shaping and expressing class and workers' opinions and initiatives, in places of work and in the countryside. Their ideological life is being gradually enriched and discipline is improving. The most important task for the entire party is the further strengthening of basic party organizations. One of the next sessions of the PZPR Central Committee should be devoted to this subject. This goal should also be served by conducting individual interviews with all party members before the National Delegate Conference and the 11th Congress.

There has been an improvement in intraparty information, and the availability of material for ideological work and for disseminating knowledge about economic laws and mechanisms. Through political and ideological work in various communities the party intends to eliminate the neglect and superficiality in ideological and training work that has accumulated over many years. The principles of democratic centralism have been restored. The trend toward a reduction in the size of party ranks has been arrested and during the last year reversed. There has been an influx of new candidate members, of workers and young people in particular. These changes -- which were begun well and are quite advanced in certain areas -- constitute a long-term process that continues to require the conscious involvement of the entire party and all its organizations and echelons.

The PZPR National Delegate Conference held in March 1984 played an important role in the realization of the line of socialist renewal and in strengthening the party and the state.

The 10th Congress confirmed the need to continue the line of the Ninth Extraordinary Congress and to continue it in all areas of intraparty life.

The party will continually analyse important social phenomena, both on the national scale and at community and local levels, and on the basis of these analyses it will propose improvements to existing solutions or the introduction of new solutions.

1. A basic condition for performing the party role of serving the workers class, working people, and the nation, of leading society, and of guiding the state is the constant and creative use of the princples of Marxism-Leninism in party work.

This calls for the creative development of theory, and the ability to skillfully employ theoretical principles in clarifying issues connected with socialist development. While observing the inviolable right of open intraparty discussion and creating a climate conducive to bold initiatives and innovation, the party will stimultaneously wage an uncompromising struggle against all manifestations of opportunism or conservatism.

The ideological activeness of Marxism in party life should be supported by solid and systematic research activity, pertinent criticism, and creative discussion stemming from the nature of Marxism-Leninism. An important role in the realization of these postulates should be played by the party academic community and the Polish Academy of Social Sciences.

The strengthening of the Marxist-Leninist character of the party requires every party member to know the fundamental principles of our ideology well; to distinguish himself by possessing a class understanding of contemporary processes and political, social, and economic issues; and to possess ideological motivation. A particularly important task for party and general education is a class and principle-based explanation of phenomena that are currently taking place within capitalism and in the international arena.

2. The party employs political methods in its work and rejects all manifestations of trends toward administrativism and bureaucratism. The 10th Congress draws the attention of basic party organizations and party echelons at all levels to the dangers posed by the emergence of such trends. Frequent meetings between representatives of all echelons and party members and non-party persons are therefore necessary.

The party will improve and continually maintain a high level of activeness in party teams on representative organs, self-government bodies, and in professional and social organizations. Party members in all cells of socialist democracy have a duty to set out the party line, to unite non-party members around it; and to ensure that these cells make full use of their legal and statutory rights and that they discharge all their political, social, economic, and educational tasks. Continual and thoughtful work with teams of party members is one of the basic responsibilities of party echelons because these teams constitute the main way in which the party operates in the institutions of socialist democracy. The 10th Congress recommends that the party echelons at all levels establish various forms of advisory teams whose membership is composed of both party members and non-party specialists.

3. Cadre policy is an important element of the party's directing role in the state. The 10th Congress obligates the entire party to observe the "Main Principles of PZPR Cadre Policy." The principle of party support for candidates for managerial and leadership posts who are the best suited professionally, ethically, and politically, regardless of whether they are members of the party or not, is inviolable.

The party regards it as its particular duty to support the candidatures of outstanding workers and farmers for positions on elected bodies. It will promote justified vocational and social advancement of representatives of the younger generation. The party will actively support putting into effect the clear right of all citizens to hold positions in the state and in all areas of national life.

The party places the greatest demands on candidates for managerial and leadership posts. The 10th Congress draws attention to the fact that no echelon, including the Central Committee, has the right to recommend someone for a managerial position without first seeking the opinion of the candidate's basic party organization. The 10th Congress points out that loss of recommendation requires party members to resign from the positions they hold. The party supports a planned cadre policy, of which the essential elements are the rotation and efficient distribution of cadre, and the creation, renewal, and appropriate use of the cadre reserve.

The entire party, all its organizations, echelons, and control and auditing commissions, must ensure that the principles of cadre policy are correctly implemented. The 10th Congress fully affirms the position contained in the main principles of PZPR cadre policy adopted at the 13th Central Committee Plenum of last session and in the Politburo resolution of April 1986.

4. The party operates in all communities of working people and ensures that all its members -- regardless of the community to which they belong -- have the same rights and expects them to perform the same duties.

The 10th Congress confirms the continued relevance of all the Central Committee resolutions concerning the place of workers in the party and its ruling bodies adopted last session. The 10th Congress considers it useful to create groups of party and non-party aktivs around every party echelon. The 10th Congress supports the position that the party and non-party intelligentsia is one of the basic strata in society, the position formulated at the 19th Central Committee Plenum last session. [paragraph continues]

The basic tasks for the party intelligentsia are intellectual innovation in all positions occupied by them, and the dissemination and development of party thought. The party feels it has a duty toward the Polish intelligentsia as a social stratum, a duty to create the best possible conditions for the use of the intelligentsia's qualifications and creative potential.

Farmers constitute a large social group within the party. In its program and organizational activities the party takes account of the needs and aspirations of the work forces of state farms and farming collectives of various kinds, as well as the particular interests of peasant family holdings, and it requires that its members who are owners of holdings discharge all their duties toward society and lay the foundations for progress in agriculture.

5. In striving to continually enhance its bonds with society and with the workers class in particular, the party will carefully listen to the views and opinions of working people and will discuss its main intentions with them. It is important that such consultations should not only be conducted by the Central Committee at the national level but that other echelons and basic party organizations also conduct them when the need arises. The party will continue to devote serious attention to letters, complaints, and signals coming from society.

The 10th Congress states that the strength of the party is not only derived from internal improvement but also, and to no lesser extent, from its ability to win society's confidence and to influence all society, and the workers' class in particular.

6. The main weakness that the party has still not overcome is the low level of effectiveness in implementing resolutions and decisions. Raising the level of implementational efficiency is one of today's fundamental tasks. It is a question of activating all basic party organizations and echelons and as many members of individual basic party organizations as possible. This task is linked with the process begun after the Ninth Congress -- but still not completed -- of raising the level of independence of basic party organizations and their role in party life.

Insufficiently effective implementation has many causes and these will be eliminated by the party. One of these causes is the practice of working with aktiv groups rather than entire basic party organizations, a practice to which echelons have become accustomed. This was in a certain sense justified when the party was weak but today this is no longer the case. Another cause is the great number of resolutions and decisions adopted by echelons and directed to basic party organizations -- a number that basic party organization aktivs describe as excessive. One of the factors that weakens the implementation ability of basic party organizations is the insufficient extent to which group and individual tasks are distributed, and the failure to link such tasks directly with the contents of resolutions and the undertakings stemming from them.

The very process of preparing resolutions and proposals needs to be significantly improved. The party, at all levels, will adopt resolutions of a significantly more concrete kind and, when necessary, it will establish timetables for the implementation of resolutions, it will assign tasks to specific communities and will observe the principle that the basic feature of every resolution is its formulation in a way that permits every stage of its implementation to be checked.

7. The expansion of party ranks remains an important task. The party rejects all forms of automatic membership and rash action in this area, its position being that a growth in numbers must be the outcome of conscious and planned activity by all basic party organizations. [paragraph continues]

The party will strive to unite around it all outstanding young workers, innovators in production, and those who are active in work force communities. Party efforts to recruit candidates will also be directed at those occupational and regional areas, enterprise departments, villages, and departments in higher education where its influence has hitherto been weakest.

The party will also link efforts to admit new members with increased ideological, political, ethical and vocational demands on new members. The level of recommendation required by someone who wishes to join the party will be raised; the person recommending a candidate member for full membership will be required to conduct political work with the candidate throughout the period during which he is a candidate. The work of basic party organizations and echelons with candidate members and the party training process needs to be raised to a higher substantive level.

8. The party influences society by its program and its work, and by the personal attitudes of its individual members. The 10th Congress states that party membership means constant readiness to assume greater duties and responsibilities. The party will require its members to not only possess high political and moral standards and a high level of party discipine and activeness, but will also require them to excell in performing their vocational tasks. Party organizations will take account of all these criteria when assessing the attitudes of its members -- political activity can never make up for neglect in performing one's work.

The party will also galvanize its members into action in their places of residence. Party echelons will disseminate all the experience that it acquires in this area. These activities will be based on the principle that a party member is a party member always and everywhere and not just during working hours.

9. The 10th Congress affirms that the norms of democratic centralism are inviolable. It draws attention to the need to observe the following principles in particular: the subordination of executive organs to elected echelons, openness in party life, the collective nature of echelon work, and that the party apparatus serves party organizations and echelons. Criticism and self-criticism are not only requirements of ideology and theory but are required by practice above all. There has so often been a lack of Marxist-Leninist analysis in our conduct; a lack of understanding of the logic of processes and contradictions; a lack of realism; openness and law abidingness; our bonds with the workers' class and all society weakened and this resulted in serious errors and social tensions.

10. The party will continue to improve its ideological work -- in line with the resolution adopted at the 13th PZPR Central Committee Plenum. The dissemination of the party's ideology and policies to a greater extent than hitherto will be served by individual and group tasks, by party meetings, and by open system of party training. The PZPR statute and program should perform an important role in the process of acquainting party members, especially those who have not been members for a long time, with the foundations of Marxism-Leninism. Ideological activity should stimulate the intellectual life of the party and initiate and develop discussion that helps to shape and mature thought, views, and convictions. The party will work to disseminate a scientific world view in society.

The congress recommends raising the level of didactic work conducted by voivodships, and intervoivodship party schools, and by voivodship centres of ideological education and the further development of the school network. The party will support the further development of the social sciences and the humanities.

It expects these disciplines to analyze phenomena that occur during the process of socialist construction and to disseminate enduring values connected with Marxism-Leninism and socialist humanism.

The 10th Congress states that the party ought to become a model political institution, whose example affects all society and all the institutions of socialist democracy.

VI. On Strengthening Poland's Ties With the Socialist Community and Active Participation in the Struggle for Peace

The 10th Congress affirms the assessment of the international situation and the initiative contained in the report prepared by the PZPR Central Committee. It expresses its fullest affirmation of the general line of Polish foreign policy, the constant goal of which is the preservation of the Fatherland's sovereignty, security, and territorial integrity, and the creation of external conditions favorable to the country's socioeconomic development. It is also a policy of peace, of working jointly with others to build peace in Europe and of active participation in warding off the nuclear threat hanging over the entire world. The PPR implements this line in close cooperation with the community of socialist states, of which it is a steadfast member.

1. The party attaches key importance to the comprehensive enhancement of friendship, cooperation, and joint action with the Soviet Union. This is the cornerstone of our foreign policy. In implementing the long-term Polish-Soviet program for scientific and technological cooperation, we must strive to extend its scope. The party will strive to constantly enrich Polish-Soviet cultural exchanges and exchanges in all other areas of life. One of the main conditions for Poland's successful socioeconomic development lies in close cooepration with the great Soviet Union. All sectors of the economy, social organizations, communities, and regional centers should participate in such cooperation. Ideological unity and cooperation between the PZPR and the CPSU will promote further progress in the entire field of Polish-Soviet relations.

2. The party will continue to strive to constantly expand cooperation between Poland and all the countries of the socialist community. During this 5-year period Poland will make all essential efforts to expand its participation in CEMA integration programs, to further increase bilateral economic exchange, and to solve various problems jointly. It will also strive to simplify the processes involved in cultural and tourist exchanges.

3. Poland's participation in the political and defense Warsaw Pact alliance is of fundamental importance for Polish state interests. The Polish people's Armed Forces will continue to contribute to the joint defense capacity of the Warsaw Pact. The Polish state will actively participate in the coordination of foreign policy within the framework of the alliance and in joint activities in the international arena.

4. The highest goal of the socialist community, a goal that stems from the historic mission of fraternal parties, is that of protecting the world from nuclear war. Our party fully supports the peace program formulated by the CPSU and its leader Comrade Mikhail Gorbachev, a program whose goal is an end to the arms race and mankind's entry into the new century without weapons of mass destruction. We will do all that is possible to ensure that Poland plays as active a part as possible in the struggle to have this program implemented and to create a new order in international relations based on the Leninist principles of peaceful coexistence, cooperation on a basis of equality, and the joint resolution of global problems.

5. Together with its allies, Poland will, during the coming years, strive to effect the full restoration in Europe of the letter and spirit of the Final Act of the historic Helsinki conference, and to continue the process of gradually evolving an infrastructure for European security and cooperation based on respect for the inviolability of the political and territorial order on our continent. To this end, Poland will especially support the development of confidence-building measures. Our country will also actively participate in all other activities that serve to create a climate of detente and dialogue in Europe and in relations between East and West generally.

6. Poland will continue to strive to put an end to illegal restrictions and other obstacles that have drastically limited trade with Western countries. Abandoning the policy of restrictions and an appropriate settlement of the debt problem should not only help to restore trade to its previous level, including trade in fields of science and technology, but also help to increase such trade on the basis of the principle of mutual advantage and equality.

7. Poland supports the comprehensive development of relations with developing countries, and in particular with those countries that belong to the Nonaligned Movement. During the current 5-year period we should strive to achieve significant progress in developing forms of economic exchange with these countries and work towards ensuring that these countries occupy a position of growing importance in Polish foreign trade by significantly raising the level of trade with them. This process will be aided by the expansion of political and cultural contacts and contacts in other areas of international relations.

8. Poland will strive to further strengthen the role of the UN in the contemporary world. At the UN it will support the struggle for a just settlement of the world debt problem, the creation of a new system of economic relations, and joint action in finding peaceful solutions to issues of all kinds, and in the area of implementing human rights.

9. The PZPR is an inseparable part of the international communist and workers' movement, which is guided by Marxist-Leninist teaching. It will continue to strengthen ideological ties with all parties that base themselves on proletarian internationalism and will strengthen bilateral and multilateral contacts that promote the unity of the movement. The PZPR also advocates the restoration and expansion of contacts with socialist and social democratic parties, with national liberation movements, and with all peaceful and democratic forces in the contemporary world. Solidarity and cooperation between all anti-imperialistic, revolutionary and democratic, and national liberation forces in the struggle for a peaceful future for mankind is of particular importance.

10. The constant goal of the party, a goal by which it will continue to be guided during the current 5-year period, is Poland's active participation in international life, in the creation of a world of peace, equality between nations, and social progress, participation that is worthy of our best Polish traditions, our history, and our people's aspirations today. This goal stems from the patriotism and internationalism of our party and from its profound feeling of serving the Polish people.

The congress obligates the PZPR Central Committee to draw up a detailed plan for the implementation of this resolution.

FURTHER REPORTAGE ON REACTION TO NEW AMNESTY LAW

Walesa Criticizes Law

ID212328 Vatican City International Service in Czech 1730 GMT 21 Jul 86

[Text] Poland -- The well-known trade union leader Lech Walesa has criticized the newly endorsed amnesty law in his country. He demanded that the text of the law omit all conditions with which political prisoners must comply if they want to be released. Among other things, they have to declare and attest to their loyalty to the current regime. In the words of Lech Walesa, whether amnesty is granted or not depends on the arbitrary will of security bodies since, in his word, Polish courts are not independent. He went on the say that the release of 20,000 people who have been imprisoned for lesser misdemeanors would not solve the problem of overcrowding in Polish prisons in which 114,800 persons are currently held in inhuman conditions

Legal Procedures Detailed

LD212006 Zielona Gora Domestic Service in Polish 1505 GMT 21 Jul 86

[Text] In connection with the Sejm's passage of the 17 July Law on special procedure in relation to the perpetrators of certain crimes, the voivodship prosecutors in Zielona Gora and Gorzow inform all interested persons that in matters associated with the application of this law one may go in person to the voivodship prosecutors' offices and also the regional prosecutors' offices each day during office hours. Persons who do not wish to reveal their name can receive information or advice by telephone. The telephone numbers if the voivodshop prosecutors office in Zielona Gora are: 26-31 and 28013. The telephone number of the voivodship prosecutors office in Gorzow is 268-59. Information and advice on matters relating to the application of the Law of Special Procedure in Relation to the Perpetrators of Certain Crimes can also be acquired via telephone from all regional prosecutors' offices in the Lubusz region, and they exist in Krosno, Nowa Sol, Swiebodzin, Wolsztyn, Zielona Gora, Zagan, and Zary, and also in Choszczno, Gorzow, Mysliborz, Miedzyrzecz, and Slubice.

Jaskiernia Explains Purpose

AU211243 Warsaw SZTANDAR MLODYCH in Polish 18-22 Jul 86 p 2

[Interview with Jerzy Jaskiernia, gereral secretary of the National Council of the Patriotic Movement for National Rebirth by unnamed SZTANDAR MLODYCH journalist; date and place not given]

[Text] [Question] Let us recall how the "Law on Special Procedure in Relation to Perpetrators of Certain Crimes", which waw passed by the Sejm on 17 July, came into being. The impetus behind it came from the National Council of PRON.

[Jaskiernia] It was not the first PRON initiative in this field. I would like to point out that our movement has twice put forward amnesty initiatives in its short history, in 1983 and in 1984. In addition to this we announced an initiative on humanitarian action in relation to perpetrators of non-criminal offences last year. Thus, the current Sejm action is already the fourth piece of action that has been inspired by us. It is an act that proceeds from the logic of national accord.

[Question] It is sometimes said that a policy of compromise is disastrous.

[Jaskiernia] This humanitarian act is not a compromise. The law is not, after all, a sign of weakness on the part of the socialist state but proof of its strength; it is a result of the normalization of Poland's sociopolitical life. Neither is the law an amnesty in the full sense of the word. The provisions of the law can be, but do not have to be, applied.

[Question] When did this idea crystallize?

[Jaskiernia] During a 28 June meeting between the chairman of the State Council and first secretary of the PZPR Central Committee, Wojciech Jaruzelski, and Jan Dobraczynski, chairman of the PRON National Council. The next day Wojciech Jaruzelski referred to the PRON proposal in the Central Committee report delivered at the opening of the 10th PZPR Congress. The idea was subsequently examined by the State Council and the Commission for Cooperation between the PZPR and Other Parties.

[Question] People are afraid of the consequences of pardoning those who are currently in prison. Have only a few of those amnestied reembarked on a path of crime?

[Jaskiernia] I believe that these fears are groundless. The law only permits the pardoning of those who have committed offences of a non-criminal kind. It does not, therefore, encompass persons who have committed felonies, rape, theft of transportation property, smuggling, or trading in narcotics, as well as people who have received stolen goods or distilled spirits illegally. Habitual criminals, hooligans, and persons who have committed offences while under the influence of alcohol will not be pardoned. The "law on special procedure" encompasses persons who received prison sentences of up to 2 years -- I do not think they are dangerous criminals. Of course, there is always a risk in such cases, but it is not very great. Of the hundred persons who were released under previous amnesties only one has committed another offence.

[Question] It is said that the law is primarily designed to enable perpetrators of offences against state interests to return to a normal life.

[Jaskiernia] There will not be many such persons, perhaps only one or two percent of those who come under this act of clemency.

[Question] But surely displaying kindness is not the way to change hostile political views and attitudes?

[Jaskiernia] We do not intend to buy anyone. Let us also remember that the act of kindness contained in the law is not unconditional. The law will be applied in response to decisions made by prosecutors (in the case of those who are in temporary custody) or a court decision based on a suggestion put forward by a prosecutor (in the case of persons serving a sentence) and only in cases in which there are grounds for justifying release, for believing that a given person will become actively involved in the life of the country and will not return to the path of crime.

I would like to highlight the humanitarian character of the Sejm decisions once again. The Special procedure encompasses persons who deserve special treatment for personal reasons. This applies to women who have reached the age of 50 and to men who have reached the age of 60, to juvenile offenders, to those who provide parental care for children below the age of 16, and to those who have committed offences without intent.

[Question] Have you ever met anyone who has benefited from any of PRON's humanitarian initiatives?

[Jaskiernia] of course. For example, Jan Dobraczynski and I met with some young people from Konin who had benefited from an opportunity created by PRON. The school students, who had broken the law, were accompanied by their parents.

Even just this one meeting illustrated the social sense behind the humanitarian decision on pardoning or reducing the duration of punishments. Our discussion was very emotional, far-reaching, and many-sided.

It emerged that these young people had undertaken actions that ran counter to the law on account of pressure from the milieu in which they found themselves, they acted thoughtlessly and impulsively. One should not, therefore, make generalizations in judging people's conduct. One has to examine the motives behind a person's actions case by case.

The many aspects of every case have to be considered. Every person is important.

SEJM DEPUTY MAKES REPORT ON NEW REGULATIONS

AU211051 Warsaw TRYBUNA LUDU in Polish 18 Jul 86 p 4

["Theses" of the report delivered by Deputy Elzbieta Rutkowska at the 17 July session of the Sejm on behalf of the Committee for Regulations and Deputies' Affairs and the Committee for Legislation]

[Text] -- The Sejm regulations are the most important source of parliamentary legislation alongside the Constitution. These regulations determine the Sejm agenda, internal organization, and relations between the Sejm agenda, internal organization, and relations between the Sejm and other state agencies.

-- New draft regulations provide for crucial changes in the legislative process, determine the requirements to be satisfied by draft laws, and stipulate that the first reading of a draft law is to take place at the Sejm sessions. During their legislative work the Sejm commissions will take into consideration the views of the Socioeconomic Council and of various consultations.

-- Before a law is passed and other decisions are made, at least 50 percent of the deputies must be present (previously, one-third of them).

-- New regulations are connected with the control checks carried out by the Sejm commissions with regard to the implementation of Sejm laws and decisions.

-- New regulations define the openness of Sejm sessions.

-- New regulations indicate which state agencies are obliged to attend Sejm sessions (members of the Council of Ministers as well as chairmen of the Defence Committee, the Supreme Chamber of Control, and the Polish National Bank).

-- All state agencies are elected and appointed by an absolute majority. Previously, a simple majority was enough to appoint or recall members of the government.

-- New regulations provide for Sejm procedures with regard to draft long-term plans and alternative national socioeconmic plans.

-- New regulations stipulate that the "Sejm Diary" is an unofficial record of Sejm proceedings, available to anyone.

-- Voivodship teams of deputies should plan their activities in the field in cooperation with the PRON and should invite to their meetings members of the Socioeconomic Council and the PRON Voivodship Council, which is in charge of implementing the election declaration in its area.

-- The proposal contained in the new regulations, that those who introduce draft laws into the Sejm should be able to withdraw it at all stages until the actual voting, was not accepted.

-- The scope of the Commission for Administration, Internal Affairs, and the Administration of Justice was extended by the inclusion of the issues concerning the local bodies of government and state administration.

-- The new Sejm regulations, the enactments of the Constitution, and the law on Sejm deputies' duties and rights, which was adopted a year ago, cover all the aspects of the functioning of our parliament.

BARCIKOWSKI DECRIES 'REVISIONIST FERVOR'

AU211053 Warsaw TRYBUNA LUDU in Polish 16 Jul 86 p 2

[Speech by PZPR Politburo Member Kazimierz Barcikowski at the 15 July Grunwald function to mark the anniversary of the 1410 victory over the Knights of the Cross]

[Excerpt] [Passage omitted] We should be proud of our achievements in our western and northern territories. We should drive away the imposters who are prepared to revise the Yalta agreement, which incorporates our right to what we have already accomplished in these territories and to our presence in them. Perhaps they will tell us at last what they have to offer Poland and the world and on whose behalf.

When our young people take over socialist Poland they should bear in mind that it came into being and developed in new borders created as a result of the victory scored over Hitlerite fascism by the Soviet Army and the anti-Hitlerite coalition. Our people made an important contribution to that victory. They were inspired in their struggle by the glory of Grunwald; that is why the Order of Grunwald was created for the Polish People's Armed Forces, which fought battles at the strategically most important front and paved the road to profound social reforms after the war. Let us also bear in mind that some people continue to hope that there will be a revenge and a revision of our borders and lthat socialism will be rejected. In view of this we again think, as we did centuries ago, of a great and only coalition -- this time a socialist coalition -- which is able to tame revisionist fervor before it becomes a flame and to ensure that the borders of the socialist camp are secure. Our young people should value the friendship of their colleagues from all countries, but they should not lose sight of war threats, appeals for a crusade, and the cynical trampling upon the rights of the people whom imperialism does not like for various reasons. Let us be aware of the fact that only a little part of what secret plans and technical projects contain leaks out for the public to know. Interference in our internal affairs is just one feature of such plans. Let us be united in the interest and defense strength of Poland and for the sake of the defense alliance of the socialist countries.

Young people should implement the 10th Congress resolutions and what they deem as most important for themselves. We know that they have many troubles and needs that are difficult to meet. They should make efforts to change life for the better and should make wise use of their youth, which is the finest period of one's life. [paragraph continues]

Young people, I hope that you will be greatly impressed by this Grunwald meeting.

SZALAJDA EVALUATES SOUTHEAST ASIAN ECONOMIC TALKS

AU211049 Warsaw RZECZPOSPOLITA in Polish 19-22 Jul 86 pp 1, 4

[Interview with Deputy Premier Zbigniew Szalajda by RZECZPOSPOLITA reporter Tomasz Bartoszewicz: "Useful Talks;" date and place not given]

[Excerpts] The Polish economic mission which held talks in Indonesia, Singapore, Malaysia, and Thailand returned to Poland on 18 July. In this connection, a RZECZPOSPOLITA reporter asked Deputy Premier Zbigniew Szalajda, chairman of this mission, for an interview.

[Bartoszewicz] Mr Premier, it seems that your visit to several Southeast Asian countries illustrates Poland's keen interest in developing economic cooperation with this region. Why is our activity aimed in that direction?

[Szalajda] The economies of the Southeast Asian countries have been developing rapidly in recent years. They hold a high payments status in the world, and some of them have accumulated considerable convertible currency reserves. The rapid industrialization that we have witnessed in this region is the result of large imports of machinery, equipment, and technology. The point is to enable Poland to join, by means of its exports, this industrialization process in a way that conforms to these countries' interests. After all, we possess an attractive offer in many spheres, one that has proved itself in other regions of the world. We are also interested in importing numerous raw materials from this region such as rubber, tin, or tea. However, in order to develop these imports we must balance them out by means of exports. [passage omitted]

[Bartoszewicz] Were any specific plans of cooperation with economic circles in the countries you visited discussed?

[Szalajda] For understandable reasons, our delegation concentrated on talks with government representatives on the subject of bilateral relations. However, we did hold interesting meetings with numerous important representatives of trade and economic circles. It seems that the government-level talks aroused these circles' interest in expanding economic contacts with Poland. All kinds of plans were proposed by both sides during talks. Which of these will be fulfilled depends on concrete talks and on the results of economic calculations. Governments will encourage the development of this cooperation and create suitable conditions for it, as Indonesia has already done.

[Bartoszewicz] The visit by the Polish economic mission under your chairmanship was accorded very high importance in the countries it visited. This is illustrated by press, radio, and television reports. It probably also shows that the governments of these countries are greatly interested in developing cooperation with Poland.

[Szalajda] It also shows that Poland is gradually regaining its role as a significant partner in international relations, and that the attempts to isolate our country in the international arena are a fiasco. The countries we visited are inhabited by 250 million people. They have raw material resources that are of interest to Poland. The visit has shown that they wish to cooperate with Poland, viewing our country as an interesting economic partner who regards cooperation with developing countries as a permanent part of its policies.

CEAUSESCU RECEIVES GREEK PARLIAMENTARIANS

AU211845 Bucharest AGERPRES in English 1800 GMT 21 Jul 86

[Text] Bucharest, AGERPRES 21/7/1986 -- On July 21, President Nicolae Ceausescu received in Neptun resort the parliamentary delegation of the Hellenic Republic led by Mikhail Stefanidhis, first vice-president of the National Assembly, now on a visit to Romania at the invitation of the Grand National Assembly.

During the interview which passed in a cordial atmosphere stress was laid on the positive course of the Romanian-Hellenic relations and the wish was expressed that they should further develop as well as the need for an active participation of the two countries' parliaments in strengthening the traditional Romanian-Hellenic cooperation and friendship.

Aspects of the international situation were approached during the interview. In context President Nicolae Ceausescu pointed to the need for everything possible to be done to halt the arms race and pass to the implementation of a general disarmament programme which should focus on nuclear disarmament and provide for the reduction of all types of weapons, troops and military spending. Emphasis was placed on the importance of a political, negotiated settlement of the states of tensions and conflict, of ensuring peace, security and detente on the planet.

President Nicolae Ceausescu underscored the significance of the transformation of the Balkans into a zone free of nuclear and chemical weapons, of foreign military bases, of the building of a climate of confidence and broad cooperation among all the countries in this region as part of a united Europe without weapons and wars. As to the world economic situation the need was highlighted for a comprehensive resolution of underdevelopment-related questions -- the developing countries' big foreign debt included -- for the establishment of a new international economic order. Stress was placed on the particularly important role of parliamentarians in strengthening international collaboration and cooperation in constructively solving the major problems of the present-day world, in asserting a new-type policy of detente, security and peace among nations.

SCINTEIA COMMENTARY PRAISES RCP ECONOMIC STRATEGY

AU201746 Bucharest AGERPRES in English 1537 GMT 20 Jul 86

["A Creative, Revolutionary Strategy" -- AGERPRES headline]

[Text] Bucharest AGERPRES 20/07/1986 -- A commentary run in the July 20 issue of SCINTEIA newspaper, devoted to the role of the 1965 Congress of the Romanian Communist Party, underscores that the historical path the Romanian people covered in the last twenty one years was imparted a rich significance by the orientation towards a radically renewing, revolutionary strategy. The courage of breaking away from rigid theoretical cliches, which confined social practice to the narrow frame of self-reproduction according to reestablished patterns, the repudiation of dogmatic practices, of the old, have unfettered personal, original thinking. This new spirit, the newspaper points out, shows in a creative realistic and analytic attitude, in the concordance between theory and the new phenomena of practice, in the open acknowledgement of the complex and contradictory nature of economic and social changes, in a trend towards their direct knowledge and revolutionary appraisal.

The policy promoted by the Romanian Communist Party, the newspaper SCINTEIA further writes, is characterized by original theoretical approaches, mirroring the synthesis achieved in light of general truths and of the specific conditions of the construction of the new system in Romania, in the context of the existence of the world socialist system, of peaceful coexistence between states with different social systems. One of those approaches regards the necessity of one's own effort, of mobilizing all material and human resources, in a unitarily coordinated action, with a view to defeating inherent contradictions and difficulties -- material or of another nature -- with a view to building a new, superior civilization.

The Ninth Congress, the commentary in SCINTEIA further writes, revitalized the policy pursuing and stepped-up development and moderization of the production forces, of industry and agriculture, and set it on new, scientific and realistic foundations; the strategy of the last twenty years has set forth from the basic role played by productive work as well as from its function as a decisive factor of revolutionary change in society, apt to support and enrich the economic and social life of the new system, to fulfil its humanistic vocation on a material, just as an other planes. This particular orientation, its translation into a firm policy of industrialization and harmonious distribution of the production forces across the country's territory are embodied by the powerful material base of Romanian socialist society, which can guarantee the country's advance on to higher stages of material and spiritual civilization. In a reference to the goals under the Eighth Five-Year Plan period, which will mark Romania's transition from the stage of a developing, to a higher one, of a medium developed country, the newspaper writes:

The scientific analysis of the current economic and social development stage has led to the conclusion that our country has the means to ensure a high-yield economy, with the modernization of the production processes in industry and agriculture to undergo deep-going revolutionary changes. Thereby, the premise is created for the production forces to attain high standards of preformance, economic efficiency and socio-human functionality, to fully meet the desideratum of the furtherance of many-sided development and secure a high standard of living, materially and spiritually. In this respect, SCINTEIA newspaper points out, the RCP relies on a set of concrete programmes for a steadfast advance on the path of the new revolution in science and technology, of the new agrarian revolution, conducive to the modernization of the whole economic and social activity, to a new quality of work and life. A corollary of the many-sided development path of the new system, the new quality presupposes the observance, in all areas, of criteria or principles, such as: proportionality, balance, rationality, efficiency, while the building of modern economy depends on and influences, in its turn, the flowering of science, education, culture, the improvement of production relations, of the framework of social organization and political management of society.

The current stage of Romanian economy, the requirements for the fulfillment of the 1986-1990 five-year plan cast light on the need to improve standards of organization and management, to step up political-ideological activities. To that effect, the newspaper underscores, the RCP concentrates on the qualitative standards of management, the deepening of worker self-management, a harmonious blending of initiative, autonomy and self-administration, which are stimulated by the new economic and financial mechanism, with the exigencies deriving from the single national plan, aimed at an efficient operation of the original and broad democratic system created in the wake of the Ninth Congress.

DIZDAREVIC MEETS DELORS, CHEYSSON IN BRUSSELS

LD220540 Belgrade TANJUG Domestic Service in Serbo-Croatian 1915 GMT 21 Jul 86

[Text] Brussels, 21 Jul (TANJUG) -- Raif Dizdarevic, federal secretary for foreign affairs, and Dr Oskar Kova, member of the Federal Executive Council, today pointed out to the top officials of the European Commission in Brussels the need to improve the conditions for Yugoslav exports into the European Community, balance the exchange, and reduce the trade deficit that has again grown to the disadvantage of Yugoslavia. In the meetings with Jacques Delors, president of the European Commission and Claude Cheysson, commissioner for the Mediterranean, Yugoslavia stressed its concern over the low increase of exchange, and the damage caused by the unilateral EEC decision to temporarily ban imports of agricultural products from our country after the Chernobyl nuclear catastrophe.

Delors and Cheysson positively assessed Yugoslavia's efforts in the direction of stabilizing its economy, stressing that as an independent, nonaligned country, Yugoslavia was an important factor of stability in Europe. They noted that the problems connected with the ban on food imports from Yugoslavia during May had been overcome. Both sides emphasized their interest and willingness to broaden mutual cooperation in all areas.

Federal Secretary Dizdarevic pointed out that it was necessary, through joint efforts, to broaden economic cooperation and to provide support for Yugoslavia's efforts to stabilize and restructure its strong export-oriented economy. The crisis of confidence in relations between Yugoslavia and the EEC, caused by the measures adopted after Chernobyl, has been followed by continued poor results in trade which last year left Yugoslavia with a deficit of over 1 billion dollars [currency not specified]. From 1980-84, there was a trend to balance the trade between Yugoslavia and the EEC, but in the past year it has considerably worsened to the disadvantage of our country. The Yugoslav side pointed this out, stressing the need to lift the limitations on Yugoslav exports and at the same time to improve other forms of cooperation as well, such as financial and industrial cooperation, tourism, joint investments, and others

In the talks with Karl-Heinz Narjes, commissioner for industrial affairs, information technology, research and science, Dr Kovac emphasized the need for industrial and technological cooperation to be carried out at a considerably higher level so as to gain a considerably higher share in the total trade relations between Yugoslavia and the EEC. They discussed the further possibilities of developing cooperation in science and technology, in particular within the framework and on the basis of the technological strategy of the "Twelve."

Tomorrow Federal Secretary Dizdarevic will preside over a ministerial meeting of the Council for Cooperation between Yugoslavia and the EEC, the main topics of which will be the new regulations on trade and financial cooperation between our country and the "Twelve" in the next 5 years.

Meets With Howe

[Text] Brussels, 22 Jul (TANJUG) -- Raif Dizdarevic, federal secretary for foreign affairs, met last night with Geoffrey Howe, British Foreign secretary and current president of the EC Council of Ministers.

Brief working negotiations were held on today's meeting of the Council for Yugoslav-EEC Cooperation, at which economic cooperation and especially new stipulations for trade links between Yugoslavia and the EEC in the next 5 years will be considered.

Dizdarevic and Howe also exchanged views on some current international situation questions and on the international activity of the two countries.

SUNDIC: PROGRESS IN FRG-USSR RELATIONS UNCERTAIN

LD212116 Zagreb Domestic Service in Serbo-Croatian 1300 GMT 21 Jul 86

[Milika Sundic commentary]

[Text] In Moscow talks have begun between the Soviet and FRG foreign ministers, Eduard Shevardnadze and Hans Dietrich Genscher, who arrived yesterday on an official visit to the USSR. Genscher's visit to Moscow is the subject of our commentary by Milika Sundic which asks how much the U.S. and Soviet allies in NATO and the Warsaw Pact can influence the political situation:

The possibilities of the Bonn government also being involved in the action as a mediator between the USSR and the United States, the basic reason for Genscher's visit to Moscow, are very modest, simply because Bonn does not have its own lastingly defined policy on the USSR. Even if it seems that the FRG could do something along these lines, its steps are usually not independent but have been coordinated with American moves. The Bonn government was one of the first to accept the stationing of American Pershing and cruise missiles on West German territory, and the first to support, without hesitation, Reagan's "star wars", without waiting in either case for the usual, although most frequently formal procedure, which proceeds this U.S. policy in relation to its allies.

True, it could not be said that the FRG is opposed to or is too afraid of an improvement in Soviet-American relations but the fact alone that it is virtually always satisfied to follow American policy makes it impossible for the FRG to be accepted as a partner for firmer and more enduring agreements. Moscow is, of course, keen on developing and improving economic cooperation with the FRG but when it is a matter of political cooperation, the Soviet Government is never sure what will remain of what is agreed with Bonn. Logically things should be the other way around because in the case of a confrontation between East and West the FRG would be the first to find itself in the worst position. Countless times practice has confirmed this, [words indistinct] especially during the cold war.

Genscher has prepared himself better for his journey to Moscow by having prior consultations with the French, British and Americans but despite this, it remains unclear how much all this was (?of benefit) to West German policy toward the USSR and how much this was a matter of the transmission of foreign stances and a matter in which the Bonn government could also find its place. [Words indistinct] however, in either case, Genscher's talks in Moscow may be based on real results which would bear the stamp of Bonn's policy and not on the basis of the tranmission of foreign stances [passage indistinct].

MIKULIC ADDRESSES CURRENT ECONOMIC SITUATION

LD212125 Belgrade TANJUG Domestic Service in Serbo-Croatian 1545 GMT 21 Jul 86

[Text] Nis, 21 Jul (TANJUG) -- Everybody in the country is talking about the economic and social crisis but few are putting forward any proposals or taking measures or actions to overcome the present situation. In additidon, many are reacting to our initiatives and measures to resolve the problems as if they were dutybound to criticize or arbitrate and then proceed to offer us models which are not suitable for our self-managing society.

This was stated by FEC President Branko Mikulic in his talks today with his businessmen and representatives of the city's socio-political life. Branko Mikulic, accompanied by Desimir Jevtic, president of the Executive Council of the Assembly of the SR of Serbia, is paying a visit to Nis. The subject of the talks was the implementation of the long-term program of economic stabilization as well as the effect which the new economic policy measures are having on the activity of organizations of associated labor.

Branko Mikulic explained in detail the circumstances in which the long-term program of economic stabilization was being implemented as well as the measures designed to boost production and exports, to alleviate the situation in the economy and ensure financial consolidation in organizations of associated labor.

When assessing the situation on the Yugoslav market, Branko Mikulic warned how it took only 14 days in June for prices "to explode"; some went up by as much as 5 to 19 times. The price of bread was also increased. We reacted by passing a decision by which the prices of a number of products were returned to their previous level while the price of bread was returned to its level before 25 June.

Mikulic also reminded flour mills and bread producers about the need to keep the market regularly supplied with flour and other products.

Some organizations of associated labor reacted to our decision by threatening to increase their prices in order to compensate for what they "lost" and in that way also compromise the adopted measures. This threat, Mikulic said, is given support in some commentaries in the media. The FEC, Mikulic added, is not afraid of such threats and is in the process of preparing countermeasures. No one should threaten us with shortages, we have already earmarked the funds for creating material and market reserves and also for necessary imports. As a result, over the next few months, large amounts of imported consumer goods will appear on our market.

Mikulic stressed that citizens of Yugoslavia can rest assured that there will be no shortages. He announced new tough measures of inspection and control, and of economic and legal sanctions, as well as the possibility of replacing those individuals from management positions who create artificial shortages and disruptions on the market.

Those who have already started publically to defend this attitude and conduct, which might become a practice tomorrow, should sit down and have a good think about for whom or for what they are putting their professional reputation and that of public personalities on the line. Mikulic posed the following question: "What justification is there for increasing prices when the economy's commitments are being reduced along with its expenditure for repaying interest rates, when a ban has been imposed on withdrawing additional funds for non-economic investments, and other measures introduced?"

Is not the orientation toward a better use of the production capacities, saving, exports, and increased production economically more justified and correct than to go for price increases; This is where the way out of the crisis lies, not in continued inflation.

We must ask ourselves: What is it that we have to give your support to and continue to support with determination: it is a more responsible attitude to the socially-owned property and means, more efficient and productive work, non self-management and extremely irresponsible behavior, Mikulic said.

Having noted that for over a month and a half the FEC searched for the sources of funds to stimulate exports and resolve the exchange rate differentials, Mikulic went on to say that the FEC had two options, either to dip into part of the economy's revenue or to use a share of the population's earnings. We opted for the latter which resulted in a decision to increase the retail price of petrol and oil by 20 percent. Commenting on the objections to this decision, the president of the FEC noted that "it seems that we always react with antagonism to those measures which are in line with economically and socially correct conduct of transferring the commitments from the economy onto a section of the population. Then why is everybody talking about the economy being overburdened, which, of course, is true.

Speaking about the policy of the dinar exchange rate and realistic interest rates, Mikulic stressed that the FEC had no intention of abandoning the implementation of the realistic economic criteria or the evalution of the realistic production factors but will continue to create conditions for their real and comprehensive implementation.

He also commented on the remarks about intervention laws on limiting the increase of personal incomes in some organizations of associated labor and uneconomic investments and said that for years we had been spending more than realistically possible and above the levels of what had been established by social agreements, and that personal incomes were often increased to the disadvantage of accumulation and amortization. Our orientation, Mikulic stressed, should be that personal incomes are increased in accordance with the growth of production, exports, productivity, and the decrease of running costs. Because, "prosperity", which is the result of foreign and future means, later has to be paid very dearly. We have been paying this price for years, repaying foreign loans which we have irrationally spent. We also will have to pay a high price because of the policy of unrealistic amortization, Mikulic pointed out.

The FEC president stressed that the measures had to be viewed in their entirety and that a "balance" of each of the measures in relation to each work collective, branch, or sociopolitical community should not be calculated. We have become used to living with inflation. In such conditions, consciousness has also become deformed, and many are only thinking about price increases and accumulating income without work and the creation of new income. As long as such consciousness and practice are not overcome and a u-turn made toward production and exports, polling labor and resources, joint programs of production and exports, there are no prospects that we will win the battle with inflation and get out of the complex economic situation. The battle for stabilization and dynamic development cannot be successfully conducted and won by the FEC nor by the Republican Executive Councils, but by the whole society, Branko Mikulic pointed out in talks with business men and representatives of the sociopolitical life of Nis.

Today Branko Mikulic and Desimir Jevtic also visited the Nis machine industry and a cattle farm of the agro-industrial combine in Donja Tranava near Nis.

SAWPY DISCUSSES CHANGES TO POLITICAL SYSTEM

LD211733 Belgrade TANJUG Domestic Service in Serbo-Croatian 1119 GMT 21 Jul 86

[Excerpts] Belgrade, 21 Jul (TANJUG) -- Two tendencies currently are attempting to endanger the action strength of the changes initiated to develop the political system. The first is reflected in normativistic false notions and the second is the attempt to renew discussions that lead back to the dilemmas and questions overcome during the work on the Critical Analysis and in the public debate on that document. These tendencies will be treated by the SAWP as resistance to the political system's development and it will oppose them resolutely. This was stated today by Milivoj Tatic in his introductory remarks at a session of the SAWPY Federal Conference section for the political system's development. Views were exchanged at the meeting, on what has been accomplished to revitalize the draft changes to the Critical Analysis. [passage omitted]

It was stated at the session that work on changes to individual articles of the Constitution and the Law on Associated Labor has begun in the SFRY Assembly. On the basis of consultations hitherto, it was assessed that the most suitable thing would be for the SFRY Presidency to set in motion the initiative for changing individual sections of the Constitution. However, it was assessed that the mode of proceeding with the constitutional changes must be implemented on a united basis. The SFRY Presidency will send its proposals to the SFRY Assembly's Federal Chamber once all questions have been considered and then on for public discussion. A framework for a work program also has been approved in the Federal Social Council for questions relating to the social order and theses for changes to the Law on Associated Labor have been prepared in the SFRY Assembly. It was noted that activities to realize changes are being carried out in the republics and provinces as well.

COMMISSION DISCUSSES NUCLEAR PLANT SAFETY

LD220002 Belgrade TANJUG Service in Serbo-Croatian 1353 GMT 21 Jul 86

[Text] Belgrade 21 Jul (TANJUG) -- The delegation in the Commission for Environmental Improvement today accepted with satisfaction a report by representatives of the Krsko nuclear power plant. According to the report, over the last 4 years the power plant operated in a safe and stable way. However, the delegates asked for additional facts about the plant's safety. They were primarily interested in the comparative facts relating to the control of radiation levels in the vicinity of the plant.

Since its inauguration 4 years ago Krsko has produced 15,000 gigawatts of electricity or 6 percent of Yugoslavia's overall production. With 80 percent of its capacity being exploited to the fullest, the Krsko nuclear power plant ranks among the more successful industrial enterprises of this kind both in European and world terms.

The workers in Krsko reached the conclusion that our nuclear power plant is a safe and reliable source of electrical energy on the basis of the indicators of the effect the power plant has had on the environment. The emission of "liquid and gas effluents" as well as the introduction of radioactive material in the wide environment are regularly monitored within a 12-km circle around the plant. The Sava River is also being monitored for 100 km downstream, on the basis of which it was concluded that the power plant's work has not essentially affected the environment.

The questions which followed an introductory speech by Janez Dular, director of the Krsko plant, mostly referred to plant safety. Have we bought the most modern equipment for the power plant from Westinghouse, what about the chlorine which the nuclear power plant was releasing into the Sava, how is the nuclear waste being deposited, does the Krsko plant satisfy all the conditions from the law on the protection from ionized radiation, what would happen in case of a big catastrophe, and so forth?

The technology built into the Krsko is identical to other power plants built at the same time in the world, representatives of the Krsko plant said: A lasting solution to storing waste of low and medium radioactivity will most probably come in 2 to 3 years. For the time being, as it was said, the waste is kept in storage at the plant. This should not cause concern, since this waste is no more dangerous than such waste from hospitals and industry. It was stresed that the Krsko plant is not releasing chlorine into the Sava. The federal law is being respected and since pertinent regulations are still being drafted, special republican regulations have been adopted.

The Krsko plant was said to be always on the alert against a large-scale catastrophe. In 1984 an incident was simulated in the nuclear power plant, and the population was evacuated. Furthermore, each month, commissions for human environment of the Republic Socialist Alliance receive reports on the situation in the power plant, and from time to time reports are also sent to the World Agency for Atomic Energy in Vienna.

Delegates then asked how it was possible that a world organization was being informed about the work of the Krsko plant, while there was no information at the federal level. There is no doubt about the safety of the power plant, but there are no comparative data on the situation in the plant's vicinity after its 4 years of work and before its construction. The Krsko representatives promised more detailed data.

At the session mention was also made of the social agreement to prevent the pollution of the Sava basin. This task involves 98 municipalities in Serbia, Slovenia, Croatia, Bosnia-Hercegovina and Vojvodina. Work on the agreement is about to be completed and, as it was said, its signing was expected in the autumn.

In contrast to this agreement, the harmonization of republican and provincial views on the solidarity provision of electricity in Montenegro is more difficult because the contruction of a power plant in the Tara canyon has been abandoned. Representatives of the republics and provinces will hold another meeting near the end of the month to harmonize their views and speed the adoption of this agreement.

SFRY PRESIDENCY STATEMENT ON KOSOVO SITUATION

LD212319 Belgrade TANJUG Domestic Service in Serbo-Croatian 1515 GMT 21 Jul 86

[Text] Belgrade, 21 Jul (TANJUG) -- It is necessary to expose all possible attempts at diluting or misinterpreting the gist of the measures and actions designed to assist the implementation of the conclusions adopted by the SFRY Presidency and by the LCY Central Committee Presidium which concern the political and security situation in the Socialist Autonomous Province [SAP] of Kosovo. Objective, responsible, and timely information about the situation and developments in the province should contribute to the efforts to stabilize the situation in Kosovo and, by implication, in Yugoslavia as a whole. This was stated by the SFRY Presidency which met today to discuss the manner and extent to which the measures and actions by the SFRY Presidency and by the LCY Central Committee Presidium are being implemented. The following statement was issued in this connection.

The SFRY Presidency discussed the measures and actions aimed at ensuring the implementation of the conclusions by the SFRY Presidency and by the LCY Central Committee Presidium concerning the political and security situation in the SAP of Kosovo.

On the basis of the reports compiled by the appropriate federal, republican, and provincial organs, the Presidency concluded that the administrative and judicial organs as well as the sociopolitical organizations have embarked upon broad-based activities aimed at implementing the adopted measures and actions. The work is being completed or is nearing completion by the working groups established by the federal, republican and provincial administrative organs which are directly looking into the organizational ability of and the efficiency and adherence to law in the work of the relevant organs in Kosovo. In the course of their work so far the joint working groups formed by the above-mentioned organs examined several thousand cases in all the municipalities of the SAP of Kosovo, primarily those to which citizens drew attention in their complaints. The judicial and administrative organs in Kosovo were and still are being given the appropriate expert assistance in their efforts to eliminate the existing shortcomings while particular attention is being focused on eliminating the irregularities in the process of resolving the issues concerning the safety of the citizens in the province and their property.

The joint group of the commissions for complaints of the federal organs and sociopolitical organizations and the assemblies of the Socialist Republic of Serbia and the SAP of Kosovo has far looked into 181 complaints in 15 Kosov municipalities. The majority of these complaints have already been resolved and settled while some are in the process of being resolved. The commission of the Federal Secretariat for Internal Affairs examined 622 complaints and petitions in 22 municipalities in Kosovo. These complaints and petitions relate to the conduct of the organs of internal affairs and their members. The commission made suggestions about the way to resolve the majority of these. Other necessary measures and actions from the conclusions concerning the sphere of all-people's defense and social self-protection and internal affairs have also been taken.

A number of activities designed to speed up Kosovo's economic development as well as development in the spheres of culture, education, information, and publishing is underway. The appropriate organs from the Socialist Republic of Serbia and the SAP of Kosovo have reached an agreement about staging a whole series of cultural events in Kosovo. An initiative has been launched for the preparation of a long-term program of translating works from Serbo-Croatian into Albanian and vice versa. Work is underway to promote mutual cooperation in publishing textbooks, enrolling students, in resolving the issues of students living standards and in the future development of universities, etc.

The Presidency supported the activities which are being carried out and stressed that the conclusions of the SFRY Presidency and of the LCY Central Committee Presidium as well as the resolution of the 13th LCY Congress enjoin the state organs and sociopolitical organizations in the federation and the socialist republics and SAP's to invest maximum efforts, within their constitutional, legal and statutory purviews and within the set deadlines, to launch an even more broad-based and intensified activity in carrying out the set tasks.

It is necessary to ensure full freedom, security and equality for all citizens regardless of their national affiliation, to take measures which will help to remove the causes of the emigration of Serbians and Montenegrins from Kosovo and also to resolve Kosovo's economic problems and those of its development in a more efficient way. The SFRY Presidency stressed the need for concerted efforts to resolve the very serious economic problems affecting Kosovo. In this, more efficient implementation of the measures contained in the resolution on social development in 1986 is of particular importance. The importance was also stressed for successful cooperation and coordination between the federal, republican, and provincial organs and organizations in implementing the envisaged measures and actions in Kosovo. It was agreed that the Federal Executive Council should assess the reports by each of the individual organs about their work in carrying out these tasks and that it should inform the SFRY Assembly about its views and proposals for further actions.

The need was also stressed to expose all possible attempts to dilute or misinterpret the gist of the measures and actions designed to assist the implementation of the conclusions by the SFRY Presidency and the LCY Central Committee on Kosovo. Objective, responsible, and timely information about the situation in Kosovo should, it was stressed, contribute to the positive development and stabilization of the political situation in the province and, by implication, in Yugoslavia as a whole.

The need was also pointed out for countering in a more determined and organized manner, Albanian, Serbian, and any other form or kind of nationalist, irredentist and counterrevolutionary activity. The problems and difficulties burdening our country and, in particular, the situation in Kosovo are being used as a pretext for attacks on our social system, on the LC and on all the achievements of our revolution. Evidence of this can be found in the attempts by nationalists to incite the departure of Serbians and Montenegrins from Kosovo despite everything that has been and is being done.

Only by a consistent struggle in all localities against negative tendencies and by resolving the problems and difficulties facing us shall we guarantee the continued development of our entire community, the statement by the SFRY Presidency says.

CAUSES FOR CURRENT WORK STOPPAGES DISCUSSED

AU211538 Belgrade Domestic Service in Serbo-Croatian 1300 GMT 21 Jul 86

[Text] The Presidium of the Republican Trade Union Council of Montenegro today discussed the causes of frequent work stoppages in the republic. There have been 14 strikes in 13 work organizations since the start of the new year. (Janos Stojanovic) reports from Titograd:

The participants in the discussion (?started with a detailed) analysis of stoppages in four forestry and wood processing work organizations, two building construction organizations, and one in each of the following work organizations: metal-processing, trading, communal activities. [as heard]

The total number of lost hours amounted to (?16,000). Most stoppages occurred in loss-making organizations and their common cause was workers dissatisfaction with their personal and material position, the slowdown and stagnation of self-management, the weakening of the material position of associated labor and the strengthening of the centers of economic and political power, excess deductions from incomes, etc.

Surprisingly, as it was stated today, all activities during the work stoppages and the holding of meetings due to stoppages are conducted and directed by committees for all people's defense and social self-protection and "these activities," -- I am citing the details of the official analysis -- "are predominantly directed toward identifying the organizers of the work stoppages, without a thorough examination of the causes and motives."

BRIEFS

SERBIA'S JOKSOVIC BURIED -- Belgrade, 14 Jul (TANJUG) -- Branislav Joksovic, who at the last congress of the Serbian LC was elected member of the Serbian LC Central Committee and chairman of the Commission for the History of the Servian LC, was buried in Belgrade today. Branislav Joksovic died on 11 July from injuries sustained in a car crash. [Summary] [Belgrade TANJUG Domestic Service in Serbo-Croatian 1439 GMT 14 Jul 86 LD]

NEW VOJVODINA SAWP PRESIDENT -- Novi Sad, 10 Jun -- The Presidium of the Provincial Conference of the Vojvodina SAWP approved the list of candidates for the new leadership which will be elected at the session of the Provincial Conference of the Vojvodina SAWP scheduled for 23 June. Istvan Rajcan, delegate of the Sociopolitical Chamber of the Vojvodina Assembly, was nominated as new president, and Djordje Milutinovic, member of the Vojvodina Executive Council, for new secretary of the Vojvodina SAWP. Jovan Dejanovic was again proposed for a member of the Presidium of the SAWPY Federal Conference. [Summary] [Belgrade POLITIKA in Serbo-Croatian 11 June 86 p 6 AU]

RELATIONS WITH ANGOLA -- According to the head of the Yugoslav Economic Mission in Angola, the value of Yugoslav exports to Angola exceeded $29 million in 1985. Yugoslavia's exports to Angola exceeded $29 million in 1985. Yugoslavia's exports to Angola mainly consist of medical equipment, agricultural machines, transport vehicles, medicines, and food products. Cooperation between the two countries' airlines has also been described as successful. The head of this mission says that Angola is Yugoslavia's most important trading partner south of the Sahara. Two Yugoslav firms are currently working in Angola on oil exploration. [Summary] [Belgrade BORBA in Serbo-Croatian 19 June 86 p 6 AU]

ELECTRICITY COSTS SOAR -- Titograd, 20 Jul (TANJUG) -- The Montenegro electric industry workers council has adopted a decision to increase the price of electricity from 1 August by 32 percent for citizens and by 38 percent for other consumers. At the same time, the council adopted a provisional decision on salaries for the industry's managers. The Titograd POBJEDA reports that the basic salary of the chairman of the management board is to be 221,000 dinars per month; that of management board members is to be just above 200,000 dinars. Workers in the industry earned an average of 147,600 dinars in May, more than twice the average wage in the republic. Correspondent Ivica Seferovic comments that those employed in the industry have evidently gotten used to privileges thanks to their monopoly position. The 32 percent increase in electricity costs announced for August, and the latest increase of 20 percent, which has already been announced for September, will doubtless further raise the standard of living in the industry, but can hardly be said to be in line with keeping inflation down. INDUSTRIAL PRODUCTION INCREASE -- Belgrade, July 19 (TANJUG) -- Yugoslavia's industrial production increased by 5.2 percent in the January-through-June period this year as against the same six-month period last year. The highest increase in output was registered in iron production -- 15.6 percent, then in oil products -- 12.6 percent, in chemical products -- 10.9 percent, the Yugoslav Institute for Statistics announced. Falls in output were registered in the processing of non-ferrous metals, in the production of building materials and in shipbuilding. At the same time, Yugoslavia's overall exports amounted to four billion and 646 million dollars, i.e., by 2.5 percent less than in the first half last year. The value of imported goods and services was put at about 5.17 billion dollars, i.e., 0.6 percent up, while imports were covered with exports by 81 percent. ZHIVKOV, ATANASOV RECEIVE IRAQI MINISTER 'AZIZ

[Text] Sofia, July 22 (BTA) -- Today, State Council President Todor Zhivkov received Mr. Tariq 'Aziz, deputy prime minister and minister of foreign affairs of Iraq, who is paying an official visit to this country. Mr. Tariq 'Aziz delivered the greetings of the Iraqi leader Mr. Saddam Husayn and his wishes for the prosperity of Bulgaria.

The talks discussed the state and prospects of bilateral relations, which were assessed as very good. The two sides also discussed topical issues of the international situation. They stressed the necessity for new political thinking the the nuclear age and for the consolidation of the relations between all countries and the promotion of cooperation in the name of peace and security on the planet. Our times require the taking of immediate measures for stopping the arms race and for eliminating all mass annihilation weapons.

Mr. Todor Zhivkov and Mr. Tariq 'Aziz declared themselves for the settlement of the conflict between Iraq and Iran and for finding a just and lauting solution to the problems between the two countries.

In connection with the Middle East crisis it was stressed that it can be resolved only on a just basis respecting the interests of all, including the irreversible rights of the Palestinian people for founding a state on their own territory. The talks were attended by Foreign Minister Petur Mladenov. Mr. Tariq 'Aziz also had talks with Mr. Georgi Atanasov, chairman of the Council of Ministers, with whom they discussed a wide range of issues of bilateral relations.

DIFFICULTIES FOR TURKISH DRIVERS DENIED

AU221716 Sofia BTA in English 1525 GMT 22 Jul 86

[Text] Sofia, July 22 (BTA) -- "We would like to stress once again that no order stating that it is obligatory for foreign drivers to own international driving licenses when driving non-stop through Bulgaria has been issued," Colonel Nikolay Resilovski of the Traffic Safety Department (KAT) with the Ministry of Internal Affairs said before a BTA reporter today.

According to information provided by Turkish citizens driving through Bulgaria in the last few days, the West European press, radio and television continue to assert that enormous fines are allegedly imposed by the Bulgarian authorities on foreigners who do not own international driving licences. Those ready to start on their way to Turkey have to wait several days in order to receive such a licence. When driving through Bulgaria they are greatly surprised that no one asks them to produce the document. 68,555 cars driven by Turks passed non-stop through Bulgaria on the E-80 international highway on July 20, 1986 and on July 21 their number was 60,963. Almost all drivers possessed new international driving licences which they had received after waiting for several days due to the strange campaign in Western Europe.

"Many Turkish citizens have told us that they were sent back from the FRG border check points in order to get themselves such licences", Colonel Resilovski said.

Annually some 600-700 thousand cars owned by Turks drive non-stop through Bulgaria on the 370-km long E-80 highway. The peak periods are in July and in the beginning of August in the direction of Turkey and about a month later in the opposite direction.

The Bulgarian authorities have specified 13 places between the border check-points of Kalotina (on the border with Yugoslavia) and Kapitan Andreevo (on the border with Turkey) where the transit travellers may rest, i.e. every 30 kilometers. These are big parking lots, motels, camping sites. According to the transport control authorities at present there are no traffic jams along the E-80 international highway and the tranit vehicle columns for Turkey travel at ease. From May 1 to July 10, 1986 the KAT authorities have sanctioned 3,769 Turkish drivers, at an average daily traffic of 14,000 cars. 33 percent out of them have been fined from 2 to 5 leva, 65 percent - from 5 to 20 leva, and only 2 percent have been fined up to 200 leva for heavy road accidents. According to observations, during the recent years, on Bulgarian territory, the transit drivers make less infringements of traffic regulations than on the territory of other European countries through which they pass. 60 percent of the sanctions are for exceeding the speed limit. Heavy road accidents have resulted only from overfatigue or because the drivers have fallen asleep. Often the cars of Turkish citizens get out of order -- mostly old makes of mini-buses. In such cases the emergency road service of the Union of Bulgarian Drivers transports the damaged cars to the Bulgaro-Turkish border.

Representatives of the border control authorities and of the Bulgarian customs said that in spite of the great accumulation of transit travellers, in the peak periods, a car does not need more than 10 minutes to pass the border check-point.

LEUSCHNER VIEWS STOCKHOLM CDE NEGOTIATIONS

DW222018 East Berlin Domestic Service in German 1700 GMT 21 Jul 86

[Guenter Leuschner's weekly international review]

[Excerpts] [Passage omitted] The delegates to the Stockholm Conference on Disarmament in Europe [CDE] planned to go into recess this week following the conclusion of the 11th round of negotiations, and before the decisive final phase of the conference will begin on 18 August. However, France, supported by the Soviet Union, suggested that work should be continued during the summer recess and that every opportunity should be utilized to guarantee a successful outcome by 19 September despite all difficulties. That was suggested immediately following Mitterrand's visit to the Soviet Union. It clearly shows that there is a connection between the two aspects.

In fact, not only the mood of the delegates to the Stockholm negotiations has improved. The head of the Soviet delegation, Grinevskiy, on Friday spoke about progress which had been reached in the past days and weeks. The rate of the editorial work is now increasing, even though it is not yet satisfactory. By declaring their readiness at the conclusion of the last round to postpone the announcement of the air forces' independent activities to the next phase of the conference, the socialist countries have shown an accommodating attitude and thereby eliminated another obstacle. The NATO states, too, in the past weeks signalled compromise readiness, so that the guarded optimism which is spreading everywhere in Stockholm is indeed justified.

Yet, it seems to be premature to speak of a breakthrough. On the one hand, two or three difficult problems still have to be resolved. On the other, we cannot so easily forget what happened in Bern several weeks ago. There, at the CSCE meeting of experts on human contacts, a complete and sound document was submitted to the delegates, which was approved by 34 states. It was, however, rejected by one country -- the United States. Therefore, we will probably only know on the last day of the Stockholm conference whether optimism is justified.

It will naturally be of utmost importance for the Vienna CSCE meeting in the fall. The socialist countries want that third follow-up meeting since the signing of the Helsinki Final Act to play a very important part in the reactivation of detente on our continent. It can do that if the other European countries, also are determined to achieve that goal.

Reduced to the essential, the intensive European dialogue which is taking place in these summer weeks and of which Mitterrand's visit to Moscow, the Soviet foreign minister's negotiations in London, and now Genscher's visit to the Soviet Union are particularly striking examples, is to serve one goal -- the mobilization of all forces in Europe for a change from confrontation to political and military detente.

By convincingly demonstrating that it does not make policy over others' heads and interests but utilizes even the smallest bases for joint action, the Soviet Union obviously has brought about some change in the thinking of some West European politicians. That is at least a beginning.

There may have been occasional irritation in the West about the pace of Soviet policy. But Gorbachev's recent message to a number of European statemen and to the countries of the 6-state-initiative once again explained the reason for that pace.

It says that it is necessary, because otherwise the modernization of arms technology would outstrip political efforts, and decisions would be made by machines with which failures or human shortcomings are possible everywhere, as the report on the causes of the Chernobyl disaster has shown.

Therefore, if some movement is clearly evident in the European countries' policy -- first signs of more cooperation -- the question naturally remains as to whether that can also be said about the United States. Meanwhile there is an agreement on a Soviet-U.S. foreign minister's meeting which will probably be held in September. There is an agreement, which was suggested by the Soviet Union, to hold a special session of the two countries' consultative commission on problems in connection with SALT II. Through that channel the Soviet Union would like to make the United States rescind its announced decision on SALT. Finally, there will also be experts' talks between both countries on nuclear tests. Thereby the United States after 6 years now revises its 1980 decision on breaking off the negotiations on banning all nuclear tests. [passage omitted]

THE WALL STREET JOURNAL even said in a commentary that the continuing arms race touched off a deepening crisis of conscience. There is no doubt about that as far as the scientists are concerned. But how about the politicians? While stating its readiness to discuss the issue of nuclear tests with the Soviet Union, the United States carried out a new nuclear test. A spokeswoman of the organization "American Peace Test" made the sharp remark that the administration was double-dealing by saying that it was serious about negotiations and at the same time continuing its nuclear test program.

The problem no longer is the verification issue. The United States' recent nuclear explosion has been accurately monitored by scientists in Kazakhstan -- thousands of kilometers away. Thus basically the common goal of Soviet and U.S. scientists has already been reached. There are no verification problems. [passage omitted]

DEPUTY DEFENSE MINISTER AT OFFICERS' GRADUATION

[Excerpts] Dresden (ADN) -- On Thursday [17 July] the graduation of the 25th class of the "Friedrich Engels" military academy in Dresden was celebrated with a military ceremony which marked several years of studies. Colonel General Fritz Streletz, deputy minister of national defense and chief of the Main Staff of the National People's Army [NVA], presented the diplomas to the future commanders and political and staff officers of the NVA, Border Troops, and other protective and security organs of the GDR as well as of fraternal armies. This year for the first time comrades-in-arms of the Czechoslovak People's Army have graduated from this military educational institution, together with members of the Armed Forces of the USSR, the Polish Army, and of the Vietnamese People's Army. [passage omitted]

Participating in the event were Hans Modrow, first secretary of the Dresden Bezirk SED leadership; members of the collegium of the Ministry of National Defense, as well as generals, admirals, and officers of the NVA, the Border Troops, and other GDR protective and security organs, and of the Soviet Army. Also present were the military, naval, and air attaches of the Embassies of the USSR, the Polish People's Republic, and the SRV.

FRG TV REPORTS GDR POPULATION DECREASING

DW222051 Mainz ZDF Television Network in German 1700 GMT 22 Jul 86

[Text] The GDR population continues to decrease. That was announced by the Informations Buero West [West Berlin Information Office] with reference to official data from East Berlin. Although there are more births than deaths in the GDR, the population development continues to be slightly retrograde. The office is of the view that the increasing number of GDR citizens moving to the West accounts for that development. The GDR has a little less than 17 million inhabitants.

BRIEFS

COOPERATION TALKS WITH NICARAGUA -- On Wednesday [18 June] Gerhard Beil, minister of foreign trade, received for a friendly talk Alejandro Martinez Cuenca, minister of foreign trade of Nicaragua. They discussed questions of further deepening the economic cooperation in 1986 and the years after. Among other things, the GDR delivers trucks, products of communication technology, pesticides, and medicines to Nicaragua and imports raw coffee, cotton, cigars, rum, bananas, and textiles products. CUBAN PARTY DELEGATION VISITS 17-22 JULY

LD221658 Budapest MTI in English 1531 GMT 22 Jul 86

[Text] Budapest, July 22 (MTI) -- A delegation of the Communist Party of Cuba, led by Jaime Crombet, secretary of the Central Committee, visited Hungary from July 17 to 22 on the invitation of the Hungarian Socialist Workers' Party Central Committee. The delegation met Ferenc Havasi, member of the HSWP political committee and secretary of the Central Committee.

The delegation held consultations with leading representatives of the economic management organs, and visited Veszprem County. The delegation was familiarized with the Hungarian economic management system and its operation, the practical application of results achieved in scientific and technical development, experiences gained in material and energy saving, the structure of the retail and servicing network, and visited industrial and tourism establishments.

SARLOS MEETS WITH LUXEMBOURG PARLIAMENTARIANS

LD221503 Budapest MTI in English 1420 GMT 22 Jul 86

[Text] Budapest, July 22 (MTI) -- Parliamentary talks between Hungary and Luxembourg began Tuesday in Budapest. The Hungarian delegation is led by Istvan Sarlos, president of the National Assembly, the Luxembourg side by Leon Bolendorff, president of the House of Deputies.

In his introductory speech Istvan Sarlos stressed it was the first meeting in Hungary of parliamentary delegations of the two countries. The Luxembourg delegation is returning the visit of a Hungarian National Assembly delegation in 1982. Following [as received] Istvan Sarlos detailed the political and economic state of Hungary, and its foreign policy efforts, he set forth the major principles of operation of the Hungarian legislative body, and of the standing committees and discussed the practice of preliminary debate, and of examining the proposals and observations of deputies related to the documents to be submitted to the National Assembly.

The deputies from Luxembourg were particularly interested in the financial situation of Hungary, the principles and practice of the taxation system, budget management, and employment policy. Leon Bolendorff evaluated the meeting as practical and useful. He proposed the sides examine the possibilities of developing bilateral cooperation in several fields, including cultural, transportation, forwarding contacts, and direct trade relations.

Following the discussions, Istvan Sarlos hosted a lunch in honour of the Luxembourg delegation.

Janos Peter, vice-president of the National Assembly, also participated in the day's events.

JARUZELSKI EXAMINES POLAND'S FUTURE IN INTERVIEW

LD220001 Budapest Domestic Service in Hungarian 1900 GMT 21 Jul 86

[Interview with Wojciech Jaruzelski, first secretary of the PZPR Central Committee, president of the Council of State, by Hungarian correspondents Tamas Alaksza, Andras Domany and Jozef Laszlo for Hungarian radio and television, in Warsaw; date and place not given, Jaruzelski answers in Polish with superimposed translation -- recorded]

[Text] [Reporter] Comrade General, you are less and less frequently addressed as comrade general. What has changed?

[Jaruzelski] People still address me as general, though perhaps less frequently, it is true. This is a result of normalization, one of its external signs, so to speak. However, I must stress at the same time that the concept of general in a socialist army is not in contradiction with the designation of party leader, or the politician of a socialist state. In this sense I do not see any basic contradiction. Whether I wear a uniform or not is not essential, only a matter of form, as is the way in which I am addressed. The most important thing is that this is the external sign, the expression of normalization.

[Reporter] I have heard the gossip, back in 1982, that the comrade general does not manage to go home to rest and for this reason he often spends the night in his workroom on a camp bed. When were you able to rest at home, comrade general? In other words, when did consolidation make this possible?

[Jaruzelski] My life developed in such a way that I always worked a great deal. I regularly got home very late as minister of national defense, and then the exercises came thick and fast. I used to go to the exercise fields a lot. At times I did not sleep for 3 to 4 nights in a row. People even wondered how I managed. From this point of view my stamina is fairly good. The years 1980 to 1982 demanded an even more stringent regime. Not only did I have to spend a lot of time working, but there was enormous tension, spiritual effort, and many times, it is true, I could not even leave this room. Even if I did not sleep on a camp bed, it was on a narrow sofa and I only got 1 to 2 hours' sleep. As a matter of fact, this sometimes happens even now when I have to perform some very urgent work, when the daytime hours are not sufficient for this. But I must say that since 1983 it has also been noticeable in my life's rhythm how normalization has been progressing.

[Reporter] Comrade General, in various interviews you have already said that the most difficult decision of your life was made in connection with 13 December 1981, the state of emergency. In your opinion, could there be such a difficult decision now, or a similarly difficult decision; in other words, when was it harder to lead the country, then, in the most dramatic period, or now, in the most difficult period?

[Jaruzelski] Well, these are things that cannot be compared. I once said with regard to the whole atmosphere, the character of the events, that the most dramatic phase was now behind us, but that the most difficult one was still ahead of us. The decision of 13 December was extremely difficult. But now I can say that it was made so that such a decision would never again have to be made. That is its significance. The decision was not aimed at defending that which was old and worn out, but it was aimed at creating the conditions for the introduction of the new thing that was proclaimed by the Ninth Congress.

When we say that the most difficult phase is still ahead of us, that is to be understood to mean that the most difficult thing is when persistently, day by day, the difficulties towering on the way have to be overcome. If I may put it like this, we have to overcome even our own selves. When the way of thinking of people, of big social groups has to be transformed; when new forms of work, of duty, of democracy, of discipline have to be created; when we step into a new phase in socialism's development; when new methods once again have to be sought; when both the past and the struggle going on inside and outside are a burden; or something that was so dramatic... [Jaruzelski changes thought] All of this is now certainly history. But we also have to tread the path before us across very difficult terrain. I would put it this way. We have to roll a heavy stone up the mountain, but this is no longer the job that Sisyphus had. The stone does not roll us back, we go further and further and higher and higher. Perhaps we will never reach the summit; the only thing that matters is if the stone becomes lighter and lighter and proceeds upwards faster and faster. Perhaps one could put it like this, figuratively.

[Reporter] The economic reform was started on 1 January 1982. Four years have elapsed since then. What is the situation now? What are the directions of the reform today and what are the changes?

[Reporter] If I might add a question to this. The 10th Congress took a stand on the side of continuing the reform and its radical phase. On the other hand, in light of the plans up to now, the rate of economic growth is not increasing significantly. If that is so, what is the meaning of the second phase of the reform?

[Jaruzelski] We brought the reform into being at the start of January 1982, that is to say in an extraordinary situation, at the time of the state of emergency and the deep economic recession. I might even say, almost on the ruins of the economy. Consequently, the circumstances of its introduction were very unfavorable. One way I have put this in the past is that the reform did not get sufficient air. I do not have to recall the curbs, do I -- the various difficulties that the Western states raised and the fact that everything was in short supply. Soviet assistance and the cordial attitude of the other friendly countries -- including that of Hungary, for which I say thank you here once again -- were extremely valuable for us at that time. But this phase was understandably overburdened by the difficulties I have mentioned, as well as by the lack of experience, or the experimental nature of certain solutions, and by the fact that the operation of certain mechanisms was not understood by the wide masses of the workers and not even by the leaders, not even by those who worked in economic management. In a word, this was the period when we had to learn the reform.

Now if we talk about a second phase, this is because, I believe, we possess the basic knowledge connected with the reform. We understand the reform better now. On the basis of our experiences, we have carried out certain adjustments where the mechanism was not effective. All this makes it possible for us to talk about a second phase at this time, and about a radicalization as well, in the sense that we must employ the principles of the reform more consistently. Of course, this is difficult sometimes. What is more, it also brings unpopular steps in its wake. That is why we will consult society about these things. We want to gain people's support for the necessary economic decisions. We believe that this is the basic way for the greater effectiveness of management, the accelerating of economic development.

[Reporter] Comrade First Secretary, you said at your most recent news conference that -- I quote -- this congress summed up and closed the phase of normalization and consolidation. Does this assessment mean that the economic crisis has also come to an end in Poland?

[Jaruzelski] Very much fits into the concept of crisis. We know that economic crises, political crises, and moral crises exist. I believe it is not possible to speak about crises in Poland anymore. A crisis in its own -- or let me say classical -- form, already is behind us. Indeed, I might say that primarily in the second half of the 1970's, the crisis had already become deeply rooted. Nevertheless, it appeared that everything was in order on the surface.

That can now be turned around as the recovery of our social, political, and economic life is currently in progress, and this started from quite deep bases. However, on the surface, we feel the consequences of the crisis, in the material-economic sphere and in consciousness alike. Therefore, our task now is to overcome these consequences as soon as possible. This was also one of the main objectives of the 10th Congress.

I believe the congress resolutions will contribute to speedier development, to the strengthening of socialism in our country; they will confirm the statement that the crisis is already a historical, or theoretical, concept only.

[Reporter] Yes. Naturally that is an enormous burden that we must reckon with. But I wonder whether the condition should be called a crisis when we start to partially repay these debts, or whether the condition was more critical when we received the credits and seemingly lived more easily? That is why I return to what is the essence of the crisis? What is in the depths, and what is the external expression of the crisis? Burdens, difficulties do not always mean a crisis situation.

It is like the case of a sick person. The illness can be silenced, but it nevertheless remains. The illness must be cured. We are convalescing at this moment, we are curing our illness and we speak about it, also.

[Reporter] Then what is the most important medical result of the 10th Congress?

[Jaruzelski] The result is quite favorable, that is, the patient is recovering. The therapy was effective. It must be continued. This process must turn from recovery into increasingly rapid development. Our structure [szervezetuenk] must grow stronger and the conditions exist for this. It is fundamental that this truth must be understood as well and as fully as possible by the masses of our society, by its increasingly wide-ranging quarters.

[Reporter] What are state-church relations like? Does this relationship mean rivalry, living together, coexistence? Or, is there a chance for historical compromise precisely here in Poland?

[Jaruzelski] It we interpret historical compromise to be tolerance, and cooperation in the interest of higher goals, in the interest of the nation's benefit, for the strengthening of the existing Polish state, naturally we can use that concept. If we interpret compromise to be a questioning of the fundamental principles of our social system or ideology in the sphere of philosophy, then, naturally, such a compromise cannot exist.

However, we believe that the conditions exist for the methodical normalization of state-church relations and there is a need for this settlement.

The church has been a reality in Poland for centuries, but it is conservative by virtue of its nature. The socialist social form in Poland is new, young, progressive. The essence is that both are lasting. If both sides become cognizant of this lastingness then in spite of all antagonistic, primarily ideological and world view rivalry, the realization must lead to finding a common platform, primarily in issues of a higher order.

Therefore, that is the coexistence, the cooperation, about which you asked. I believe that the Hungarian experiences serve as a good example, that the modus vivendi has been successfully found between the socialist state and the Catholic Church, and other religions, to the nation's benefit.

[Reporter] Although the situation is a bit different in our country...

[Jaruzelski, interrupting] Of course, the situation is a bit different, but nevertheless instructive.

[Reporter] If we speak about a partner-relationship, then, for example, what does pluralism now mean in Poland?

[Jaruzelski] If we speak about pluralism in the sense as interpreted by the antisocialist forces or those Western circles attempting to intervene in Polish affairs, then that type of pluralism is unacceptable. It means the free play of the political forces, the disintegration of the state, the creation of organizations operating in opposition to our system. However, if we speak about pluralism in a world outlook, ideological, philosophical sense, then it exists, and is manifested extensively, if in nothing else, in the conduct of the church, the believers. I believe that is natural and that we must endeavor so that the workers understand our Marxist-Leninist ideology as clearly as possible. It should be attractive to them and increasingly serve the construction of socialism, the strengthening of Poland.

On the other hand, we believe an administrative method is not right for conquering other ideologies. As a result, our ideology must be stronger, more attractive, more effective; let that be shown by life, let that be shown by practice. That is the essence of the affair.

[Reporter] How would you describe Polish-Vatican relations and what is your personal opinion, Comrade First Secretary, of the pope?

[Jaruzelski] As you know, the history of Polish-Vatican relations is 10 centuries' old. This history has had various pages; they have not always been the prettiest. One of our greatest poets and national prophets, Juliusz Slowacki, once wrote: Poland, your undoing is in Rome. There were other facts, also. We especially painfully lived to see the conduct of Pope Pius XII during the occupation, the war, and after the war as well. But history has also had pages that we assess with full respect. Belonging here was the activity of Pope John XXIII. I do not know whether you know that perhaps his only memorial, or one of the very few memorials of him, was raised precisely in Poland, in Wroclaw, in our country, in a socialist country.

The Polish pope naturally is a great event for the church. He is the first non-Italian pope after 450 years, since 1523. It is not my task to evaluate the pope as the head of the Catholic Church. This must be done by church representatives, certainly they do it, and history will render an opinion on the evaluation.

However, I can say that John Paul II is a passionate Polish patriot, who undoubtedly has the benefit of our nation at heart; we consider that to be an important factor that must contribute to developing and improving state-church relations. We count on the pope to do his utmost so that this should be so, so that the previously mentioned higher values -- the benefit of the nation, the benefit of existing Poland, the existing socialist Poland -- prove to be more important than what separates us. We respectfully and with appreciation view the pope's activities that emphasize the significance of peace and the importance of safeguarding it, his warnings of the dangers of modern civilization and his condemnation of the consumer model that has spread in the West, and exploitation and poverty.

He has spoken about these several times, and we are in full solidarity on these issues, although we do not agree with some of his views, for obvious reasons. We reckon that our identity of views existing precisely in the fundamental issues will contribute to the further development and full normalization of relations between Poland and the Vatican. This is what we endeavor for. I again emphasize that this will exert a positive influence on state-church relations here at home as well.

[Reporter] Will the pope's third visit to Poland take place next year?

[Jaruzelski] As yet there are no official negotiations about this, and I would not want to anticipate them.

[Reporter] You, Comrade First Secretary, have often spoken out against what you have called the arrogance of the powerful. What is the guarantee that renewed crises will not be triggered by this arrogance?

[Jaruzelski] Yes, I think this problem has two dimensions. Let's be philosophical for a moment. One dimension is related to man's natural, though not always beneficial, characteristics, to various negative inclinations. A man given power, for instance, sometimes likes to abuse this power. This is also related to the extent of the person's political education and his modesty. In this respect some individuals are irreproachable; others are not. We are not free of this even in socialism.

The other dimension concerns the system. Therefore, we communists, as people building socialism, view espcially negatively everything that undermines the ideological foundations of our system. The ideological foundation is the service of man, in the broadest sense of the term. I would like to make a small detour here. I am sure you all know how the revolutionary workers movement was born when the progressive intelligentsia of the age brought consciousness into the working class from the outside.

Today, 100 years later, the situation is entirely different. It is the working class that brings into national consciousness the features and requirements that arise from the essence of socialism. The maturity of the working class and the whole of the intelligentsia and peasantry in solidarity with the working class is expressed by precisely this protest against distortions such as the arrogance of power, bureaucracy, and the slowing down of the evolution of socialist democracy. In my view, this is the biggest and most important guarantee. The vanguard of the workers, mainly the working class, the party, senses today increasingly better and in an increasingly healthy way their leading role and, at the same time, their duties in serving the working class and the nation.

They are taking care to ensure that the phenomena that have been mentioned will not be able to return to an extent that could endanger the development of socialism. If in some individual cases such regression happens, some new bureaucrat or arrogant, conceited man appears, this is unavoidable. Our duty is to act against him.

I wish to stress again: For us the most important support is that the working class feels that it is its own master. As far as our press is concerned, a great deal of criticism is aired at the moment about this subject; we believe that this is a healthy phenomenon. The party press must condemn everything that is contrary to the fundamental principles of our system and the advocacy of the interests of the working class.

[Reporter] To what extent do developments in other socialist countries, such as Hungary, influence your development?

[Reporter] If I may supplement this question with another one: What is your view, Comrade First Secretary, of the speech by Mikhail Gorbachev, general secretary of the CPSU Central Committee, at the 10th PZPR Congress?

[Jaruzelski] Perhaps I should start with the second part of your question. Comrade Gorbachev said a lot of interesting things about Polish-Soviet relations as well as the international situation. I stress that this significantly and substantially enriched the congress. Emotionally speaking, he created a splendid atmosphere by his warm, cordial, and fraternal approach to things and by the way he expressed the esteem and sympathy of the USSR and Soviet Communists toward the friendship between our people and toward the Polish nation. This serves our friendship well.

At the same time, it has emerged -- both from Comrade Gorbachev's speeches and from my talks with him -- that the directions and solutions laid down by the 27th CPSU Congress and by the 10th PZPR Congress -- continuing from the ninth -- coincide. The way Comrade Gorbachev emphasized the ideological unity of our parties, the support of our endeavors aimed at strengthening socialism in the concrete Polish circumstances arising from our history, was extremely valuable. Therefore, to us the ideas which reached the world from Warsaw concerning the causes of peace, detente, and international dialogue are also very important. To sum up my reply to the question: All this has been important in the broadening and strengthening of our cooperation and in the utilization of rich experience. I believe, at the same time, that some of our own experiences can also be useful to other socialist countries.

I emphasize this particularly in discussing our relations with the fraternal Hungarian People's Republic. You also have had bitter, painful experiences. You were able to draw wise and rational lessons from them. The fundamental conclusion -- and this is always stressed by Comrade Kadar, whose wisdom and experience I value greatly, and from whom I have learned a lot -- is that the most valuable thing is never to lose contact with the masses and the confidence of the masses. This was precisely the experience that we have endeavored to use most when studying your history. In reforming our own economy the reform that you embarked upon earlier was also a source of valuable inspiration. I believe our solutions, our activities that we are pursuing in shaping the foundation, especially the superstructure, and in the democratization, can be of some use in Hungarian conditions as well.

[Reporter] In the socialist countries there are processes, problems, and solutions whose consequences are common both in the economic sphere and in the institutional system of social development. This is what I was referring to.

[Jaruzelski] In my view there are certain fundamental, general principles that are permanent and inviolable for all socialist countries. There are certain experiences, which you have mentioned, that are universal and should be used, because, on the one hand, they warn against incorrect tendencies leading to false roads, and on the other hand, they are experiences that make possible the application of solutions that take us forward, and the adoption of methods that help socialist development.

Comrade Gorbachev also spoke, among other things, about this in the address you have asked me about. He said that the bitter Polish experiences had great significance in drawing broader, more general, conclusions. Conclusions must be drawn from the positive experiences as well; after all, every country has these as well. We are in a stage of socialism in which the reform of various areas of our lives is unavoidable. There was a time when the word reform was suspect in our country, because it was equated with the concept of reformism. Yet they have nothing to do with each other. The word reform is a dialectical concept. Socialism, developed socialism, becomes richer; socialism regulates itself. It is a system that carries within itself progress and revolution. Therefore, at a given movement, everything that hindered the development of socialism and, in some way, artificially restricted the necessary economic and social reforms that were dictated by life had to be surmounted. Unfortunately, in your circumstances, and in ours, all this could be done only in the wake of a profound upheaval that left behind painful traces.

A grave illness brought forth the surmounting of the obstacles; in our case this is only happening now. In the circumstances that prevail in the USSR and in other countries this is a process directed from above, so to speak; acceleration and democratization take place in a framework of open public life and sharp criticism. All this is in the spirit of Leninism. This is why the doors had to be flung wide open. This is why it is historically to the credit of the CPSU and of Comrade Gorbachev personally -- I stress, to the credit of Comrade Gorbachev personally -- that the country, whose place in our community was designated not by some subjective factor but by history, is playing such a dynamic role in this process. All of us are moving in this direction, in the direction marked out by the 27th CPSU Congress; we also want to contribute to it as much as we can.

[Reporter] Recently I read in a Polish journal the opinion of a politician, or a former politician, let's say, who stated that our system had perhaps evoked excessive social expectations, that politicians had to be miracle workers to a certain extent.

[Jaruzelski] Unfortunately, it is not easy to be a miracle worker. Although some sort of miracle is always happening in Poland, these are of a different kind. It is impossible to miraculously improve living conditions radically without greater effort and better discipline. We tried to work such a miracle -- in a metaphorical sense, of course -- in the seventies; it was artificial because it was not based on intensive self-development but on certain external conditions that did not come true. This is also a question of social education, social consciousness. Certain errors in the education process can be seen, as in the paternalism that we pursued for many years and by which we got people used to the idea that the party, power, provides everything, knows everything best, and provides nothing but benefits to the people; all the people have to do is put up with all this. So, when it turned out that the power can also make mistakes, that the power is incapable of providing everything, that the power is not just a do-gooder but is also forced to take unpopular measures -- this conflicted with long-established concepts.

But I feel that in the past few years we have managed to make a lot of progress. Undoubtedly, a contributing factor here was the economic reform, the autonomy of enterprises and self-government. People are beginning to understand more and more clearly that they can only get what they have produced and no more. But this is a long, and I think difficult, road. There is no better way to a fruitful solution than by deepening socialist democracy. In other words, the citizen should really feel that he is a master, one of the masters, in his factory and in the entire country, who as master knows what he has to do and what is due to him for that work. This is socialist education, which we sometimes call economic education, but perhaps it is a broader concept than economic education.

[Reporter] Could you say a few words on Polish-Hungarian relations?

[Jaruzelski] This is such a nice and, to me personally, a pleasant topic that I am very glad to talk about it. You are familiar with the proverb: A Pole and Hungarian are two good friends. Perhaps the rest of the proverb -- the two fight shoulder to shoulder -- is no longer valid, but the last part of the proverb, about drinking together, is unfortunately still partly true. The main thing is that throughout the centuries we have had many and different kinds of contact -- state and dynastic, scientific, cultural, and, most importantly, our common struggle for the freedom of our nations and for their progress. This brings us very close. Then there is a common mentality, even temperament. Our friendship today is built on this splendid foundatin, along with its additional levels. It is being enriched with increasing wealth provided by socialism, the unity of our parties, and our common ideology.

So this friendship, this fraternalism is nurtured partly by beautiful and old historical experiences, and through the social system, the class character, and the idea that it reaches a higher plane. I think we are making increasingly good use of this, that our ties are in many areas exemplary and can serve as a model, as seen, for instance, in the exchange of experiences, mutual understanding, and cooperation between our parties. I think there are also great opportunities for the development of economic cooperation. We have wide-ranging joint plans and programs. Often these are very substantial. There is cooperation in modern areas, such as the manufacture of electronics, television tubes, buses, and many other high-quality products that we manufacture or intend to manufacture together. Our joint enterprise Haldex could be regarded as symbolic. It has been in existence for decades; in the future it could even become a model of similar cooperation with other socialist countries. We are just reaching this stage.

So many things bring us closer -- social contacts and tourism, mainly -- to your beautiful and warm country. Youth contacts could also be mentioned. In our view, these ought to be expanded. We must get to know each other better.

As I have already said, I highly regard personal contacts with Comrade Kadar, with other representatives of the Hungarian leadership, and the sincerity of the contacts and the confidence that exists. I would like to use this opportuonity to thank you for initiating this meeting, so that I could speak on Hungarian television and radio. I would also like to convey, through you, my cordial greetings and best wishes to the fraternal Hungarian people, to Hungarian communists, to the older generation, and to young people -- to all our friends. I wish you success in the building of new, beautiful socialist Hungary, and in the strengthening of our friendship and fraternalism. I wish you all the best.

MESSNER VIEWS CURRENT ECONOMIC SITUATION

PM221251 Wroclaw GAZETA ROBOTNICZA in Polish 27 Jun 86 pp 1, 8-9

[Interview with Prof Zbigniew Messner, member of the PZPR Central Committee Politburo and chairman of the Council of Ministers of the Polish People's Republic, by Jozef Bartoszewski, date, place not given]

[Text] [Bartoszewski] What are the Polish premier's major preoccupations and worries in mid-1986?

[Messner] A premier must, by definition, attend to anything that concerns the country's sociopolitical life. I share that duty with the other government members, who are responsible for individual areas in the country's life. This allows me to focus my attention on matters of highest importance. Now, halfway through the year 1985, I devote most of my attention to economic concerns, and I will continue to do so for a long time to come. The particular issue here is the provision of favorable conditions for and foundations of development. This, after all, determines the rate at which our society's needs are met and its living standards raised.

A similarly high proportion of my time is given to political activity. As a Politburo member I took an active part in the campaign preceding the 10th PZPR Congress. I rate the precongress debate on the draft party program and the theses very highly indeed, not only as a political activist but also as premier. The debate gives us a chance to objectify and expand the party's program targets and highlights our economic prospects and limitations. It also constitutes an arena for the political and economic education of the party and the whole nation.

[Bartoszewski] Economic concerns formed a sizable element of the precongress campaign, which is presently drawing to a close. Particular attention was given to the state of the economic reform.

[Messner] It is true that the precongress campaign generated many comments, suggestions, and recommendations concerning economic issues. We will make use of these in our future work. There were also critical and controversial comments on the reform. Some believe that the relevant Ninth Congress resolutions are being implemented too slowly while others, on the contrary, think that we have gone too far with granting autonomy to enterprises in, for instance, the question of prices. Let us take a cool and unemotional look at some facts. The scope of our work on the reform had no equivalent in our past practice. The whole economic administration has been restructured, the existing economic system and organizational structures have been altered, we have introduced a new system of division of competence in enterprises with considerable powers granted to workers self-management bodies, we have created a system of virtually new economic legislation. The process of socialization of planning is under way both nationally and regionally, and the extent of the population's general knowledge of economic matters has increased. As we go along, work forces in enterprises develop a sense of independence, as do their managerial bodies.

The reform is a process that is taking place not only in the economy but also to a large extent in the sphere of social consciousness. Processes of this kind never run a straight course. The plot of their progress is a zigzag line. This is the consequence of the struggle between opposites, between the new and the old.

In its initial blueprint, the reform was a construction of a theoretical nature. Practice provides the most objective test for any theory as it constantly creates new standards, some of which we do not necessarily desire.

That is why we have been listening attentively to all the views voiced by workforces, managerial personnel, and economic practitioners from the moment the reform got off the ground. We want to be able to recognize the need to introduce some changes as soon as it arises, and we want to introduce them so that the theoretical objectives of the reform could exist in symbiosis with the practice of the reform, not outside it.

[Bartoszewski] Could I ask you for some concrete example demonstrating that the government really works along those lines?

[Messner] Enterprises voiced their objections to certain solutions in the financial-economic system. Consequently, we subjected it to comprehensive analysis and evaluation. The results of the evaluation were passed on for consultation to enterprise managers and to the participants in last year's Poznan-based national conference on party and economic issues. As a result, the system was significantly modified. Practice will show whether the modification was final. In addition, all comments and proposals submitted during the precongress campaign are now being analyzed in detail and will be made use of in our future work, because we cannot claim that the process of implementing the reform has been completed.

[Bartoszewski] What, then, is scheduled for the immediate future?

[Messner] A wholesale launching of mechanisms promoting efficiency. This will not be an easy operation. We must be prepared for clashes to develop between the immediate interests of individual enterprises and even socioprofessional groups. The functioning of economic mechanisms needs to be finely adjusted also in the area of people's incomes and employees' pay differentials, which should reflect their workload contributions, and in that of enterprises' expansion potential, which should be proportionate to their efficiency. This is an inevitable direction to take, and the only chance of opening a wider scope for the expansion of the whole economy. The principle which states that only profitmaking enterprises are allowed to operate must become compulsory practice.

[Bartoszewski] How, in this light, do you view the guidelines of the National Socioeconomic Plan for 1986-90?

[Messner] At the moment we have its preliminary draft to look at. After it has been discussed and commented upon by Sejm commissions, political and social organizations, the trade unions and, above all, the 10th PZPR Congress, it will be revised, amended, and, after obtaining government approval, submitted to the Sejm. It is to be expected that the plan will be adopted in the fall of this year.

One of the most difficult problems of the plan lies in defining the proposals for the distribution of the national income between consumption and investment. Preliminary planning analyses of the development, modernization, and restructuring of various branches and sectors of industry as well as individual enterprises were made before the present draft plan was drawn up. Their conclusion was that Z17 billion would be needed in the next 5-year period to meet all the urgent capital investment needs of our economy. That would mean a doubling of outlays in comparison with the past 5-year period and, by the same token, a dramatic decrease in consumption. That we could not allow. On the other hand, we cannot persevere with the policy of maximum protection of consumption and reduction of capital investment outlays which we were following in the early 1980's. Then, we deliberately sacrificed our development targets to save the population's living standards. However, if we had maintained that situation, we would soon have been faced with a significant depreciation of national fixed assets, or even their decline in absolute terms.

Later, it would eventually have led to a decrease in consumption. It is therefore essential that we attain a carefully balanced increace in the share of capital investment in the national income, so that it does not result in stemming, or reducing, the growth of consumption.

[Bartoszewski] This means that not all investment needs can be met.

[Messner] With the planned 19-percent increase in the national income the maximum investment ceiling has been set at 210 trillion, that is, 40 percent less than the sum suggested by the prepared programs. Such is the extent of the necessary adjustments in capital investment expenditure. In this situation it is essential that we strive for more discipline in advancing capital investment processes as well as better work organization and improved productivity. It will be equally essential to provide funds for the most important strategic objectives, to develop the fuel and energy base, the technical infrastructure (water reservoirs, land reclamation facilities, protection of the environment, heat and power generating plant) and social welfare infrastructure (health care, educational, and cultural facilities).

In deciding the structure of capital investment, the government was guided mainly by efficiency criteria. It is a matter of prime importance that a number of capital investment projects already under way, some of which are at a very considerably advanced stage of realization, finally reach completion.

The other direction involves the economy program, an updating of existing plant, and the restructuring of the economy. I list these three major issues together because they are very closely interrelated.

[Bartoszewski] The process of investment is thus designed to help modernize the national economy and, in the first place, to improve economic efficiency?

[Messner] Results of analyses indicate that the potential increase in the supply of materials and components will amount to no more than 1.7 percent per annum. Any increase in our national income that we manage above that figure will have to be the result of broadly-conceived economy measures and of the enhancement of our national economy with the existing resources. But we must be aware of certain objective conditioning factors. It is not possible to effect any significant improvement or any reduction in the materials-intensiveness of the national income by way of appealing for economies. It is necessary to create material foundations for the viability of an economy program by means of modernizing production, expanding the application of electronics, bringing in new materials and products of better consumer value and lower energy-intensiveness, improving product quality, utilizing secondary materials, and increasing the range of reclaimed products and components.

[Bartoszewski] Scientific and technical advance and organizational improvement will play an important role here.

[Messner] As an academic of many years' standing I know from my own experience that academic research carries a vast intellectual and investigative potential. Utilization of this potential can give us a chance to modernize our economy and increase its efficiency. However, certain definitive conditions must be met here. Academic establishments must be interested not only in theoretical research but also in applying the results of that research for practical purposes. On the other hand, there must be a constant demand for research results on the part of practitioners. They must renounce parochialism, slackness, and nonchalance in their actions and attitudes.

[Bartoszewski] Could you give us some concrete proof that such attitudes and actions do indeed occur?

[Messner] We have provided legislation to enable enterprises to transfer financial resources among themselves, to grant loans to one another, and to launch joint investment projects.

As of January 1986 state enterprises may issue bonds to enable them to obtain, form other enterprises, resources for the financing of development programs and an updating and expansion of their plant. However, there have been very few cases of such joint investment projects or indeed of enterprises issuing bonds. On the other hand, there has been continuing pressure on the government to increase budget subsidies and relax the principles and conditions of obtaining credit by reducing interest on loans and extending terms of repayment. We can find plenty more examples of this kind. What do they indicate? Precisely the existence of attitudes and actions that hinder all attempts to shorten our road to economic equilibrium.

[Bartoszewski] How can we oppose them?

[Messner] We will systematically proceed with making our budget and credit systems "watertight," thereby forcing enterprise managers to act more independently and efficiently. For it is not the government alone that is responsible for balancing the economy.

[Bartoszewski] Investment, about which we have been talking all along here, is also indispensable for a correct implementation of our social policy, while housing construction is a present the most important element of this policy.

[Messner] In the next 5-year period housing construction, social and technical infrastructure, expansion of the construction materials and components manufacturing industry, modernization and updating of our construction potential, and conservation and maintenance of the existing resources -- these last two, incidentally, featuring in the socioeconomic plant for the very first time -- will take up more than 32 percent of the total investment outlays in the national economy. Any attempt to raise this index would result in aggravation of the economic imbalance. We must keep in view the interrelation between financial outlays and acutal capacities resulting from our construction potential, the provision of site furnishing, and the supply of construction materials and products.

[Bartoszewski] What material effects will follow from the utilization of these 32 percent of outlays?

[Messner] In the years 1986-90 between 1.05 and 1.15 million new homes will be built and 900,000 old homes renovated and modernized, and conditions will be created for the construction of 1.5 million new homes over the following 5-year period. Are we talking only about material and technological facilities? Not only. In 1986 we intend to complete the task of sorting out all legislation affecting the expansion of the construction industry. The idea is on the one hand to preserve fertile agricultural land for agricultural use and, on the other, to prevent situations whereby funds and materials are available but one cannot build because of site shortages. Another important issue is the preparation of new administrative, legislative, and taxation solutions to facilitate home exchange and perfect the rules of the housing allocation system. We estimate that in this way it would be possible to improve the situation of several hundred thousand families.

[Bartoszewski] Comrade Premier, to wind this up perhaps you could tell us a few things about yourself?

[Messner] I am married and have two daughters. Both graduated from the Silesian University in Katowice. One has a job at the television center there, and the other works in the mining sector. I have a grandson and two granddaughters. I like domestic, family life, but at the moment that has practically ceased. It was only 5 years ago that I was rector of the Katouice Academy of Economics. Today I direct the work of the government of a nation nearly 40 million strong. The extent of responsibility cannot even be compared. That is why Sundays and holidays are usually ordinary working days for me. I enjoy sport's especially scoccer, perhaps because I once used to play it myself. I was chairman of the Piast Sports Club in Gliwice for many years. I am also trying to watch the World Cup games. At the moment that provides one of the few attractions in my life outside my professional preoccupations.

[Bartoszewski] Thank you

LEADERS ATTEND NATIONAL DAY FESTIVITIES

LD221910 Warsaw PAP in English 1710 GMT 22 Jul 86

[Text] Warsaw, July 22: Polish national holiday, the 42nd anniversary of the declaration of the PKWN (Polish Committee for National Liberation) Manifesto, was celebrated across the nation today.

In Warsaw, PUWP CC First Secretary and President of the Council of State Wojciech Jaruzelski took part in a gala change of guards at the unknown soldier's symbolic tomb. A cannon salute was fired, and flowers and wreaths were laid at the monument to those who "perished in the service and defence of People's Poland", as well as at the Soviet Army soldiers' mausoleum.

The ceremony at the unknown soldier's tomb was also attended by Roman Malinowski, Zbigniew Messner, Tadeusz W. Mlynczak, Jan Dobraczynski, members of the PUWP CC Political Bureau and secretariat, leaders of other political parties, members of the Council of States and government, PRON (Patriotic Movement for National Rebirth) National Council and the OPZZ (National AGreement of Trade Unions).

Chiefs of diplomatic missions in Warsaw also laid wreaths.

Wojciech Jaruzelski signed the visitor's book placing his sigaature below the text that read: "On the 42nd anniversary of the declaration of the PKWN Manifesto, in homage to all whose steadfast struggle, devoted service and work have materialized the idea of an independent and just Poland."

Other top leaders and chiefs of diplomatic missions also signed the book.

The ceremony was closed by a military parade.

Meet With Diplomatic Corps

LD222311 Warsaw PAP in English 2050 GMT 22 Jul 86

[Text] Warsaw, July 22 -- President of the Council of State Wojciech Jaruzelski met at the Palace of the Council of Minister here today with heads of diplomatic missions accredited in Poland to mark the 42nd anniversary of the July Manifesto.

Present were Sejm (parliament) Speaker Roman Malinowski; Prime Minister Zbigniew Messner; Chairman of the Democratic Party CC Tadeusz W. Mlynczak; head of the PRON National Council Jan Dobraczynski; members of the PUWP CC Political Bureau and Secretariat, authorities of political parties, the Sejm Presidium, the Council of State and Government, and the PRON National Council. Scientists and artists, representatives of social organizations and generals also took part in the gala meeting.

Wojciech Jaruzelski, Zbigniew Messner, Kazimierz Barcikowski and Marian Orzechowski received congratulations and wishes marking the national day of socialist Poland from heads of diplomatic missions. The congratulations and wishes were conveyed by dean of the diplomatic corps Ambassador of the German Democratic Republic to Poland Horst Neubauer and other ambassadors.

The talks held during the meeting focused on issues of People's Poland, her place in the world and role in the international arena, reflections stemming from the 42nd anniversary of the July Manifesto, and the programme for Poland's development mapped out by the 10th PUWP Congress.

JUSTICE OFFICIAL DISCUSSES CLEMENCY LAW

LD221959 Warsaw PAP in English 1700 GMT 22 Jul 86

["Act of Mercy Offers New Opportunities" -- PAP headline]

[Text] Warsaw, July 22: May signals suggest that the first persons to be freed under the clemency law on "special procedures" towards some offenders will leave penitentiaries already tomorrow. Wednesday, July 23rd, on the day when the law enters into force. The decisions will be taken by prosecutors and courts. Deputy Justice Minister Tadeusz Skora has told PAP.

He also said that the law may cover about 20,000 people already convicted and serving their terms. Nearly 15,000 of them will be released as soon as the law is applied to them. Others will have to serve their previously mitigated terms or terms given to them instead of unpaid fines. We do not know how many will decide to pay their fines. Skora said.

The courts and prosecutors are prepared to order releases even before the law-prescribed deadline of September 15th. But the law stipulates that courts must make sure the freed will not perpetrate new offences and will observe the legal order. This is left for the courts to decide.

As for the requirement that the freed are to "join the active participants in the life of the country," they are actuall expected to show a certain minimum of citizens attitude, respect the legal order of the socialist state, take up some socially useful jobs or studies, Tadeusz Skora explained. Chances furnished by the clemency law do in fact clear ways towards a full and active participation in public life, he added.

Ask whether all those charged with anti-state offences or offences against public order who are eligible to be pardoned would have to declare that they "will never relapse into crime again," Skora said that the legislators do not make such a declaration a compulsory precondition of benefitting from law but attempts to evade it must put a question mark over the goodwill of a person offered the chance to go out. In case of denial the court, I believe, would have no grounds to reasonably suppose that the to-be-freed perpetrator is going to start respecting the legal order, Skora explained.

After the law is implemented, he said, penitentiaries will have better conditions for education and resocialization work. The number of prisoners, being about 114,000 at the moment, has happened to be greater at times and still the penitentiaries have managed, as a matter of fact, to tackle their tasks.

The remission of a penalty sets free but does not mean the offence is automatically forgotten and the files erased. Similarly, the courts will see whether the paroled are doing the duties they are assigned to. Every release from prison will be individually assessed to guarantee that the amnestied do not breach the legal order but use the opportunity to return to normal life, deputy justice minister said.

POLITIKA HAILS ANTI-INEFFICENCY MEASURES

AU221203 Warsaw POLITIKA in Polish 12 Jul 86 p 5

[Herzy Kleer article: "Severe Rigors"]

[Excerpts] "Effectiveness is effectiveness," Premier Zbigniew Messner said in his congress report and added: "Historical experience shows that it is also necessary to enforce effectiveness."

As his congress report and other congress documents indicate, efforts will be made to go over not so much to new rules of the economic game as to the observance of those rules that were earlier established, at least in theory, for economic practice.

I have introduced the aforementioned quotation on purpose. The observance of severe rigors in the performance of enterprises and other economic units is not only a result of the principles of the economic reform, it also constitutes an absolute economic necessity, because the preservation of the current state of affairs which allows for the existeance of weak and downright inefficent enterprises would banish us to the periphery of the European economy, a contingency we cannot afford for the sake of the good interests of the present and future generations. We must not continue to give in to the pressure of various professional and social groups in order to protect all of us -- those who deserve to be protected because they represent the economically weakest sections of our society and those who refuse to work efficiently. The government report contained this self-critical statement about the past: "For various reasons we have not been consistent in enforcing our decisions."

We must realize that the acceptance of economic compulsion as one of the most important principles of economic management involves many consequences, ones which not everyone likes. This compulsion may result in rather large differences in the economic situations of enterprises and households. But this has to be. We cannot afford any other economic policy. [passage omitted]

As a social and economic system, socialism postulates equal opportunities and equality of rights for everyone, but in its theoretical concepts it has never proposed that everyone is entitled to equal shares, regardless of his contribution in work. Recalling these obvious truths is a crucial necessity inasmuch as social and economic practice has often bypassed them, and we have many proofs of this, beginning with ordinary voluntarism through succumbing to various vociferous and "active" professional and occupational groups.

In the past few years when the correct policy has been in force that the economically weakest groups should be protected, many enterprises and people that did not want or did not know how to work better, claimed the benefits of this policy. [paragraph continues]

Changing this policy will not be easy because old habits have taken firm root and because much demagogy and easy-going continues to dominate the principles of sharing. But there is no other way out if we are to become a modern socialist society, if we want to be equal to the tasks facing us, and if we aspire to being a just society. [passage omitted]

We are able to share only that which we produce, but we still produce too little of poor quality for too much money. We waste too much of the limited resources we have. It was stressed many times at the congress that our true working week amounts to less than 30 hours, that our production potential is not being fully exploited, and that our production requires too many materials, too much energy, and too much transportation. We know the trouble, and what remains to be done is to eliminate it. A program of how to do this was submitted to the congress. The program deals with structural changes in production, mainly industrial production, with the accelerated application of scientific-technological progress, with charges in economic and administrative structures, and with our links with the outside world, mainly with CEMA.

It is impossible here to discuss this program, even in its general outlines, except for passing a few remarks.

-- Issue number one concerns structural changes, which will give priority to some branches of production at the expense of other branches. Generally speaking, everyone accepts and supports these changes, but we must realize that no doubt this issue will take a different turn in practice because certain branches and enterprises will receive more resources than other branches and enterprises and because some will de deprived of additional resources. [passage omitted]

-- Issue number two concerns innovation, an enterprising spirit, and technological progress. The experience of the past few years has shown that the situation has been bad in this regard and that we have not been able to exploit our own scientific research potential sufficiently for reasons rooted in enterprises and in the scientific research base. This must be changed. [passage omitted]

-- Issue number three concerned the pro-export orientation of our economy. Although everything has been said about this issue, there is still not enough determination to compel enterprises to produce for export. We have several thousand enterprises and cooperatives for export. We have several thousand enterprises and cooperatives which have almost not links with foreign trade. As long as a large number of these enterprises and cooperatives do not actively share in our foreign trade, all our intentions to participate extensively in the international division of labor will remain wishful thinking. As is the case with other areas, our awareness of the importance of economic and technological links with foreign countries is limited. Actually, it has to be limited because it is a fact that we have restricted instead of enlarging our links with foreign countries.

We have a problem for far-reaching economic and technological changes, and what we need to do is to implement it as consistently as possible.

JARUZELSKI CONGRATULATES NICARAGUA'S ORTEGA

[Text] Wojciech Jaruzelski, chairman of the Council of Ministers of Poland, has extended his greetings to the Nicaraguan president and to all the Nicaraguan people. Jaruzelski, who is also first secretary of the PZPR, said the following: We express our unyielding conviction that your people will achieve a prosperous future for Nicaragua in an atmosphere of peace and security.

FOREIGN POLICY COMMITTEE DISCUSSES UN SESSION, SUMMIT

LD222042 Belgrade TANJUG Domestic Service in Serbo-Croatian 1251 GMT 22 Jul 86

[Text] Belgrade, 22 Jul (TANJUG) -- The Foreign Policy Committee of the SFRY Assembly Federal Chamber today examined the draft platform for the SFRY delegation's activity at the 41st Session of the UN General Assembly.

At the committee session chaired by its president, Dr Mijat Sukovic, it was concluded tht the draft platform under review could form the basis for drawing up the final text of the platform, but that further work on it is required in order to make the document "offer greater guidance for and be more binding upon the activity of the Yugoslav delegation" at the forthcoming session of the General Assembly.

With this in view, it was agreed that is September the committee should give specific form to the standpoints contained in the draft platform and should incorporate in them the standpoints and guidelines for action which the eighth nonaligned summit will adopt in Harare.

Given the date of the summit meeting and the start of the UN General assembly session [16 September], it is proposed that a new session of the committee to deal with the platform for the activity of the Yugoslav delegation at the 41st Session of the General Assembly be convened 8-15 September.

The introductory exposition on the draft platform was delivered at today's session by Nikola Cicanovic, director of the Federal Secretariat for Foreign Affairs International Organizations Office. He stressed that the issues to be discussed by the UN General Assembly in the fall, within the agenda of more than 140 items, are identical with those which will dominate at the forthcoming nonaligned summit in Harare. These are first and foremost problems of international security, disarmament and peace, critical flashpoints in the world and in particular in southern Africa, international economic problems, the financial crisis of the world organizaion and social and humanitarian issues.

He pointed in particular to the fact that the financial crisis of the world organization conceals an attempt to discredit the United Nations as a framework in which all countries should take an equal part in resolving the world's problems. The size of the financial contribution of individual countries in the world organization should not give these countries any greater rights in the United Nations, he said.

At today's session the committee also adopted the report of the delegation of the Federal Chamber Foreign Policy Committee and the Chamber of the Republics and Provinces Committee for Economic Relations with Foreign Countries on the talks with Erich Wolfram, chairman of the FRG Bundestag group for German-Yugoslav cooperation, who paid a visit to Yugoslavia 30 June-5 July.

Ante Budimir was elected deputy president of the Foreign Policy Committee during disussion of a special point on the agenda.

DIZDAREVIC HOLDS FURTHER TALKS ON EEC COOPERATION

LD222028 Belgrade TANJUG Domestic Service in Serbo-Croatian 1525 GMT 22 Jul 86

[Text] Brussels, 22 Jul (TANJUG) -- Access to the EEC market for Yugoslav goods should be made easier in order that reciprocal trade can be increased and the deficit on the Yugoslav side can be reduced. This was the assessment in Brussels today at the close of the ministerial session of the Council for Yugoslav-EEC Cooperation, at which the political and economic importance of constant development of the ties between the "Twelve" and Yugoslavia, a factor for stability in Europe and the Mediterranean, was stressed, bearing in mind the fact that Yugoslavia is nonaligned, European, Mediterranean and a member country of the Group of 77 developing countries.

The session was presided over by Yugoslav Federal Secretary for Foreign Affairs Raif Dizdarevic, while the EEC delegation was led by Geoffrey Howe, the current president of the EEC Council of Ministers and the British foreign secretary. The council assessed as satisfactory the trend in trade up to 1984, primarily because the Yugoslav trade deficit was being gradually reduced until then. However, concern was expressed because in the past year the Yugoslav deficit has again increased. It was stressed that for the increase and equilibrium of trade the pending renewal of negotiations on a trade program for the period 1986-90 and the signing of the second protocol within the framework of the agreement on Yugoslav-EEC trade are of great importance. The Community representatives let it be known that with a more "elastic" policy they could make the access of Yugoslav goods to the market of the "Twelve" easier.

The head of the EEC delegation, Howe, stressed that the Community is following with interest the results of the program of economic stabilization being pursued by the Yugoslav Government. He said that the "Twelve" will do "everything they can" to support these Yugoslav efforts.

Both sides stressed the importance of this session following the, as Dizdarevic stressed, unfounded and discriminatory ban on imports of Yugoslav agricultural products after the nuclear catastrophe at Chernobyl. The council expressed the belief that the traditional relations of trust between Yugoslavia and the EEC, damaged by this move, will be reestablished in his introductory speech, Dizdarevic stressed that this year and next will be of exceptional importance for the implementation of the long-term program of economic stabilization in Yugoslavia. This requires, he said, that Yugoslavia balances its trade with foreign partners and develops higher forms of cooperation. Yugoslavia expects that the EEC will improve the provisions in the mandate for talks on a new trade program of cooperation with Yugoslavia. The Yugoslav side also considers that the EEC should imnprove the volume and structure of funds in the talks on the second financial protocol, whereby Yugoslavia would enjoy the same treatment as other developing Mediterranean countries. Dr Oskar Kovac, Federal Executive Council member responsible for cooperation with the EEC, EFTA and OECD, noted as a member of our delegation that it is necessary to remove the barriers to imports of Yugoslav products to the EEC. Future financial cooperation should be directed, he added, toward joint projects for building motorways and the modernized of the rail network in Yugoslavia, in which the EEC is very interested, and also tourism and export-oriented technological and production program. The Yugoslav side also noted the prospects and mutual benefit which could be had from much larger joint investment in the Yugoslav economy.

AFP Report

AU221345 Paris AFP in English 1304 GMT 22 Jul 86

[Text] Brussels, July 22 (AFP) -- Foreign Ministers of the European Economic Community told a Yugoslav delegation here Tuesday that the EEC could no longer import large quantities of Yugoslav farm products and advised the country to work on diversifying its exports, community sources said.

The ministers were responding to demands by the delegation, led by Yugoslav Federal Secretary for Foreign Affairs Raif Dizdarevic, for aid in reversing the country's high trade deficit. The deficit grew 42 percent in 1985 to reach one billion ECUs [about the same amount of dollars], the sources said.

The EEC ministers noted that the gap was less than half of the deficit posted at the end of the 1970's, and said the community's already large surplus of agricultural products prevented it from stepping up farm purchases from Yugoslavia, the sources added.

Mr. Dizdarevic expressed his concern over the temporary ban on Yugoslav farm and food imports imposed in May after the Chernobyl nuclear accident, but the EEC ministers denied that the safety measures, now lifted, were protectionist, a joint communique said.

The two sides also disagreed on the amount of financial aid the EEC should give to Belgrade over the next five years, the sources said.

The 12 have proposed total aid of 380 million ECUs, in loans from the European Investment Bank. Belgrade has asked for additional money in grants.

NEW FOREIGN TRADE REGULATIONS REPORTED

LD221357 Belgrade TANJUG in English 0549 GMT 22 Jul 86

[Text] Belgrade, July 22 (TANJUG) -- The Yugoslav Government has taken a new decision on conditions regulating foreign trade transactions in order to achieve a higher level of organization and efficiency in foreign trade.

Under the decision, organizations will be able to register for foreign trade if 30 percent of their turnover is through exports valued at least 10 million dollars. Trade in certain goods will be possible only if an enterprise achieves minimal exports and imports as established for each group of products.

Producers will be able to engage in foreign trade transactions if they export at least 10 percent of their output and if they carry out 20 percent of their transactions with foreign partners themselves.

Lesser changes are envisaged for conditions regulating foreign trade services. Foreign firm representation requires the export of Yugoslav goods with 30 percent provision in business with the foreign partner.

Estimates are that around one thousand Yugoslav enterprise, out of the 1,300 currently engaged in foreign trade, fulfill the requirements.

Early this year, the Yugoslav Government took a decision prescribing sharper conditions, which only 400 enterprises could fulfill. The decision prompted sharp reactions from the economy sector and a written request of the Yugoslav Chamber of Economy, which subsequently to the new decision of the government.

TARIFFS TO BE REDUCED TO PROMOTE DEVELOPMENT

LD222254 Belgrade TANJUG Domestic Service in Serbo-Croatian 1441 GMT 22 Jul 86

[Summary] Belgrade, 22 Jul (TANJUG) -- The SFRY Assembly Chamber of the Republics and Provinces Committee for Economic Relations with Foreign Countries has completed coordination of the amendments and adgenda to the law on customs tariffs. In the medium-term the customs duty is to be halved on imported equipment and spare parts not produced in Yugoslavia for construction of projects to promote the more rapid development of the under-developed republics, Kosovo and under-developed municipalities in Serbia. Equipment and spare parts not manufactured in Yugoslavia are to be imported without customs duty when they are for construction of key projects in Kosovo in the sphere of power engineering, agriculture and nonferrous metals.

LJUBICIC SPEAKS IN LCY CONGRESS COMMISSION ON ARMY

AU221624 Belgrade NARODNA ARMIJA (supplement) in Serbo-Croatian No. 2451 3 Jul 86 pp 14-15

[Report on speech by Nikola Ljubicic in the 13th LCY Congress Commission for All-people's defense and Social Self-Protection in Belgrade on 26 June]

[Text] In the first part of his speech, Nikola Ljubicic pointed out the fact that our concept of all-people's defense and social self-protection has its support in our own forces and that its origin lies in the experiences of the national liberation struggle and the revolution. Emphasizing that man is the basic force in the socialized system of all-people's defense and social self-protection, he pointed out that the efficiency of the defense system may be perceived only in a direct linkage with the functioning of the overall system of socialist self-management and stressed that the mutual linkage and dependence between self-management and all-people's defense are more than the usual relationship between the whole and its parts.

The defense strength of society depends on the state of the basic segments of society, and on the processes that influence the production forces and on the relationships in social reproduction. This means in practice that to the extent that the workers class, the working people, and citizens exert a decisive influence on the reproduction process and to decisionmaking on essential questions, questions of the country's development, their consciousness and their readiness to struggle for the defense of such a system, such a policy, and development prospects is strengthening.

Indicating the necessity of changes in the political system, Nikola Ljubicic said that one does not undertake changes for the sake of change, but for the sake of development and progress, and on this occasion mentioned two significant aspects of these changes. On the one hand, he pointed out, it is necessary is our system to ensure a central place to man as self-manager and producer, and on the other hand, one should instigate with the changes a self-managing integration of society.

The consciousness is ripe among the masses, he said, that the price society pays because of barriers is very high, and that such processes hamper both economic development and self-management equally, that they hamper the preparations for the country's defense, and at the same time even in peacetime, in the case of a need to defend ourselves, a distinguished society leads to a squandering of social energy and resources, which reduces accumulation, and hits the standard if living and the defense abilities of the country as a whole.

Further in his speech Nikola Ljubicic pointed out that the unity of the workers class and the people cannot be a synonym for unitarianism and centralism, but that it is a condition for the development of socialist self-management.

Hostile forces, he stressed, are waging a struggle for the consciousness of the young generations, and use in this respect all our shortcomings in the education and training of your young people. We do not offer to the young people enough knowledge about the fact that we must struggle for freedom, socialism, and independence, that all these things have been achieved with superhuman efforts and heroism, tremendous sacrifices and renunciations, particularly by the youngest generations.

Further in his speech, pointing out that the future of the country depends on the young people, Nikola Ljubicic said:

The young people are the basis of the defense of the country. What does it then mean if young people to such an extent abandon themselves to the influence of various forces, beginning with the nationalist and irredentist and ranging up to the clercial, bourgeois, and petit-bourgeois? If one adds to all this the incessant stories only about problems, failures, crises, and only about things that are no good, if one adds the immoderate praise for alien values, alien ideologies, and social systems, which is often inspired from the side, it becomes clear how all this is reflected in the consciousness of young people, how they are formed, and how all this may influence their defense readiness. All the citizens should and must participate in the defense of the country. To the extent they are satisifed with their life and with the prospects of this social system, one may expect that the striving and the readiness of all of them for defense will be greater.

DEMANDS MADE BY SHIPYARD WORKERS IN RIJEKA

LD221455 Belgrade TANJUG Domestic Service in Serbo-Croatian 1222 GMT 22 Jul 86

[Text] Rijeka, 22 Jul (TANJUG) -- About 200 workers in the 3 May shipyard in Rijeka stopped work this morning as asign of dissatisfaction at the nonfulfillment of their demands for an increase in personal incomes.

The work stoppage was preceded by a protest letter sent by about 250 workers of two basic organizations of associated labor of the Rijeka shipbuilding yard to the management leadership and the sociopolitical organizations of the composite organization of associated labor that included the demand that personal incomes for June be increased by about 50 percent.

An additional hot meal for workers on overtime, examination of the responsibility of the management leadership for inefficient work, and several other requests were made in connection with the valuing of work andits distribution. Workers sought information about trends in personal incomes in other Rijeka work organizations and self-managing groups.

As a result of this letter, several meetings have been held during the last few days in the 3 May composite Organization of Associated Labor, among management and self-managing organs, and the trade unions. Among other things, it was proposed that personal incomes be increased by 25 percent, which would be in keeping with the planning documents of the composite Organization of Associated Labor.

Average personal incomes of workers in 3 May for the first 6 months of this year were 85,000 dinars, not counting overtime, while personal incomes with overtime were 98,000 dinars.

According to reports, the demands that the workers have put forward in this way, by means of a work stoppage, would, however, have been realized as early as at the beginning of August through regular self-management channels.

Concession Made

LD222245 Belgrade TANJUG Domestic Service in Serbo-Croatian 1457 GMT 22 Jul 86

[Text] Rijeka, 22 Jul (TANJUG) -- The delegates of the workers council of the 3 May shipyard composite Organization of Associated Labor in Rijeka decided, at an extraordinary session convened today in connection with the work stoppage by several hundred workers and their demands for an increase in personal incomes, to pay all employees one average personal income of the composite organization of associated labor for June.

The payment is being justified by increased living costs in June and July.

It was also decided that the value of work points for July should be increased by 25 percent and that after 4 and more hours of overtime workers are to be provided with a hot meal. The workers remaining demand, cited in the protest letter, which about 250 workers sent to the management and sociopolitical organizations of the composite Organization of Associated Labor after they had received payment of personal incomes for June, will be decided in the shortest possible time, by the usual self-managing procedure. The demands chiefly relate to changes in the method of distributing personal incomes.

Work Stoppage Avoided

[Summary] Rijeka, 22 Jul (TANJUG) -- Workers at the 3 May shipyard in Rijeka who stopped work this morning called off their work stoppage after being informed of the decisions of the workers council, which partially complied with their demands. Work on the second shift at the yard is proceeding normally.

FEC REACHES DECISION ON BREAD PRICING

LD221254 Belgrade TANJUG Domestic Service in Serbo-Croatian 0959 GMT 22 Jul 86

[Text] Belgrade, 22 Jul (TANJUG) -- According to a statement by the Federal Secretariat for Information, the FEC has adopted a decision on the method for forming the price of wheat flour type 850 and the price of basic kinds of wheat bread produced from this flour.

According to this decision the prices of wheat flour type 850 and basic kinds of bread produced from this flour are to be fixed in accordance with the social control of prices. The production price of bread from flour type 850, according to the FEC decision, may not exceed 110 dinars a kilogram or 90 dinars for the 800 gram loaf. In this way the the price of this kind of bread will be significantly lower than it was before the decision to put the price back to its former level which the FEC adopted on 10 July, when it was as high as 160 dinars for a kilogram of this kind of bread. In keeping with this decision, the price of bread is formed by applying the usual norm regarding the amount of flour used in the production of bread, to which are added the dependent costs of procurement, the costs of transporting the bread which existed on the day on which this decision took effect, and the costs of baking the bread, which increased by 10 percent. To cover transportation costs, trade organizations can charge the absolute amount in line with the rgulations until the day the decision comes into effect.

In keeping with the adopted policy of removing the disparity between prices of agricultural-processed food products and the price of industrial products, the FEC decision stipulates that the prices of other types of wheat flour and bread are to be formed independently according to market conditions. An agreement has been reached with the socialist republics and the socialist autonomous provinces whereby their competent organs survey the level of bread prices which are formed independently by organizations of associated labor, and undertake essential measures of social control in order to ensure the formation of these prices within the framework of real production costs.

It was suggested to the FEC that compensation be introduced, but the socialist republics and the socialist autonomous provinces decide in favor of applying measures of social policy with the aim of protecting the living standards of the population with the lowest incomes.

The FEC decision takes effect from 23 July this year. With the coming into force of this decision, the recently adopted decision reverting the price of wheat flour and all types of wheat bread to a fixed level, and fixing a price ceiling for these products, which came about as a result of the abnormally high formation of bread and flour prices, ceases to be valid.

The FEC also stipulates that at least 30 percent of the total amount of bread in the shops should be made from flour type 850, thereby ensuring the necessary amounts of this bread in the shops. Production and trade organizations, as well as private bread producers are bound by this. If it is more in keeping with the needs of the population, the socialist republics and the socialist autonomous provinces may, within the framework of the decreed 30 percent okf the total amount of bread in the shops, set individual obligations to producers and trade organizations in their areas on the production and trade of this kind of bread.

Prices Cannot Be Exceeded

LD221745 Belgrade TANJUG Domestic Service in Serbo-Croatian 1427 GMT 22 Jul 86

[Text] Belgrade, 22 Jul (TANJUG) -- The confusion over the prices of bread and flour has been finally ended. The Federal Executive Council [FEC] has plainly laid down that the cost price of coarse white bread [polubeli] from flour type 850 should not exceed 110 dinars per kilogram, or dinars for an 800-gram loaf. Margins of 1-3 dinars, depending on the republics and provinces, may be added to this. Prices will, as before, be determined by manufacturesrs on the basis of the precisely established parameters, but manufacturers do not have the right to exceed this limit.

Manufacturers remain responsible for the prices of white flour (of flour type 500), too. The FEC has not provided for directly setting the ceiling for these, but we have been informed that it has been agreed in the Federal Secretariat for Markets and General Economic Affairs that this bread should not exceed 180 or 200 dinars in price, depending on quality. These prices will also be "under surveillance," and penalties will be imposed for unjustified and excessive price increases.

Special types of bread containing additives can be sold at prices above 200 dinars, to be set by the manufacturers themselves.

The competent federal organs have not opted for direct price regulation. The new decision on the way of formulating prices of coarse white bread defines more strictly the parameters according to which they are set. The intention is to reduce to a minimum any possibility of noneconomic elements being built into prices.

It is notable that compared with the prices that were annulled 10 or so days ago after less that 24 hours, the prices of higher-quality types of bread have undergone rather less change than prices of bread from flour type 850. White bread, it may be recalled, had in the majority of republics and provinces cost 170-200 dinars and has rarely exceeded that level.

Coarse white bread, however, has reached 150 dinars. By such a policy the federal government evidently wants primarily to protect the living standard of Yugoslavs in the low-income bracket, in whose diet bread is a very important element.

This time, along with the decision on the way of formulating prices of coarse white bread, a regualtion has been issued which guarantees that at least 30 percent of bread on retail sale must be of this type. Stores are also obliged to comply with this, and infringement of this regualtion wiil be very strictly punished, the FEC assures us. It is also envisioned that if the necessary percentage of coarse white bread is not available, then white bread must be sold at the lower price of coarse white.

There is still no definitive answer to the question of whether the new price, within the framework anticipated by the EFC, will enable millers and bakers to extricate themselves from their losses and to improve perceptibly their economic position. The Federal Committee for Agriculture considers that the situation will indisputably improve, but to what degree is yet to be seen. Everything points to the conclusion that the share of the burden of the relatively low price of coarse white bread will nevertheless fall upon manufacturers, too. It will of course be compensated for by the prices other of types of bread, while the republics and provinces have assumed the obligation to compensate for cheaper bread by social policy measures. It has been calculated that the new price of bread, which, it is not hard to imagine, will be no lower than the ceiling set by the FEC, wil have the effect of increasing retail prices by 1.2 percent and increasing the cost of living by about 1 percent. Cost prices will on this basis rise by less than 1 percent.

DISPUTED BALKAN AIRPLANE RETURNS TO SOFIA

AU240640 Sofia BTA in English 0611 GMT 24 Jul 86

[Text] Sofia, July 24 (BTA) -- The Balkan Airlines TU 154 passenger jet, which was unwarrantedly detained for more than three days in Istanbul, landed at Sofia airport late last night.

Inorder to facilitate the plane's release, Balkan Airlines deposited a guarantee of 150,000 dollars with the Turkiye Is Bankasi. This money, in part or in whole, may be used to pay compensation to the Turkish woman who is suing the Bulgarian company for damages. The compensation can be paid only after the actual amount has been determined by a Turkish court whose decision cannot be appealed and after the case has passed through all possible degrees of jurisdiction.

It is only logical to expect that Turkey's higher courts are well aware of the norms of international law, the respective multilateral and unilateral agreements and the obligations stemming from them. That is why they could not possible make a decision that would acknowledge a legally ungrounded claim.

The Bulgarian airplane has finally been freed. However, as early as the time of its detention Balkan Airlines notified the Turkish authorities of its intention to sue for the moral and material damanges incurred by the Turkish action. The damages claimed would considerably exceed the sum of money that served as a pretext for the detention of the plane.

USSR GAS PIPELINE PROJECT PLAN SIGNED

AU231901 Sofia BTA in English 1750 GMT 23 Jul 86

["Transit Gas Conduit for Turkey and Greece" -- BTA headline]

[Text] Sofia, July 23 (BTA) -- An important step in the promotion of integration processes between Bulgaria and the U.S.S.R., a contribution by Bulgaria to the strengthening of peace, security and good-neighbour relations in the Balkans and to the activation of business ties between Europe and the Middle East: That is how Mr Khristo Khristev, Bulgaria's minister of trade, and Mr Mikolay Osipov, deputy minister of foreign trade of the U.S.S.R., evaluated the Bulgarian-Soviet provodies for the transit delivery of Soviet natural gas for Turkey and Greece via Bulgarian territory.

The document regulates the terms for the transportation of this raw material, as well as the possibilities for practical cooperation in the construction of the transit gas conduit. It is envisaged that the Soviet side should render technical assistance to the contractors (Bulgarian building and assembly companies), including the help of specialists and the shipment of technical equipment, pipes, materials, and construction machines.

The transit conduit for Turkey will be laid parallelly to the supply line already in site here. The new pipe line will be nearly 280 km long. The first amounts of gas (around 750 million cubic meters) are expected to reach Turkey in the middle of 1987; by 1990, after the completion of the entire pipe line, including the branch of Greece, it will have a carrying capacity of over 10,000 million cubic metres of gas a year. Bulgaria will be paid by additional deliveries of Soviet natural gas.

REPORT ON TALKS WITH USSR PLANNING COMMITTEE

AU231448 Sofia BTA in English 1555 GMT 23 Jul 86

["Bulgaria - U.S.S.R.: Deepening Integration" -- BTA headline]

[Text] Sofia, July 23 (BTA) -- Outlines for a tangible expansion of direct cooperation links, for the speedier establishment of joint research, development and design teams, of science-and-industry and production associations by Bulgaria and the Soviet Union: These are the results from the talks held here between the delegations of the State Planning Commission and of the U.S.S.R. State Planning Committee.

During their visit, the members of the Soviet delegation, including representatives of sectoral ministries, agencies and economic organisations, were familiarized with the production of leading enterprises in a number of Bulgarian economic branches.

The two delegation discussed the basic principles and terms for the realisation of direct productional and techno-scientific cooperation-based ties, and they compiled a list of the two countries' enterprises and organizations which will engage in joint work in the field of machine building, the chemical industry and metallurgy, the light and food industries, the agro-industrial complexes, and other branches.

They also coordinated the appropriate documents which will help the early conclusion of specific contracts and agreements between the enterprises and the organisations.

The head of the Soviet delegation, Minister Anatoliy Reut, first deputy chairman of the State Planning Committee, was received by Mr Georgi Atanasov, chairman of the Council of Ministers, by Mr Andrey Lukanov, first deputy chairman of the Council of Ministers, and by Mr Ivan Iliev, deputy premier and chairman of the State Planning Commission.

LOCAL PARTY LEADERSHIP PRACTICE CRITICIZED

AU231051 Sofia RABOTNICHESKO DELO in Bulgarian 21 Jul 86 p 3

[Article by Nikola Dimitrov, senior lecturer at the Burgas interokrug party school: "Changes in the BCP Statutes -- The Core of Party Leadership" -- capitalized passages published in boldface and larger type]

[Text] An important addition made by the 13th BCP Congress is the new Article 23: "The Party organs and organizations carry out their leading and guiding role within the framework of the Constitution and the laws of the country, relying on the state and social organs and organizations.

"They exert political leadership to ensure the correct functioning of the organs of state authority and guide the development of the activities of the social organizations and the various forms of workers self-management, while respecting the latter's organizational independence and not taking away their functions and tasks."

This new text in the basic party document reminds us once again of the need to study, assimilate, and apply in practice the Leninist principles of party leadership of society. Everyone knows that the chief functions of the party organs and organizations are political, organizational, and educational. However, in practice many party committees and many party workers and leaders carry out mainly economic and administrative functions, while their organizational functions merge with their administrative-executive function. This results in a lowering of the role of the people's councils, economic leaderships, and labor collectives. The committees and their individual members appear almost in the role of miracle workers, who are able to cope with all economic and administrative issues.

THE MAIN OBJECTIVE OF PARTY WORK IS THE PEOPLE

However, there are quite a number of party committees and workers who do not knowe the cadres sufficiently, because they do not associate with them face-to-face, but through the telephone and by written instructions or, in the best event -- at conferences and meetings. Their control over the cadres is weak, too; they fail to make principled political assessments in good time, due to which a number of failures have become evident. All this is reflected in the education of the people, and not so much material as moral damage is incurred.

The excessive use of the telephone for contacting the enterprises or relevant services in the councils restricts their initiative and that of the labor collectives. We are witness to how instructions are given on concrete practical issues is the name of the committee, how "the view of the committee" is communicated on precisely how some measure or other is to be carried out. Of course, once the committee has issued the order, the work will be carried out, but this directly contradicts the princile of the separation of functions, and people become accustomed to wait for every single instruction.

Perhaps this is an extreme generalization, but it seems to me that many local party organs have lost their image as political leaderships and acquired FAR TOO MANY ADMINISTRATIVE FEATURES.

I know quite a few workers in party committees who have not managed to learn, and some who have forgotten, what the essence of party work is. While in other respects being good specialists, candidates of technical and economic sciences, they lack sufficient training and organizational experience, they have not become accustomed to working with people, and do not know how to do so. [paragraph continues]

They simply transfer the administrative-executive or so-called "dispatcher" methods of work from the administrative and economic leaderships, from where they are carried over into the party committees.

This approach is much easier than to convice the people, to consult them, teach them, and educate them. Certain comrades are extremely flattered when their work is assessed solely on the basis of the economic results. At one municipal party conference I heard delegates state: "The party committee secretary has made a great personal contribution to providing the new production line in our enterprise," or "thanks to the part played by the first secretary personally, our enterprise fulfilled its annual plan." But the personal participation of the secretary consisted merely in correcting the plant's plan

Many party workers understand that this situation is abnormal. A friend of mine, with whom I studied together at the Academy of Social Sciences and Public Administration, said once to me with envy: "You are lucky to deal with real party work -- to train party secretaries. I, on the other hand, am something like a general director. I deal with construction materials, equipment, investors, and designers, coordinate plans and schedules, and what not. I have no time left for party work." At that time he was the secretary for construction matters of the okrug party committee. The secretaries for industry and agriculture, as well as the appropriate sections and departments of the committees, "move" exclusively economic tasks by purely economic ways and means of control.

All this affects the primary party organizations and the work of their bureaus. Some party secretaries express dissastisfaction with these methods, other think that the situation is fully normal, even in cases when secretaries or representative of the committees visit a certain enterprise and stop first of all at the offices of the directors and their deputies, and very seldom at the offices of the party secretaries, and when they very rarely remember to invite the party secretaries to the conversation at the director's office. These conservations usually focus on plan implementation and current production tasks, and very rarely on the human problems of the workers, employees, and the secretaries themselves -- how they live and what excites them. The secretaries and representatives of the party committees seldom attend events other than the annual accountability-election of the primary party organizations. Very rarely do they come to other meetings of the primary party organizations and the collectives. This style of work is also being adopted by the party bureaus and secretaries. They too often assume uncharacteristic functions, the methods, approaches, responsibilities, and obligations of economic leaderships. Often THE PARTY MEETINGS ASSUME THE CHARACTER OF PRODUCTION CONFERENCES and the bureau meetings -- the characters of operational meetings.

It is high time to bring the work of the party organs in line with the party statutes, to release the committees from their economic - administrative activity, and let the administrative and economic organs fully assume the tasks and functions which fall within their competency. Thus we shall put an end to the practice of transferring the weight and responsibility of the party committees, and this will increase party control.

Studying, mastering, and applying the new postulates included in the addenda to the BCP Statutes, adopted by the 13th BCP Congress, will contribute to constantly increasing the role and responsibility of the party organs and organizations as political leaderships, and to constantly intensify the political approach -- the core of their activity.

KABUDANSKI RECEIVES ROMANIAN FRONT DELEGATION

AU230851 Sofia RABOTNICHESKO DELO in Bulgarian 22 Jul 86 p 2

[Text] On 22 July Pencho Kubadinski, member of the BCP Central Committee Politburo and chairman of the Fatherland Front National Council, received a delegation of the National Council of the Socialist Democracy and Unity Front of the SR of Romania, led by Eduard Eisenburger, deputy chairman of the National Council.

Comrade Pencho Kubadinski briefed the guests on the tasks solved by our biggest public organization in implementing the decions of the 13th BCP Congress. He also spoke about preparations for the forthcoming 10th Fatherland Front Congress.

The meeting, which took place in a cordial atmosphere, was attended by Liviu Minda, Romanian ambassador to Bulgaria.

ZHIVKOV MEETS FRG'S HERBERT MIES 18 JUL

AU211540 Sofia RABOTNICHESKO DELO in Bulgarian 19 Jul 86 p 1

[Text] Todor Zhivkov, general secretary of the BCP Central Committee, on 18 July met Herbert Mies, chairman of the German Communist Party [DKP], who is vacationing in Bulgaria at the invitation of the BCP Central Committee.

During the talk, which took place in a spirit of unity and in a cordial and friendly atmosphere, the two party leaders briefed each other on the activity of the BCP and DKP at the present. Opinions on topical issues of the international situation and the world communist and workers movement were exchanged.

Comrade Todor Zhivkov acquainted the guest with the actvity of the Bulgarian Communists and the entire people in implementing the decisions of the 13th BCP Congress, which outlined the long-range strategy for a new qualitative growth of economy on the basis of the scientific-technical revolution, broadly developing the advantages of the socialist social system, and ever better satisfying the material, intellectual, and social needs of the working people. He informed the guest about the peaceful foreign policy of our country, especially dwelling on its efforts to maintain and develop relations of good-neigborliness and cooperation in the Balkans and turn the region into an area free of nuclear and chemical weapons.

Comrade Herbert Mies expressed his satisfaction with the achievements of the Bulgarian people in constructing the developed socialist society under the BCP leadership, and highly evaluated the constructive foreign policy of our country in the Balkans, Europe, and the world. On his part he informed Comrade Todor Zhivkov about the recently held Eighth DKP Congress, and about the party's activity in implementing the congress' decisions.

Stressing that the international situation continues to be alarming as a result of the policy of confrontation conducted by imperialism, the two leaders expressed full support for the comprehensive and realistic peace program, adopted by the 27th CPSU Congress, and of the numerous constructive initiatives and proposals of the USSR and the other socialist countries, which point the way toward radically reducing nuclear and conventional weapons, and comprehensively improving the situation in Europe and the world.

Comrades Todor Zhivkov and Herbert Mies confirmed the determination of the BCP and the DKP to further develop and strengthen the close traditional relations between the two parties and to cooperate in strengthening the unity of the international communist and workers' movement on the basis of Marxism-Leninism and proletarian internationalism.

The meeting was attended by Dimitur Stanishev, BCP Central Committee secretary.

FURTHER REPORTAGE ON TALKS WITH IRAQ'S 'AZIZ

Mladenov, 'Aziz Speak At Dinner

AU230740 Sofia BTA in English 1931 GMT 21 Jul 86

[Report on toasts by Petur Mladenov, member of the BCP Central Committee Politburo and Bulgarian minister of foreign affairs, and Tariq 'Aziz, Iraqi deputy premier and minister of foreign affairs, at the 21 July official dinner in Sofia given in 'Aziz's honor by Petur Mladenov]

[Text] Sofia, July 21 (BTA) -- The visit to Bulgaria by the chief Iraqi diplomat, Mr Tariq 'Aziz, is a step forward in the promotion of bilateral relations, a contribution to the diversification of the fruitful and mutually advantageous cooperation, said today Mr Petur Mladenov, Bulgaria's minister of foreign affairs.

Speaking at an official dinner here for Mr Tariq 'Aziz, deputy prime minister and minister of foreign affairs of Iraq, he stressed that the promotion of bilateral relations is in the interests of the two countries, to the benefit of world peace and security.

Mr Petur Mladenov emphasised that the present day calls for a new attitude towards the global problems facing mankind. The questions of our time should be interpreted and solved in their interrelation and should be taken to heart by everybody.

"Negotiations in good faith, well-meaning political dialogue, strict regard for the legitimate interests of the individual countries, civilised state-to-state relations: These are the landmarks blazing the road to a peaceful and safe world," he noted.

The chief Bulgarian diplomat said that an improvement of the international climate is impeded by the grossly manifested aspirations for military superiority, by acts of state-sponsored terrorism, by breaches of the standards of international law and of the U.N. principles, by the unilateral abrogation of agreements in effect.

He recalled a number of constructive proposals put forward by the U.S.S.R. and the other socialist countries, seeking a consolidation of peace and security. The socialist community's initiatives cover global, continental and regional problems, and they take into consideration the interests of all countries.

"The socialist community countries want an elimination of trouble spots no matter where they are and a settlement of disputes exclusively by political means and not by military force," the Bulgarian foreign minister pointed out.

"We regard the Iraqi people as a friendly people, and the Iranian people is friendly as far as we are concerned, too," Mr Mladenov said. He stressed that Bulgaria sincerely deplores the thousands of casualties in the Iraq-Iran conflict, that Bulgaria is for an end to the war, for finding a peaceful solution to all problems.

Ending the war is in the interests of the two belligerent powers, of the Gulf States, of the Arab cause, of all countries in the region and of world peace.

Mr Petur Mladenov indicated that Bulgaria is in favour of a comprehensive settlement of the Middle East crisis and backs the Soviet proposals to this effect. An international conference should be convened under U.N. auspices to be attended by all parties concerned, the P.L.O. included, as the sole legitimate representative of the Palestinian people. The Soviet initiative on setting up a preparatory committee comprised of the permanent members of the U.N. Security Council makes it possible to start practical work for the preparation of the conference itself.

Mr Petur Mladenov noted that Bulgaria's Balkan policy is aimed at establishing good-neighbor relations and that the initiatives proposed by the Bulgarian head of state Mr Todor Zhivkov to turn this part of the world into a zone free of nuclear weapons and the joint Bulgaro-Romanian proposals on the freeing of the continent from all chemical weapons serve that particular purpose.

In his reply Mr Tariq 'Aziz expressed his satisfaction with the development of the bilateral relations emphasizing the role of the meetings between Mr Saddam Husayn and Mr Todor Zhivkov.

The guest said that the most important problem of our age is the strengthening of peace and the struggle against the arms race, particularly in the field of nuclear armaments. The hegemonism and terror practiced by imperialism and the reactionary forces, the increasing plundering of the wealth of the developing countries, the inhuman treatment of the people of Palestine and South Africa, the interference in other countries' internal affairs, constitute a threat to security and peace in the world. "We believe that peace is the global aim of mankind and that it is indivisible. Every confrontation or war, no matter where it takes place, is a threat to peace and security on our planet," Mr Tariq 'Aziz said.

The Iraqi minister dwelled on the conflict with Iran. He said that this war is a threat to peace not only in the region but in the whole world. He expressed Iraq's readiness to respond to all initiatives aimed at ending the conflict and at achieving honorable and just peace in concord with the U.N. Charter and the norms of international law.

The Iraqi foreign minister offered comment on the conflict in the Middle East and condemned the persecution of the Palestinian people and the refusal by certain circles to grant it the right to self-determination. This tragic issue and its consequences coupled with Tel Aviv's policies are factors threatening world peace.

"Iraq expresses its full solidarity with the Arab people of Palestine and calls for the return of its lands and for its being granted the right to self-determination on its own national land, headed by the P.L.O.," said Mr Tariq 'Aziz.

He supported the struggle of the peoples of the world for national independence, including the struggle of the people of South Africa and Namibia against racism and apartheid.

The guest assessed highly the efforts of Bulgaria and the other socialist states directed at the strengthening of peace on earth and paid special attention to Mr Mikhail Gorbachev's proposal on the complete elimination of all nuclear and chemical weapons.

He assessed highly Bulgaria's efforts aimed at turning the Balkans into a zone free of chemical and nuclear weapons, into a region of peace and cooperation.

Zhivkov Hosts Luncheon

[Text] Comrade Todor Zhivkov gave a luncheon in honour of the Iraqi foreign minister. It was attended by Comrades Milko Balev and Petur Mladenov and by other officials.

Tariq 'Aziz was also received by Georgi Atanasov, chairman of the Council of Ministers. The need was stressed for stimulating the further development of bilateral links in all fields. The two participants in the conversation briefed one another on the progress and the tasks which their countries are solving at present. They also gave brief outlines of the basic lines of the foreign policies which their governments are pursuing.

'Aziz: Talks 'Very Useful'

AU231915 Sofia BTA in English 1800 GMT 23 Jul 86

["Tariq 'Aziz Interviewed" -- BTA headline]

[Text] Sofia, July 23 (BTA) -- Mr Tariq 'Aziz, deputy prime minister and minister of foreign affairs of Iraq, called his talks in Sofia very useful and fruitful.

He told a BTA reporter that Bulgaro-Iraqi relations develop favourably in politics, economics and culture. Speaking of his talks with Mr Todor Zhivkov, president of the State Council, with Mr Georgi Atanasov, chairman of the Council of Ministers, and with Mr Petur Mladenov, minister of foreign affairs, Mr Tariq 'Aziz pointed out that they had reiterated the common desire for all-round cooperation and expansion of relations.

Asked about the ways for a durable and just settlement of the Middle East conflict, Mr 'Aziz set forth the firm support of his country for the just struggle of the Palestinian people for self-determination and for the establishment of an independent homeland. Iraq commends highly the support rendered to the Palestinian people by the Soviet Union, Bulgaria and the other socialist countries, Mr Tariq 'Aziz said.

Having declared himself against any attempts at separate settlements of the Middle East crisis, Mr 'Aziz said that lasting and just peace can only be achieved with the participation of all parties concerned. Peace talks are needed involving the P.L.O. and all permanent kmembers of the U.N. Security Council, the Iraqi minister said.

Commenting on Mr Shimon Peres's visit to Morocco and its implications for Arab unity, Mr Tariz 'Aziz said that just as most Arab countries, Iraq too criticises this trip and qualifies it as entirely futile.

URUGUAYAN DELEGATION ARRIVES FOR MEETINGS

AU231119 Sofia BTA in English 0904 GMT 23 Jul 86

[Text] Sofia, July 23 (BTA) -- Mr. Enrique Iglesias, minister of foreign affairs of Uruguay, arrived here today on an official visit.

Until about a year ago Uruguay was under military dictatorship. During this difficult period for the Uruguayan people the relations between the two countries were in a standstill.

Now, after the fall of the dictatorship, the new democratic government is showing a desire to broaden the contacts and to promote cooperation with various states.

This striving found a response on the part of Bulgaria which is pursuing an invariable policy of peace and understanding, of maintaining equal and mutually advantageous relations. Therefore, bearing in mind the stands of the two countries, the expectations for a fruitful Bulgaro-Uruguayan dialogue are well-grounded.

On his arrival at the Sofia airport the guest made the following statement before Bulgarian journalists: "This is a historic, first visit of an Uruguayan foreign minister to Bulgaria; it coincides with a period of activating and consolidating bilateral relations and with the opening of an Uruguayan diplomatic representation in Sofia. It is an expression of the will of the two governments to get to know each other better and to find common ground and possibilities for cooperation in the name of friendship between the peoples of Uruguay and Bulgaria".

The Uruguayan minister was welcomed by Foreign Minister Petur Mladenov, at whose invitation the visit is taking place.

Zhivkov Receives Iglesias

AU231316 Sofia BTA in English 1158 GMT 23 Jul 86

[Text] Sofia, July 23 (BTA) -- Mr. Todor Zhivkov, president of the State Council, received Mr Enrique Iglesias, minister of foreign affairs of Uruguay, who arrived on an official visit to Bulgaria today. The talks centered on the bilateral relations and on certain issues of the international situation.

Both politicians expressed satisfaction with the good prospects for the development of the relations in the political, economic, cultural and other fields, which will be further enhanced by the visit here of the foreign minister of Uruguay. They also exchanged information on the tasks that are being tackled by the two states.

In analyzing the current international situation, the Bulgarian head of state noted that the most important problem now is the preservation of peace in the world, the curbing of the arms race in the nuclear field particularly and the elimination of all mass destruction weapons. He explained the peace initiatives proposed by Bulgaria and the other socialist states, and before all the Budapest address of the Warsaw Treaty states to the NATO members and to all other West European states. This address included a program on the reduction of the armed forces and conventional weapons in Europe.

Mr. Zhivkov and his guest then went on to examine the situation in Latin and Central America and spoke in support of the right of all peoples to determine themselves the social system in their countries.

Mr. Petur Mladenov, minister of foreign affairs, also took part in the talks.

Mladenov, Iglesias Start Talks

AU231456 Sofia BTA in English 1343 GMT 23 Jul 86

[Text] Sofia, July 23 (BTA) -- The official talks between the foreign ministers of Bulgaria and Uruguay, Mr Petur Mladenov and Mr Enrique Iglesias, started today. The talks centered on the bilateral relations and on certain aspects of the current international situation.

Both ministers expressed gladness over the fact that a foreign minister of Uruguay is paying a visit to Bulgaria for the first time and expressed their assurance that this visit will further promote the two countries' relations in the political, economic, cultural and other fields. The chief of the Bulgarian diplomacy noted that the restoration of democracy in Uruguay has created the conditions for the overcoming of the stagnation in the bilateral relations in the 70's. He noted that a more active cooperation would be to the benefit of both states and peoples and would be a contribution to peace and security in the world. The two foreign ministers believe that the differences in their countries' political systems would not hamper the bilateral relations.

Mr. Petur Mladenov briefed his guest on Bulgaria's peaceloving foreign policy, which is coordinated with the other fraternal socialist states and reflects the interests of all states and peoples. In this connection he went on to explain the initiative of the Bulgarian head of state Mr Todor Zhivkov on the turning of the Balkans into a nuclear-free zone and the Bulgaro-Romanian proposal to eliminate all chemical weapons on the Peninsula. He spoke about Bulgaria's efforts aimed at strengthening good-neighbor relations and cooperation and about the role of the smaller states in the promotion of peace and security in the world.

The Bulgarian foreign minister voiced concern over the state of the world and underlined that peace and security on the planet are incompatible with confrontation. In order to achieve peace the world needs willingness to do away with all nuclear and other mass destruction weapons, to simulatenously dissolve the Warsaw Treaty and NATO. These are all aims of the efforts of the socialist states. He deplored the fact that the West has not yet given a positive reply to a number of constructive proposals made by the Soviet Union and the other socialist states, that nuclear tests are continuing and the preparations for the star wars are still under way, and that international agreements are being unilaterally put aside. Mr Petur Mladenov expressed condemnation for the policy of state-run terrorism and noted that it is a serious destabilizing factor in the international relations.

The chief of the Bulgarian diplomacy recalled this country's principled policy in respect to the ways to solve the crisis in Central America and spoke in support of the upholding of the priniciple of non-interference in other countries' internal affairs. He backed the idea to turn the South Atlantic into a zone free of nuclear weapons, promoted by Uruguay, Brazil and Argentina.

Mr Enrique Iglesias spoke about the restoration of democracy in Uruguay, about the country's difficult economic situation due to its large foreign debt, about the social problems facing the people of Uruguay. He stressed his government's willingness to develop mutually beneficial relations with the socialist states.

The guest said that positive changes are under way in Latin America manifested through the democratization of the continent, the strengthening of the diplomatic contacts between the states. At the same time he emphasized upon the need to eliminate the few remaining military dictatorships in this part of the world. The foreign minister dictatorships in this part of the world. The foreign minister of Uruguay condemned all acts of terrorism, the support for the contras and the attempts at interference in the internal affairs of sovereign states. Mr Enrique Iglesias said that Uruguay's position in respect to the crisis in Central America is determined by the country's participation in the "Support Group" and that it supports the constructive efforts of the Contadora Group on the peaceful settlement of the conflict. The foreign minister of Uruguay also backed the just struggle of the people of Nicaragua for selfdetermination.

ECONOMIC CALLS FOR 'SUBSTANTIAL CHANGES' NOW

AU221036 Prague TRIBUNA No. 28 in Czech 16 Jul 86 pp 1, 3

[Article by Frantisek Valenta, director of the Economic Institute of the Czechoslovak Academy of Sciences: "Economic Theory After the 17th CPCZ Congress;" capitalized passages published in boldface]

[Excerpts] [passage omitted] The experience of economists bears out that economic practice is a strict teacher vis-a-vis economy theory. It only reluctantly gives good marks and does not hestitate to administer a metaphorical rap over the knucles from time to time. We must add that this is sometimes justified. Speaking at an ideological aktiv on 18 April 1986, [First Deputy Chairman of the State Planning Commission] Comrade Vertelar, for example, rightly criticized the economic theory for cases when it degenerates into an endeavor to get to know individual partial questions and problems of economic life and its development instead of trying to discover the substance and laws of economic development.

Such confusion of the function of basic research may well occur and -- although it may sound paradoxical in view of the above justified criticism -- it happens under the pressure of economic practice. A POIGNANT EXAMPLE OF THIS ERROR ON THE PART OF ECONOMIC THEORY IS ITS PARTICIPATION IN THE CHANGES IN THE SYSTEM OF MANAGEMENT AS APPLIED 7 OR 8 YEARS AGO. At that time economic theory adopted from the economic practice a method of approaching changes in management that is absolutely natural for the agencies of economic practice but unsuitable for theory. It is a method that is based on the idea that by individually checking the functioning of every element of the system of planned management and the economic mechanism at large, cleansing it, mending it, and the like and then putting all the elements together again you arrive at a more perfect system of management. It is no secret that the Set of Measures of 1980 was put together in this way. As long as economic theory applied the same methods as the agencies of economic practice, it did the same thing, the only difference being that it did so much less dexterously and profesionally.

Economic theory does not exist to repeat the same cognitive process that takes place in economic practice on the basis of sheer accumulation of experiences. IT CAN ONLY BE MEANINGFUL WHEN IT STRIVES TO GET TO KNOW SUBSTANTIAL PROCESSES AND CONNECTIONS THAT ARE HIDDEN UNDERNEATH SURFACE PHENOMENA, WHEN IT TRIES TO DISCOVER LAWS AND TRENDS, AND WHEN IT DRAWS CONCLUSIONS THAT ARE USEFUL IN PRACTICE FROM THIS KNOWLEDGE ABOUT WHAT IS SUBSTANTIAL. [passage ommited]

As stated above, in participating in the resolution of the system of planned management and the entire economic mechanism, economic theory must avoid the method that consists of checking the ability of individual elements of the system of management to perform their function Economic theory must proceed from that which internally links all external phenomena in planned management, from that which accounts for their being mere manifestations of their common substance. [passage omitted]

Without such a profound look at problems connected with the system of planned management, one could gain the impression that the reproduction process (so-called substantive problems and their solution) takes place beside the process of management and that these two processes are virtually independent of each other. HOWEVER, ESSENTIALLY IT IS A QUESTION OF A SINGLE PROCESS OF THE DEVELOPMENT OF THE SOCIALIST ECONOMY AND THE ENTIRE SOCIAL LIFE, WITH MANAGEMENT AND THE ECONOMIC MECHANISM REFLECTING ITS SUBJECTIVE ASPECT. From this also follows the most important conclusion arrived at by economic theory: THE TURN TOWARD INTENSIVE DEVELOPMENT OF THE ECONOMY IS FUNCTIONALLY DEPENDENT ON CERTAIN CHANGES IN THE SYSTEM OF PLANNED MANAGEMENT AND THE ENTIRE ECONOMIC MECHANISM. THE SHIFT TO INTENSIVE DEVELOPMENT OF THE ECONOMY WILL NOT BE BROUGHT ABOUT WITHOUT CERTAIN CHANGES IN THE SYSTEM OF MANAGEMENT, CHANGES THAT WILL ANTICIPATE THE NEW QUALITY OF ECONOMIC GROWTH, ITS SOURCES, ITS STRUCTURAL CONSEQUENCES, AND SO FORTH!

The fact that the intensification of the economy is conditional on certain changes in the system of management is also the reason for the conviction that these changes must not be deferred. One cannot identify with the views of those who argue that before being able to apply the improved system of management in the national economy, it is first necessary to create the model of this improved system. This solution would mean delaying the necessary changes in management by another 5, 10, or more years, not to mention the absence of any guarantees that the solution in question would be really "perfect." SOMETHING SUBSTANTIAL MUST BE ASSERTED WITHOUT DELAY, IN THE COURSE OF THE EIGHT 5-YEAR PLAN. [passage omitted]

The sources of the new quality of economic growth have a hierarchical structure and can be applied only through the creative activity of work collectives at all levels. From this realization there also proceeds the new concept of democratic centralism, the deepening of which is one of the basic requirements formulated by the 17th CPCZ Congress.

Deepening democratic centralism in line with the conclusions of the 17th CPCZ Congress and the 27th CPSU Congress requires, on the one hand, the strengthening of guidance from the center and, on the other, enhancing the independence of the lower links of management. Such a setting of tasks may seem incomprehensible from the viewpoint of older literature on this topic. Roughly 25 years ago, and later too, the principle of democratic centralism was being reduced to the mere relationship between centralization and decentralization. Thi perception made it possible to arrive at conclusions to the effect that the strengthening of centralism means the weakening of decentralization and the other way around (for example, in Brus' book "Models of Socialist Economy" published in our country). Views from that period persevere, primarily because the theoretical elaboration of democratic centralism has made virtually no headway and the problem itself remains in the rear of economic theory's attention.

That is why economic practice continues to face the question of HOW TO STRENGTHEN AND ENHANCE BOTH POLES OF DEMOCRATIC CENTRALISM. This is at the same time a challenge for economic theory because practice needs the theory of this process. And it also needs good theory for many other problems that constitute the contents of the intensive type of economic development.

NEUES DEUTSCHLAND COMMENTS ON NUCLEAR TEST STOP

["W.M."-signed editorial article: "Key Question: Test Ban"]

[Text] The agreement to establish three monitoring stations for underground explosions in both the Soviet Union and the United States has been received by the international public with vivid interest and definite approval. It is to be noticed in particular that one of these stations has already started to work in Karkaralinsk (USSR). It is, indeed, a promising project, a project important for progress on the path toward arms limitation and disarmament.

Scientists from both countries are working in the seismological monitoring stations established by the USSR Academy of Sciences and the U.S. Council on Environmental Quality. They are able to register earthquakes, but, above all, nuclear explosions of any magnitude, since the stations are not established just anywhere but rather on site: near Semipalatinsk in Kazakhstan and in the Nevada desert. Of course, the scientists in these monitoring stations are also able to verify without any doubt that such explosions are not taking place. And this is the most important thing. Verification is not to register the continuing arms race but it is to be an instrument of disarmament.

Thus the stations will serve their true purpose only when an agreement on the total ban of nuclear tests has been concluded, when it can and must be verified whether this agreement is observed. The scientists from 35 countries who recently stated at a forum that the existing verification measures are absolutely reliable, pleaded in their declaration "for the cessation of nuclear tests" for such a useful activity by the planned monitoring stations.

The scientists are speaking for millions and millions of people. Political forces all over the world are advocating a test stop agreement with exemplary unanimity and determination and they stress the great significance of the USSR's advance achievement. The USSR has prolonged its unilateral moratorium twice -- now until 6 August, the anniversary of the nuclear inferno in Hiroshima. During the weekend, 800 prominent GDR citizens, in an advertisement in the paper UNSERE ZEIT, demanded that the period up to this deadline be used for coming to an agreement, thus living up to the responsibility which we are reminded of by the fate of the Japanese city.

Today everyone kunderstands that a test stop, that is, making it impossible to test new nuclear weapons, would be the first step toward a cessation of the nuclear arms race and that then each following step on the path toward arms limitation and disarmament, no matter how complicated, would be made considerably easier. No matter which door is used to enter the area of the nuclear disarmament problem, the ban on nuclear tests is the key to opening it.

Iglesias on Importance of Visit

LD222235 Budapest Television Service in Hungarian 1730 GMT 22 Jul 86

[Text] Urguguaian Foreign Minister Enrique Iglesias, who is currently paying an official visit to Hungary, today gave an intervew to our program:

[Begin Iglesias recording in Spanish with superimposed Hungarian translation] This is the first visit by a Hungarian foreign minister to Hungary. This also indicates that cooperation and friendship with your country is important to us. During the talks we discussed international issues, mainly the problems endangering world; problems that cause our countries similar anxiety. These were discussed in our talks with the deputy president of the Presidential Council, the prime minister, and with my counterpart, the foreign minister.

In foreign politics we sought out the points where our views coincide, and thereby it has been possible for us to progress on the path of mutual understanding. The other aim of our visit was to make long-standing Hungarian-Uruguayan commercial ties more effective. For this very reason I have also been accompanied by representatives of the private sector. We would like to increase trade, and we see good prospects here. As far as we are concerned, we can be good customers and good salesmen simultaneously. I am glad that we have also settled the statutes of the economic mixed committee.

We have signed a scientific, cultural and education cooperation agreement. In our view this is an historic moment when, by respecting the social systems of our respective countries on the basis of friendship between our peoples, we can strengthen Hungarian-Uruguayan cooperation. [end recording]

KULCAR COMMENTS ON U.S. PLAN TO ABANDON SALT

LD221424 Budapest Domestic Service in Hungarian 1000 GMT 22 Jul 86

[Istvan Kulcar commentary]

[Text] Soviet-U.S. discussions by the two countries Permanent Consultative Committee began in Geneva this morning. Istvan Kulcar adds this comment to the news:

The Consultative Committee was founded in 1972, after the signing of the SALT I treaty, in order to control observation of the agreements on anti-missile defense systems and on the limitation of strategic offensive weapons. The piquancy of the consultation starting today is that on 27 May the United States announced that it no longer considers observations of the SALT treaties to be binding on itself. In November they wish to equip 131 B-52 bombers with so-called cruise missiles, in other words with robot planes. Unless it disarms other targetable devices, the United States will thus be going beyond the limits of SALT. Even so, although they speak about this in Washington as an accomplished fact, many people hope that the Reagan administration will in the meantime change its mind and allow itself to be convinced. After all, extension of the SALT treaties and the limitation of antimissile missiles could also be an important topic of bargaining at the Soviet-U.S. summit meeting, which will probably take place this year.

The Geneva discussions starting today will obviously not be easy, even less so because the American delegation, according to reports, on the basis that attack is the best method of defense, wants to begin them by accusing the Soviet Union of violating the SALT II treaty, thereby justifying so to speak its reason for not wishing to respect the agreement, which never came into effect, which has in any case already expired, and which nevertheless has been so important and right up till now really valid.

At the same time the U.S. Government is under broad pressure both from part of American public opinion and from its West European allies, to continue to adhere to the limitations and, I repeat again, all this may at the same time also be the prelude, the preparation, to the forthcoming, or seemingly forthcoming, further Reagan-Gorbachev meeting.

[Text] Budapest, July 23, (MTI) -- Gyorgy Lazar, member of the Politburo Committee of the Hungarian Socialist Workers' Party, chairman of the Council of Ministers visited Gyer-Sporon county Wednesday. In Gyer, at the country party committee headquarters, the heads of the country briefed him on achievements in the county, and on its social, political and economic situation. Present at the briefing were the leaders of numerous companies, cooperative farms, and social bodies, as well as interest representation organizations, and many of them spoke on the achievements and problems of the county's working collectives.

Gyorgy Lazar expressed his thanks for the information. He pointed out that although a part of the problems were the result of external circumstances, little is said about how to use our own force and rely on our own endowments to rationally mobilize our reserves and gain impetus to enter a new phase of development.

The 13th Congress of the Hungarian Socialist Workers' Party considered a societal-economic renewal necessary to fulfill the tasks set down in the resolution. Our yardstick continues to be the document approved by the congress but it must not be forgotten that renewal puts requirements on all social and economic flows. A quality change can be helped by socialist economic integration, by numerous processes serving to renew the work of the CMEA, processes evolving at the present time.

The chairman of the Council of Ministers referred to the example set by several companies in the county when he underlined that under current conditions it is still possible to attain outstanding results. At the same time the regulators must help to force the quality change to take place: giving the opportunity for further development to those who operate economically and opening the way to eliminating uneconomic activity. The objective is not to close down companies but to make their operation profitable.

Gyorgy Lazar also spoke of preparations for the 1987 plan, indicating that the government considers it important that the companies be informed in time on the regulators valid next year. Finally, he stressed that not only did the problems have to be accounted realistically but that a just self-confidence was necessary too, since the renewal awaited can be achieved in the 7th Five Year Plan despite the difficulties.

Following the talks the prime minister visited the Raba Hungarian freight car and machine factory, was briefed on housing construction at the municipal council and to conclude his program he visited the Hungarian-Austrian joint venture making building profiles at Gonyu.

BRIEFS

NUCLEAR PLANTS AGREEMENT -- Hungary will continue to deliver nuclear power installations to the USSR next year. A 20.5-million-ruble agreement to this effect was signed today by the Transelektro Foreign Trade Enterprise and representatives of the USSR's Atomenergo-Export Enterprise. The special water-treatment installations, blending vessels, pressure vessels, and reagent feeders will be made of acid-resistant steel and manufactured by the April 4 Machine Enterprise. This is the first Hungarian-Soviet deal of its kind since the Chernobyl accident. [Text] [Budapest Television Service in Hungarian 1730 GMT 14 Jul 86 LD]

REPORTAGE ON ENACTMENT OF NEW AMNESTY LAW

Walesa Interrogated

AU231515 Vienna ORF Teletext in German 1433 GMT 23 Jul 86

[Text] Warsaw -- Today [23 July] the new amnesty law has come into force in Poland. It provides for the release of political prisoners and criminal offenders in light cases. Political prisoners must commit themselves in writing not to violate the existing laws. According to an official statement, first releases can be expected today.

Today workers leader Walesa was interrogated on his connections with the imprisoned underground leader Bujak. He subsequently stated that there are reasons to assume that a new political trial is being prepared.

369 Released

LD232040 Warsaw Domestic Service in Polish 2000 GMT 23 Jul 86

[Text] Today, when the Law on Special Procedures toward the Perpetrators of Certain Crimes came into force, the first resolutions were issued on remission of all or part of sentences of imprisonment or detention. The main board of penal establishments reported that 369 persons were released today, including 150 women and 45 young offenders.

Walesa Adviser Questioned, Charged

AU231556 Paris AFP in English 1552 GMT 23 Jul 86

[Text] Warsaw, July 23 (AFP) -- Professor Bronislaw Geremek, chief advisor to Solidarity chief Lech Walesa, was charged here Wednesday with membership of an illegal organisation, an offence that carries up to three years in jail on conviction, Prof. Geremek's friends said.

Prof. Geremek, 54, accused of activity in the banned trade union's underground in Warsaw, had been questioned in police inquires into Zbigniew Bujak, the underground solidarity leader who was arrested on May 31 after more than four years on the run. [sentence as received]

Mr. Walesa himself has been questioned eight times as a "witness" in the case.

SOCIAL, POLITICAL, RELIGIOUS DIVISIONS NOTED

AU231156 Warsaw RZECZYWISTOSC in Polish 6 Jul 86 p 2

[Jerzy Pardus commentary: "The Struggle Against the Obsolete"]

[Excerpts] The 10th PZPR Congress began its debates on 29 June. The 5 years that have gone by since the Ninth PZPR Congress have been years of special events in our country. [passage omitted] That is why I think we realize better than ever that, as is the case with any other community, the Polish community continues to experience social, political, and religious divisions, which overlay and cross each other. For example, we have the Catholics who are enthusiastic champions of socialist construction in Poland, we have the atheists who like capitalist social order, we have the workers who maintain links with the social right wing, and we have the "reeducated capitalists" who are greatly surprised that nothing is being done to deal with the adversaries of socialism with greater severity.

The divisions have not been created by the recent past. The reasons for them have been present all the time since the last war and their roots can often be found in the interwar period, which was marked by unprecedented political disruption. They were also alive during World War II, and that is why the leaders of the great powers asserted that the Poles would never be able to get on with one another.... The situation was the same immediately after the war, and no decree about this or that stage of socialist construction and not even the thesis that our people have achieved moral-political unity could change this situation. The people can be united with regard to some aim and program, but they cannot be all the same

Despite appearances to the contrary, not all Poles are for progress, innovations, and a continuous onward march. Some of us prefer to be conservative, to live on the sidelines, and even to hold back those who forge ahead too much. It goes without saying that dominant forces count in times of great social processes, but even these forces will find it difficult to embark resolutely upon the road of development if guns are spiked, if brakes are applied, and if reverse gear is slammed in, perhaps.

It is true that there are really very few people who would do this, and even dyed-in-the-wool conservatives shrink from this possibility. Nevertheless, we continue to encounter parochial, branch, and group interests, and it is true that now we speak of them in full voice and do not pretend that at the present stage of our socialist construction thee are no contradictions between groups and interests, although we do not always have a genuine knowledge of their strength and trends.

That is why when we say that the party is the driving force of change we mean that it should head nationwide processes and know those interests (those of classes, sections, and groups) for which to create better conditions, and those for which to create worse conditions, unfortunately. Today we no longer have time for formal preferences which are of no consequence for the upsurge of the economy. Today we have to go for the preferences that stimulate initiative and punish trickery and common pretence. The 10th party congress is aware of this.

LEOPOLD LEWIN RESPONDS TO POEZJA ARTICLE

AU221003 Warsaw KULTURA in Polish 2 Jul 86 p 11

[Leopold Lewin article: "Phantoms Are Returning"]

[Excerpts] Issue 3 of the POEZJA monthly published Bohdan Urbankowski's article entitled "In the World Torn Apart." Reading it, I found myself in the prewar world, which I know and like. [paragraph continues] [passage omitted] But suddenly, I also found myself in an atmosphere of the National Radical Organization; the Falang; the GAZETA WARSZAWSKA, in which that brilliant pamphletist Adolf Nowaczynski made jokes about my Jewish origins; and the MYSL NARODOWA monthly, the chief editor of which and leading critic of the National Democracy, Zygmunt Wasilewski, published an extensive essay entitled "Vampirism of Semite Poetry." [passage omitted]

I have thought -- what naivete! -- that the times were forever over when literary works were judged in line with racist criteria. The POEZJA article has this to say: "One of the extremely important results of the war has been the ultimate demolition of the ghetto walls and the entry into Polish culture of a large group of Jewish activists and creative people. The two nations, which had lived divided by a literary and symbolic wall for centuries, came to constitute a single multilated nation as a result of the war tragedy." But this is more important to Urbankowski: "In contrast to the earlier periods when integration was limited to difficult individual decisions, postwar integration was a mass movement, one that was not prepared by culture, but was enforced by the war, which had demolished the Polish base of the existence of Jews as a separate nation."

Were the decisions in question individual decisions? In a single breath I could list some score of creative people of Jewish origin who were signally present in Polish prewar literature. Were these decision difficult? They were, but not only for purely external reasons, which were represented by the attitudes of Jewish and Polish nationalists toward those Jews who decided to work for Polish nationalists toward those Jews who decided to work for Polish literature. The former regarded them as renegades and the latter refused to recognize them as part of Polish literature. Otherwise, these decisions were easy to make. The writers concerned made a conscious choice: They wished to write in a language that was their mother tongue.

Urbankowski behaves like the critics from National Democracy and the National Radical Organization when he accused the writers in question of "weak roots in things Polish and in the Polish world of historical, moral, and political values." You have to be quite an ignoramus and possess a great deal of impudence to write like this about most of the Polish poets of Jewish origins. "Poets like Slucki," Urbankowski writes, "were able to develop a culture-creating elite, but were unable to develop a nation-creating elite." I can already hear the loud prewar shouts of the Polish club-wielders from national Democracy. But this is still not the worst experience. After all, the Hitlerites refused the poets "such as Slucki" even as little as the right and ability to develop a culture-creating elite.

The classic arsenal of all kinds of nationalism usually includes the slogan of great-power ambitions. I remember this slogan as part of a program of the prewar extreme Polish right wing and I found its echo in this sentence by Urbankowski: "Enthusiasm that was able to overcome destruction and lift Poland to the level of Europe's leading states was wasted in a criminal way" Poland was never a leading country before the war and much less after the war when it lay in dreadful ruins. I can assure this cocky critic that even if no Jew had been among the governing echelons of Poland, we could never expect that Poland would be able to quickly keep abreast with the European leaders after the end of the war. Wishful thinking and beating the drum are not enough, unfortunately. [passage omitted]

I wonder from what positions the article "In the World Torn Apart" was written. I seem to be able to guess, and yet...The article is quite a thick mish-mash. It is not literary criticism. It is superficial publicist stuff based on ignorance. The author mixes together creative work with political activities and subjects outstanding and poor poets to equal treatment. He does this slightingly in most cases. It goes without saying that all of these poets did sin because they wrote about Stalin and Beirut, about the class struggle, the imperialists, and so on. [paragraph continues]

However, for the poets with undoubted origins (Broniewski, Galczynski, Dobrowolski) Urbankowski is able to produce some justification and some extenuating circumstances. On the other hand, he has no mercy for those other poets. Only hell is reserved for them. [passage omitted]

Urbankowski writes: "Leftism and free thinking had been symbols of independence and progressiveness and it was only after the war that this was turned upside down. Let us add that more inferior creative people began their activities on the periphery of this leftist elite. They included Wygodzki, Szenwald, Zolkiewski, Stawar, Kott, and all those who after the war, together with the promoted 'grassroots' and the entire 'substitue generation' created the natural soil for the development of Stalinism." What confusion and muddle! What a lack of respect for other people's achievements!

It is true that Wygodzki went to Israel, but this does not change the fact that he wrote some fine verses and interesting prose. Szanwald is the prodigy child of KWADRYGA, but I have a personal grudge against him because, to put it mildly, he was not a very good colleague in the USSR. But he is a brilliant poet. [passage omitted]

"I do not respond to direct attacks against me, but I have to refer to one such attack in order to prove that Urbankowski is unable to read, that is, is unable to understand what he reads. He writes that Gruszczynski, Woroszylski, Slucki, and Urgacz spoke in the name of the workers class and that Leopold Lewin, one of the 'godfathers' and 'outsiders', empowered them to make such speeches because in his 'The Labor Leaders Song' he had written: 'The party has placed us at the head of the procession of millions and millions of people.'"

If this song is a song of leaders in labor, then it was these leaders and not the aforementioned poets that the party placed at the head of that procession. But I own that poets are entitled to speak on behalf of a certain group of people. I can also understand why I have been called an "outside." But why "godfather?" This term now has two meanings. I regret I am not a "godfather," that is, a boss of some mafia, because if I were I would be able to punish irresponsible writers and critics for their ill-advised and actually stupid articles.

Of course, here I have not discussed all the inaccuracies, inadequacies, stupidities, and innuendoes, which run riot in Urnbankowski's article. I have no time and desire and, most of all, no patience to do so. After all, I am no critic and I think that what I have cited is enough to show up the article for what it is. I just wanted to indicate that in a democratic country, which is marching toward socialism, that at the end of the 20th century, and that after the hecatomb of World War II, which demonstrated what fascist racism (yes, fascist, because this qualification always goes hand with hand with racism) is capable of doing, such repulsive views, ones that classify creative people in accordance with their origins, are still in circulation.

In conclusion, let me suggest for the benefit of the POEZJA editorial board a few subjects that would conform with the article written by the deputy chief editor [Urbankowski, who has since been dismissed] "The Servilism of Semite Poetry," "The Cruelty of Semite Poetry," and "The Cynicism of Semite Poetry." Critical articles carrying these titles would find their proper place in POEZJA.

CARDINAL GLEMP GIVES PRESS CONFERENCE IN ITALY

PM221456 Rome LA REPUBBLICA in Italian 20-21 Jul 86 p 10

[Stefano Malatesta report: "Glemp Praises Jaruzelski -- 'A Man of Culture'"]

[Text] Alghero -- "Nothing has changed in Poland since the 10th PZPR Congress," Primate of Poland Jozef Glemp says. "The policy of the Communist Party and the government is still the same. The government keeps watch, monitors, and issues orders. Only in the liturgy are we permitted some freedom."

Glemp was in Alghero to receive the "Commitment to Peace" prize: Since 1982 he has already received three prizes -- all for peace -- in Italy, the nation of prizes, and this makes the fourth. He said that he had not yet seen John Paul II but that he would of course be meeting with him after the ceremony in Sardinia. At a press conference we asked him what stage has been reached in connection with plans for the pope's third visit to Poland -- whether he will go to Gdansk to see the monument to the workers murdered by the police near the entrance to the Lenin shipyards, and whether he will visit Popieluszko's grave.

"The visit has not yet been officially organized," Glemp replied. "We know that there are no obstacles but party and government people were busy until a few days ago organizing the congress. In any case the visit is scheduled for next June, but we do not want the pope to be too occupied with visits and meetings, with an excessively full schedule. It must be a pleasurable visit too. So we certainly are not ruling out a visit to Gdansk: The city deserves it. But the visit will, come what may, be of an ecclesiastical and nonpolitical nature."

[Journalist] It was said that this visit was connected with the amnesty law approved by the Polish Sejm. The other day Lech Walesa described it as "the mountain giving birth to a mouse -- a propaganda gesture."

[Glemp] I heard Walesa's remarks on the radio. This law will be implemented case by case and I am not yet in a position to assess its ultimate result. If, however, as is hoped, 20,000-25,000 people are released, it will be a very major event for our country. Of course the problem is the release of political prisoners. What will the government do in certain cases?

[Journalist] You have not yet commented on the arrest of Bujak, the clandestine Solidarity leader....

[Glemp] I knew Bujak when he was the Solidarity leader for the Warsaw region. Then I had no more contact with him, partly because he has always been less close to the church than other leaders -- Walesa, for instance. But I do not want to draw comparisons between the two; I do not want to set one against the other. Let us say that Bujak has been a strong, tough opponent of the Jaruzelski government: His arrest had a major impact on many people in Poland. Let us hope that he is released with the rest: We will of course fight for him.

One journalist asked Glemp whether it is true that he meets with Jaruzelski twice a month. "So far I have met with the general nine times," the cardinal replied. "Our starting positions are obviously very different, so it is a difficult dialogue for both of us. But I must say that Jaruzelski is a man of culture, someone you can talk to -- not the uncouth soldier that some people would have us believe."

Glemp speaks good Italian but perhaps he is unaware of some of the implications of the word "culture." One journalist asked him why, then, so many men of culture -- writers, directors, and historians -- continue to leave a country governed by "a man of culture." "They are all very sensitive people who have found themselves or still find themselves too involved as if intalerably oppresed by what happened -- by the coup d'etat and then the 'normalization.' They feel creatively impotent -- but that is something shared by many others who are not writers. And it is a phenomenon that does Poland great harm. I can understand them; it is a free choice. But to leave one's country while it is in difficulties does not seem to me an ethically praiseworthy thing to do."

Another journalist reminded him that at the PZRP Congress Jaruzelski mentioned "aggressive clericalism" in Poland. "It is an exaggeration with a political purpose," the cardinal replied. "The clergy in Poland, as everywhere else, wants only to serve the common good and the nation. There are some priests who use emotive and strong language in their sermons: We respect the personalities of these committed priests. But it is wrong to generalize as Juruzelski does."

The press conference then followed its own course, partly because there were so many journalists there and partly because the questions ranged from the growth of religious vocations in Poland to peace and generalities such as: "What has happened in the country since the coup d'etat?" Glemp is patient but can only reply in generalities too -- "It has changed a great deal, the people's social aspirations were interrupted," and so forth.

He is extremely careful to repeat that he has always worked to avert bloodshed, futile slaughter. He produced a book of his sermons exhorting Poles to gather in the churches to pray. He recalled the occasion when Jaruzelski sent a general and several high-ranking communist officials to his home at dawn on 13 December 1981 to warn him that there would be a coup d'etat in an hour's time.

Asked whether things are better since Gorbachev's advent, he replied uncertainly: "I cannot say. I am rather well acquainted with real socialism: In this ideology, with its worldly ideological approach, there is no place for the church; there is only the elimination of the church." He added that he knows nothing about a possible visit by John Paul II to the USSR. Last, the press conference turned to the subject of the church's peace mission, after which he took his leave.

CATHOLIC WEEKLY HAILS FREE MARKET ECONOMY

AU231136 Krakow TYGODNIK POWSZECHNY in Polish 13 Jul 86 p 8

[Piotr Wierzbicki commentary: "Some Repair, Some Spoil"]

[Text] I think that newspapers should not educate (why should journalists educate, say, bakers and not vice verse?), but certain people think otherwise and educate, educate, and educate other through newspapers. [sentence as published] One such educator is certainly Stanislaw Kostarski, who is the ZYCIE WARSZAWY correspondent in France and who published an alarmist article on unemployment in French shipyards in issue 148 of that paper. Let us take a look at how S. Kostarski educated and trains ZYCIE WARSZAWY readers in the understanding of the present world's economic and social problems.

The facts he wrties about are: The world's demand for ships has decreased and the French shipyards continue to receive fewer orders. The socialist government has tried to save the situation through subsidies, but the new government will not subsidize shipyards, and that is why the shipyards without orders must dismiss some of their workers.

S. Kostarski is extremely indignant with all this, especially with the final outcome. Although he uses the term "scandal" only once, the gloomy style of his dispatch ("French Shipyards Face Bankruptcy and Thousands May Become Jobless") makes it obvious that this scandal is especially poignant. In order to satisfy S. Kostarski, much would have to be changed in this world. He raises alarm that no one wants to buy new ships, which means that it would be right to compel customers to buy new ships. He is indignant that the shipyards without orders may be closed down, which means that it would be right to let them continue to build new ships without orders and then sink them after launching or consign them to a scrap heap. He cries for help because the shipyards that are no longer required for production and are unable to make their living have found themselves in trouble, which means that it would be better to allow unwanted shipyards and plants that produce unwanted goods to go on producing them ad infinitum and that the state should maintain them (by depriving the necessary funds of the plants that are wanted and that produce profitable goods in demand). He thinks that it is wrong that shipyards continue to dismiss the workers for whom there is no work, which means that it would be right to let such workers stay on in the shipyards and to collect their wages for no work.

I believe that one day some radical reformers of our economy will listen to economic writers (including those in ZYCIE WARSZAWY) and will introduce into our country the principle that he who does not know how to produce goods in demand and is unable to make his living will not receive a single zloty from the state and will have to fold up his business. I am deeply convinced that one day the employer who has lost a competition struggle will have to address his workers and tell them: "Go and look for work in those plants that need new workers. Acquire new skills because I have not got even a penny to pay you." One day a moment is bound to come when it will become crystal clear that Poland can no longer afford to disregard the rules of the economy. When that day comes we will see in action the people educated by S. Kostarski -- those citizens who live on subsidies and on claims for more subsidies and who have been drilled into believing that it is necessary to produce for the sake of production and not of customers and to eat up what others produce, and that one does not have to work to earn a pension. These citizens will certainly know how to deal with economic reformers.

What domestic economic writers are trying to make clear to Polish brains with such great pains, our foreign correspondents continue to demolish through their stupid indignation at the [free] market economy.

CEAUSESCU MEETS BURUNDI ASSEMBLY PRESIDENT

AU231821 Bucharest AGERPRES in English 1736 GMT 23 Jul 86

[Text] Bucharest, AGERPRES 23/7/1986 -- On July 23, President Nicolae Ceausescu received in the resort of Neptun Emile Mworoha, secretary-general of Union Pour Le Progres National (UPRONA) of Burundi, president of the National Assembly of the Republic of Burundi, who is paying a visit to Romania upon an invitation extended by the CC of the RCP.

During the interview, which passed in a cordial atmosphere, the links of friendship and collaboration between the RCP and UPRONA, between the two countries and peoples were highlighted and it was considered that possibilities existed for the further expansion of those ties. In that framework, conditions were shown to exist for the intensification of exchanges and economic, technical and scientific cooperation, as well as of cooperation in other areas of mutual interest. The needs was emphasized for an active participation of parliaments in better mutual knowledge and rapproachement, in the strengthening of Romanian-Burundi collaboration and friendship.

Major aspects of the world political life were also approached.

It was pointed out that the current international situation, which continues to be extremely serious, made it necessary that the progressive, democratic and anti-imperialist forces everywhere, all the peoples cooperate closely to change the dangerous course of events, to achieve disarmament, nuclear disarmament in the first place, to build a world of peace and understanding. The significance was highlighted of a political, negotiated settlement of the states of tension and conflict, of all interestate litigious issues.

In connection with the situation in Africa, the need was highlighted to reinforce the unity and solidarity of the countries in that continent, with a view to solving the complex problems facing the African states. South Africa's acts of aggression against independent and sovereign neighbouring countries were condemned and the solidarity was reiterated of the RCP and UPRONA, of Romania and of the Republic of Burundi with the Namibian people's fight, under SWAPO [South-West-African People's Organization] leadership, for winning its independence, with the struggle of all the African peoples for the abolition of colonialism, of the racist and apartheid policy, for the safeguarding and consolidation of their national independence, for economic and social progress.

The exchange of opinions on the aggregate of problems in the world economy highlighted the importance of strengthening the collaboration and unity of action of the developing countries with a view to ensuring their independent economic and social progress, and establishing a new world economic order to provide for the socioeconomic growth of all nations, as well as for broad collaboration among states, in the spirit of equality and mutual advantage.

The interview occasioned an exchange of message or salute between Presidents Nicolae Ceausescu and Jean-Baptiste Bagaza.

INTENSIVE DEVELOPMENT OF FARMING JUSTIFIED

AU221249 Bucharest AGERPRES in English 1111 GMT 22 Jul 86

[Text] Bucharest, AGERPRES 22/7/1986 -- Achievements scored in the Romanian agriculture in the 21 years which passed since the Ninth RCP Congress confirmed the correctness of the orientations in the July 1965 report read by party General Secretary Nicolae Ceausescu who pointed out that in parallel with the increasingly growing socialist industrialization, Romania must pay special attention to the development of agriculture, increase of plant and animal production, Prof. Oprea Parpala writes in SCINTEIA of July 22.

Ever since, the strategic target of modernizing agriculture, of putting it on an intensive, highly efficient base, so as to make a growing contribution to increasing the national income, has been an essential element of the RCP policy, the author points out, showing that this reflects the profoundly humanitarian character of this policy.

The policy of putting agriculture on intensive bases, of raising the farm output and improving its qualitative structure, SCINTEIA points out, is closely linked to the policy of peace and collaboration among peoples promoted by Socialist Romania. The problem of eradicating famine and subnutrition in the world is not a private issue but an issue to the resolution of which contributes the whole international community, updating, intensifying the farm output, within a large cooperation, to make the best possible use of local forces and possibilities. The intensive development of the Romanian agriculture, the paper writes, requires not only the cooperation with developed countries to have access to the latest gains of the agricultural science and practice worldwide, but also with the developing countries to help them solve their food problems.

Romania is one of the countries which can hardly extend their farming area, the arable one in particular, the author shows, and the chief way to increase the farm output is to make the best possible use of the land. On the other hand, favorable natural conditions in Romania are turned to better account through the investment policy of the state. In the 1986-1990 five-year period, 190 billion lei are earmarked for the development of agriculture, the implementation of the program of land improvement and complete mechanization of farm operations.

Changes are envisaged in the training and employment of the workforce. In this period 590 thousand people shall be trained for agriculture. From the total of economically active population, 27 percent are to work in agriculture, to secure a better structure by age and sex of the people working in this sector. With applied biology and genetic engineering as a basis, the Romanian science is called upon to make a greater contribution to the creation of new high-yield and more resistant strains and new animal breeds.

The policy of intensive development of agriculture will provide for an average yearly growth of the net farm output of 6.5-9 percent, higher than the 6.1-6.7 percent growth rate of the overall farm output, which reflects the substantial increase of the economic efficiency of this branch. This quinquennium already, conditions shall be provided for big and stable crops, to properly meet the needs of the national economy, the raw materials, the population's consumption needs and to create availabilities for international economic exchanges.

FEDERAL CHAMBER DISCUSSES FOREIGN, ECONOMIC POLICY

LD232018 Belgrade TANJUG Domestic Service in Serbo-Croatian 0759 GMT 23 Jul 86

[Excerpts] Belgrade 23 Jul (TANJUG) -- The SFRY Assembly's Federal Chamber today discussed the current international situation and the platform of activity of the Yugoslav delegation to the eighth summit of nonaligned countries to be held in Harare in September. A report on these two subjects was submitted by Raid Dizdarevic, federal secretary for foreign affairs.

The delegates also considered the platform for Yugoslavia's participation at the next UN General Assembly session.

The 43 items on the agenda to be discussed by the Federal Chamber over the 2 days include the changes to the law providing for the criteria for the economic activity of trade organizations and measures for preventing disruptions of the unity of the Yugoslav market; urgent changes to the law on calculating and distributing overall earnings and income; and urgent changes to the law on financial reorganization which, at the FEC's suggestion, have been included in the agenda.

The Federal Chamber will also discuss reports about last year's work of the federal judicial organs and of several administrative organs.

Federal Secretary for Foreign Affairs Raif Dizdarevic informed the delegates about the final stages of the preparations for the Eighth summit of the nonaligned countries in Harare and our country's participation in the consultations which have been taking place within the movement prior to this most significant meeting of the nonaligned in the last 4 years. [passage omitted]

The Federal Chamber accepted the proposed platforms for the activity of the Yugoslav delegations at both the Eighth summit of the nonaligned in Harare and the next UN General Assembly session. It was suggested at the same time that before the summit in Harare there be a more specific analysis of the proposals for economic cooperation between the nonaligned countries, and that they be amended by new initiatives which should enable the Yugoslav delegation to take a more efficient part in the conference. It was agreed at the session that before the Harare summit, Yugoslavia must examine the capacity of the economic subject for achieving these goals and establish the degree of their readiness to do so.

The Federal Chamber (?endorsed) the financial statement for the last year's federation budget and changes to the decision on uneconomic investments established in the budget for this year. With these changes and within the framework of the approved funds for the Federal Secretariat of Foreign Affairs, funds are increased for repairs of the building in which the Secretariat is situated, and within the framework of funds for the Federal Administration for Customs, the Gradina border crossing will be made bigger, while the Dorjan border crossing will be made smaller.

With the changes of the decision users of funds for house construction are established. For housing needs of the SFRY Assembly 163.4 billion dinars will be spent. 40.3 billion for the SFRY Presidency, 739.6 billion for the Federal Executive Council and federal administrative organs and 56.7 billion for sociopolitical organizations.

In connection with the findings of the Federal Budget Inspectorate for last year the Federal Chamber instructed the FEC to adopt a regulation on the material and financial dealings of the federal organs in order to eliminate purposeless and illegal uses of budget funds. The FEC was instructed to find a lasting solution for the status of the inspectorate and undertake measures for its material and cadre training for even more efficient work.

In wholesale and retail trade in the future only one organization will be able to take part, while in wholesale trade only organizations of associated labor which are equipped in terms of organization, technology and cadre will be allowed to take part. This is the essence of the changes to the law on the bases of business activity of trade organisations and the system of measures for preventing the undermining of the unity of the Yugoslav market, which were adopted today.

It is believed that the new provisions, through reducing the number of trade middlemen, will have an effect on a speedier circulation of goods and better supply of the market and easier control, or elimination of speculations.

At the proposal of the Committee for Socioeconomic Relations, which, while endorsing the changes to the law, assessed that the solutions were administrative, the Federal Chamber instructed the FEC to propose a lasting systemic solution for the trade of goods on the united Yugoslav market.

The Chamber adopted a law on trading in medicine for which penalties for economic offenses in trading in medicines are increased by 10 times. A possibility was introduced to take away a work permit of those organizations which keep goods in storage. The system of trading in secondary medicines -- teas, ointments, balms -- will be stricter, individual producers will be allowed to sell them only to purchasing centers.

With the adopted changes to the law on military schools and scientific-research institutions of the Yugoslav People's Army, possibilities are widened for education of civilians for jobs in the Yugoslav People's Army. The Marshal Tito Center for Strategic Research will in the future train cadres for commanding and management duties at the strategical level and organize the procedure for doctorates in military sciences.

The chamber adopted a proposal for adopting a law on the procedure in the courts of associated labor, which for the first time, should comprehensively regulate the procedure in these courts. So far the courts of associated labor have been using regulations of lawsuit procedure which, as it has been shown in practice, do not suit the character of these courts.

One of the significant new features will be that every worker will have the opportunity to start a procedure in courts of associated labor. In the future work on this law, it is necessary to resolve the problem of control over legally valid decisions of the courts of associated labor and thus of a uniform application of federal laws in these courts.

Under the emergency procedure, the Chamber today adopted changes and amendments to the law on establishing and distribtuting the total earnings and income. They regulate obligations for producers of agricultural equipment who temporarily give their products to other social organizations to use. They are obliged to meet the material expenses and amortization expenses which are calculated as part of working assets, to the amount of the sum collected for "hiring."

A new feature is also the fact that in the future, assets for promoting exports will be entirely available to the export orientated economy. That is, the export orientated economy will be exempt from taxes and contributions.

The Federal Chamber endorsed reports on the last year's work of the federal judicial organs -- the Federal Court, Federal Public Prosecutor's Office, Federal Legal Officer, Federal Social Attorney of Self-management -- assessing that they had successfully carried out their function and significantly contributed to the realization of legality.

In a short introductory speech Stojan Djuranovic, president of the Federal Court, established that the court procedure, despite improvements, was long-lasting and that in this respect the situation was best in Vojvodina and the worst in Kosovo. The annual influx of new cases in 460 regular Yugoslav courts is more than 6 million and there are only 5,400 judges in courts. [passage omitted]

The president of the Federal Court said that on the first day of this year in Yugoslavia, 338 federal and 2,293 republican and provincial laws were in force and another 7,188 federal, republican and provincial regulations, which was a great deal and with frequent changes it did not help to strengthen legality. [passage omitted]

Today the Federal Chamber nominated Ivica Cacic as federal social attorney of self-management. Cacic holds this position at present.

At today's session, the Chamber adopted several of 20 reports on last year's work of federal committees, organizations and the committees for high social awards. [passage omitted]

Dizdarevic Report

LD231818 Belgrade TANJUG Domestic Service in Serbo-Croatian 0930 GMT 23 Jul 86

[Text] Belgrade, 23 Jul (TANJUG) -- The international situation in which the eighth summit will be held is still being burdened by the well-known negative and dangerous tendencies which, contrary to the expectations, continue while some are gaining even more ground. This was stated by Raif Dizdarevic, federal secretary for foreign affairs, in his introductory report at the session of the SFRY Assembly's Federal chamber. The arms race continues unabated and no one will be spared its consequences. The sovereignty and independence of a whole series of countries is being violated and the use of force and pressures of the most diversified forms is being increasingly resorted to. This is resulting in the increasing exacerbation of some crisis situations which, in fact, should be surmounted. The economic and social conditions in many countries, the nonaligned and developing, in particular, have deteriorated as a result primarily of the state of relations between North and South. There is an increased tendency to have the global political and economic problems resolved by a handful of the most powerful countries, Dizdarevic said, adding that those forces which find the present-day emancipation of nations and states detrimental to their interest are attempting to deny and oppose these inevitable changes. No one has brought the world so close to the right answers as the policy and movement of nonalignment did and are still doing. The summit in Harare is expected to make a fresh contribution to this.

For this reason, Dizdarevic stressed, the issues of peace and security, the relaxation of tensions and restoration of detente, the resolution of the troublespots as well as the search for the solutions to the problems affecting the economic development in the world and international economic relations occupy the central position and, just as it did at its first summit in Belgrade, the movement will have to make its contribution, as much needed now as it was at the time of the Belgrade summit, to the efforts to halt the present unfavorable developments in world relations. Having stressed that for several years now the international situation has been hampered by the relations characterized by exacerbated contradictions, deep mistrust and confrontations between the two great powers, the federal secretary added that international events continue to be dominated by the rivalry to gain global superiority and attempts to make as many countries as possible dependent on the policies of the great powers. Dizdarevic said that during the period since last year's meeting between Gorbachev and Reagan, relations between the two superpowers have failed to develop in accordance with the world's expectations, but that encouragement has been provided by the fact that fresh proposals have been made for reducing and controlling or even eliminating a number of categories of weapons, both nuclear and conventional.

Our consultations so far with a number of our partners indicate their determination to voice a call at the summit for the United States and the USSR not only adhere to and respect the existing agreements on arms limitations but also to reach fresh ones as well which would at last lead to a reduction in nuclear, missile, strategic or tactical, conventional and ot her weapons, the federal secretary for foreign affairs said.

The entire preceding period confirmed that there can be no progress in the dialogue between the two superpowers, and that it cannot produce the results so needed both by themselves and by the world as a whole unless they realize that, in fact, in the present-day world it is impossible to treat separately the issues of peace and security while at the same time ignoring pressing economic and other problems and that however powerful, the two superpowers cannot resolve in a stable and lasting manner either the global urgent problems or their bilateral problems without help from all the other international factors and without the participation of an contribution from international multilateral forums. All the countries, the entire international community, can and should take part in this process, Dizdarevic stressed.

Continuing his report, Dizdarevic said that in recent years there has been a growing number of attempts to push aside the United Nations and other forums of multilateral international cooperation. The objective behind all these disturbing attempts is to attack the idea of equal international economic relations and the countries' right to take an equal part in the efforts to resolve all those problems concerning the fate of the whole world.

We shall insist, Dizdarevic said, that the Harare meeting more decisively points to all the dangerous consequences,, which such pressures on the United Nations, could have for the development and world relations as a whole and also to the need for a more constructive contribution by all UN members to the efforts to improve this organization's work and to strengthen it.

With reference to the world troublespots, Dizdarevic said that the negation of people's inalienable right to freedom, self-determination, equality, independence and to choose their own path of development and determine independently their own foreign policy are repeatedly behind the crises in the world.

This is a common feature of the situation in Southern Africa, in colonized Namibia, in the Middle East, in Grenada, Nicaragua, Afghanistan, Cambodia and in all other places where sociopolitical models are being imposed and people's sovereign rights denied. It is of particular concern that the crisis situations are increasingly exploited by the superpowers in their confrontation and rivalries, which only makes it more difficult to resolve them, delays it and also leads to new exacerbations which could threaten world peace and security.

We are convinced that the Harare summit will thus devote most attention to the world troublespots and formulate its proposals for their resolution on the basis of the right to self-determination, of the withdrawal of foreign troops and an end to all interventions and interference. We shall adhere to the nonaligned countries' call for the military withdrawal by great powers from the territories of nonaligned countries.

Dizdarevic stated that the increasingly explosive situation in South Africa would be at the focus of attention of the heads of state and government in Harare because at the moment South Africa is the most serious troublespot in the world. He also expressed particular concern over the latest exacerbation in the situation in the Mediterranearn where, as he put it, non-Mediterranean countries are increasing their military-naval presence and where frequent demonstrations and use of force are taking place. These developments in the Mediterranean are having an effect on the situation in the region of the Adriatic, Dizarevic stressed.

All this indicates how necessary is the cooperation of the nonaligned countries of the Mediterranean and the broader cooperation of the nonaligned and European Mediterranean countries in order to change the present state of affairs. Meetings of the nonaligned countries have stressed the importance of taking specific actions in this direction. We will continue this in Harare. The next step on this path will be the holding of the Second Conference of Foreign Ministers of the nonaligned Countries of the Mediterranean, which is being prepared, Dizdarevic said.

As a European nonaligned country, Yugoslavia is vitally interested in the continuity of the process of the relaxation of tension in Europe and calls for cooperation which will not be halted by bloc divisions. Given the reality of the divisions in Europe, I have in mind the repeatedly manifested interest of the European countries, regardless of the groupings to which they belong, in opening the doors to inter-European cooperation over and above all barriers. Even in the most favorable times we have experienced in recent years it has been constantly reaffirmed that only this kind of all-European cooperation has historical prospects, stressed the federal secretary for foreign affairs.

The Nonaligned Movement has always given support to these efforts, aware of the importance of the situation in Europe for peace and security in the world. We are sure that the Harare summit will also give a fresh impetus to this, Dizdarevic said.

It is these standpoints that we have taken as our point of departure in our preparations for a meeting of the foreign ministers of European neutral and nonaligned countries which will be held in Brioni this October with the aim of continuing to make a joint contribution ot the CSCE meeting in Vienna in November, as well. We are also proceeding along these lines in our activity at the current stage of the Stockholm conference at which, after a prolonged period of stagnation, a certain measure of readiness for constructive negotiations has been displayed. Any real progress and fresh breakthroughs at this conference could have wider favorable implications for the process of security and disarmament in Europe, Dizdarevic stated.

In international economic relations there is an obvious inequality which is constantly threatening the independence of the developing countries and the stability in world relations, Federal Secretary Dizdarevic said. Some of the most developed countries are acting from positions which indicate their intention to maintain and consolidate the existing system to their advantage. After several decades, a number of developing countries are again faced with the problem of how to safeguard their independence. In recent years an enormous transfer of resources from the developing to developed countries has taken place.

The issue of debts, as one of the most powerful illustrations of this transfer, confirms that indebtedness has become an instrument for making enormous profits at the expense of the developing countries. It is, objectively speaking, used to maintain the differences in the level of development and as a means of exerting pressure, interfering in the internal affairs and of imposing a system [as received], Dizdarevic said, adding that this year only the developing countries' debts would exceed $1 billion. Because of all these reasons the struggle for resolving the problems of indebtedness is, by implication, the struggle for equal international relations, against exploitation, domination and for progress in the world.

By drawing attention to the political dimension of the international economic problems we, in fact, refer to the political and economic interdependence in the world today. The developed countries should not remain indifferent to what has been happening to the two thirds of mankind. The South cannot exist without the North, but neither can the North without South. Any destablization in any of the undeveloped countries arising from such developments would create fresh ones and further ferment the existing troublespots to such an extent that not only would there be no progress in East-West and North-South relations or world relations, in general, but it would exacerbate confrontations and rivalries in the world to the most dangerous and uncontrollable proportions.

There is no doubt that the problems facing the nonaligned countries and their eighth summit are extremely complex and difficult. The whole world has found itself at a crossroads and is faced with the question of which way to go, Dizdarevic said. He added that as for the movement's readiness and capacity to respond at the eighth summit to the challanges of history we can be encouraged by the fact that since its seventh summit in Delhi, the movement has been going through a process of consolidation on the basis of its original principles and objectives, that it has strengthened its unity and has intensified its effort at resolving the main problems in international relations.

What is of vital importance and what confirms the vitality of the policy and Movement of Nonalignment is the fact that the nonaligned countries are pursuing the line of authentic nonalignment and in the process are achieving political unity as regards the vital issues of the present-day world such as peace, security, detente, independence, disarmament and development.

Dizdarevic concluded his report by speaking about our country's bilateral [as received] foreign political activity. He stressed that all the contacts and our overall efforts in the sphere of foreign policy are designed, primarily, to safeguard the country's international standing, to (?enhance) its security and, above all to realize our specific and all-round interests in relations with individual countries and regions in the world, integrational groups and international organizations. To this end priority is given to the creation of as favorable conditions as possible for developing economic cooperation with a large number of countries, in particular, those countries with whom we have recorded a trade deficit and to which the largest part of our foreign debts is owed, in other words with those countries where we must try to look for and use the possibilities for greater achievements in developing economic relations, thus creating the conditions for resolving the country's economic difficulties and for its technological and overall social progress.

We shall continue to invest efforts to develop comprehensive good-neighborly relations with all our neighbors. This will remain one of the lasting priorities in our foreign policy. It is our desire on the basis of full respect for sovereignty, territorial integrity, noninterference and mutual benefit to all our neighbors, to develop cooperation in political and economic relations, in the sphere of culture, transport, tourism, etc, all of which inevitably results in better mutual understanding and greater trust which, in turn, constitute a realistic framework for resolving the outstanding problems.

The process of multilateral cooperation in the Balkans, opened not long ago, represents a new positive tendency to the advantage of all the people on the peninsula. However, we are displeased with the fact that there has been a recent halt in this process. The need for this kind of cooperation between the Balkan countries is ever increasing as are calls for constant and specific stimuli. We, of course, take notice of the reality, but divisions are not the only reality in the Balkans; it is also the growing need for good relations and increasing cooperation, Raif Dizdarevic, federal secretary for foreign affairs, said.

Questions From Delegates

LD232037 Belgrade TANJUG Domestic Service in Serbo-Croatian 1149 GMT 23 Jul 86

[Excerpts] Belgrade, 23 Jul (TANJUG) -- Did the FEC discuss the amendments and addenda to the law on basic rights to invalidity allowance and pensions, and if it did, when will this proposal be included in the Assembly procedure? This question was raised by Jovica Jovanoski at today's session of the Federal Chamber.

Mirjana Saranovic demanded replies to a number of questions. What steps did the Federal Public Prosecutor's Office take in view of submitting a demand for the protection of legality against sentences passed by courts in Kosovo? [passage omitted]

With regard to serious consequences, which the construction and working of the Italian thermo-electric plant Milje could have for the agriculture and population of the Trieste border area, Silvano Sau asked whether the FEC intended to take any measures to prevent this. [passage omitted]

With regard to the fact that the period has expired in which the Federal Secretariat for Internal Affairs and the Federal Public Prosecutor's Office had been authorized to carry out an analysis on all unclarified and suspicious cases of accidents, sabotage and other damage in Kosovo, Gradimir Djuric requested a report on whether legal measures had been taken in this respect, as envisaged.

Djuric also inquired about the facts compiled by the Federal Secretariat for Internal Affairs which should establish a number of refugees from Albania who had settled in Kosovo, as well as about the way in which they had acquired their property. [passage omitted]

None of the authorized organs in Yugoslavia held any negotiations with Western countries about disposing nuclear waste in our country. This was the FEC's reply to a recent question raised by Zarija Martinovic. In view of this there can neither be any questions on authorizing and taking responsibility for such negotiations.

On the basis of material compiled by specialized services of the FEC, it was established that in 1980 a West German firm had proposed to our work organization, through unofficial commercial channels, a permanent disposal of low and medium-grade radioactive waste in Yugoslavia; the work organization transferred the offer to the FEC Commission for Nuclear Energy, which rejected such a possibility, it was stated in the FEC's reply. [passage omitted]

Ciril Korosec asked why the FEC did not establish the price of bread at the time when the price of flour was established.

MIKULIC REVIEWS FEC ECONOMIC INTERACTION

LD232323 Belgrade TANJUG Domestic Service in Serbo-Croatian 1926 GMT 23 Jul 86

[Text] Belgrade, 23 Jul (TANJUG) -- The FEC is working toward a policy of sobering up. It is based on the firm conviction that we can get out of the present economic difficulties, that negative trends can be altered. This, however, will not be possible without efforts and sacrifices at all levels, FEC President Branko Mikulic said today in talks with directors and editors in chief of the Yugoslav public media and journalists who follow the work of the federal government and its organs. Janez Zemljaric, Milos Milosavljevic, Radovan Makic, Svetozar Rikanovic, Svetozar Durutovic, Zarko Papic, Milan Sojic and othrs also participated in the talks.

The theme of the talks were the measures which the FEC has already adopted, as well as those which will follow in the fall. In the past 2 months, Mikulic said, we have been involved in seeking a way out of the complex economic situation and proposing measures so we could alter negative trends in the economic activity and in particular in the market. These are the so-called June and July packages, while for this fall, proposals are being prepared on basic solutions to improve relations in the economic system. These are primarily a model of realistic interest rates, dinar exchange rate, stimulating exports, realistic accumulation and amortization, the questions on the tax system and policy, the banking system, and the financial consolidation of the economy and banks. Expert an scientific institutions will be involved in this and answers to individual questions will also be sought through concrete testing in the economy.

We are convinced that the course we have chosen is good and that it is completely in accordance with the long-term program of economic stabilization and the resolution for this year, Mikulic stressed. Some of the concrete solutions are perhaps incomplete or not fully formulated and that is their shortcoming. That is why the FEC is open to all proposals and criticisms which contribute toward eliminating these shortcomings, provided they do not question the basic social orientations.

Mikulic then stressed the need for comprehensively monitoring all the adopted and forthcoming measures. According to him, it is not good to dissect some of these solutions and in particular calculate effects for each of them. This might lead to false stands and negative politization of the measures themselves. Therefore, the views that any of these measures is not in accordance with the long-term program of stabilization are not acceptable either, on the contrary, criticism of them amounts to polemics about the stabilization program. This in particular refers to measures in the areas of prices, exchange rate of the dinar, interest rates, and legal regulations which are meant to bring expenditure in line with the realistic possibilities of the economy.

To support these claims, Mikulic quoted individual provisions of the long-term progarm and anti-inflationary program which refer to the measures for the conditions when the relations in the economy and social property are severely threatened. This is also the case with the present trends in the area of prices, and in exports which record a serious decline, as well as with inflation, which as a consequence, is becoming the cause of negative trends.

Similar is the case of personal incomes and other sectors of expenditures, whose increase is considerably above the envisaged level and in a complete discord with the needs of funds earmarked for accumulation and amortization.

Objections are raised, Mikulic said, that the FEC has reached for administrative measures, but the measures of stricter control in the area of prices or expenditure are also envisaged in the anti-inflationary program and they hit only those who have not honored the criteria established in a self-managing way. Therefore, the measures which the FEC has undertaken are both economic and stabilizing, systemic, and constitutional, because they are directed against manifestations which undermine relations in social reproduction. Some of them are only temporary, which neans that they will be applied only as long as there are reasons for it. As an example, Mikulic cited the area of general and joint expenditure whose level is not possible to lower without revising certain rights or the number of institutions, Look how many projects are being constructed for sport and health and so on.

For all this we need to dip into our revenues, while everyone talks about its unfavorable level. This is why the FEC is resolved to stick to its established course and is ready, if necessary, to go through the "seven offensives."

Branko Mikulic and his associates then answered journalists' questions which were also connected with the FEC's immediate activity and its pending moves. The problem about the over-large administration was mentioned, which, according to Mikulic, must also be more resolutely resolved because it exists in the economy as well. It is also essential to open up the process of destatization, because as long as the sociopolitical community continues as it is, it needs a large apparatus.

One of the questions was also, whether the FEC has the strength and sufficient authority to oppose and overcome the resistance which is appearing in connection with many of the established and proposed solutions. Branko Mikulic expressed the view that the greatest problem for the FEC is that in our society a situation prevails which is characterized by the powerful influence of the political factor in decisionmaking on reproduction as a whole. The relation of forces in society is now such that it cannot be expected that the struggle for destatization at all levels can be quickly won; therefore, while there are a number of measures of approval or imposed bans, the negative tendencies force us into this, Mikulic underlined.

On the subject of FEC constitutional functions and authorization, Mikulic expressed the belief that these are adequate, but that there needs to be considerably more consistency in their use.

MIKULIC: BOURGEOIS ECONOMIC POLICIES NOT PERMISSIBLE

AU231135 Belgrade BORBA in Serbo-Croatian 22 Jul 86 pp 1, 3

[Excerpt] [Passage omitted] According to Branko Mikulic, everybody in the country is talking about the economic and social crisis. However, there are very few who are putting forward proposals or taking measures or actions to overcome the present situation, and there are many who are reacting to our initiatives and measures to resolve problems as if they were duty-bound to criticize or arbitrate. We are offered many models from the liberal economies of the early phase of capitalism, or only administrative solutions. It must, however, be stressed that inflation is affecting the poorest of our citizens hardest. This means that this part of the population is bearing the greatest burden of inflation. This is why this part of our citizens is exhausted and brought to the lowest level of existence.

"If this can be the policy in some bourgeois societies," states Mikulic, "it not only cannot be the policy in our society, this kind of orientation is impermissible, intolerable." [passage omitted]

LCY CENTRAL COMMITTEE PRESIDIUM HOLDS SESSION

LD232043 Belgrade TANJUG Domestic Service in Serbo-Croatian 1706 GMT 23 Jul 86

[Text] Belgrade, 23 Jul (TANJUG) -- The LCY Central Committee Presidium, at a session chaired by Milanko Renovica, has examined the draft stands on current ideopolitical questions of the implementation of the development and economic policies for this year, which will be presented for approval to the Central Committee at its session on 30 July.

The session also examined information on the activity of the press in connection with the 13th LCY Congress. It was stated that the press devoted much attention to the preparations and work of the 13th LCY Congress and of the republican LC congresses and provincial LC conferences, and that engaged reports and commentaries and openly presented views, suggestions and criticixm prevailed. In this way the majority of newspapers and journalists made an important contribution to the success of the 13th LCY Congress and the republican and provincial LC congresses and conferences. It was noted, however, that there were some serious weaknesses in public information in connection with the 13th Congress, and that these have been appearing in certain papers over a long period, and in some of them as unacceptable ideas.

The Presidium stressed that in the coming period the press, radio and television, as a creative and involved subject of the system, should continue to interpret and expound the essence of the congress documents, to fight for their all-round and consistent implementation, to stress experiences and results, and to criticize resistance, hesitation and opportunism.

The priority tasks of the LC and society are also the most important obligations of the public media, which should direct their powers to the maximum toward broad social mobilization for implementing the established economic stabilization policy and the united decisions of the congress. In this context the Presidium stresses that it is necessary to strengthen and specifically establish the responsibility of all factors in the information system, in particular the basic LC organizations, editoral offices, councils and journalists, for the entire state of affairs and current trends in this area in each newspaper, for the consistent implementation of the adopted policies. Taking as their starting point the congress resolutions, the communists in the press should advocate the effective and responsible performance of thier functions and should fight with determination against the untruthful and sensational treatment of the social situation and relations, against the privatization and abuse of the press. Specific stands and measures connected with this were established and will be presented to the Central and Provincial Committees of the LC. The session stressed that the united activity of all organizations and organs of the LCY is of crucial importance, too, for unity in the editorial orientations of newspapers.

The Presidium assessed that the 13th LCY Congress had enjoyed great publicity in the world, and that this publicity had been in the main objective, measured and specific, but that there were cases of tendentious and ill-intentioned interpretations, which is a reflection of misunderstandings or the intentional distoration of facts.

The session established proposed decisions on the formation and composition of the commissions of the LCY Central Committee, which will be examined at its next session. The Presidium also adopted decisions on the formation of its own commissions.

FURTHER ON CONGRESS COMMISSION FOR SELF-DEFENSE

Milun Nikolic Speech

AU231300 Belgrade NARODNA ARMIJA (Supplement) in Serbo-Croatian No. 2451 3 Jul 86 p 13

[Report on speech by Milun Nikolic at the 13th LCY Congress Commission for All-People's Defense and Social Self-Protection on 26 June in Belgrade]

[Excerpts] Favoring a discussion about some aspects of the role and the nature of the peacetime detachment of the Yugoslav People's Army [YPA] in our concept of all-people's defense, delegate Milun Nikolic pointed out the fact that recently, and especially before the congress, one could with increased frequency hear the views and assessments which, to put it mildly, display a misunderstanding of the role and the nature of the YPA in our all-people's defense concept.

"What particularly causes concern," Nikolic said, "is that unfortunately such misunderstandings are advanced even by some communists." [passage omitted]

"When one must how, because of the interests of our defense, oppose more resolutely the unacceptable views about the YPA, I think that it is essential to point out some of the most significant objective conditions of the military strategic situation of the modern world and some essential characteristics of the armed forces of the potential aggressors that have a direct influence on the structure of the forces of the defender.

"As the first point, one must not neglect the fact that the armed forces of some of the big powers and of some other countries -- and they are all around us -- possess in peacetime very strong first strategic detachments of their armed forces at a very high combat readiness." [passage omitted]

"From the characteristics of the forces of potential aggressors and from the objective limitations of the detachments set up on a territorial principle, the conclusion follows quite clearly that it is necessary for an efficient defense under modern conditions that the defender possess an adequate peacetime detachment of the operational army," Nikolic said.

"This particularly refers to our country, wedged in between two antagonistic military blocs in a military strategic territory that is of great interest to them." Therefore, in Nikolic's opinion, "a one-sided look at the defense of the country, relying only on territorial defense, under modern conditions in essence constitutes offering a chance to the aggressor of occupying a considerable or even a major part of the defender's territory, and only afterward could a wider and more resolute organization and engagement of the overall defense forces objective begin. In such a situation, a defensive war against an aggressor could be conducted under much less favorable conditions and with much greater sacrifices."

One should only recall again, Nikilic went on to say, that under such conditions, if the defender lacks an appropriate operational detachment ready for use at any time under the present conditions, the defender would bring himself into a very precarious position in the case of a possible surprise aggression with a limited aim.

"Finally, so far we have had experience in all this. I think that it should constantly be present in our mind, as some comrades have pointed out here, that from 1945 onward we have been on several occasions most seriously threatened by aggression. However, aggression did not occur; we remained at peace, and up to today nobody has violated our territorial integrity, thanks to the fact (I believe that we all agree in this) that in our overall defense potential we have had a strong and unified YPA, for the YPA has been constantly a very significant factor of deterrence against aggression. It certainly is a deterrent now, and it certainly must remain so in the future. Its creator and supreme commander, Comrade Tito, always justifiable reminded us of it," Nikilic concluded.

Ivanovic on Territorial Defense

AU221933 Belgrade NARODNA ARMIJA (Supplement) in Serbo-Croatian No. 2451 3 Jul 86

[Report on speech by Miodrag Ivanovic in the all-People's Defense and Social Self-Protection Commission of the 13th LCY Congress in Belgrade on 26 June]

[Text] Miodrag Ivanovic spoke about some questions and problems of the building of territorial defense. He said that since the last congress, there were fewer failures in the building of all-people's defense, and that the achievements in this sphere constitute the greatest achievments of our development. The period between the two congresses was particularly significant because of the great achievements in the development and the building of territorial defense as a component of the unified armed forces.

An armed force was created which numbers over 1,200,000 men. Furthermore, great results were achieved in equipping the territorial defense and in joint training with the YPA and other forces of our system of all-people's defense and social self-protection. In this year, all of the territorial defense will be complemented with infantry weapons, personal protection devices [licna zastitna sredstva], medical and quartermaster supplies, and the like.

However, despite the great results which are evident in the development of this part of our Armed Forces, many difficulties and problems still exist which, unless additional efforts are made and more responsibility is ensured, may slow down its growth and its planned building. Every army is expensive, including the territorial defense, regardless of the favorable conditions it has, and these are: reliance on domestic industry, as there are few items of foreign production among its arms and equipment; furthermore, the use of surplus armaments and military equipment of the YPA, and the like. Here I want to say that more than 60 percent of arms and military equipment with which the territorial defense is equipped has been received from the YPA.

In the coming period, the territorial defense will have to buy more expensive, more modern, and to a certain extent more complex hardware. Financing is therefore one of the key questions of the further development of the territorial defense. A social accord has been reached according to which 0.4 to 0.5 percent of the realized national income should be allocated to the all-people's defense and social self-protection fund, deepening on the agreement in a republic or province, of which sum at least 50 percent should be allocated for territorial defense. However, there are many sociopolitical communities (communes) which do not respect this accord. Some of them allocate less than 0.20 percent instead of 0.50 percent, and this is insufficient even for training and education tasks.

A second problem on which Ivanovic dwelled was the belief that by building the territorial defense we are creating two parallel armies, two identical armies, which is not true.

It is true that the YPA and the territorial defense have much in common, because they are two components of the unified armed forces. I must at once say that they are not copies of each other. It is no harm that they are complementary, that they complement each other, for they carry out military operations in a unified area, within a unified system of leading and commanding and of the armed struggle However, it should be known to all that the YPA is the one that will carry out the armed struggle against the main groups of the aggressor on land, on sea, and in the air, in all forms of the armed struggle, and that it is equipped with the most modern and most complicated combat means. The territorial defense, however, is the widest form of organized armed resistance. It is not equipped with all the complicated combat systems as is the YPA. It does not possess heavy equipment, tanks, heavy artillery, jet aircraft, warships, and the like, for its role and tasks in an all-people's defense war do not require that it should possess them. It does not close the routes that can be used by tanks, but acts on the flanks, in the spaces between, and in the rear of the enemy, Ivanovic said, among other things.

Mamula Objects to Report

AU231301 Belgrade BORBA in Serbo-Croatian 28 Jul 86 p 7

[Excerpts] The list of speakers having been exhausted, the Commission for Questions of All-People's Defense and Social Self-Protection (of the 13th LCY Congress on 27 June) passed on to discussing the draft report which was subjected to numerous criticisms. As many as 15 speakers asked for the floor in the additional discussion, making proposals for amendments to the report.

Specific Proposals

The first to ask for the floor was Branko Mamula, federal secretary for national defense, who proposed that the report be written again, because such as it is it does not reflect all the richness and criticism of the discussion heard in the previous 2 days. The present proposal levels out all the proposals, and such a report could have been adopted at the past congress as well as at the present. Mamula made some specific proposals: that the changes in the military political situation between the two congresses be marked and that its deterioration be pointed out, and that the attitude toward the crisis be formulated in a different way. In the past, it used to be known that war follows upon crisis. Now we are witnessing successive crises which do not all turn into wars, but some of them, like the Libyan crisis, were very near to growing into an armed conflict. The federal secretary objected to the assessment that there has been a check in the socialization of all-people's defense, noting that in spite of everything the crisis did not lead to stagnation in this field, but that the present difficulties, if they were to continue, could lead to it.

According to Mamula, the report should also contain the assessment about the attacks on the Army and clearly say that they are unacceptable to us.

He also paid special attention to the funds allocated for the YPA. We equate these funds, Mamula stressed, with the funds given for the federal administration, but nobody pays attention to the fact that a considerable portion of these funds flows back to the economy, and we must pay attention to this specific fact.

The draft report has also forgotten about the discussions on the training of women and their inclusion in defense affairs. Branko Mamula recalled the words of Stanka Djakovic and Bozena Ostrovrsnik on this subject and stressed that it was much more clearly indicated in the discussion than one can see in the draft report. It is particularly important that the Armed Forces have supported such thinking from the very beginning and that what is at stake here is a fuller inclusion of women in defense training.

In conclusion of his criticism, Mamula mentioned the differences in views on the role of the Committee for All-People's Defense and Social Self-Protection. He recalled the criticism expressed because of the interference of these committees in work stoppages, and their solivng of other conflict situations and disputes which are far from being the extraordinary situations and profound crisis and upheavals for which reason the committees have been set up. [passage omitted]

This afternoon and this evening the editorial commission will draft a new report, and the commission will meet again tomorrow at 0800, when the final adoption of the report is expected, so that it can be presented to the plenary session.

MASTNAK CASE DROPPED BY LJUBLJANA COURT

AU232031 Belgrade BORBA in Serbo-Croatian 12-13 Jul 86 p 7

[J.P. report]

[Text] Ljubljana, July -- The outcome of the main hearing before the Basic Court in Ljubljana against Tomaz Mastnak, who was accused by the basic public prosecutor under Article 112 of the Criminal Law of the SR of Slovenia for "besmirching a representative of another republic," contradicted all those who attempted to use this "case" as proof of "a revival of political trials" and "an increase of repression all over the country."

As we have reported, Mastnak was accused because of an "election article" which he wrote for the magazine MLADINA, which did not publish it; however, the article was carried by Ljubljana Radio Student. In this article he criticized the procedure for the nomination of candidates for the president of the Federal Executive Council and declared himself against such a nomination.

At the main trial before the Basic Court in Ljubljana, Mastnak endeavored to refute the allegations of the indictment as "unproven, illogical, and pointless." The public prosecutor explained that Mastnak's criticism contains all formal signs of a criminal act of besmirching the representative of another socialist republic, but that he is not accused because of a though crime, but exclusively and only because of a crime of slander.

However, the public prosecutor added, because of new circumstances it is necessary to reassess the social danger of this act. Along with all the accumulated problems in our society which are much more important than the case under examination, and the critical assessments accompanying these problems, for instance at the latest congresses, the criticism of the accused made in an insulting tone seems to be less significant. The consequences of this insult were also not significant. It follows that in the case of the accused, despite all the formal signs of a criminal act, one may apply the legal principle of negligible social danger and on this basis I am withdrawing the prosecution proposal.

On this basis, the court bench pronounced the judgment which formally rejects the proposed accusation, or rather accepts the proposal of the public prosecutor. In this way the public prosecutor and the court confirmed their independence and autonomy despite the campaign of pressure, and they publicly demonstrated that it was not in the least a case of a trial for a so-called thought crime, but because of slander, and that for combatting the consequences of a criminal act of "negligible social danger," as in the case of Mastnak, no administrative measures are necessary.

It must also be said that the trial which lasted less than 1 hour was attended by about 100 curiosity seekers, which is more than a modest number considering the campaign was conducted over several months by individuals and groups, calling on citizens to gather in the largest possible numbers.

YOUTH CONGRESS CRITICIZED BY MACEDONIAN YOUTHS

AU232046 Belgrade BORBA in Serbo-Croatian 1 Jul 86 p 3

[S.P. report]

[Excerpts] Skopje, 30 Jun -- The Republican Conference of the Socialist Youth Federation of Macedonia adopted the proposal that Borce Georgievski and Ace Kocevski be elected members of the Presidium of the Federal Conference of the Socialist Youth Federation of Yugoslavia [SYFY]. Kocevski is proposed for the secretary of the SYFY.

Zoran Kostov was elected member of the Presidium of the Republican Conference of the Socialist Youth Federation of Macedonia.

The session discussed a report on the work of the 12th SYFY Congress and the constituent session of the SYFY Federal Conference, which says, among other things, that "divided views and strong polemical tones, and frequently even primitive behavior and mutual insults occurred in the Commission for Questions of Development of the Socialist Youth Federation. [passage omitted]

The plenary session, or rather the congress, the report says, ended without a quorum, without an official closure, a song, applause, or letter of greetings to the LCY Central Committee Presidium and the SFRY Presidency, so that in the opinion of some delegates, the congress has not been closed.

The delegation of the Socialist Youth Federation of Macedonia in the SYFY Conference will make a constructive contribution to a settling of the situation in the SYFY Conference, and it was also requested that the delegates who left the constituent session of the SYFY Conference be called to account; because of a lack of quorum the Conference was unable to elect a new leadership.

BTA 'DECLARATION' ON BALKAN AIRPLANE INCIDENT

AU242009 Sofia BTA in English 1900 GMT 24 Jul 86

["Declaration" -- BTA headline]

[Text] Sofia, July 24 (BTA) -- In 1984 nine Turkish citizens died in an accident of a Balkan Airlines plane. The relatives of eight of them were paid compensations in compliance with Article 22 of the Warsaw Convention of 1929.

The heirs of the Turkish citizen Haidar Yassaqre [were] repeatedly offered the maximum compensation provided by the convention -- 20,000 dollars. They refused to accept the sum and lodged a claim against Balkan Airlines in the Istanbul regional court for a compensation of about 150,000 dollars. Though it was not competent to deliver judgement of such cases, the court upheld the claim. Its order was appealed within the legitimate term in a higher court but the trying of the case has still not been scheduled.

On July 20, 1986, Sunday, at 8:30 a.m. on an order of an officer of the court, issued in compliance with the ruling of the regional court and bearning no legal force, and under the pretext to guarantee the payment of the claimed sum, a TU-154 passanger jet of the Balkan Airlines on a regular Sofia-Istanbul-Sofia flight was illegally detained at the Istanbul airport. It was released and returned to Bulgaria at 2:30 a.m. on July 24.

The detention of the plane is an illegal, groundless and unfriendly act on the part of the Turkish authorities. It is an unprecedented event in international practice.

In compliance with the Constitution of the People's Republic of Bulgaria and the civil aviation law, the Balkan Airlines planes are the property of the Bulgarian state. They enjoy immunity from court prosecution and cannot be an object of acts of compulsion.

Actions of compulsion have been undertaken against the Bulgarian State in a totally arbitrary manner for the remedy of a private claim against an independent corporate body. State property amounting to the tune of 20 million dollars was attached for the securing of a claim amounting to about 150,000 dollars. Bearing in mind the additional losses which the company suffered as a result of the detention of the plane, the grass discrepancy between the claim and means of its guaranteeing becomes still more striking. In addition, the actions of compulsion were not addressed to the bank account of the Balkan Airlines representation in Istanbul. Tendentiously and purposefully there was chosen another target, a target which would make it possible to produce a sensation and to raise a propaganda uproar.

What is more the Turkish authorities did not inform the Balkan Airlines Company of the undertaking of this measure of compulsion and in violation of the explicit decrees of the consular convention between the People's Republic of Bulgaria and the Republic of Turkey of 1970 the Turkish Government did not fulfil its obligation of informing the General Consulate of the People's Republic of Bulgaria in Istanbul.

The fact that on Sunday morning journalists and cameramen expected the detention of the plane is indicative of a premediated provocation.

The Bulgarian side took immediate, energetic and constructive steps for the release of the plane but the Turkish official bodies showed lack of interest asserting that this was a private lawsuit. We can hardly assume that such acts can be undertaken without the knowledge of higher institutions.

It would be still more difficult to imagine what would happen in international aviation if on the order of any officer of court compulsory measures are imposed on plane for the satisfaction of civil court claims.

All facts and circumstances related to the almost four-day illegal dentention of the Bulgarian plan, reveal deliberate actions for the continuing and fanning up of the anti-Bulgarian campaign.

The Bulgarian side categorically condemns these acts which create unnecessary tension in bilateral relations, such acts are incompatible with International Law, with the 1975 Declaration of the Principles of Good Neighborliness and Cooperation Between the PR of Bulgaria and the Republic of Turkey and the civil aviation Agreement between the PR of bulgaria and Turkey signed in 1966.

BTA has been authorized to state that the Government of the Turkish Republic will bear all responsibility for the event and for the moral and material damages caused to the People's Republic of Bulgaria.

ZHIVKOV URGES CHANGES IN STATE COUNCIL STRUCTURE

AU241829 Sofia Domestic Service in Bulgarian 1300 GMT 24 Jul 86

[Text] We have received a report from the BTA on a meeting of the State Council elected at the First Session of the Ninth National Assembly.

State Council Chairman Todor Zhivkov made a review of the activity of the State Council as the supreme permanently acting organ of state power during the mandate which has elapsed, and outlined the main guidelines in its work during the next period, the report states. Comrade Todor Zhivkov drew attention to the fact that, in order to be able to fulfill under the new conditions the roles and functions entrusted to it in the Constitution, the State Council must make alterations to its structure and method of action, which are to conform to the requirements of the February [1985] and January [1986] Plenums of the BCP Central Committee and the 13th BCP Congress. These changes are inseparably linked with the reorganization which we are carrying out in all spheres of our development, in both the base and the superstructure, and in the highest echelon of the party and state leadership, with the consolidation of a new outlook, including in the solving of organizational and administrative issues. In this connection, the expediency was well-grounded of closing the councils under the State Council, with the exception of the Legislative Council, and handing over their functions to the permanent commissions of the National Assembly. The permanent commissions should develop ever more as actively functioning small parliaments in the intervals between the sessions of the National Assembly. Confidence was voiced that the State Council would work energetically with collective efforts for the successful implementation of the tasks posed by the 13th BCP Congress.

The leadership of the auxiliary organs of the State Council were elected. The appropriate decisions were adopted on the questions discussed.

TU TALKS WITH SOVIETS SOFIA, AGREEMENT SIGNED

AU161059 [Editorial Report] Sofia TRUD in Bulgarian on 10 July carries on pages 1 and 2 an approximately 2,400-word report by Tosho Toshev, entitled "A Qualitatively New Stage in Drawing Together and Cooperation," on the final talks and signing of an agreement between delegations of the Central Council of Bulgarian Trade Unions [BTU] and the Soviet All-Union Central Council of Trade Union [AUCCTU] on 9 July 1986 in the BTU Central Council building in Sofia.

The Toshev report states that the Soviet delegation included "Stefan Shalayev, chairman of the AUCCTU; Vladimir Bogatikov, AUCCTU secretary; Aleksandra Petrovicheva, forewoman at the Dynamo electrical engineering works in Moscow, Hero of Socialist Labor, and member of the AUCCTU presidium; Vladimir Sergeyev, chief of department of AUCCTU; Aleksgy Nepein chairman of the Komi ASSR Oblast Trade-Union Committee; Boris Leonov, correspondent of the Soviet paper TRUD; and Viktor Rudnev, section head of the AUCCTU department for Links with the Trade Unions of the Socialist Countries." The Bulgarian delegation consisted of "Petur Dyulgerov, chairman of the BTU Central Council and candidate member of the BCP Central Committee Politburo; Kosta Andreev, Andon Traykkov, Lilyana Dimitrova, Rusi Kararusinov, Georgi Karaulanov, and Ivan Angelov, secretaries of the BTU Central Council; Penka Dodunekova, chairman of the BTU Central Audit Commission; Ivan Dimitrov, head of the ' Recreation and Spa Treatment' Administration; Zdravka Peeva, deputy chief of the BTU Central Council International Department; Lazar Rosnev, assistant to the chairman of the BTU Central Council, and Mariya Malikyan, deputy chief of the BTU Central Council International Department."

According to the Toshev report, during the talks it was stressed that the most important task for the trade unions at the present time is "to activate the creative efforts of the Soviet and Bulgarian workers in the struggle to the implement in practice the decisions of the party congresses." AUCCTU Chariman Stepan Shalayev is reported to have commented on "the dynamism and creativity in trade-union work, which is characteristic of the largest mass orgainzation of the workers in Bulgaria," and on the existing "full unity not only of views, but also of actions in the many-faceted manifestation of the two trade-union organization under new conditions."

The central topics of the talks are reported to have been "such problems as the functioning of enterprises with self-financing and greater independence, the activity of the trade unions to raise the professional skills and economic knowledge of every worker and specialist, the organization of socialist competition, and, in particular, the further improvement of the forms and incentives of the international competition."

Toshev's report continues: "An expression of all this was the important document signed by Comrades Petur Dyulgerov and Stepan Shalayev: "An Agreement Between the BTU Central Council and the AUCCTU for Further Development of Cooperation and Drawing Together Between the Trade Unions of the People's Republic of Bulgaria and the USSR. "According to Toshev, the agreement states that "the two central trade-union organizations are to continue their work to deepen and further improve the cooperation between the two countries' trade unions, at all levels and in all main directions to attract the wide circles of the workers toward lively contacts." The two bodies, it is stated, "will render active assistance in organizing cooperation between the labor collectives forming part of the joint Bulgarian-Soviet scientific-production trusts." Further points are stated which refer to "the raising of socialist competition to a qualitatively new level, and to mobilizing the participants in the competition to solve the key tasks in the development of the economy." In this context, steps will be taken to improve the effectiveness of the "Friendship" competition organized in Bulgaria with the participation of Soviet specialists.

In the field of mass-organizational work, the agreement is reported to place emphasis on "issues connected with the further improvement of the style and methods of work of the trade unions at all levels." In the links between industrial branch trade issues of the development of the different branches of the economy and in the nonproductive field." Finally, according to Toshev's report the agreement provides for the two sides "to promote the raising of the effectiveness of cooperation between the central trade union bodies of the socialist countries in the field of foreign policy propaganda and counterpropagands, "providing better information to the workers in capitalist countries.

After the signing of the agreement, Toshev reports that Stephan Shalayev issued an invitation for a BTU Central Council delegation to visit the Soviet Union, this was accepted with pleasure by Petur Dyulgerov.

The same issue of TRUD carries on page 1 a 600-word report by Mayta Tankova of a press conference given in the "Vitosha" hotel in Sofia on the afternoon of 9 July by Stephan Shalyev and Petur Dyulegerov. Stephan Shaleyev, the AUCCTU chairman, is reported to have stated that "the meetings and conversations were very useful and important, not only for the further deepening of Bulgarian-Soviet trade union cooperation, but also for expanding the trade union cooperation in international arena." Tankova reports that Shaleyev gave information on the Soviet trade unions' activities since the 17th Soviet Trade Union Congress, noting the great successes achieved in industrial safety -- the reduction of the industrial injury rate by 20 percent, and of job-related illnesses by 25 percent. Looking to the future, Shaleyev is reported to have outlined "the qualitative changes in the nature of labor which are to be accomplished as a result of the scientific-technical revolution."

Petur Dyulgerov is reported to have assessed the 10 days of Bulgarian-Soviet Trade Union Cooperation and the visit of the Soviet AUCCTU delegation as "an exceptionally beneficial event in the life of the trade unions in our country," adding that "this direct contact with the rich Soviet experience, the significance of which extends beyond the borders of the USSR, opens up yet greater opportunities for utilizing it creatively in our practice."

ZHIVKOV, ATANASOV GREET POLISH LEADERS

[Text] Todor Zhivkov, general secretary of the BCP Central Committee Politburo and State Council chairman, and Georgi Atanasov, chairman of the Council of Ministers, have sent the following message to Wojciech Jaruzelski, PZPR Central Committee first secretary and chairman of the State Council of the PPR, and Zbigniew Messner, chairman of the PPR Council of Ministers:

Dear Comrades,

On behalf of the BCP Central Committee, the State Council and the Council of Ministers of the People's Republic of Bulgaria, and the Bulgarian people we send you, the PZPR Central Committee, the PPR State Council and Council of Ministers, and the fraternal Polish people must cordial greetings and wishes on the 42d anniversary of Poland's restoration.

The 22 July 1944 Manifesto of the Polish Committee on National Liberation opened a new page in Poland's history. Poland's restoration as an independent and democratic state with a just border was the result of the Polish people's heroic struggle against the Hitlerite occupants and the liberation of the country by the Soviet Army, alongside which the soldiers of the Polish Army fought shoulder to shoulder.

During the years of the people's power, under the PZPR leadership, within a short period the Polish people succeeded in overcoming the destruction caused by the war, and the economy's lagging behind, and achieved significant successes in all areas of public life.

The Bulgarian Communists and our country's working people followed with great interest the work of the 10th PZPR Congress, which demonstrated once again that the PZPR is a vanguard force, capable of uniting the people in the struggle to overcome difficulties and strengthen the socialist achievements. The congress decisions reveal broad prospects for the further progress of fraternal Poland.

We highly value the PPR's contribution to strengthening the unity of the socialist community, to developing socialist economic integration, and to the joint struggle of the Warsaw Pact member states to stop the arms race and for peace and security in Europe and the world.

We note with satisfaction the relations of traditional friendship and comprehensive cooperation between the BCP and the PZPR the People's Republic of Bulgaria and the PPR, and between our fraternal peoples are constantly strengthening and expanding on the basis of Marxism-Leninism and socialist internationalism. We express our deep conviction that these relations will further enrich and perfect themselves in the interest of our two countries and the socialist community, and in the spirit of the decisions of the 13th BCP and 10th PZPR Congresses.

Dear Comrades, please accept our most sincere wishes for successfully putting into effect the decisions of the 10th PZPR Congress, for the further progress of the PPR, and for peace and social progress in Europe and the world.

ZHIVKOV RECEIVES NEW LEBANESE AMBASSADOR

AU241920 Sofia BTA in English 1708 GMT 24 Jul 86

[Text] Sofia, July 24 (BTA) -- Today State Council President Todor Zhivkov received the newly appointed ambassador of Lebanon who presented his credentials to him. At the ceremony the Bulgarian head of state spoke of the assistance rendered by this country to Lebanon directed towards the establishment of lasting peace and the repulsing of the Israeli aggression. He stressed Bulgaria's readiness to continue to promote cooperation with Lebanon.

Mr. Todor Zhivkov confirmed Bulgaria's support for the just struggle of the Arab peoples for a lasting settlemente of the Middle East conflict the core of which lies in the Palestine issue.

Further on the State Council President said that the Bulgarian people are following the tragic events taking place on (?Lebanese) territory with alarm. Bulgaria will continue to support with all possible means the preservation of the unity, independence and territorial integrity of Lebanon as well as all honest efforts contributing to the achievement of national reconciliation and the normalization of the situation in that country.

The newly appointed Lebanese Ambassador (Husayn Musavi), assessed Bulgaria's stand on the Middle East issue as friendly. He thanked for the support and for the denounciation of Israeli's policy.

The ambassador said that the Lebanese people will not acquiesce until it frees the last inch of Lebanese soil from Israeli occupation.

[Text] Federal Premier Lubomir Strougal received Guy Charbonneau, speaker of the Canadian Senate, who is on a visit to Czechoslovakia, in Hrzan palace in Prague today.

In their talk, which covered a broad range of political and economic matters, both officials stressed Czechoslovakia's and Canada's interest in improving the current international situation, in disarmament, and in stepping up peaceful cooperation between countries with different social systems. They dealt with opportunities for expanding relations between Czechoslovakia and Canada, increasing political contacts and economic, scientific, and technical cooperation. They stressed that it is necessary to strive for a faster growth in trade, and seek new and effective forms of economic cooperation. In this connection they discussed some suggestions which, if they were put into practice, would, along with the traditional contacts in culture and sport, contribute to intensifying mutually advantageous cooperation between Czechoslovakia and Canada.

LEADER'S MESSAGE TO POLAND ON NATIONAL DAY

[Text] Prague -- Gustav Husak, CPCZ Central Committee general secretary, and Lubomir Strougal, CSSR premier, sent Wojciech Jaruzelski, PZPR Central Committee first secretary and chairman of the State Council of the Polish People's Republic, and Zbigniew Messner, chairman of the Council of Ministers of the Polish People's Republic, the following congratulatory telegram on the occasion of the 42d anniversary of the establishment of the Polish People's Republic:

Dear Comrades, on the occasion of the 42d anniversary of the emergence of the Polish People's Republic we send you, the PZPR Central Committee, the State Council and Council of Ministers of the Polish People's Republic, and the fraternal Polish people cordial comradely greetings and sincere congratulations on behalf of the CPCZ Central Committee and of the CSSR Government and people, and also in our own name.

Poland's liberation from the fascist domination and the emergence of the Polish People's Republic 42 years ago opened for the Polish people the road toward building the socialist society. Under the PZPR's leadership and in close alliance with the Soviet Union and other socialist countries, the Polish working people achieved significant socioeconomic transformations in the country.

We in the CSSR feel deep respect for the results achieved by Poland's workers class and other working people during the last period in the process of the all-round normalization and development of the Polish people's political, economic, and cultural life. These results are an expression of the firm resolve of the working people in the Polish People's Republic unwaveringly to proceed forward on the path they have taken for building socialism in their fatherland.

The 10th PZPR Congress, which formulated the prospects of the fraternal Poland's further socialist development, has become a significant landmark in the process of socialist renewal and of the consolidation of political life in the country.

We highly appreciate the contribution made by the Polish People's Republic to the development of the all-round cooperation of the states of the socialist community and to the consolidation of their unity and cohesion. The consistent peace foreign policy of the Polish People's Republic makes a significant contribution to the growth of your state's authority in the world and to strengthening the common struggle to preserve peace and avert the threat of nuclear war.

We are sincerely glad at the traditional relations of friendship and cooperation between the CPCZ and the PZPR, between the CSSR and the Polish People's Republic, between the Czechoslovak and Polish people. We are convinced that these relations, based on the principles of Marxism-Leninism and socialist internationalism, will successfully develop and deepen also in the future for the benefit of the peoples of our two countries.

We wholeheartedly wish you, dear comrades, the PZPR, and all Polish working people many further successes in building the socialist society in your country, in the fight for peace, socialism, and social progress in the world.

Alois Indra, CPCZ Central Committee Presidium member and chairman of the CSSR Federal Assembly, sent a congratulatory telegram on the national holiday of the Polish People's Republic to Roman Malinowski, marshal of the Polish Sejm.

Bohuslav Chnoupek, CSSR minister of foreign affairs, sent a congratulatory telegram to Marian Orzechowski, minister of foreign affairs of the Polish People's Republic.

[Text] Vladimir Herman, candidate member of the CPCZ Central Committee Presidium and leading secretary of the South Moravian regional party committee; and Ladislav Gerle, deputy federal premier, familiarized themselves today with the progress of construction and the operation of the Dukovany nuclear power station. They were interested above all in provision for its safe and reliable operation. They also discussed the construction of the third and the fourth sets of their commissioning according to dates established by the government.

Comrades, Vladimir Herman and Ladislav Gerle also visited the set control rooms, the reactor hall and the monitoring station.

BRIEFS

FIRST HARVEST RESULTS -- Winter barley had been harvested from 27,000 hectares statewide by the end of last week, which is more than 15 percent of the area of cultivation -- in the Czech Socialist Republic, it had been harvested from 9.7 percent and in Slovakia from 76.1 percent of the sown area. The harvest of winter wheat has started in all Slovak regions and in South Moravia. So far, it has been brought in from 77,600 hectares, which is 16.7 percent of statewide area. Winter rape has been reaped from 24,100 hectares, that is, 20.2 percent of total area, "and it can be assumed that the production plan will be fulfilled." Early potatoes have been gathered from 4,800 hectares, which is 41.5 percent of this year's task. A total of 43,900 metric tons of early potatoes had been procured by 10 July, which was 35 percent of the annual plan. The second mowing of perennial feed crops and of meadows has progressed much further than by the same date last year, having been completed on 38.6 percent and 9.7 percent of the area respectively. MEISSNER ALLEGES GDR PUTSCH ATTEMPTED IN 1985

DW240945 Hamburg BILD in German 24 Jul 86 pp 1, 5 a

[Wolfgang Kenntemich and Richard Voelkel report: "The professor Reveals": "Honecker Was To Be Overthrown"]

[Text] "GDR" Professor Herbert Meissner told the Federal Intelligence Service [BND] that SED chief Honecker (74) was to be overthrown in 1985. The Kremlin was said to have agreed.

SED bezirk leaders following Moscow's line had assembled around East Berlin party chief Konrad Naumann and Germand policy expert Herbert Haeber. Meissner reported a dramatic politburo scene to baffled BND officials.

Naumann and Haeber wanted to make Honecker's "crown prince" Egon Krenz (who also follows Moscow's course) the new party and state chief by means of a coup: "Erich, it is time for a change of power," Naumann and Haeber urged.

Honecker yelled, furiously red in the face: "Get out of here!"

Suddenly, Naumann and Haeber stood there alone, the other "hawks" kept meekly silent. The putsch attempt collapsed. Honecker said at that time to confidants: "There have been people for decades who have tried to oppose me. It did them no good."

Naumann and Haeber lost their positions. The official version was poor health...

"Crown prince" Krenz also fell into disgrace, although Honecker could not prove that he was directly involved. He is supposed to face a "test" in the near future, possibly as a successor to Stoph as chairman of the Council of Ministers.

In order to neutralize Krenz for the time being, Honecker placed SED functionaries who were loyal to him in the leadership. Guenter Schabowski, former NEUES DEUTSCHLAND chief editor, became the new East Berlin party chief (for Naumann). He and Hans-Joachim Boehme, the Halle bezirk chief and a propaganda expert, are considered the new crown princes.

Professor Meissner told the BND: "Honecker is now firmly determined to stay in office at least until the 1991 party congress." He feels fit aside from high blood pressure because of his age.

Moreover, Honecker wants to fulfill one wish. Meissner: "After the 1987 Bundestag elections he wants to come to the FRG to see the Saarland, his homeland, once again."

JANES KADAR PAYS VISIT TO UOGRED COUNTY 24 JUL

LD241125 Budapest MTI in English 1008 GMT 24 Jul 86

[Text] Budapest, July 24 (MIT) - Janos Kadar, general secretary of the Hungarian Socialist Workers Party, is visiting County Nograd Thursday. He is studying the life of the inhabitants, the state of the county's industry and agriculture, and issues of interest.

Janos Kadar arrived in Salgotarjan at 10.30. He was met by Istvan Petrovzki, head of the CC's party and mass organizations department; Janos Geczi, first secretary of the county party committee; and Laszlo Szalai, first secretary of the town party committee; in the HSWP County Nograd Committee headquarters. Janos Kadar is to visit the Salgotarjan metallurgical works and study the life of agricultural workers in the country.

Gires Speech in Salgotarjan

LD250215 Budapest Domestic Service in Hungarian 2000 GMT 24 Jul 86

[Speech by Janos Kadar, MSZMP Central Committee General secretary, to activists of the Nograd County MSZMP Committee in the Committee Council Room in Salgotarjan on 24 July -- recorded]

[Text] Dear comrades. I heartily greet every dear comrade participating in this meeting; and I congratulate you, too.

I say sincerely: I came here willingly and this has been a very useful day. Within the framework of the various meetings, I have sensed the atmosphere which, it seems, prevails in the county. I have had an opportunity to hear what is on the mind of the leaders and workers. All this has been very useful for me, and very happy for me because your thoughts basically coincide with the thoughts that preoccupy us, the workers in the party and the country's center.

I would like particularly to emphasize that seven times today I have listened to ideas and endeavors regarding the future, and I dare say that these coincide with our ideas and endeavors.

With regard to the country: the domestic political situation is stable; the socialist system rests on stable, firm foundations. I must say this even though we are struggling with a great many problems in what is, in fact, every main area of social development. The system is stable, politically firm. The country is advancing along its own path, along the path of socialist development, and it is continuing to build a socialist society, or as we sometimes say, to build a developed socialist society.

There is a program. We must continue to work to realize as much of this program as possible and as well as possible.

How did our people use to live? Let us take the period since the liberation. A battle was waged for power for 3 years. The conditions in the country were such that we were able to attain even the 1938 production level. Inflation tortured the country for 1 and 1/2 years. Well, that was 3 years. Then we got going, and it must be stressed, in the right direction. We went toward the right direction of development. Hardly had a little time passed when the distortions appeared.

They were distortions, no other name can be given to them, because if we think of 1956 -- and think of responsibly -- a role was played in it by the imperialists, who worked toward it: by the class enemy, which still existed at home -- they [word indistinct] communism, quite naturally; by the revisionist tendency which appeared then, and which was headed by Imre Nagy; however, the real fault lay in the distortions in socialist practice.

Well, this is [words indistinct] which is still valid, and it is no accident that we began with this, because the enemy makes use of everything. But what if it has nothing to make use of? This is why I say that the first and foremost problem was the distortion in the practice which diverged from the socialist principles, and it caused tremendous trouble.

Some people not familiar with the issue believe that the 1956 crisis lasted for 10 days or so, perhaps 14 days or something like that. Comrades that crisis lasted for several years. To use a medical simile, the wound was opened in June 1953 and by the time we were able to stitch it up it was June 1957. This was a 4-year crisis. How many years thereafter did we have to work for the sake of consolidation following the defeat of the counterrevolutionary uprising? And then came the years of dynamic development after the consolidation was achieved. There have been such years as well, (?as perhaps you remember).

And then, well, the international economic conditions did not favor us and we, the leadership, committed a mistake which we should not repeat. Those international economic conditions meant that the explosion in the price of oil hit use heavily, as well as everything that went with it. In practice, 20 percent more had to be paid to buy the same things. Well, those are the changes in the terms of trade.

However, naturally the unfavorable international conditions do not merely comprise this. The international political situation was not very favorable either. This had a feed-back effect on the economy, and so on, and then we committed the mistake of trying to maintain the earlier rate of development and, frankly, of distribution as well in order to maintain the development of living standard. We did that for a few years. We spent more than we produced, which was done by the entire country, and we consequently got into difficulties. We got into debt in every directio, because we had always been strong when it came to distribution. We can say en masse how we should distribute, only there a fewer of us who can say how it should be produced.

And if one can recommend something for the future -- we spoke about this at the elsewhere factory -- what we must achieve is that we should be a few percent -- not many -- ahead in production compared to distribution. We always have been a few percent ahead in the distribution sphere heretofare and production followed behind. This is not viable road. We must learn to produce that which is needed, and I believe that this is possible.

I am mentioning this now because I am in full agreement with the words of Comrade Geczi [Nograd Country MSZMP Committee first secretary] namely, that the 1 and 1/2 years since the congress we correctly proposed a process of increased dynamism, while continuing to pay attention to the requirements of equilibrium. Unfortunately this has not materialized.

Last year was a bad year. Let us say that half of this can be attributed to the exceptional winter but the other half has to be due to some other reason, because the whole year was bad; and the first half of the current year has not been spendid either. Well, despite all this, I still believe that the direction laid down by the congress can be realized, and the new 5-year plan -- some of whose figures have been incorporated in legislation -- can be largely realized if we get down to it seriously, in the right way, and if we finally learn how to manage.

The economy is the most important issue at present although, naturally, the rest is not of no consequence. The central directing organs have their tasks here; let them perform their work in the economic sphere better than they have hitherto. A very great deal depends upon enterprise management, because if there is independence, then a great deal depends upon how they approach their work. The center must function well and the local leadership also must function well; this is the only way it can be done.

Let me add something to this. The approach taken by society also must change. Our party organizations also must get on their feet in a different way, because this is decisive amid our social conditions. The same is true of the other social organizations, trade unions, the Communist Youth League and so on. I will not list them all. Let me stress that the approach taken by public opinion also must change. The sooner this is understood and the sooner the correct approach is taken, the better it will be and the sooner we will make progress, true progress.

This system truly has reserves. The possibilities of creative, productive work are still far from being fully utilized here in the country as well. When I talk about the approach, what I have in mind is, in fact, the approach by every worker. There is a certain contradiction in this connection and this has already been mentioned today. Everyone agrees with the policy, but this is something that requires that a stand be taken. This is not something that will come about by itself. Because we talk about the economical use of materials and other goods, everyone knows how to treat his own in an economical manner, but the common property concerns people less. I have spoken of thrift with materials and energy and the honest utilization of working times, as well as many other things. It is this which requires the right approach by the social organs and by society.

As regards the party, we must stop moaning about whether or not we have the right to interfere in economic matters.

We must take a stand on behalf of the policy, which in the first meaning of the word is politics, and also means public morals and differentiated wages. This is what we must get use to, what we must learn. Those looking for an excuse for not working can usually find one. Isn't that so? What are the perspectives? There is no development, there is nothing to distribute; how should we develop our technology? Where do we get the money from? The government doesn't help. Excuses are quickly found, but we should utilize what we have in our hands in an intelligent way; and how we should take a stand on certain issues this, comrades, is something, if you will excuse me, that we still have to get used to, because this is part of our tasks. If we get everything moving that we can get moving here at home, we will do better and will be able to make faster progress. Comrades, here has to be [words indistinct].

Development must be ensured first and foremost in the spheres of production and in the technical sphere. First we must produce and only then will we distribute. There is no other way. Employment is assured and only employment should be provided to where it is needed. It is still the case here that there is not enough labor in certain very important spheres while simultaneously elsewhere it seems as if more people than necessary are employed. Well, this is where we must be selective.

There are large collectives, factories, and cooperatives, as well as other institutions working in the right direction. The movement of labor must not take place in an ad hoc manner; we must ensure that the larger units which produce well should be able to pay better. This is how they should attract those workers who can work well and want to earn well with decent work. This cannot be attained in 5 minutes, but this is what we must endeavor to achieve.

Naturally, what has been said here -- that the abuses must be eliminated, because they anger people -- also is true. These are the possibilities that I perceive in the sphere of work. We also have other resources that we will be able to make better use of and we must make better use of them. I am thinking here of socialist cooperation. There have been those here who expressly welcomed the CPSU Congress. Something great took place there: a decisive direction was proclaimed and approved which must lead to serious changes, and will lead to them, in the Soviet Union as well. This also must affect us in a certain sense, and is affecting us, of course. It will do soeven in the sense -- that was mentioned once before in connection with metallurgy -- that the Soviet demands will manifest themselves more sharply. They will demand quality, not only from their own production units but from their partners as well. And they will demand that deadlines be met. This will have a stimulating effect in itself and an even greater stimulating effect will derive from the fact that the Soviet Union is a tremendous engine of the specialist world. They have now (?taken up these question and will move in this direction) and will help us as well, because the endeavors are realted and are the same.

We simultaneously do not exclude that, because of the country's potentials, we want to work in other international markets as well and we want to utilize the principle of the international division of labor not only in socialist relations. This also can be done.

As regards the general international situation, I said that it is not very helpful looking backward, and it also is not ideal at the present time. The situation is still complicated and still dangerous because of the continuing international arms race. But we have now come forward with very firm and very good positions. The Soviet Union itself now has proposals which cannot be simply swept off the table, and so has the Warsaw Pact, and believe me, the situation has changed in this respect. What I mean by this is that it is now the Soviet Union, the socialist world, the Warsaw Pact that are on the offensive and the imperialists who are pressed a little.

I am only mentioning this because I declare that we have a program, that the conditions exist, that we can work, that we can get many more things moving here at home, and that international conditions also make this possible. Let our people live with a feeling of security, because they will live in security. However, it is necessary to work.

REPORTAGE ON 2D PLENARY MEETING OF PZPR CC

PAP Details Discussion

LD251005 Warsaw PAP in English 1844 GMT 24 Jul 86

[Text] Warsaw, July 24: The 2nd plenary meeting of the PUWP CC was held in Warsaw Today, chaired by CC First Secretary Wojciech Jaruzelski.

Opening the meeting Jaruzelski said: Only three weeks have elapsed since the debates of the 10th PUWP Congress. The fact that we are meeting again testifies to a lively pace of the post-congress work, shows that we are vigorsously approaching the implementation of its resolutions. The meetings of congress delegates, members of regional and central party authorities with the working class, the working people prove that the ideas of the congress, broadly popularized among party members and society, arise interest and stimulate numerous initiatives.

The aim of our today's meeting, Jaruzelski went on, it to define methodology of work and exchange experience in popularizing and implementing the congress resolutions. With the view to their implementation we must activate the whole party potential, have all state, administration and economic structures join in this process and engage broad social forces. The report-and-election campaign, which in accordance with the decisions of the 23rd plenum is to start in September, will serve this end.

During the campaign the 10th Congress's ideas should be actively and creatively used in the activities of every party committee and organisation, in every milieu. We launched at the congress a conception of an overall review of organizational structures of the state and national economy. At the present plenum we intend to map out the directions of preparatory and next implemental works, Jaruzelski said.

In accordance with the daily agenda, the floor was taken by Political Bureau member, CC Secretary Jozef Baryla who spoke of the party's current tasks in disseminating and implementing the 10th Congress's resolutions. Next Political Bureau member, CC secretary Marian Wozniak presented an information on the preparations to a general review of the functioning of organizational structures in the state and economy with the application of the method of attestation of jobs.

This was followed by a plenary discussion.

Fourteen speakers took the floor at the plenary discussion.

PUWP CC member and Vice-Premier Zbigniew Szalajda told the Central Committee about steps taken by the government to implement resolutions of the 10th PUWP Congress. The timetable of implementing tasks assigned for the government by the congress resolution, fixes deadlines and personal responsibility of cabinet members for their implementation. On this basis, all ministries and voivodship offices will prepare their own detailed timetables to implement tasks. These timetables will be the subject of the government permanent control.

An improvement in the supplies of marketables and the creation of conditions for the development of the food industry complex are on of the main and the most topical problems.

Thanks to the rise in the deliveries of goods, the supplies of marketables somewhat improved in the first half of this year. This was attained as a result of increasing industrial production that grew by 5.4 percent as compared with the first half of 1985. This was a swifter pace than planned. The main barrier is the volume of imports from the dollar zone countries. Its increase is limited by the level of the export cash revenues and debt re-payment. The government presidium made appropriate decisions in this respect.

Broadly conceived issues of improving the supplies of inter-mediate and raw materials for industry make it possible to cherish the hope that there are serious chances to exceed the volume of industrial production envisaged by the 1986 central annual plan. However, this will require to obtain at least the planned reduction in material and energy consumption. This is one of the main tasks that government puts in the second half of this year before the entire economic and state administration.

Already in the first half of this year, the government took steps to uncover reserves in the management of labour resources and disciplining labour relations. Some enterprises were selected where piloting reviews and attestations of workstands are conducted.

However, the key to improve quality lies primarily in the hands of enterprises and in the full implementation of legal regulations.

Making correct use of fixed assets and their modernization are parallel factors of effective and balanced development of the economy.

One of the main conditions to develop the economy is to considerably and durably increase its export potential and to deepen economic integration with CMEA countries. The government continues actions to create conditions necessary to speed up pro-export changes in economic structures.

A number of tasks related to the 1987 central annual plan and concerning detailed solutions in the second stage of introducing the reform stem from the timetable of work. The work in this respect is continued so that modified solutions could be introduced already in 1987.

PUWP CC member and Deputy Interior Minister Andrzej Gdula presented lines of action of his ministry to further protect the state security. We will take firm and consistent measures to liquidate the remaining illegal structures and underground printing and publishing activity, he said.

As regards intransigent oppositionists, we will apply reprisals under the binding law. While, as regards persons accidentally linked to this activity, we will apply broad preventive measures, he went on.

We will more deeply study irregularities in management, cases of poor quality of production and waste, and all steps bringing about unfavorable moods and conflicts in factories.

Baryla Addresses Plenum

LD241857 Warsaw Domestic Service in Polish 0930 GMT 24 Jul 86

["Extensive excerpts" of the speech by Jozef Baryla, member of the Politburo and secretary of the PZPR Central Committee at the second plenum of the PZPR Central Committee on 24 July in Warsaw -- recorded]

[Text] Esteemed comrades, 3 weeks have passed since the 10th PZPR Congress ended. The highly ideological and creative congress debate, an atmosphere of seriousness, realism, and responsibility, the criticisim and the readiness to tackle new and ambitious task continues to live on in our memory. We must nurture this climate. It strengthens the party, its ties with the working people, its credibility within society. There is no issue of greater importance than raising the efficiency of the economy, science, technology, education, and culture in satisfying public requirements, if the goals set by the 10th Congress are to be attained.

This requires thorough organizational and structural improvements, increased resourcefulness, discipline in the execution of tasks, the overcoming of sluggishness and bureaucratic attitudes, as well as other causes of the wastage of people's efforts, intellect, time, and material resources.

The Creative tend within the socialist development, the overcoming of impediments which make this development more difficult is inseparably linked with the 27th CPSU Congress.

Despite the fact that the historical conditions are different, the assessments and conclusions arrived at by our party's 10th Congress and the 27th CPSU Congress coincide, as does the creative, Marxist-Leninist approach to, and interpretation of the general trends in socialist development.

The process of implementation of the 10th Congress decisions is taking place in complicated domestic and foreign conditions. The opponent is attempting to distort deliberately and belittle its achievements. Naturally, this requires appropriate countermeasures. However, it is facts and will continue to be facts that make up our fundamental argument: the effects of work done after the congress. Our argument will consist of everything which will, as a result of a consistent implementation of the resolutions, change things for the better, in large matters and small, in the life of the people, individuals, and the whole of society.

Complete information concerning the procedure for implementing the postulates put forward during the 10th Congress will be presented during the third plenary session of the Central Committee.

Esteemed comrades, the congress has affected all areas of our life. For reasons which are understandable, we will here deal merely with a few groups of problems which, if appears, are of special urgency in the post-congress work.

As for ideological and propaganda work, the foremost task here is to propagate the tenth congress materials, to translate them into a language of tangible and intelligible tasks in a manner that accords with the requirements of various social and professional communities. Following a preparatory meeting with the Central Committee lecturers which has already taken place, an extensive campaign of lectures will get underway in the next few weeks.

Meetings with the congress delegates in workplaces and residences will also be continued. At the same time, post-congress lecture work is already gathering momentum in certain voivodships and work places. The extent of this work still continues to vary considerably; but what is of importance here is the initiative that has been shown without waiting for decisions from the top.

It is important to ensure that each party member is thoroughly familiar with the congress materials. They will have reached every primary party organization materials. They will have reached every primary party organization by mid-August. However, some of them, including the congress resolution, are already available; the press has published them extensively. We set all party members and candidate members the task of acquainting themselves independently with the 10th Congress documents. A new party training year commences in mid-September. We envisage that two or three meetings of primary party organizations, devoted, above all, to the 10th Congress proceedings, will have taken place by the end of the year.

New forms of training, ideological education teams, rural aktiv schools, and seminars for voivodship committees' lecturers will be introduced. Preparations for the implementation of the lay education program announced during the congress are in the final stage. The teams which operate attached to the Central Committee, in charge of economic, historical, and legal education, will appraise, update, and enrich the programs in force so far in accordance with the 10th Congress decisions.

A review of the publishing work within the party will have been carried out by the end of the year. It will be preceded by an opinion poll for the party members concerning the usefulness and effectiveness of the materials being published.

Work is also going to commence to improve further the ideological education work and the work done in the sphere of information in work places. The aktiv and specialists from the voivodship committees should be active in education centers at work.

The mass media face very responsible tasks. It is their duty, among other things, to expand further the ranks of our allies, actively involved in implementing the congress decisions. A broadening of the social dialogue requires full and honest information, an in-depth, Marxist analysis of the conditions in which we live and work, concreteness in shedding light on tasks and experiences, and avoidance of shallow and obstrusive preaching.

What is required is a depth of meaning and varied, unconventional forms, being bold in making use of contrasts, conciseness, simplicity, and intelligibility of appraisals and suggestions.

Comrades, the congress emphasized with all vigor the rank social and economic problems occupy in the policy of the party and the state. The housing question is among the issues resolutely put to the forefront of the 10th Congress resolution. Already in the current quarter the council in charge of housing affairs will more precisely render the modified principles of the policy in this field. Proposals for new financing and credit-extension on housing construction and the regulations making it easier to exchange apartments will be ready by September.

Among the long-term tasks, outlined in the 10th Congress resolution, the transition to the second stage of economic reform is of fundamental significance. The government is preparing many measures to this end, within the framework of the process of compiling the national social and economic plan.

These measures pertain to the principles and methods of stabilizing the economy, putting matters right in the field of relations between prices, reducing inflation, a consistent self-financing of enterprised and limiting the subsidies and, above all, to enhancing the structure of cost-conscious measures and work discipline.

Comrades, the 10th Congress carried out an appraisal of the state in which our socialist country and our laws find themselves. The congress drew up the prospects for their further strengthening and development.

It confirmed the will to deepen the processes of democratizing political, social, and economic life and, above all, to enhance the influence the elective bodies and self-management bodies and citizens have on the process of decision making and, at the same time, to strenghten discipline, socialist legality, and to improve further the legal system.

These 10th congress recommendations are concretely reflected in preliminary and legislative work. Decisions have already been made. They are, or will be implemented soon. Such dynamic solution, sometimes without precedent. stem from a deep analysis of the prospects and requirement of PPR socialist system from the spitit of renewal and from public expectations.

Strengthening the legal and systematic solutions as they have been so far -- solutions which constitute the foundation of our socialist statehood and which stood the test of time, serving our society and People's Poland well -- goes hand in hand with the new measures.

The representative bodies, representing the authorities and self-management organizations, are statutorily guaranteed an extensive range of action and powers. The thing is that it is not always, nor everywhere, that this range is put to full, or proper use.

The current, post-Congress atmosphere creates particularly favorable conditions to make their activities more dynamic, to boldly avail oneself of all one's powers in the implementation of tasks and, should the need arise, of course, to ask for these powers to be extended.

We regard a broad participation of the social factor in the administration of justice as one of the fundamental principles of power by and or the people. Part and parcel of this principle is the direct influence this factor wields on the penal and criminal policy of the state.

Through its members, the party will actively involve itself in the fall campaign to elect people's assessors, members of the misdemeanour collegia. Appropriate preparatory work is already underway in this area in the voivodships.

We want people of high moral authority, people who enjoy the trust of their community, people who stand out in their professional work and public activity to assume these socially and politically responsible functions.

The further development and intensification of the activity of the social judiciary is an important problem: As a plane of social mediation, of alleviating conflicts, and improving interpersonal relations.

This includes housing estate and factory conciliation commissions, social courts, conciliation commission, labour courts, and finally, honorary milieux and internal tribunals. We see in this socially important but often under-appreciated and neglected field an important role for the cells of PRON, the trade union, and local self-government and social organizations. We are counting on their constructive initiatives and involvement.

An exceptionally important consolidation of this system will be the introduction of [word indistinct] and currently prepared institution of spokesman for civic affairs. A year ago, as we know, our party announced that the year of the 10th Congress of our party opened the second stage in this activity: a stage of increased effectiveness and specific, measurable results. We have a party and government program and a schedule for the struggle against social pathology. We are augmenting it at present with tasks emerging from the 10th congress resolutions. The corresponding voivodship programs are also in the final stages of preparation. We have to do everything to pool efforts of state bodies, social organizations, and citizens in general in their implementation, and to spread the belief that every infringement of the law will inevitably be punished; and every punishment will be materially and morally painful. We are counting heavily on the results of the 17 May government decisions this year, which include the limitation of sales outlets of alcohol; the change in the structure of its production; the monopolization of the growing of poppies; particular supervision of pharmaceutical [words indistinct] and also the support for many national and regional initiatives in the field of combatting negative social phenomena.

Such measures should break the vicious circle of impotence, in particular the struggle against alcoholism, and introduce total sobriety in work enterprises [words indistinct]. The organs to protect the law should intensify prophylactic and repressive measures aimed at the criminal milieux, those endangered by depravity, and the areas of greatest neglect which concern the society.

The Civic Militia [MO] and other forces of order, as well as administration and self-management groups, and also the citizens themselves should undertake relevant steps to improve public sanitary conditions. The poor state of hygiene can be seen in examples of food poisoning, in particular in children's and youth summer camps, and also in tourists and leisure centers. This is an embarrassment to us. The institutions which are responsible for this -- holiday and mass catering organizers must counteract these phenomena more energetically and rigorously.

The intervention activity concerns also order on railways and better functioning of the public transport as well as adequate provision of the infrastructure for the harvest campaign and other field work. The experience gained in such campaigns as the Posesja [order in properties] the Semafor [order on railways] the Rynek [Market] the Bezpieczn Droga [safe road traffic] and others should be popularized. To inspire the work of relevant offices, services, and organizations. [sentence as heard]. The struggle against waste and lack of order, lack of thriftiness and disregard of the labors of others and also lack of care and sometimes contempt for the public property can bring about measurable results in such a way. Here the perpetrators must be called by name, must be brought to book without exception, and must be condemned publicly.

In uncovering and eliminating social irregularities, we depend heavily on the active participation of the Workers and Peasants Inspectorate [IRCH]. As the class and party instrument of the socialist system of control, it already has a significant place in the hierarchy of social bodies.

Further advantageous legal and functional conditions will be created with this in mind. We respect the enthusiasm and selflessness of over 30,000 social controllers of the IRCH. In the near future they should concentrate their efforts on the control of these areas of the social life which have been pointed out by the 10th congress. The activity of IRCH will therefore constitute an important impulse to the realization of the congress resolution.

Comrades, the 10th Congress has confirmed the permanence of the party's policy as regards the trade union movement. We hope that the the campaign before the second assembly of the OPZZ will bring about a strengthening and vigor to the trade union movement will confirm its authenticity and independence and will increase its influence within the working class and society. A significant role in this campaign should be played by members of our party. It is worth recalling that participation in trade union organizations is the duty of party members. Their activeness and commitment must be an example for their coworkers.

A significant role in trade union activity on a national scale and in individual voivodships is played by 208 work enterprises which are in the direct sphere of interest of the central committee. The average figure for trade union membership among party members at this level is 77.6 percent, but on a national scale it is lower. The proof that things can be different was shown in the first quarter of this year. In this period throughout the party, meetings of party organizations and echelons were held on the subject of trade unions. Many talks were held with party and non-party people. As a result of this, the number of trade union members increased on the average monthly by about 97,000 persons. The post-congress climate encourages the maintenance and in many spheres intensification of this trend.

(?Also permanent) is party support for the institution of workers self-management. There is an urgent need to systematically train activists at works in self-management and perfect methods of their work. While continuing the training of activists in self-management at the key enterprises it is necessary to expand it gradually to the remaining enterprises.

This will be fostered by the establishing under the Council of State a center for self-management studies. The self-management aktiv should become more extensively involved in the development of the movement for economic education and legal education. An important task is the establishment of stable, partner-like relations between workers' self-management, the founding bodies, and the economic administration, as well as with the trade-union organizations. We declare ourselves in favor of solutions which increase the role of the workforce in the resolution of contentious issues, and influence the growth of efficiency at enterprises.

An important role is played in our country by numerous public organizations and associations. They form a very valuable basis for awakening and encouraging initiative and civic involvement. We exhort them to ever increasing dynamism and tangible activity, to verification of programs and forms of work, to propose and to make use of the capacity, suggested at the congress, to increase (?work) with the aim of improvement in a variety of spheres of our life.

Comrades, the 10th Congress formulated qualitatively new tasks for the party. Its consideration and energetic activity, its efficiency and its innovative spirit, are a precondition for success. The basic proposals, presented earlier, ensuing from the 10th congress for various spheres of life by their very nature touched also in particular upon life in the party, its committees, and organizations. That is why we are restricitng ourselves here only to those aspects of work which have not previously been discussed, and which closely correspond to our post-congress tasks. Three matters, at least, deserve emphasis:

First: perfecting the style of party work. The party echelons and organizations must (?go) deeply into the problems of that milieul, get closer to the people, among them, and with them resolve matters which arise daily. The support of the ideology of the party must be documented by familialrity with reality, by the wisdom of their decisions, and the precise implementation of them, by a speedy reaction to issues affecting people and to everything that causes pain and complicates their lives. It is also a question of having the party organizations attain an even and high standard in this work, in the way they affect people. Experience shows that this has not yet been done everywhere. There still exist weak links, inactive links. Evening out the rhythm of all links and the comrades working in them should bring about the expected higher quality in all party work.

Second: This concerns the role of the primary party organizations. This link of absolutely basic importance. This problem was repeatedly exposed in the congress debate and it is also reflected in the resolution.

And finally, the proper preparation of accountability and electoral meetings and conferences. The course of their implementation was defined by the 23d plenum and substantiated recently in Politburo directives. We should plan the whole work urgently, appoint teams to formulate the report and draft resolutions in the light of indicators of the 10th Congress. It transpires, from what we have discerned, that preparatory work in voivodship organizations is far-advanced. In some of the voivodships the preparations are just beginning. Elsewhere, only conceptual work is under way.

Comrades, we are not left with very much time. The extent of the preparations should be levelled out as quickly as possible. The most attention should now be concentrated on a detailed analysis of the situation and the drawing of appropriate conclusions from it. Delegates to the 10th Party Congress should be included, as extensively as possible, in the preparatory work, making use of their knowledge and appraisals, constituting a confrontation of the congress debate within their milieux, parent work places and institutions. Assessing the activity of the party authorities of the passing term of office in an honest and comprehensive manner, we should extract everything which may well serve the implementation of the congress tasks. What is imperative is concern, that the accountability and electoral campaign should strengthen the class character of our party, so that in accordance with the will of the 10th Congress, we may ensure a proportionally correct representation of the workers and peasants, youth and women.

Esteemed comrades. There are many objective difficulties to be conquered on the road which we travel, but there are also many subjective obstacles. There are possibilities to improve the situation, for the country to develop more rapidly and for people to live easier and better lives.

Wozniak Speaks

LD242214 Warsaw Domestic Service in Polish 1610 GMT 24 Jul 86

["Extensive excerpts" of speech by Marian Wozniak, member of the PZPR Central Committee Politburo, at PZPR Central Committee plenum in Warsaw on 24 July -- recorded]

[Text] The Central Committee report at the 10th Congress presented the idea ofa large-scale, comprehensive review of organizational structures, with use made of the time-and-motion method. This idea met with support in the discussion at the congress and a positive response in society.

The decision adopted by the 10th Congress states: The congress deems it essential that a general review be conducted of the functioning of the organizational structures in the state and the economy inorder to modernize and improve the efficiency of management, to rationalize the level and structure of employment, and to limit bureaucratic phenomena.

As Central Committee secretary Jozef Barvla has reported, the Politburo has deemed it expedient to make a speedy start to prepare for this undertaking of socio-economic importance. A decision has been taken to set up a party-government commission for the review and modernization of the organizational structures of the economy and the state, with the application of workplace time-and-motion methods.

The main aims of the review are as follows:

First, to make the management system more efficient, including above all the organizational structure at all levels.

Second: To adapt the organizational structures to the demands posed by the economic reform, in particular to lend support for the introduction of solutions favoring efficiency.

Third: To support by means of the review other actions aimed at increasing the efficiency of the functioning of enterprises, that is bringing order into their internal documentation, procedures for the flow of information and for adopting decisions, for strengthening internal economic account keeping, increasing efficiency in organization, introducing the team-work system, and so forth.

Fourth: To increase the efficiency of services to the public in all areas, (?by) the local administration, economic organizations and public utilities, service units in the sphere of production and superstructure, in which improved efficiency in the operation of the health service is of prime importance.

Fifth: To expose unnecessary structures, overmanning, disproportions in manpower, and to create the conditions for rational utilization of established reserves.

The congress report and analysis of the situation to date indicate that, at the present stage of the investigation, it is possible to separate several basic areas for review. These are: the leading, central organs of state administration; the organizational structures of the economy, in particular those which are the counterpart of the so-called supra-enterprise management links, that is associations, cooperative unions, multibranch enterprises, combines, [word indistinct], and concerns, and so forth, operating both in the production sphere and in trade turnover; the internal structures of employment and the management systems in enterprises and cooperatives; service and administration bodies, including local administration, and organizations providing services to the population; the full-time apparatus of public organizations subsidized from the state budget, and various institutions in the area of the superstructure.

The scope, methods, and detailed aims of the review in each of these areas should be differentiated, with account taken of the specific features, problems, and the technical-and-organizational and social conditions.

The main aim of the review of central and leading bodies of the state administration should be the completion of reform at the center. This means the full adaptation of its function to the reformed system of the functioning of the economy and the shaping of the role and organization of the ministries as the organizers of the government's policy in individual sections and branches of the national economy.

This part of the review should be implemented mainly in the form of [word indistinct] headquarters and should be completed with the adoption of a bill on the Council of Ministers.

The review of the economy's organizational structures, including supra-enterprise structures, should aim to optimize organizational solutions in this sphere, depending upon the technical-economic characteristics of individual sections of the economy, based upon clear criteria of economic cost-accounting and efficiency. The formula for activities in this area of the review may be defined as a certification of the function of the bodies analyzed. From its results, organizational structures should be differentiated in such a way as to aid, in some branches, the conduct of a joint development policy, the concentration of resources for costly research, the coordination of investments and such like and to ease, in other branches, flexibility of activity and competition between enterprises on the basis of market mechanisms.

The activity taken up should lead to the rationalization of the structure of the whole national economy. Various forms of organizational transformations should be utilized here, as for example, the buying out of enterprises threatened with bankruptcy, the joint creation of new economic entities, meeting the cooperative needs of associates and so forth. The main instrument of activity in this area of the review should be workplace job of certification.

The government commenced this work with Council of Ministers' Resolution No 29 of May this year. It contains a large-scale long-term program of activity. It introduces on a permanent basis the principle of periodic, systematic reviews and job certification into the (?practical) operation of enterprises. They are to depend upon a comprehensive assessment of work stations, as regards the technical and organizational level and industrial safety and hygiene. In accordance with this program, departmental and branch commissions for review and job certification affairs were appointed and methodological and organizational principles for the conduct of job certification in enterprises were defined in the departments. In economic departments, five enterprises each were nominated in which pilot job certifications serving the accummulation of experiences and the verification of the approved methodology will be completed. On this basis, economic departments are obliged to work out, by a deadline of the end of October, departmental and branch plans of activity which will be put into practise by 1990.

Much can be done within the enterprises to prepare for this venture right now, without waiting for eventual confirmation from departmental programs and directives.

We can start straight away to bring some kind of order to internal enterprise documentation, to simplify lists and files, to standardize documentation and to gear it toward modern computing techniques. It is also necessary to draw up charts listing the tasks and obligations which apply to individual work stations and also to determine their mutual relations by using, among other things, the work assessment method. The undertaking of these preparatory activities in advance will considerably ease the process of certification and will ensure that this process achieves better results.

The conference in Radom organized by the Central Committee economic department and by the voivodship committee constituted an important impulse for creating the political climate for tackling this task. The experience that was mentioned during this conference ought to be used by voivodship committees for guiding this work in voivodships in a political and methodological manner.

A review of service-providing and administrative units directly connected with providing services for the population ought to have dual, nonconvergent goals. Apart from eliminating excess employment, streamlining the services provided for the population ought to be the second and more fundamental goal. In certain instances this can also mean that is is necessary to increase employment and also to streamline more thoroughly economic mechanisms and organizational-technical solutions in those sectors of the economy which provide services for the population.

It will be necessary to analyze the procedures used for dealing with citizens's concerns in offices and economic units which provide services for the population for the purpose of simplifying and streamlining them and also for the purpose of reducing the number of legal acts which regulate them.

This is an issue of great social significance in which progress is necessary and possible. Here one must take into account the need to invest further in the administration as regards the necessary resources and equipment which also makes it possible to apply modern computing technologies and communications so as to carry out the aims that have been set.

A register of necessary streamlining activities ought to be one of the results of the review. A similar methodology of action can be used to assess institutions and their methods of operation when providing services for the agricultural sector. The complaints and suggestions alone that reach the Central Committee and other central institutions from farmers constitute a tremendous amount of material to critically verify existing structures and their methods of operation. It appears to be expedient to include in the review the structures and employment both of the administration of social organization which avail themselves of subsidies from the state budget and also of various institutions of the supersturcture of science, culture, education and the health service. Large differentation in this area of the review (?will) bring about the need to specify on an individual basis the aims and forms which take into account their specific features. When speaking about the review of structures and the modernization of management one cannot fail to mention our own work and its organization, in other words the effectiveness of the functioning of the party. Our starting point is the linking up at the 10th Congress of the formerly functioning Central Party Control Commission and the Central Auditing Commission and also the corresponding local commissions. This will make it possible to achieve considerable savings as regards full-time jobs. We are counting on the central Control and Audit Commission working effectively to also streamline the work of party echelons at all levels.

Linking up the Central Committee departments of propaganda and information, proposed at today's plenary session, also helps to organize work better and avoid duplicate work. We shall conduct further work with the aim of exploiting the experience hitherto as regards the streamlining of the flow of information and with the aim of taking and implementing decisions in an improved manner and with the aim of relieving factory committees and primary organizations of report-back work and at the same time strengthening them.

It is also possible within the party to utilize cadres better, to deploy them better, to avoid excessive formalizaton of work and to achieve greater efficiency and effectiveness of action. The review of structures in the state and an evaluation of their efficiency and functionality must also be coordinated with the system that has already been introduced for evaluating leadership cadres, with the necessary rotation and with the creation of a cadre reserve.

The general aims and areas of the review have been defined but the problems pertaining to its desired sphere, to the way it works and to sufficiently effective forms of implementing changes still need to be defined more accurately.

Here we are banking on the participation and effective activity of organs of the state administration, of scientific centers, of self-management institutions, of social and youth organizations and of citizens. We attach particular importance to the launching of widespread and general public activity which will make it possible to investigate carefully all spheres of significance for the economy and for the daily life of citizens, to expose their weak points, in particular bureaucracy and the lack of efficiency, and to take action to correct them. Because of this we intend to carry out broad consultations and a public opinion poll. A questionnaire in the press organized by the commission responsible for matters pertaining to the review the editional of TRYBUNA LUDU going under the slogan "in tidying up the organization of work and public life let us make our life more efficient" ought to be an important form of this consultation and an important instrument making it possible to refer to broad public opinion. We expect that as a result of the questionnaire the concept of the review will be further popularized and that concrete proposals will be obtained for organizational improvements in the economy, in the state administration and in the sphere of providing services for the population in the broad meaning of the word.

The contribution made hitherto by public opinion to proposals for reforming the way the state and economy function is confirmation of the expections as regards this measure.

This is reflected in letters to the first secetary of the PZPR Central Committee and to the chairman of the Council of State, the Central Committee, the premier and other institutions, as well as letters to periodicals and newspapers. Considering this, it would be useful to open special sections in the press and also to commission relevant programs and debates in radio and on television. One of the essential factors which influences the effectiveness of the review is the proper presentation of its goals and in particular the correcting of doubts which are expressed sometimes, namely that the review will deprive people of their jobs. Such fears have no grounds. In socialist Poland there will be no unemployment. The point is to enrich the work ethic and to eliminate the pretence of work so that the employment is shaped in such a way that human qualifications are used in accordance with the hierarchy of factors which define the social usefulness of work, so that effective and truly essential structures are formed.

Not everything, as practice shows, can be regulated by fiancial and economic mechanisms of the economic reform. The process of modernization of the economy and other spheres of our life brings about, naturally, the need to dedeploy cadres, both in various enterprises and branches of the economy and between the nonproductive and productive spheres. The review ought to encourage a revelation of the reserves in employment and their proper use. This can mean in a number of cases the need to change the place of employment or the need to requalify and the gaining of a new and often more attractive profession.

Factors must be decisively introduced which would stimulate the activity of enterprises and institutions.

Comrades, the review which is being undertaken, wide-ranging and varied as it may be, must not, however, be a once-only campaign for show. On the contrary, it ought to be a process carefully prepared and directed, proceeding at various speeds. Apart from long-term undertakings implemented in stages over a longer period of time, rapid actions will be taken too in all cases where the need for transformations and the (?probability) of their introduction is obvious and which correspond to social expectations.

It will be of great significance to ensure that there exist correct relationships between various types of change. For instance, it will be important for the completion of the reform of the center to be proceeded by correct shaping of organizational structures in individual sectors of the economy. The reconstruction of [words indistinct] should be coordinated with their successive inclusion in the process of jobs review. It will be essential to establish the specific procedures, timetable and specific stages of the work of this progress. This is one of the tasks of the commission which would implement analytical and programmatic, inspirational and control and implementation functions.

Directing the entirety of the process, depending upon the nature of problems, the commission will operate through permanent teams of the commission, responsible for particular areas of the review; through working groups, appointed temporarily for the fulfillment of defined tasks and the inspiration of activities and directing tasks to appropriate state bodies, scientific research centers and socio-political organisations. The necessity for the wide utilization of achievements of organization and management sciences should be emphasized here. The work of the commission should be an inspiration for our scientific and research centers. A guarantee of significantly better and more expansive information about scientific achivements in the world and about the experiences of other countries for the extensive personnel working in the economy and also in institutions, with particular regard to the best examples from the socialist countries, becomes a necessity. The utilization of computer technology, access to information and its proper scope and level are matters which, at the same time as the review, must be considerablv modernized so they can be used by workers in the economy, administration, and the whole superstructure system. Decisions, particularly of a normative and legislative nature, will be fulfilled by the commission through its members fulfilling specific functions in state bodies and also by placing an obligation for their preparation upon the proper state bodies.

A permanent body of the commission will be the scientific secretary. The nature of the commission's tasks demands taking the following solutions into consideration in its work:

First, the systematic informing of society on the progress of work and the results achieved.

Second, the commencement and conduct of work in extensive, social consultation.

Third, the identification of tested models which it is possible to adapt for organizational solutions, both national and international, which will demand the securing of a constant influx of information about advanced foreign organizational solutions.

Fourth, the linking, if necessary, of organizational changes with parallel, imperative progress in technical science and technology.

Fifth, the changes to be implemented with careful presentation and convincing argumentation.

Sixth, the acquisition and mobilization of allies and also the neutralization of opponents of the changes being fulfilled.

Particular significance should be accorded to the skillful use of the processes of strengthening the efficiency mechanism of the economic reform as an important catalyst of the organizational improvements demanded. In accordance with the decisions of the Congress, the commission has had an obligation placed upon it to work out a report about the organizational position of the state and the economy, along with concrete conclusions.

The report is to be presented at the national delegates conference. Comrades, the Politburo appointed me this commission's chairman, and appointed as deputy chairmen Comrades Kazimierz Cypryniak, secretary of the Central Committee, Wladyslaw Jonkisz, member of the Council of State, and Zbigniew Szalajda, deputy chairman of the Council of Ministers. We are currently holding consultations with relevant strata in order to make up the full complement of the commission and its presidium and scientific secretariat. The plan of the work of the commission will be decided in August and September. When undertaking such a responsible task we count on the wide-ranging support of the PZPR activists and also activists of the ZSL and the SD.

I wish to renew the invitation, which is contained in the congress documents, to people's councils, PRON links, self-managements, trade unions, scientists of the Polish Academy of Sciences and higher education establishments as well as professional associations, social associations and in particular the Scientific Organization and Management Society, Polish Economy Society, and the Supreme Technological Organization to participate in the work of the review. The attitudes and commitment of the leadership cadres of all levels and their increased efforts and desire for innovation and their consistency will be of great significance for the work on the review. This will also be a significant element of a test checking the civic responsibility and professional usefulness of personnel. The creation of new solutions opens a great field for initiative and test of one's capabilities by young people. Here we also hope for increased activity of youth organizations.

While presenting this report on the preparatory work of the government and party commission for the review and modernization of organizational structures, the economy and state, I am asking the Central Committee for its opinion and approval of the proposed main directions of activity.

Cypryniak on Tasks Commissions

LD242216 Warsaw Domestic Service in Polish 1632 GMT 24 Jul 86

[Report on the adoption of the regulations for work of the Central Committee, the Politburo, and the Tasks Commissions of the Central Committee, and on the appointment of these commissions, presented by Kazimierz Cypryniak, secretary of the PZPR Central Committee, at 24 July PZPR Central Committee Plenum in Warsaw -- recorded]

[Text] The activity of the Central Committee, of its executive organs, and of the tasks commissions are defined by the principles of the statute of our party. In accordance with clauses 49 and 53, the Central Committee is obliged to adopt regulations for its work and to approve the regulations of the work of the Politburo. The drafts of these two documents have already been received by the comrades. They contain the fundamental statutory principles defining the mechanisms of the functioning of the Central Committee and of the politburo and also regulations essential to their efficient functioning during their terms of office. In this respect they have been based on the positive experiences of the work of the Central Committee in its last term of office. In accordance with Clause 78 of the statute the comrades have received for approval the draft of regulations of the Central Audit and Control Commission defining the general principles of its functioning and the principles of work of the auditing and control commissions at lower levels.

The approval of the presented documents will have great significance for defining the practical activity of the Central Committee, of the Politburo, and of the Central Audit and Control Commission. Observance of principles contained in these documents will contribute to strengthening the democratic mechanisms of the functioning of the highest party authorities and increase the effectiveness of their activity in implementing the tasks mapped out by the 10th congress.

Comrades, in accordance with Clause 52 of the statute the Central Committee appoints the tasks commissions from within its membership and party activists. The experience of the last term of office indicates that this form of work of the highest party authorities has passed the test in full. The activity of 16 talks commissions of the Central Committee constituted an extremely important part of the Central Committee's work. The commissions were tasked with passing opinions and with control functions and were the platform for the active participation of the Central Committee members between the plenary session. The commission made a significant contribution to working out the draft documents for the Central Committee Plenums and Politburo sessions. It was an accepted practice for the commissions to express opinions on draft Sejm laws and on important intentions of the government and individual ministries.

The commissions also conducted analytical and research work on various fields of party work. Their interest focused on such problems as the functioning and strengthening of the basic party organizations in various milieus and on perfecting the work of the party echelons. A wide range of experts took part in the work of the commissions. Some of them were members of the commissions.

Detailed information on the work of the commissions in their last term of office is contained in the report on the activity of the Central Committee. The 10th Congress resolutions contain many specific tasks whose implementation will require considerable activity from the Central Committee and from its task commissions. The most urgent of them have been presented in the politburo report delivered by Comrade Jozef Baryla and in the report by Comrade Marian Wozniak. The Central Committee commissions, taking advantage of the positive experiences of the last term of office, should work out, in accordance with the scale and complexity of the tasks, new forms of work, to present more often conclusions which result from their own analyses and observations of various spheres of life and of the functioning of the party.

In the draft regulations of the Central Committee's work, and in accordance with the statute, it is proposed that up to 50 percent of the membership of the commissions should be made up of party members who are not members of the Central Committee. This would make it possible to involve experienced party activists, including members of the central party authorities in the last term of office, delegates to the 10th Congress, scholars, and experts in the work of the commissions.

Guided by the need to create for the Central Committee members the conditions for energetic work to implement the assignments ensuing from the 10th Congress resolution the Politburo proposes the establishment of the following 15 tasks commissions:

A commission for social policy and health-care. Among its main duties would be to deal with wage-and-price policy, construction, and housing policy, determing working conditions, problems of protecting the health of the population, and in particular developing the material basis of out-patient and in-patient treatment, training medical cadres, production and supply of medicines, and problems concerning protection of the natural environment. As chairman of this commission, the Politburo proposes to appoint Comrade Kazimierz Barcikowski.

A Commission for Intraparty Matters and Party Work in Representative Organs and in the State Administration. This commission would deal with the totality of party work, problems of perfecting the type and method of work of the basic party organization and the committee, problems of party construction, and the introduction into general practice of statutory principles of party work. Within the purview of the commission would lie problems of strengthening the party's bonds with the working masses, creating the political and organizational prerequisites for strengthening the role of the party in serving the working class and in leading society and the state, problems of impoementing the tasks ensuing from the 10th Congress resolution by party members working in the representative organs of authority and in the state administration. As chairman of this commission the Politburo proposes to appoint Comrade Jozef Baryla.

Problems of Poland's foreign policy, in particular the implementation of the commitments contained in the 10th PZPR Congress declaration on security and cooperation in Europe, as well as the restoration of Poland's position in the world, will be the province of the International Commission. The duties of this commission will also include taking an ongoing interest in the situation in the international communist and workers movement. The Politburo proposes that the commission be chaired by Comrade Jozef Czyrek.

A commission for propaganda will deal, above all, with perfecting the forms and methods of disseminating the program and aims of party policy in society, the work of the mass media, and the use of research into public awareness to raise the effectiveness of propaganda work. The Politburo proposes Comrade Jan Glowczyk be appointed chairman of this commission.

The Commission of Proposals, Complaints and Signals from the Population [Komisja wnioskow, skarg i sygnalow od ludnosci] will deal with analyzing socially important matters signalled in letters, complaints, proposals, and postulates from the population sent to the Central Committee and to party echelons and organizations. The Politburo proposes that it be chaired by Comrade Alfred Miodowicz.

Matters pertaining to the rational management of fuels, raw materials, and energy and to the rational management of the complex of issues connected with the working conditions in these branches of the economy will constitute the sphere of the interest of the Commission of Mining, Raw Materials, and Energy [Komisja gornictwa, surowcow i energii] The Politburo proposes that Comrade Zygmunt Muranski chair this commission.

The Commission of Science and Education [komisja nauki i oswiaty] will deal with matters pertaining to the development of science, education, national education, scientific-technical progress, and bringing up the young generation. It will also deal with issues connected with the development of the material base for the needs of science and education, the improvement of the cadre of teachers and upbringers, and also the forms and methods of party work in the milieu of education and science. The Politburo proposes that Comrade Tadeusz Porebski be appointed to chair this commission.

The Commission for Family Matters [komisja do spraw rodziny] will deal the whole range of problems connected with the functioning of the family, with the system of care for mothers and children, the working conditions and life of women, their social and professional advancement, and their role in public life. The Politburo proposes that Comrade Zofia Stepien be appointed chairwoman of this commission.

The sphere of interests of the Commission of Political Economy, Economic Reform and Workers' Self-Management [komisja polityki ekonomicznej, reformy gospodarczej i samorzadu pracowniczego] will include the whole range of matters connected with the implementation of the party's economic policy, the improvement of the mechanisms of economic, reform, and increase in output for the home market and export, problems pertainng to market equilibrium, cooperation with the CEMA countries and others connected with the modernization and development of the country's economy. The commission will also deal with matters pertaining to the functioning of workers' self-management and the activities of the trade unions. It is of use that just as during its last term of office a separate team of the Central Committee responsible for pro-export policy matters should function within the framework of the commission. The Politburo proposes that Comrade Marian Wozniak be appointed as chairman of this commission.

It is also proposed to appoint a Maritime Commission [komisja morska]. It will deal with problems pertaining to the development of the maritime economy and with monitoring the implementation of the fundamental provisions of the state's maritime policy. The Politburo proposes that Comrade Stanislaw Bejger be appointed chairman of this commission.

The commission for Agriculture and the Foodstuff and Forestry Economy [komisja rolnictwa, gospodarki zywnosciowej i lesnej] will monitor the implementation of the party's agricultural policy, shape up the conditions for increasing agricultural and forestry produce, stimulate progressive transformations in the agrarian and social structure of the countryside, develop industries helping the production of food. Coming within the sphere of the interests of the commission will also be issues pertaining to the activity of agricultural and cooperative self-management in the countryside. The Politburo proposes that Comrade Zbigniew Michalek be appointed chairman of this commission.

The Ideological Commission [komisja ideologiczna] will deal with key issues pertaining to the development of Marxist-Leninist theory, with matters pertaining to the ideological struggle, and with increasing the ideological-political knowledge of party members. It will also tackle problems connected with the organization and functioning of the general system of party training, with the activities of echelons of the idelogical and scientific-research front of the party's base, and with the shaping up of social awareness promoting the implementation of the aims contained in the party program and in the resolution of the 10th Congress. The Politburo proposes that Comrade Henryk Bednarski be appointed chairman of this commission.

The next commission is the Commission of the Law, Law and Order, and Moral Health [komisja prawa, praworzednosci oraz zdrowia moralnego]. It will deal with matter pertaining to the strengthening of law and order, to the functioning of organs for the protection of legal order, to the prevention and combatting of crime and phenomena of pathology, to the strengthening of the social front of the struggle for social discipline, public order and the moral health of the public, and to increasing the level of the culture and awareness of the public as regards the state's legal structure. The Politburo proposes that Comrade Stanislaw Ciosek be appointed chairman of this commission.

The Commission of Youth, Physical Culture, and Tourism [komisja mlodziezy, kultury fizycznej i turystyki] will deal with matters pertaining to the young generation, and in particular with improving the forms and methods of party influence over the youth movement and with strengthening its socialist nature and its ideological-programmatic ties with the party and its position in the state. In addition, the commission will tackle matters connected with ensuring an improvement in the conditions of the leisure and recreation of working people through the development of physical culture, sport, and tourism. The Politburo proposes that Comrade Kazimierz Cypryniak, in other words I, be chairman of this commission.

The Commission of Culture [komisja kultury] will deal with matters pertaining to the development and dissemination of socialist culture, with matters pertaining to the creation of the material and social conditions for its functioning, and with the influence of the party over artistic schooling and creative milieus. The Politburo proposes that Comrade Andrzej Wasilewski be chairman of this commission.

The adumbrated spheres of activity of the 15 commissions are basically of an informative nature. Guided by the resolutions of the 10th Congress and the plan of their implementation which we shall adopt at the third Central Committee plenum each commission after it has been appointed ought to draw up its own plan of work and define in it current subjects for its activity.

When preparing today's plenary session we asked you, comrades, to declare your participation in the work of the individual commissions. It emerges from the information conveyed by voivodship committees that anywhere from several to several dozen people have put their names down for inclusion in the individual commissions.

Certain comrades have still not said they will join because they are on holiday. We propose that the commissions should have in their composition (?reduced) number of members of the Central Committee. This means that furter consulations will have to be conducted. In connection with the above we propose that at today's plenary session the Central Committee should accept the proposed number and titles of its special task commissions, appointed their chairmen, and authorize the Politburo to form their compositions in accordance with the approved regulations which will then be passed at the third Central Committee plenum.

Such a procedure for appointing the special task commissions makes it possible to take into account to a considerable extent the individual interests of the members of the Central Committee, creates the preconditions for placing them uniformly in the individual commissions, and ensures that the special task commissions will already be able to tackle their work in the month of August.

And in conclusion I would like to ask you, comrades, to make one correction to the draft regulations governing the work of the Politburo. Please open the regulations on page 6 and in point 6 which starts: Decisions and guidelines of the Politburo...it is proposed that the words approved by the first secretary be crossed out and replaced by on the recommendation of the first secretary.

PZPR Spokesman Comments

LD242333 Warsaw PAP in English 2155 GMT 24 Jul 86

[By Wieslawa Mazarska]

[Text] Warsaw, July 24 -- After the conclusion of the PUWP CC 2nd plenary meeting, PUWP CC press spokesman Jerzy Majka held a press conference for Polish and foreign newsmen and briefed them on the course of today's debates.

"The debates concerned current party tasks in the realization of the 10th PUWP Congress resolutions, a topic of key importance for the entire party," said Majka.

"The discussion stressed that the congress still continues since the congress delegates are still holding meetings with party members and people with no party affilliation at factories and at various social millieux. The meeting have been attended so far by about 1 million people, a large portion of them with no party affiliation," he went on.

"Both the Political Bureau report and the plenary discussion concentrated on key issues, such as the review of organizational structures, the planned attestation at enterprises, the development of initiatives in the form of brigade system and partnership groups, as well as attempts to seek forms favouring innovations," said Majka.

"The Political Bureau report was significantly supplemented by the address delivered by PUWP CC Political Bureau member, CC Secretary Marian Wozniak on the intentions concerning attestation, and Vice-Premier Zbigniew Szalajda's address on the government work on the realization of the 10th Congress resolutions," Majka went on.

Referring to the concluding speech by Wojciech Jaruzelski, Jerzy Majka stressed that the results of the congress will depend on how the decisions taken are implemented in practice. He also noted that from now on, the main criterion of the value of party members will be their ability to implement the 10th Congress resolutions.

Interview With Wozniak

LD24240 Warsaw Television Service in Polish 1730 GMT 24 Jul 86

[Interview with Marian Wozniak, member of the PZPR Central Committee Politburo, by Polish Television journalist Marek Tumanowicz; date and place not given -- recorded]

[Text] [Question] Comrade Secretary, what is the aim and the range of the review of the functioning of the party and state organizational structures?

[Wozniak] This most of all constitutes rationalization of and making more efficient the organizational structures of the economy of our state, and second, an elimination of bureaucratic phenomena. The aimes of the review should be defined more broadly: I think that it means most of all making organizatinal structures more efficient and adapting them to the goals which result mainly from the economic reform. So much for the economy.

Apart from the review is to deal also with the whole spectrum of supra-economic issues, which applies to services, in their widest possibile meaning, that is services for instance to the rural population by all economic and service structures which work for agriculture, or services to citizens in their everyday life, in their dealings with enterprises and local administration.

It also involves what one could call improvement in the efficiency of enterprises. This is the whole range of issues linked with management and the functioning of enterprises. This kind of thing is regulated by what we call job reviews [atestacja], and this is done by the government. We, as the commission, will inspire work in this sphere and supervise it, and as I would say, we will create political influences. This applies equally to enterprises as well as the whole range of matters concerned with the review of structures and modernization of the sphere of management.

The struggle against bureaucracy and against superfluous structures always creates resistance from such structures, resistance from people who are involved. Political strength is needed to combat this.

As far as society is concerned, the inefficiency of economic structures is what matters, but in everday life a citizen feels more acutely the problems which are closer to him, such as a badly functioning outpatients clinic or a badly functioning municipal services system, requests for enormous amounts of papers and documents and lots of time. These are matters which are obvious to us -- it is enought to look at the letters which come in to the Central Committee, the Council of Ministers or the Council of State. Whenever we ask the citizens we get proposals for a practically (?total) modernization of various spheres of our economy and life. And I think that one should put it this way: the review is the answer to great expectations in society that the system of functioning of the state and the system of management of economy will be modernized. Because this is a social issue, I would like to ask the society for an opinion, as the society is very well aware of the deficiencies in the functioning of the economy or the state, and that is why we envisage publication in the near future of a press opinion poll, containing questions. We intent to publish a slogan there which would be more or less as follows: while sorting out the organization of work and social life, let us make our lives more efficient. We think that it will provide a wide-ranging social response and we would like to keep, as I would call them, windows in the press, radio and television, through which various ideas could come in. The experience gained so far from the letters indicates that in many cases these are issues which can be well used in all kinds of attempts of modernization of various sectors of our social life.

[Question] Which specific structures will be reviewed?

[Wozniak] Very briefly: the Central State Administration, all supra-enterprise structures, production structures of the amalgamation or combine type, and also structures involved with trade and supplies; furthermore: enterprises themselves where the job reviews will be broadly understood as sorting out enterprises, tidying up the circulation of documents, the system of information and decision-making, and pay decision -- everything do with enterprises; furthermore, social organization which employ some people whose salaries are paid from the state budget -- one must have a good look at how the state funds are spent, and of course, and this is normal, the party and government commission will deal with the party itself, too, and this we already started at the 10th Congress. It must be said here that this is not a once-only campaign, because the perfecting of the system of administration should be an integral part of the functioning of the economy and the state. But we assume that the first stage should last until the national party conference, that is for 2 and a 1/2 years. In this period we should get a report on the state of organization of the state and we should have preliminary results.

FEDERAL ASSEMBLY CHAMBER CONTINUES SESSION

Presidency Members Sworn In

LD241118 Belgrade TANJUG Domestic Service in Serbo-Croatian 0827 GMT 24 Jul 86

Culafic Address

LD241658 Belgrade TANJUG Domestic Service in Serbo-Croatian 1035 GMT 24 Jul 86

[Text] Belgrade, 24 Jul (TANJUG) -- The militia are successfully carrying out their basic duties and their membership (about 40,000 regular personnel and about 150,000 with the reserve cadres for emergency situations) and level of organization represent a significant security force. There has been no serious disruption or large scale violation of public peace and order. Our citizens feel free and secure while the level of personal and property safety is basically good.

To a large extent this is a result of the responsible and self-sacrificing work of the militia as a whole and of each militiaman individually.

This was stated by Dobroslav Culafic, federal secretary for internal affairs, at today's session of the SFRY Assembly's Federal Chamber.

Raising for the first time in the SFRY Assembly in the last 20 years the issue of the militia's capabilities to carry out their tasks, Culafic said that since the war almost 500 members of the militia have lost their lives in carrying out their exceptionally complex and responsible tasks. Noting that the social and security tasks of the militia are no less important nor less difficult today than in the past, Culafic said that the activity by both the external and internal enemy is even more organized and ruthless today. The conditions for maintaining secure borders and public peace and order are becoming increasingly complex. Socially-owned property is being threatened by various forms of illegal dealings and behavior. The economic, social, and other difficulties are conducive to various types of crime.

Owing to our geographical position and the openness of our border, transit through our country is very substantial. However, our territory is being used for various forms of international criminal activity (smuggling of arms, drugs, forged money, etc). International terrorism is also escalating its activity and is assuming new and brutal forms. It is also being used as an instrument for achieving political aims, jeopardizing security, in general, and that of small countries, in particular.

In peace, in normal and emergency conditions, the internal affairs organs and the militia, in particular, are "waging a war" against various forms of criminal and other socially harmful phenomena. In this "war" they are exposed, Culafic said, to various kinds of attacks -- most frequently to verbal insults and denigration. In the last 5 years there have been 68,000 cases of this kind of attack.

Firearm attacks and the use of other dangerous objects against militiamen give cause for particular concern. There have been 6,672 such attacks over the same period. Firearms were used in 111 cases and other dangerous objects in 1,035 cases. There were 5,526 physical assaults on militiamen. The consequences of these attacks are disturbing: 16 militiamen were killed, 244 received serious injuries and 1,653 slight injuries.

Culafic emphasized that the internal affairs organs, and the militia as one of their parts, unreservedly accept the principle that our society cannot provide efficiently for its security if it entrusts it exclusively to the security services however strong, well-organized, trained and technically equipped they are.

Members of the militia, as personnel given powers by the internal affairs organs, are legally obliged to carry out their tasks even when their lives are endangered. Except for the human or moral obligation, workers in other spheres of activity are under no such obligation, Culafic stressed.

The carrying out of many very difficult and complex security tasks demands strict observance of the law, strict adherence to regulations, and professional behavior on the part of the militia personnel. This is a demand which the militiamen must be constantly aware of and which must be strictly observed. Of particular importance is the issue of using coercive measures by militiamen in order to protect citizens from various forms of violent and criminal behavior. members of the militia are very often put in a position where they have to react and intervene quickly and efficiently and on the sport, and in certain circumstances are forced to use coercive measures. This is always a serious ordeal for every individual member of the internal affairs organs. A small amount of carelessness can make a militiaman exceed his powers and offend somebody's freedom, dignity, or physical integrity.

In all those cases when the militiaman is forced to repel a direct assault on himself, when he is trying to prevent a person caught perpetrating a criminal act from escaping, when human life needs to be protected, when he is thwarting an attack on installations he is guarding, when he is trying to prevent a person under arrest or a person for whose arrest a warrant has been issued from escaping, in the course of intervention to reestablish seriously disrupted public peace and order, he should and must, in accordance with the law, use all the coercive measures available, including firearms. The internal affairs organs are paying particular attention to this delicate and sensitive issue, Culafic stressed. The militiamen are duty-bound to submit well-documented reports about their conduct and handling of the case, particularly in cases when coercive measures are used.

These reports are examined and discussed in detail to establish if the handling of every individual case was within the law and the militiaman's powers. In 1981-85 period firearms were used as a a coercive measures in 489 cases and other means in 10,000 cases.

As a whole, Culafic stressed, it can be said that most of the militiamen who resort to coercive measures are acting in accordance with the law and established authority, though there are also cases of unjustified use of coercive measures and impermissible behavior by individual militiamen who provoke the justified opposition of citizens. Though such cases are not numerous and the total sum of such interventions amount to an insignificant percentage, it is indisputable that they greatly harm the prestige of the organs of internal affairs and decrease the results which the service, and the militia in particular, have been achieving through their legal work, and the prestige which they enjoy among working people and citizens.

For exceeding or abusing their legal authority during the past 5 years, 105 members of the internal organs have been charged with criminal offences, while disciplinary and other measures have been enforced against 681 militiamen. We shall continue, Culafic said, to take strict measures against each individual militiaman who abuses or oversteps his authority and who behaves irresponsibly, but we shall also protect every militia work who is unjustifiably attacked. Both aspects are part of the struggle for the moral-political image of the militia worker.

In this connection, and in view of the of the Kosovo citizens' complaints, on the basis of the conclusions of the SFRY Presidency and of the LCY Central Committee Presidium, Culafic stressed, I have formed a special commission comprising representatives of the Federal Secretariat, the republican secretariat for internal affairs of the Social Republic of Serbia, and the provincial secretariat for internal affairs of the Socialist Autonomous Province of Kosovo, which is tasked with directly examining all the citizens' petitions submitted from 1981 to 1986 which refer to the behavior of the organs and workers of internal affairs of the Socialist Autonomous Province of Kosovo. The commission has visited all the municipalities in the Socialist Autonomous Province of Kosovo and examined 622 complaints. The commission established that a relatively high number of the citizens' complaints are justified. The commission has proposed specific measures for dealing with all the cases and establishing responsibility. I have given instructions, Culafic said, that the proposals should be implemented within 3 months as the latest and that each member of the internal organs who is found responsible, should be subjected to disciplinary or criminal charges, and even dismissal.

However, despite certain shortcomings among the ranks of the militia, according to Culafic, working people and citizens increasingly trust the organs of internal affairs. There are also numerous everyday examples of citizens' hearty assistance to militiamen in carrying out security tasks.

Culafic then stressed that the experience gained in curbing counterrevolutionary actitivies and performing security tasks has had an effect on dealing more quickly with individual issues which are of significance for achieving greater unity of action and function of the organs of internal affairs, as well as of the Yugoslav militia.

After a long time, joint program documents in the area of public security were adopted this year. Preparations are underway for the further development of uniform technological systems of the organs of internal affairs (information system, communications system, and so forth), which are also of extraordinary importance for the effectiveness of the militia's work. We hope, Culafic stressed, that the SFRY Assembly will as soon as possible adopt modernization programs for the Federal Secretariat and the Security Institute for the period up to 1990, and thereby make it possible to link these systems and use them optimally, and through this, also to improve general work conditions and the material position of part of the militia.

It has been agreed, Culafic continued, that the appearance of the uniforms, ranks and rank insignia in the militia should be standardized for the whole country. Agreement has also been reached on the minimum and the standard for equipping the units and members of the militia with technical devices, arms, and equipment for the militia of all the republics and autonomous provinces.

The state of technical equipment of the militias varies from one region to another. However, viewed as a whole, this does not meet the necessary level, nor with the tasks which the militia faces today, nor with the problems which are realistically anticipated for tomorrow. The problem also lies in the fact that because of constant use the technical equipment of the militia quickly deteriorates and it is constantly necessary to update it, while reasons of security demand that the work process be constantly modernized through speedier use of scientific and technological achievements and through the provision of modern equipment. Therefore, all society's subjects, at all levels of organization, should devote constant attention to the capability of the militia as well as to the material position of the militiamen.

Considerable variations in the level and condition of equipment of the militia, and not only of the militia, with respect to the necessary technical requirement in various areas in the country, are already limiting effectiveness, in particular in carrying out joint tasks in the security interest of the whole country. Because of the division of authority, as well as of financing, we are in a situation whereby the security of our borders, the protection of the rights and freedoms of working people and citizens, and therefore also the security of the country as a whole, depend to a great extent on the material possibilities of individual, smaller sociopolitical communities, that is, municipalities.

The federal secretary for internal affairs stressed in particular that the material position of militiamen in most of our republics and provinces is very difficult. The number of militiamen whose basic needs are seriously threatened is on the increase. In 1985 personal incomes of militiamen were on average around 30,000 [dinars] in the SR of Montenegro, to 50,000 in the SR of Slovenia. In 1986 the average rose more in some places than in others, and has partly been brought into accord with the increase in living expenses, but this still remains a big problem.

A particular problem in the implementation of the cadre policy in the organs of internal affairs is solving housing problems. Only around 56.9 percent militiamen have solved their housing question. The situation in the Socialist Autonomous Province of Kosovo is especially hard, where only 16.6 percent of the militia workers have solved their accommodation question.

If to this is added that fact that because of the nature of their work the militia workers are not allowed to take on secondary jobs, and that a high number of militia workers' spouses are not employed (in the Socialist Republic of Serbia only one wife of a militiaman out of 21 is employed; in the Socialist Autonomous Province of Kosovo the situation is even worse), then it can be said that a section of the militia workers are in a very difficult material position, and sometimes this threatens the implementation of official duties. Because of this we must bear in mind, Culafic stressed, that the present situation and the possible further decline in the living standard of a section of the militia, despite their high moral-political awareness, could objectively influence their clearly expressed devotion and readiness to carry out all tasks, even under the most difficult circumstances.

The militia should be steadily rejuvenated, conditions should be created for young and educated people to join its ranks, for more sophisticated people with specialized knowledge, speaking foreign languages, physically fit and ideologically sound, Culafic said. We must continuously modernize ourselves in accordance with the interests and needs of protecting the country's security under all conditions, and thereby ensure the capability of our security services, of our militia, to enable it in future as well to make its full contribution to Yugoslavia to remain a safe and secure country, to be attractive for numerous tourists and all well-intended foreigners, so that our citizens, our youth, our children can live and create calmly, peacefully, and securely in this country, Dobroslav Culafic said in conclusion.

Business Changes Endorsed

LD242032 Belgrade TANJUG Domestic Service in Serbo-Croatian 1149 GMT 24 Jul 86

[Excerpts] Belgrade, 24 Jul (TANJUG) -- Today the SFRY Assembly Federal Chamber endorsed urgent changes on the law for the rehabilitation and liquidation of the organizations of associated labor which will alleviate somewhat the position of some loss-making organizations. This actually means that in exceptional circumstances, and in agreement with the rescuing organization, the Organization of Associated Labor which has registered losses in its final account, can pay out somewhat larger personal incomes that it has been doing so far, as long as no losses in the current business activity are established.

In this case, the increase in personal incomes could not be more than 75 percent of the growth of average personal incomes in the economy of the republic in the current year.

With the changes, the circle of the so-called seasonal activities, except for tourism and airport services, will also include the manufacturing of sea salt, farming, and building industry. Organizarions in these areas, which did not register losses in a past year but realize less than 35 percent of the envisaged total income, in the first half of the current year, will not have to adopt a program of measures to eliminate losses and limit the payment of personal incomes after the 6-month accounting. [passage omitted]

After a short discussion, the chamber assessed that the republican and provincial assemblies should discuss the capability of the militia, its state of organization, and financing to realize its full functional unity.

A suggestion was made to the republican and provincial assemblies that differences in personal incomes of the militia members of different republics and provinces should be coordinated. Also they should find solutions for financing and organizing the militia at the level of a republic or a province.

The FEC was instructed to undertake measures for better capability training of the militia to carry out tasks and the Federal Secretariat for Internal Affairs to ensure consistent respect for legality and with energetic measures prevent overstepping for abusing official authority.

CHAMBER OF REPUBLICS OUTLINES PRICE POLICY

LD242345 Belgrade TANJUG Domestic Service in Serbo-Croatian 1110 GMT 24 Jul 86

[Excerpts] Belgrade, 24 Jul (TANJUG) -- The Chamber of Republics and Provinces today adopted a law on making up exchange-rate differences, which has hitherto been in force as a temporary measure. Under the law, exchange rate differences will be made up for work organizations in 11 branches and activities of the economy. Work organizations which are going into liquidation or bankruptcy will not be entitled to coverage of exchange rate differences.

This year exchange rate differences amounting to 145.6 billion dinars will be made up. The bulk of the funds will be secured from contributions by republics and provinces and from import duties.

The chamber also considered the implementation of the prices policy this year and adopted changes in the laws on the social control of prices, customs tariffs and on securing funds for subsidizing artificial fertilizers, pesticides and quality strain seeds.

In his introductory remarks on the realization of the prices policy this year, Aleksandar Donev, federal secretary for the market and general economic affairs, stressed that the overall effects of the measures taken should be reflected in a halt to the further rise in prices and inflation. The prerequisite for this is the complete and consistent implementation of the proposed measures, an essential change in behavior and attitudes toward work, greater social productivity and savings at all levels, said Donev.

The worsening of economic trends and the strong pressures for price increases which pose a serious threat of further increasing inflation have indicated the need for firmer social control of prices. In certain areas, where deviations and irresponsibility were most pronounced, measures of direct control are also necessary, the federal secretary for the market said. In addition, apart from certain measures already taken, work is continuing to find solutions for removing price disparities, particularly in the sphere of energy and some branches of transportation. [passage omitted: series of other measures of an anti-inflationary nature taken, not elaborated]

The FEC considers, Aleksandar Donev said that the formation of prices on the basis of the economic criteria of a market economy is a realistic basis for a way out of the present crisis. However, if there are more serious disruptions in the currents of economic activity and irresponsible price increases such as there have been now with the price of bread, the FEC will be forced to take stricter measures of social control of prices, including reversal of prices.

This was the basis for proposing changes in the law on the system of social control of prices. By establishing a new criminal act, as envisaged in the changes, we are clearly not resolving the problem of high and uncoordinated rises in prices, Donev said. This, however, primarily prevents illegal behavior by individual subjects in the implementation of the established prices policy.

In view of demands of work organizations made to the Federal Institute for prices for the time limit for the obligatory announcement of price increases to be reduced from 120 to 60 days, it is obvious that there are still strong expectations in the economy that there will still be possibilities for continuing the prices rises. Various arguments are put forward to the effect that the measures of direct control being into question the economic position of many producers, and there is the danger of possible disruptions in the supply of raw materials and materials for production.

It is the view of the FEC, Donev said, that in the majority of cases such behavior is economically unjustifiable and the FEC will not desist from the established policies for reducing inflation. And this policy is well-known -- increasing production and the supply on the domestic market, reducing production costs and eradicating all forms of excessive expenditures.

At the end of his remarks , Donev informed the delegates of the decisions of the FEC that the price of a kilogram of coarse white bread should not exceed 110 dinars, and that the price of bread made from 500-type flour, which will be independently fixed by producers, should not exceed 180 to 200 dinars per kilogram. The decision on increasing the prices of flour and bread were made necessary by the increase in the protection price of this years wheat, Donev said.

In the debate the delegates supported the new measures of the FEC and called for a more consistent struggle against daily price increases. [passage omitted: Delegates noted that Yugoslavia cannot increase its part in the international division of labor with high inflation; failure to observe the most important elements of the economic policy; great efforts required in order to overcome the unfavourable economic trends by the end of the year]

In the conclusions on the realization of the prices policy, the Chamber of Republics and Provinces supported the measures taken and proposed so far by the FEC and called for their consistent and effective implementation in order to slow down the rise in prices and reduce inflation by the end of the year.

The Chamber assessed that all the other measures for removing the causes of inflation and creating more stable conditions for economic activity should be adopted as soon as possible.

The Chamber noted the need for creating conditions for prices to be formed in keeping with market criteria. At the same time the Chamber insisted on tightening up on accountability in implementing the established policies and on developing mechanisms for the social control of prices.

The Chamber stressed the need for broader social affirmation of joint elements for the formation of prices in the production of energy and energy raw materials, rail transportation and postal and telecommunication services, and in other areas. [passage omitted: elaboration on the law on making up foreign exchange differences].

The Chamber approved the changes in the law on the social control of prices, according to which failure to observe the regulations on the direct control of prices becomes a criminal act punishable by a prison sentence of 1 to 5 years.

With the approval of the changes in the law on customs tariffs, the customs rate has been reduced by half in this medium-term period for the importation of equipment and spare parts (not produced in Yugoslavia) for the construction of projects by pooling labor and resources for the more rapid development of the underdeveloped republics, Kosovo and the undeveloped municipalities in Serbia proper.

Equipment and spare parts (not produced in Yugoslavia) will be imported without customs duties for the most important projects in Kosovo in the power industry, agriculture and nonferrous metals industry.

With the decision on the utilization of funds secured for the construction of the Yugoslav part of the Titograd-Shkoder railway and the report on the conclusion of building works, the Chamber concluded, all the conditions have been created for transportation on the Yugoslav section of the railway and all the obligations of the republics and provinces relating to this railway have been fulfilled.

The Chamber nominated Ivica Cacis as federal social attorney of self-management. He holds this position at present.

ASSEMBLY ADDRESSES QUESTIONS FROM DELEGATES

LD224138 Belgrade TANJUG Demestic Service in Serbo-Croatian 1354 GMT 24 Jul 86

[Summary] Belgrade, 24 Jul (TANJUG) -- Today in the SFRY Assembly delegates posed questions on whether Yugoslav citizens employed in Yugoslav work organizations abroad are allowed to manage private firms at the same time; and on the ban of Yugoslav meat exports to the United States enforced from 29 April to 21 May.

"Mirko Kosin, under secretary in the Federal Secretariat for Foreign Affairs, answered the question by delegate Silvano Sau on what was happening with the construction of an Italian thermoelectrical power plant in the Trieste region, which would considerably disturb the ecological balance on the Yugoslav side and presented a threat to the population and production. He stressed that Italians had not as yet decided on the location for the thermoelectrical power plant. So far there have been several meetings between the embassies of the two countries and our diplomatic and consular representatives have been involved. As he said, they will continue to monitor the situation and the course of the public discussion which is taking place in Italy and is accompained by disapproval from the Italian population, too. As there is no bilateral agreement on banning pollution over the border, all the activity is based on international regulations and multilateral agreements."

Delegates also asked questions on the proposal for adopting changes and amendments to the law on disability allowance and pensions, as well as on responsibility over the failure to ratify on schedule the international convention on telecommunications.

The FEC has not been acquainted with environmental pollution in the Golubac and Veliko Gradiste municipalities, more precisely, the waste material being carried to this region from the Romanian territory and affecting the health of people, cattle and feed. This was said in response to a question by Miodrag Trifunovic. The FEC has instructed federal committees to establish the exact situation, while the Federal Secretariat for Foreign Affairs has already asked for information on the source of the pollution from the Embassy in Bucharest. Because protecting the air from pollution is the responsibility of the republics and provinces, information has also been solicited from the republican organs which were reported not to have been acquainted with the situation.

A control carried out by the Serbian Hydrometeorological Institute last year found concentrated sulphur dioxide and smoke in the air above the maximally allowed level. However, since the situation has not been systematically monitored, the FEC Obocki said, has recommended to medical and veterinary institutions to carry out an examination program in order to establish facts.

ASSESSMENT OF RIJEKA SHIPYARD WORK STOPPAGE

LD240857 Belgrade TANJUG Domestic Service in Serbo-Croatian 2225 GMT 23 Jul 86

[Text] Rijeka, 23 Jul (TANJUG) -- A Rijeka LC Municipal Committee Presidium session this evening strongly condemned the work stoppage in the Rijeka 3 May shipyard as a method of resolving the problems caused by immoderate price rises and a fall in living standards. A work stoppage opens up the possibility of internal and external enemies turning the justifiable dissatisfaction of the workers into a quite different direction, the Presidium stressed, noting also that there are certain indications of the misuse of the dissatisfaction of workers in this case. The decision of the delegates to the workers council of the 3 May composite Organization of Associated Labor, according to which all workers must be paid an average personal income for June amounting to 88,000 dinars and personal incomes be increased by 25 percent, was adopted under pressure and extorted by the work stoppage by a minority of employees, the members of the Presidium consider. They proposed that this decision should be reexamined in detail. The business management, sociopolitical organizations, self-managing bodies and a number of employees in the information service of the 3 May shipyard did not know how to react, and did not react in time or in the right way to the situation which arose, the municipal committee assessed.

It is expected that the communists in the shipyard will analyze the causes and course of events, and establish the ideopolitical responsibility of the LC members, managers, and the initiators and fomenters of the work stoppage, it was said at the session. A political assessment of these events must be achieved within 30 days, after which the Rijeka LC municipal committee Presidium will also give its definitive political assessment of the situation and events in the 3 May shipyard, the session concluded.

YOUTH CONFERENCE ELECTS FEDERATION LEADERSHIP

AU240849 Belgrade BORBA in Serbo-Croatian 2 Jul 86 p 1

[V. N. Dzafo report]

[Excerpts] Belgrade 1 Jul -- Continuing the work of the election and consistent session of the Conference of the Socialist Youth Federation of Yugoslavia [SYFY], the Yugoslav Youth Federation acquired leadership today. [passage omitted]

In the meanwhile, the republican conferences of the Youth of Croatia, Serbia, and Macedonia held their sessions, and the delegates of the Conference today adopted a report on the nomination procedure and elected the SYFY Presidium by secret ballot. The following are in the Presidium: Veselo Akmaja (delegate of Croatia), Zoran Andjelkovic, (delegate of Serbia), Ivan Brajovic (delegate of Montenegro), Sladjana Bogdanovic (delegate of Serbia), Sandi Cesko (delegate of Slovenia), Zoran Daljevic (delegate of the Scouts Federation), Marina Djuras (delegate of the Republican Conference of the Socialist Youth Federation of Bosnia-Hercegovina), Zita Galic (delegate of the Yugoslav Federation of Physical Culture Organizations), Borce Georgijevski (delegate of Macedonia), Milan Janjic (delegate of Vojvodina), Ace Kocevski (delegate of the Mocedinia) Jasenka Kukec (Delegate of Cratia) Borishegner (delegate of the Conference in the Yugoslav People's Army), Gojo Mitrovic (delegate of the People's Technology), Hasim Redzepi (delegate of Kosovo), Nijaz Skenderagic (delegate of Bosnia-Hercegovina), Borut Suklje (delegate of Slovenia), and Miodrag Vlahovic (delegate of Montenegro).

At its first session, the Presidium unanimously elected Hasim Redzepi president of the youth organization, and Ace Kocevski secretary. [passage omitted]

SECOND SOLIDARITY FUND FOR JOURNALISTS REJECTED

LD250049 Belgrade TANJUG Domestic Service in Serbo-Croatian 1622 GMT 24 Jul 86

[Text] Belgrade, 24 Jul (TANJUG) -- There can be no justification for setting up yet another solidarity fund among journalists, because the solidarity fund of the Serbian journalists' association has means to provide material aid for those whose existence is threatened. This was the stand adopted by the fund's executive board at today's session in connection with a committee's initiative, signed by five journalists, to establish a fund to aid "journalists who did not lose their jobs through their own fault."

This initiative was prompted by the case of journalist Dusan Bogavac, who was sacked from KOMUNIST. According to the register of the Serbian journalists' association's solidarity fund, Bogavac was a member of the fund from 1972 to 1977, but had never turned to it for assistance. The duty of the fund is to aid all its members who were not fired through their own fault, especially for the duration of a labor dispute and until all legal means have been pursued.

The solidarity fund now comprises 750 members and it is attempting to attract an even larger number of journalists to its ranks. In implementing its duties to the full, according to an assessment of the executive board, this fund satisfies the needs of journalists in the republic. The board further considers that the initiative for setting up some kind of a fund outside the association is a premeditated attempt on the part of the journalists to refute the legal institution which has been established in order to provide solidarity aid to all members of this professional organization.

CROATIAN LC DISCUSSES ECONOMIC POLICY

LD242338 Belgrade TANJUG Domestic Service in Serbo-Croatian 0903 GMT 24 Jul 86

[Text] Zagreb, 24 Jul (TANJUG) -- The LC has no more time and cannot afford to go back and repeat stands and tasks, but must assess their implementation and call for political accountability for the failure to fulfill them, said Nikola Lapov, member of the Croatian LC Central Committee Presidium, in his introductory speech at today's session of the Republican Central Committee. On the agenda was the establishing of immediate tasks of the LC and other subjective forces for implementing the aims of the 1986 economic policy and the long-term program of economic stabilization.

Lapov considers that the measures of the Federal Executive Council deserve support, because they contribute to the realization of the long-term program of economic stabilization.

Speaking in particular about the actions of subjective forces aimed at implementing the aims of the economic policy, Lapov announced determined action in the struggle against wage-levelling and loss-making enterprises. He also called for determined opposition tok those who extort higher personal incomes through pressures and work stoppages.

The Central Committee approved its work program for the coming year, and further on in the session it will also examine the proposed decision on marking the 50th anniversary of the founding of the Communist Party of Croatia, the proposed decision on the organization of LC activity at the university, and the proposed composition of the LC commission, and council of the Croatian LC Central Committee center, for ideotheoretical work.

KOSOVO COUNCIL DISCUSSES TASK IMPLEMENTATION

LD242253 Belgrade TANJUG Domestic Service in Serbo-Croatian 1436 GMT 24 Jul 86

[Excerpts] Pristina, 24 Jul (TANJUG) -- The main tasks contained in the conclusions of the SFRY Presidency and the LCY Central Committee Presidium on the current political situation in Kosovo are, according to the first sources of information, being implemented in quite an organized and efficient manner in this province. Taken as a whole, provincial organs are now considerably more efficient in their work and activities. The first results achieved in the implementation of the measures and actions of the Presidency and the Presidium are already encouraging to some extent and have a favorable effect upon the general state of affairs and upon the restoration of trust in the effectiveness of the system.

This observation was brought up at today's discussion in the Kosovo Executive Council, in the course of which the leaders of provincial organs briefed the council on what has been achieved so far and what ought to be done in the future in order to implement the measures and actions of the Presidency and the Presidium. The highest ranking provincial officials -- Azem Vlasi, Svetislav Dolasevic, Barjram Seljimi, Nazmi Mustafa and others -- also took part in the session. [Passage omitted]

According to the Secretary Rahman Morina, the organs of internal affairs have taken all measures to implement the established tasks, and, to a greater extent, they have worked jointly with the Federal and the Republican Secretariat for Internal Affairs of Serbia. Detailed analyses and reports on this are in preparation.

First, petitions and complaints of citizens against the work of people employed in these organs were presented for inspection and a series of measures were taken for a more effective implementation of constitutionality and legality and also for accuracy in unmasking and preventing hostile activity from positions of Albanian nationalism and irredentism, Serbian and other kinds of nationalism, as well as for eliminating all forms of pressure exerted on the Serbs and Montenegrins.

Work on examining the causes of all the accidents, fires and other unexplained damage in work organizations is nearly finished, while filing and establishing the status of emigres from Albania has been completed jointly with the Federal and Republican secretariats for internal affairs. Morina announced today that these figures are not considerably different from the ones recently made known in the municipalities of Kosovo and Serbia.

The Provincial Secretariat for Justice, according to the statement by Secretary Veselj Ljatifi, has even on previous occasions raised some questions contained in the conclusions of the Presidency and the Presidium. [passage omitted]

The Kosovo Assembly is also preparing a number of new documents and amending existing documents to regulate some new processes, problems and phenomena.

It was also noticed that, due to the complex nature of tasks and problems, some duties will not meet the deadline, but a demand for the greatest possible efficiency will be respected to the maximum. The Federal and the Serbian organs have been of considerable assistance in all these matters and will need to continue to be so.

Taking part in the discussion, Azem Vlasi, president of the Kosovo LC Provincial Committee Presidium, pointed out that the present activities aimed at the realization of measures for the stabilization of the general state of affairs in the province should primarily be within the framework of the permanent training of provincial organs and institutions, in order to carry out one's own duties more successfully. He said the measures of the Presidency and the Presidium should therefore not be understood as a campaign, but as a stimulus for a consistent involvement of all the subjects of the system in the stabilization of the situation in the province. Here we should guard ourselves, Vlasi warned, from haste and formalism in work and free ourselves from working with figures alone, which can be deceptive at times and prevent us to see the essence of the problem. Nothing must be hushed up or minimized, and, if someone does so, he will sooner or later be called to account. Vlasi also stressed that a timely reaction is needed to the new phenomena and problems life may impose on us and that a greater expert and general assistance should be offered to municipal organs and institutions.

The president of the Kosovo LC Provincial Committee Presidium announced that in September a broader political assessment will be made and a more detailed reply given to everything done so far or what should have been done on the basis of the demands of the Presidency and the Presidium. Vlasi also said that the basic aim of these measures and activities is to ensure security, equality and speedier solutions to the misfortunes of working people and citizens, regardless of their nationality, but that their consistent realization will have a considerable effect on the restoration of trust in the organs and on the halting of the emigration of the Serbians and the Montenegrins.

In this period of implementing measures on Kosovo, we have come face to face, Vlasi added, with attempts of individuals to misuse the situation, manipulate with it and tackle the problems to their advantage, bypassing the law and using pressure and blackmail. This should be spotted and all the difficulties and problems should be resolved within the framework of the law and our socialist self-managing system, Vlasi emphasized.

In conclusion it was agreed that a similar briefing of the heads of provincial organs should be conducted in a month's time.

MAMULA INSPECTS KOSOVO DEFENSE PREPARATIONS

LD242017 Belgrade TANJUG Domestic Service in Serbo-Croatian 1255 GMT 24 Jul 86

[Text] Zajecar, 24 Jul (TANJUG) -- Fleet Admiral Branko Mamula, Federal secretary for national defense, has been paying a working visit to the Nis military district. With his aides and accompanied by Lieutenant General Perica Vucetic, he has also spent several days in the Socialist Autonomous Province of Kosovo and the Timok River basin where he acquainted himself with the state of defense preparations and, in particular, with the achievements in combat readiness and the development of the political unity and the moral strength of the commands and units.

Adm Mamula talked directly to the commanders, officers and soldiers to hear about the results achieved in combat training. Most attention is being focused on enhancing the unity of all the defense forces in implementing the decisions of the 13th LCY Congress. Members of the army and the territorial defense units are required to be highly trained, morally strong and united. They are also expected to carefully monitor the results achieved in coordinating the activity of all the defense and protection structures in order to avoid surprises and to provide conditions for an efficient functioning of all defense forces. During his visit the Federal secretary expressed satisfaction at the results reiterated their high motivation for carrying out their tasks. Mamula expressed his satisfaction with the relations and the living standards achieved under the present complex economic circumstances. At firing and shooting exercises which he attended he could see that the training almost matches our requirements. He also had a meeting with the organs of sociopolitical communities in Prizren and Klina.

Branko Mamula also talks with the leadership of the Socialist Autonomous Province of Kosovo The focus of attention during these talks was the political-security situation in the province and the further development of cooperation between the armed forces and the sociopolitical communities.

In the course of his visit to the work organizations in Klina and Bor, the Federal secretary was informed about the results produced by and development problems of organizations engaged in specialized production. Support was also given for their development programs. It was said that these work organizations are of great importance not only for the country's defense but that they also contribute to the development of the region where they are located and help to alleviate the difficult economic situation.
